

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

hool

ELF

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 523.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JAN. 1, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

[Reprinted from THE INDEX of January 1, 1870.]

PROSPECTUS.

"THE INDEX."

THE INDEX will aim at a two-fold object, positive and negative.

It will aim, above all things, to increase pure and genuine RELIGION in the world,—to develop a nobler spirit and higher purpose both in society and the individual. It will aim, at the same time, to increase FREEDOM in the world,—to destroy every species of spiritual slavery, to expose every form of superstition, to encourage independence of thought and action in all matters that concern belief, character, or conduct. It will, in short, be devoted to the cause of FREE RELIGION, which it proposes to advocate with the utmost ability and moral earnestness it can command.

Without limiting itself to any of the great reformatory movements of the time, it proposes to work for them all in the most efficient way, by fostering the spirit of reform, and by uprooting every conservative prejudice by which reform is checked. Uncompromising, fearless, radical, it will put faith in ideas, and work for them openly, regardless of all consequences. Its only policy will be strong thought and plain speech. It will neither seek nor shun to "shock" the religious nerve. Standing squarely outside of Christianity, it will yet aim to be just to it, recognizing its excellences, noting its defects. It will pay no deference to the authority of the Bible, the Church, or the Christ, but rest solely on the authority of right reason and good conscience. It will trust no revelation but that of universal human faculties. It will accept every certified result of science, philosophy, and historical criticism, asking no question what it proves. Briefly, it will seek the truth, and work for humanity, believing that man, who makes all institutions, can remake or unmake them as well, and that he is abundantly able to take care of himself, without the help of kingcraft or priestcraft.

THE INDEX will be the organ of no party in politics, and no sect in religion. The editor will speak for himself alone, and so will each contributor; neither will commit the other. The only tests in the acceptance of articles will be ability, fairness, courtesy, and pure moral tone; in the application of these tests, the editor will take all responsibility. No article will be rejected because of its opinions as such. Theism and Atheism, Spiritualism and Materialism, Transcendentalism and Positivism, Free Religion and Christianity—in short, every phase of earnest thought—shall have a fair chance to be heard, and on equal terms.

The first number of THE INDEX will contain in full the lecture on "The Genius of Christianity and Free Religion," delivered in Boston by the editor in the well-known course of Sunday Afternoon Meetings, held at Horticultural Hall during the spring of 1869. This will be followed by a series of six discourses, designed further to illustrate and explain the great religious revolution of the age, upon the following subjects:—

1. What is Christianity?
2. What is Free Religion?
3. Christianity and Free Religion contrasted as to Corner-stones.
4. Christianity and Free Religion contrasted as to Institutions, Terms of Fellowship, Social Ideal, Moral Ideal and Essential Spirit.
5. The Practical Work of Free Religion.
6. Unitarianism versus Freedom.

Each succeeding number of THE INDEX will contain a lecture or discourse by the editor, short, and shotted articles, paragraphs, selections, etc., etc. The cooperation of able and distinguished contributors has been promised. A certain space in each number, offered for the exclusive use of the President (Rev. O. B. Frothingham), and Secretary (Rev. W. J. Potter), of the American Free Religious Association, has been accepted by a unanimous vote of the Executive Committee. No pains will be spared to make the paper strong and scholarly, yet intelligible and interesting to all earnest minds.

Subscriptions and contributed articles (which are invited from all thoughtful persons) may be sent at present to the editor, Lock-box 19, Toledo, Ohio.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 1, 1869.

TEN YEARS ago to-day, on the first of January, 1870, the initial number of THE INDEX was published; and the present issue reprints several articles of that date, that the many readers who never saw them may better understand the objects to which the paper has been steadily devoted. On this page will be found the original "Prospectus,"—on the next and succeeding pages, the essay on the "Genius of Christianity and Free Religion" which contains, we believe, the first careful comparison of the two as independent faiths. In the editorial department re-appears a short appeal "To the Friends of Freedom," and also a longer article on "The McFarland-Richardson Case." In the latter we took the ground that the marriage institution ought to be reformed, but not repealed; that one of the needed reforms, already partially established by law, is the permission of divorce on any rational and just grounds; and that in this particular the "Christian world" itself does not practise the gospel it preaches. A "Letter from Miss Cobbe" is also reproduced; and this is preceded by Mr. Potter's account of the origin of the Free Religious Association, in a special "Department" of that Association which was discontinued at the end of the first year. These various articles have been now republished in the belief that most of our readers will be interested, on this tenth anniversary of their paper, to read its original utterances at the dawn of the past decade.

It should be added that the opening essay is given as printed in the volume entitled Freedom and Fellowship in Religion, as the first number of THE INDEX did not contain quite all of it.

GLIMPSES.

MATTHEW ARNOLD has described the present generation in England as "afraid to doubt and unable to believe."

MENCIUS uttered this pithy apophthegm; "Never has a man who has bent himself been able to make others straight."

TO REJECT the Christian name does not necessarily mean to despise either Jesus or his religion.—THE INDEX, Jan. 1, 1870.

"A MAN who has learned little," said Buddha, "grows old like an ox; his flesh grows, but his knowledge does not grow."

THE NEW YORK Sun is responsible for this statement: "Christian missionaries at Kin-chau, China, have hit upon the novel plan of buying native girls in order to convert them; but it is found hard to obtain them at a reasonable price. The plan is to get the money back from the husbands when the girls marry. The mission publication, China's Millions, gives the stipulations between the missionaries and the parents as follows: 'That the parents be allowed to receive half their money now and half at the girl's marriage; that the feet be unbound; that the betrothal of the girl be entirely in the hands of the school superintendent; that she may not return home before her marriage; that, if the parents recall her after the three months' probation, they repay the school for the girl's board at the rate of $2 per month.'"

SAYS THE Springfield Republican: "It would be hard to find a sign of more complete collapse in the Turkish treasury than the failure to provide for the great pilgrim caravan which yearly goes to Mecca. The Moslem world unites in this pilgrimage. The great train of the faithful, as it approaches Mecca, contains representatives out of every Moslem community from Kamtschatka to Morocco; but the sultan, as caliph and commander of the faithful, a title held without challenge by the house of Othman longer than by any other family in history, gives the pilgrimage its religious character as the great Moslem ceremony by issuing orders for its departure, and sending gifts to the shrine at Mecca, the embroidered carpet yearly laid over the tomb of Mohammed at Medina, and other tokens of his position as the religious head of Islam. Their presence in the caravan is well-nigh the only sign left of the fact that the spiritual sway of the Turkish sovereign is almost as extensive as that of the Pope of Rome. To permit this pilgrimage to lapse is to abandon one principal source of Turkish power."

DR. DOELLINGER, the "Old Catholic" leader, has recently published a paper calling attention to the wonderful successes of Mohammedanism as a missionary religion, equalling the early triumphs of Christianity: "He states that in Africa whole tribes once given to fetich worship have become devout adherents of Mohammed. At Sierra Leone a Moslem university is flourishing, in which are being educated a thousand young men, whose lives will be as absolutely surrendered to the cause the school represents as were the lives of the early soldiers of the Crescent who counted it joy to fall in its defence on the field of battle. In China the followers of this ancient symbol have increased beyond computation, fifty thousand residing in Tonquin alone. Among the Malaysians and the islanders of the Eastern Archipelago, it is reported that eighteen millions have been won over to its support; and still one-fifth of the dwellers on the earth are enrolled as its army, of whom fifty millions are subjects of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. In view of such facts, it is preposterous to talk about the decline of Mohammedanism, or to represent it as a huge carcass without a soul."

DEAN SWIFT is said to have once perpetrated a clever hoax which had the effect of preventing robberies in his vicinity for many years. "He caused to be printed and circulated some 'last words' of a street-robber named Elliston, purporting to be written shortly before his execution, in which the condemned thief was made to say: 'Now, as I am a dying man, I have done something which may be of good use to the public. I have left with an honest man—the only honest man I was ever acquainted with—the names of all my wicked brethren, the places of their abode, with a short account of the crimes they have committed, in many of which I have been their accomplice and heard the rest from their own mouths. I have likewise set down the names of those whom we call our setters, of the wicked houses we frequent, and all of those who receive of ~~us~~ our stolen goods. I have solemnly charged this honest man, and received his promise upon oath, that, wherever he hears of any rogue to be tried for robbery or house-breaking, he will look into this list, and if he finds the name there of the thief concerned, he send the whole paper to the government.' Of this I here give my companions fair and public warning, and hope they will take it."

The Genius of Christianity and Free Religion.*

BY FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

To say that the age we live in is preëminently an era of revolution, is to utter a stale and profitless truism. The fact mirrors itself on every open eye, and voices itself to every unstopped ear. Not merely in the forms of government, the adjustments of society, and other external matters, constant changes occur which are perceptible by all; but the more observing also detect indications of some profound and hidden movement in the depths of the human spirit. The world's heart is ill at ease. Miseries and oppressions and crimes are, it is true, like the poor, ever with us; but cancel these, and the world's unrest will still remain. Its secret inquietude betrays itself even in the tone of the popular poems and novels of the day; and although the Church, abundantly assiduous with prescription and pill, promises to cure the distemper, she encounters a most alarming symptom in the patient's distrust of the physician. In fact, the patient refuses to be a patient; and what the Church accounts disease turns out to be a new-born hunger for truth and life,—a most excellent sign of spiritual health. The world needs, not to be doctored, but to be fed; and whoso brings substantial food fairly cooked finds a hearty welcome.

The old faiths, like cotyledons well stored with starch, are perishing as the spring advances, yet only to yield their contents as nourishment for a better faith. Although there are no "new truths" except as the discovery, or ripper development in human thought and life, of truths old as God, yet in this sense new truths are creating to-day a new faith in the world before which the elder faiths lose their power. The grounds of human hope, the motives of human action, the objects of human aspiration, are slowly changing; and because change in these respects involves corresponding change in all the relations of public and private life, the great visible movements of the age are but indices of the greater invisible movements in the spiritual consciousness of mankind. Because all questions of immediate interest in the amelioration of society depend ultimately on deeper questions in the soul, there can be no theme of profounder practical importance than that to which I now invite your attention,—the "Genius of Christianity and Free Religion." In the conflict between these two faiths, and in the law of spiritual development by which the one must increase and the other decrease, lies, as I believe, the secret of the religious restlessness of the times. With the seriousness befitting so great a subject, and yet with no shrinking from the plainness of speech which equally befits it, I wish to express convictions neither hastily formed nor weakly held, for which I ask from you only a calm and candid hearing. Whether right or wrong, they must affect profoundly the well-being of every one who makes them the basis of intelligent and fearless action. Let them, then, be intelligently and fearlessly judged.

A savage coming to the sea shore at several distant points might perhaps imagine that he had come to several disconnected seas, not knowing that the sea is one. So he who beholds without reflection the great religions of the world might conceive these to be separate and distinct, not knowing that religion is one. It must have been from some such conception as this that men used to class Christianity by itself as wholly true, and all other religions in a group by themselves as wholly false. But this distinction cannot stand. The question of the truth or falsity of different religions is purely a question of degree. They are all expressions of the universal aspiration of humanity, and are so far all based on eternal truth. But each of them has its own special historic form, determined by the personality of its founder, by the spirit of the age in which it arose, and by the character of the historic forces by which it was developed; and so far it must share the error which clings to all things human. The worst religion has its truth,—the best has its error. Thus all religions are one, in virtue of their common origin in the aspiring and worshipping spirit of man; while they are many, in virtue of the historic form peculiar to each. The universal element in each belongs, not to it, but to universal human nature; while its special element, its historic form, is its own.

Whoever, therefore, would find the oneness of all religions must seek it in the universal spiritual consciousness of the race; while he who would learn the characteristics of any particular religion must seek this in its history and origin. The object of the first seeker is generic unity,—the object of the second is specific difference. Their methods, consequently, must correspond with their objects, and be the converse of each other. The one must neglect peculiarities, and attend to resemblances; the other must neglect resemblances, and attend to peculiarities. To claim as peculiar to one religion what is common to all religions,—a claim often made in behalf of Christianity,—is unreasonable; but it is equally unreasonable to ignore its actual peculiarities. No estimate of a great historical religion can be just, unless formed by the impartial, scientific application of the historical method.

In attempting, therefore, to determine what Christianity actually is, as a great fact in human history, I shall not endeavor to frame a transcendental or mystical formula, and thus, spider-like, evolve a definition of it out of my own consciousness. On the contrary, believing Christianity to be the loftiest of all historical religions, I believe that, like all other historical religions, it can only be understood by the study of its sacred books, its traditions, its institutions, its origin, its history. What were the ideas, purposes, and character of Jesus, and what was the nature of the faith which took its name from him and became Christianity as we see it in the world to-day, must be learned historically or not at all. Abstract speculation can throw no light on these questions of fact. History is the key to the problem of Christianity.

Christianity Historically Defined.

Viewed, then, as one of the world's great historical faiths, Christianity is religion as taught in the New Testament, developed in the history of the Christian Church, and based on faith in Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ of God.

If we attempt to make Christianity independent of its founder, and of the only records we possess of his life and teachings (an attempt sometimes made by modern radical thinkers), we simply abandon the historical ground altogether, identify Christianity with Religion, and annihilate the specific difference between Christianity and all other historical faiths. It thereby becomes impossible to distinguish it from them on the same level; we resolve it into "natural religion," and must treat all other religions as merely various modifications of it. I need not say how arbitrary and irrational this seems to me. If Christianity is itself "natural religion,"—only love to God and love to man,—how can we escape calling Brahmanism and Buddhism and Confucianism and the rest different forms of Christianity? Would there be nothing absurd in that? If, on the other hand, we say that religion is always natural, and that Christianity, Brahmanism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Zoroastrianism, Mahometanism, and so forth, are all diverse historical forms of this one natural religion, I think we take the only sensible ground. We then put all historical faiths on the same level, and can distinguish them one from another by their different historical characters. But to do this is at once to sweep away all the fine-spun metaphysical, transcendental, and purely ethical definitions of Christianity, in order to make room for its only historical definition, namely, religion as taught in the New Testament, developed in the history of the Christian Church, and based on faith in Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ of God.

The ethical and spiritual teachings of the New Testament are not peculiar to it; as is well known, they can all be paralleled in other ancient writings. These, therefore, will not help us to comprehend that which is peculiar to Christianity and makes it a distinct historical religion; they belong to the universal religion of man, appear in the sacred books of all religions, and are the private property of none. In accordance with the true historical method, therefore, I shall pass by these universal truths, which find perhaps their best expression in the New Testament, in order to concentrate our attention on the fundamental characteristic of Christianity, namely, its faith in the Christ. It is this which separates it from all other religions, constitutes its prime peculiarity, and serves as foundation to the other leading doctrines of Christian theology. Purity, benevolence, mercy, forgiveness, humility, self-sacrifice, love, and so forth, are nowhere more beautifully taught than in the discourses, conversations, and parables of Jesus; but these make the universal, not the special, element in the New Testament,—these make its religion, not its Christianity,—and it is now its Christianity that we seek to comprehend.

So far as our present object is concerned, we need not be embarrassed by the doubts resting over the authorship, the dates, and the historic credibility of the various books of the New Testament. No critical scholar of the present day regards the gospels as wholly mythical. Yet, unless they are wholly mythical, it is impossible to doubt that Jesus did actually claim to be the Christ or Messiah, that is, the founder and sovereign of the "kingdom of heaven." So all-pervading is this claim, that to eliminate it from the gospels is to reduce them at once to unadulterated myth. If misunderstood on this point, there is no reason to suppose that Jesus has been understood on any point; if his reported sayings on this subject are un genuine, there is no reason to suppose any of his sayings to be genuine. In the words of James Martineau [National Review, April, 1863]: "Whoever can read the New Testament with a fresh eye must be struck with the prominence everywhere of the Messianic idea. It seems to be the ideal framework of the whole,—of history, parable, dialogue; of Pauline reasoning; of Apocalyptic visions. 'Art thou he that should come?' This question gives the ideal standard by which on all hands,—on the part of disciples, relations, enemies, of Saul the persecutor and Paul the apostle,—the person and pretensions of Christ are tried. His birth, his acts, his sufferings, are so disposed as to 'fulfil what was spoken' by the prophets: so that the whole programme of his life would seem to have preëxisted in the national imagination."

That these words of Martineau are true, I am profoundly convinced. The Messianic faith is the soul of the entire New Testament, giving unity to the gospels, epistles, and apocalypse, and making Christianity a vital organism. In vain shall we seek to comprehend the spiritual power of Christianity, and determine its agency in the evolution of modern civilization, until we have first comprehended the Messianic idea, and discovered the sources, the channels, and the limitations of its power. In vain shall we seek to solve the mystery of that spiritual Nile which has fertilized the centuries; until we discover its Lake Nyanza in the Messianic hope of Judaism and its widening Delta in the advent of Free Religion. History, not theology, must reveal the true origin of Christianity; and when we are prepared to accept her calm instructions, we shall learn that the greatest of the world's historical religions is no bastard with the bar sinister of miracle athwart its scutcheon, but the lawful offspring of Jewish faith and Greek thought. In the New Testament, if we will but read aright, is ample proof of its pedigree. In the first three gospels we find the Jewish Messiahship assumed by Jesus; in the fourth gospel, we find it interpreted by the Logos doctrine, and thus rationalized by Greek philosophy; in the book of Acts and in the Epistles we find it stripped by Peter and Paul of its local and national limitations, and thus fitted to become the basis of a world-wide church. The organizing genius of Rome supplied the element necessary to convert the idea into an institution; and the triumph of Christianity was assured.

The Messianic Idea the Great Tap-Root of Christianity.

Here, then, in the New Testament itself, the Messianic idea appears as the great tap-root of Christianity; and we see, already fulfilled, all the intrinsic spiritual conditions of its subsequent growth. Given the corresponding extrinsic historical conditions, what need of a miracle to account for its wonderful development? It would have been a miracle indeed, if, in the actual state of the Roman Empire at that time, Christianity had failed to become the State Religion. Into what a melancholy and senile decrepitude had fallen its pagan competitors! The decaying mythologies of Persia, Egypt, Greece, Rome, were the spiritual compost whence the vigorous young plant derived its sap. Universal putrefaction is a powerful fertilizer. To the spread of every religion, however rapid (and Christianity is in this respect no more remarkable than Buddhism or Mahometanism), the same explanation applies,—adaptation to the spirit and circumstances of the times. It is customary among Unitarians to extol the purity of "primitive Christianity," and to bewail what they call its theological and ecclesiastical "corruption" during the first three centuries. This is to praise the blossom at the expense of the fruit,—to indulge in that idealization of childhood which is practical deprecation of manhood. The triumph of Athanasius over Arius, and of Augustine over Pelagius, was not accidental. On the contrary, the gradual formation of the Athanasian and Augustinian theology was the strictly logical and natural development of the claim made by Jesus of being the Savior of the world; while the gradual erection of the Romish hierarchy was the equally logical and natural result of the attempt to found a universal church upon this claim. How could a man be the Savior of the world? Only by being also God. The Romish Church, with its theology of salvation through the God-Man, so far from being a "corruption of primitive Christianity," was its necessary historical evolution; the Messianic idea, freed from its merely Hebrew application, enfolded mediæval Catholicism as the acorn enfolds the oak. As the Jewish theocracy was at last obliged to enthrone an earthly king as the representative of Jehovah, so the Christian Church was obliged at last to enthrone the Pope as the representative of the Christ. It betrays, therefore, a lack of the philosophical, the scientific, the historical spirit, to call that a corruption which was in truth a development.

Romanism the True Christianity.

As the history of philosophical systems is the truest exponent of their logical tendencies, so the history of religions is the truest interpreter of their genius and innermost spirit. The Romish Church, whether in its hierarchy, its institutions, its architecture, its painting, its music, its literature, its theology, its spiritual power, its types of spiritual character, or its missionary zeal, is the ripened fruit of the Messianic germ, the supreme culmination of Christianity. Christian poetry and art, no less than Christian character and faith, have reached their zenith in the Catholic Church. The cathedrals, the Madonnas, the anthems, Dante's Divine Comedy (the great poem of Christianity, setting it to eternal music), were born in the souls of Catholics. The Protestant Reformation was simply the first stage in the decay of Christianity. In Wickliffe and Huss, in Luther and Calvin and their compeers, the modern spirit came to self-consciousness. These men were, although unwittingly, the first apostles of Free Religion. Socinus, Priestley, Channing, Parker, and the other reformers of the Reformation, carried the work of disintegration still farther, and gave voice to the deepening demand of humanity for spiritual freedom. "Liberal Christianity," which means Christianity as liberal as it can be, has reduced the Messianic idea to its minimum dimensions and its minimum power; the next step is outside of Christianity altogether. Gradual in its growth and gradual in its decay,—coming to its prime in the Romish, and lying at Death's door in the Unitarian Church,—Christianity has realized the highest possibilities of the Messianic faith, has accomplished the utmost which that faith can accomplish for man, and is now destined to wane before a faith higher and purer still. Its history, from beginning to end, is the history of men's faith in the Christ; its first and last word is, by the law of its being,—"Come to Jesus!" In proportion as the name of Jesus grows infrequent on its lips,—in proportion as his person fails to attract its supreme homage and worship,—in that proportion it ceases to be Christianity, and becomes merged in that universal religion whose only history is the history of soul. Let me repeat, with emphasis, that, while Christianity is the perishing form, religion is the eternal substance,—that the universal truths, the inspiring hopes, the tender consolations, the quickening impulses, the divinely beautiful spirit, which have made and still make the name of Christianity so dear to the undistinguishing many, belong to the eternal substance and not to the perishing form. Religion must endure; but as Christianity came into history, so it must go out from history. Its inspiration and life have come in and through its faith in the Christ, the one Lord and Master and Savior of the world, and its church, or visible embodiment in a social and spiritual fellowship, has planted itself from the beginning on this faith as its own eternal rock and corner-stone.

* A lecture delivered in the First Course of "Sunday Afternoon Lectures" in Horticultural Hall, Boston, February 14, 1869.

There is no clearer recognition of the fundamental character of the Christian Confession than in the following words of Dr. Hedge, a Unitarian clergyman, who perceives how much is involved in the apparent truism that Christianity has a history:—

"I am far from maintaining that Christianity must stand or fall with the belief in miracles; but I do maintain that Christian churches, as organized bodies of believers, must stand or fall with the Christian Confession,—that is, the Confession of Christ as divinely human Master and Head. . . . Things exist in this world by distinction one from another. Enlarge as you will the idea and scope of a church, there must be somewhere, whether stated or not in any formal symbol, a line which defines it, and separates those who are in it from those who are without. The scope of the Liberal Church is large; but everything and everybody cannot be embraced in it. The Christian Confession is its boundary line, within which alone it can do the work which Providence has given it to do. . . . The distinction involved in the Christian Confession is organic and vital; its abolition would be the dissolution of the ecclesiastical world and the end of Christendom." [Reason in Religion, pp. 218, 219.]

This statement of Dr. Hedge is the verdict of history itself. On the Christian Confession, Jesus himself founded his church; on the Christian Confession, Peter, John, Paul, and the rest, built up its walls; on the Christian Confession, Augustine, Athanasius, and their fellow-workers, roofed and completed the great historic edifice. From the vast ecclesiastical hierarchy of Rome to the puny "National Conference of Unitarian and other Christian Churches," all the sects and sub-sects of Christendom, with one consenting voice, confess that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, the spiritual King of mankind by the grace of God. In all the endless controversies respecting doctrines, forms, or politics, all parties have accepted the Christian Confession as the universal creed of Christians. Whatever differences of opinion exist or have existed concerning the nature, the official function, or the spiritual mission of the Christ, the Christian Confession has remained the corner-stone of the Christian Church; and a Christian will no more challenge the Christian Confession than "Jesus is the Christ," than a Mahometan will challenge the Mahometan Confession that "there is but one God, and Mahomet is his prophet."

"It is in the first gospel, not the fourth, that Jesus says to Peter, on his confessing him to be 'the Christ, the Son of the living God.'—'Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood have not revealed it unto thee, but my Father who is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock [i.e., your faith in me as the Christ] I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.' It is in the first gospel, not the fourth, that Jesus replies to the high priest, adjuring him to declare whether he is the Christ,—'I am. Moreover I say to you, Henceforth ye will see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of Power, and coming on the clouds of heaven' [Noyes' translation]. It is in the first gospel, not in the fourth, that Jesus explicitly makes the Christian Confession the necessary condition of salvation: 'Whosoever, therefore, shall confess me before men, him will I also confess before my Father who is in heaven; but whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father who is in heaven.' It would be easy to cite scores of passages to the same effect; but these are amply sufficient.

In the same spirit, Peter declares, in the book of Acts, that "there is no other name given under heaven whereby men can be saved." In the same spirit, Paul declares to the Galatians, "There be some that trouble you and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed"; and to the Romans, "If thou shalt confess with the mouth that Jesus is Lord, and shalt believe in thy heart that God has raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved; for with the heart man believeth so as to obtain righteousness, and with the mouth confesseth so as to obtain salvation." In the same spirit, John exclaims in his first epistle, "Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? Whosoever denieth the Son, the same has not the Father." And so on. Sayings such as these meet the eye on almost every page of the New Testament; and so far from being accidental or non-essential, they utter the heart-faith, the inmost spirit of Christianity, as a distinct religion.

Christianity Is Developed Judaism.

The one grand aim of Jesus was to establish the "kingdom of heaven"; and this, however universalized and spiritualized, was in essence the ancient ideal theocracy, in which the Christ was to be the God-appointed king. From the day when, on the very eve of death, Jesus boldly affirmed before Pilate and the high priest his title to the Messianic throne, the highest and deepest prayer of his disciples has been that his throne may be established for ever in the hearts of all mankind. Was it an accident that the new faith took its name, not from the individual Jesus, but from his royal office? Christianity was the faith of the Christians, and the Christians were those who believed in the Christ. Hence the condition of Christian fellowship has always been fealty to Jesus as common Lord and Master; and in this, the organic bond of union in all branches of the Christian Church, the innermost life of Christianity has, by the very law of its being, only expressed itself outwardly in social form. In short, the history of Christianity is simply the history of the Messianic faith, deepened and widened, developed and spiritualized, in the highest possible degree,—the history of the varying fortunes which have befallen the attempt of Jesus to found a universal spiritual empire in the hearts of men; and he will seek in vain to fathom the depths of Christianity who looks elsewhere than to this Messianic faith for the secret of its peculiar religious power.

Furthermore, unless liberal thinkers cease to philosophize loosely about Christianity and learn to do complete justice to its Messianic or special element, a problem of great importance will remain permanently insoluble. It is only by tracing the course of the Messianic idea back to its fountain-head in the living faith of Judaism, that it becomes possible to discover the natural origin of Christianity. If the sources of Christianity reach no further back than to the individual soul of Jesus; if so mighty a power in the world's history was born of one man's single life, and owed nothing to earlier ancestors; if no deep unity can be discovered between Jesus and the spirit of his age, in virtue of which he became the natural representative of humanity in his day and generation, and brought to a living focus the religious forces of his times,—then is Christianity indeed a miracle, and Jesus may well have been God. The naturalistic interpretation of Christianity fails utterly, unless it can reveal an adequate cause for its tremendous influence on the course of history. Once admit that a Jewish peasant lifted the whole world up to a higher spiritual level, not by embodying in himself the best religious life of his era, but by the sheer strength of his own individuality,—and I, for one, must perforce admit him to have been Omnipotence in disguise. The incarnation of God would be a less miracle than the upheaval of the planet by a human arm. But if Jesus was a man, and acted under natural human conditions, then his power must have been the power of humanity; behind him, beneath him, within him, must have been the spirit of his age, concentrating in his word the vitality of his race. Somewhere must he have found a foothold in the profoundest faith of his own nation, or he could not have moved the universal consciousness of man. The secret of success, with every great soul, lies in sympathy with his times, without which his most magnificent utterance perishes on the air. Given, therefore, the humanity of Jesus, it is imperatively necessary to discover the faith which he and his countrymen must have held in common. Where shall we search for this except in that Messianic idea which is the core and heart of his religion?

Here we find established a vital relation between Jesus and the Hebrew people. The moment we accept the clew here offered, the labyrinth ceases to bewilder,—our path is clear. It would be at the same time tedious and pedantic, were I to rehearse in detail the evidence which has convinced my own mind that Christianity is only a developed Judaism. From the time of the Babylonish Captivity, the narrow theocracy of earlier ages began to develop in Hebrew thought into the dazzling dream of a universal "kingdom of heaven," designed to succeed the great empires of antiquity and to embrace in its dominions all the nations of the globe. The so-called Jewish Apocalyptic literature, which sprang up as a transformation of the primitive prophetism, and of which the most important writings are the book of Daniel, the Sibylline oracles, the book of Enoch, and the fourth book of Esdras, enables us to distinguish successive stages in the formation of the Messianic faith. At first an aristocracy of the saints rather than the monarchy of the Messiah, the conception of the "kingdom of heaven" incorporated into itself more and more of the personal element, until this at last came to predominate. Long before the birth of Jesus, the chief features of the Messianic idea as contained in the New Testament were strongly marked, both with regard to the "end of the world" and the "coming of the Son of Man." The same place, Jerusalem; the same time, the immediate future; the same symptomatic signs, wars and rumors of wars, and the gathering of Gentile armies against Jerusalem; the same coming of the Messiah with his angels on the clouds of heaven; the same solemn Judgment, with the Son of man on the throne of his glory and all nations before his tribunal; the same sentences to the wicked and the righteous; the same resurrection of the dead from Hades; the same passing away of the old earth and appearance of the new,—all these, and more, were definite Messianic beliefs in the century before Jesus. Nor this alone. The "kingdom of heaven," as conceived in the later of these Apocalyptic writings, was highly spiritual in its character, bringing at once happiness and holiness to all mankind. The "kingdom of heaven" was to ultimate in a universal brotherhood of man, an era of universal peace and righteousness, introduced through universal submission to the Hebrew Messiah or Christ. Every generous aspiration for spiritual perfection and the welfare of humanity thus found its satisfaction in the vision of Messianic redemption to the chosen people of God.

The Education and Career of Jesus.

Into this circle of ideas and national aspirations Jesus was born; and were they not also his own? They were the very atmosphere he breathed; they filled his soul from the earliest days of childhood. The gospels represent him as not wholly illiterate, being able at least to read. He undoubtedly was ignorant of Greek, which even at Jerusalem was but little known and regarded as dangerous in its tendencies; and there is no trace in the gospel narratives of the influence of the Hellenic culture upon his mind. The study of the Mosaic Law was alone considered reputable and safe by devout Jews. The Rabbi Hillel, however, who fifty years before Jesus anticipated his Golden Rule and others of his finest sayings, in all probability exerted a deep influence upon his development. It is evident from the evangelists that Jesus had earnestly pondered the Old Testament, especially Isaiah and the book of Daniel,—perhaps the book of Enoch also, and other Apocalyptic writings. "The advent of the Messiah," says Renan, "with his glories and his terrors, the nations dashing one against another, the cataclysm of heaven and earth, were the familiar food of his imagination; and as these revolutions were thought to be at hand, so that a multitude of people were seeking to compute their times, the supernatural order of things into which such visions transport us appeared to him from the first perfectly natural." The conception of universal and invariable laws of nature which had been developed to a considerable degree in the Greek mind by the philosophy of Epicurus, and which, nearly a century before the birth of Jesus, had been admirably stated by Lucretius in his great poem on "The Nature of Things," was utterly foreign to the thought of Jesus and his countrymen, who believed in the habitual agency of demons and evil spirits, and had unwavering faith in miracles. The great idea of Jesus, the immediate advent of the "kingdom of heaven," was also the dominant idea of his times; but, various attempts to realize it by political means having ended in utter failure, especially that of Judas the Gaulonite or Galilean, he early perceived the folly of military Messianism, and relied implicitly on the establishment of his Messianic throne by the miraculous display of the divine power. Thus was Jesus educated by his age.

Repelled though he was by the vulgar conception of the Christ as a mere warlike prince, the idea of spiritual supremacy through the religious reformation of his people struck a responsive chord in his soul. His deep nature was thrilled and kindled by his country's hope, and with intense earnestness must he have asked himself,—"Can I fulfil it? Am I the Called, the Anointed of God?" The consciousness of his wonderful religious genius, fertilized and developed by the spirit of his age, fanned the wish into a prayer, and the prayer into a conviction, and the conviction into an enthusiasm, and the enthusiasm into a calm and omnipotent faith, that he was indeed the Messiah,—singled out from all eternity by the will of God, foretold by prophets and kings, and awaited for weary centuries by humanity in tears. Impossible as it is for the cool intellect of the West to comprehend the mystic fervor, the religious intensity of the Semitic race, it is yet evident that Jesus acquired faith in his Messianic destiny by an inward experience analogous to that which convinced the prophets of their divine missions. Fathom it or analyze it we cannot; but we can yet perceive that the phenomenon of Hebrew prophetism, with its sublime identification of impassioned thought with the direct mandate of God, repeats itself in the history of the young Galilean carpenter. It is a fact to be studied,—not to be denied.

Let no one meet me here with the bigot's worn-out dilemma, "If Jesus was not in reality the Messiah he claimed to be, he was either a madman or an impostor!" Was John Brown a madman or an impostor, when he aspired to be the redeemer of an enslaved race? The moral sublimity of such an aim is not to be measured by the six-inch rule of vulgar souls, but by the astronomic spaces of the heavens above. There is a madness that is more than sanity,—a veritable inspiration to dare the impossible, and by bloody failure to achieve a somewhat greater than "success." The hero is always a fool in the eyes of him who counts the cost. If it be madness to obey the enthusiasm of ideas without stopping to count the cost, God grant us all the wisdom to go mad! Such madness is the glory of humanity. The insane man is he whose thought fatally contradicts his surroundings; but he who comprehends the profoundest, though it may be the unconscious, movement of his age, and carries its underlying ideas into fuller and higher development,—this man, I say, is the sanest of the sane. To his contemporaries, the idealist is always crazy; to posterity, he appears as the only practical man of his times,—the guide of his generation in the pathway of progress. In the soul of Jesus, the great aspiration of the Hebrew race became purified from its alloys, and stamped forever with the impress of his superior spirit. But, being essentially Hebrew still, it is incapable of expansion into the aspiration of universal humanity; and Jesus, though endowed with that sanity of genius which is madness in the eyes of mediocrity, is no longer in the van.

To him, however, who in the face of sincerity like that of Jesus, ventures to whisper the word imposture, I will not do insult to my own reverence for human greatness by addressing any defence of Jesus from such a charge. It should blister the mouth that makes it. Enough for me that in the privacy of his own self-communings Jesus believed he heard the summons to a work of unparalleled sublimity,—that he valued not his blood in comparison with obedience,—that he claimed the Messianic diadem with death for its Koh-i-noor. Surely, the suspicion of duplicity as the root of such vast historic influence, betrays in the suspecter a disgraceful faith in the power of knavery.

The transcendent greatness of Jesus appeared in this, that the popular hope of a Priest-King ruling by the sword transformed itself in his musing soul into the sublime idea of a spiritual Christ ruling by love,—that he sought to establish the "kingdom of heaven," not over the bodies, but deep in the hearts, of men. So pure and piercing was his spiritual insight, that, once possessed with the Messianic idea, he entered into the best that was in it, and forgot the rest; seized on the elder and diviner meaning of the prophets, and cast away as rubbish the popular selfishness with which this was overlaid. Believing himself to be the Anointed of God, he aspired to become, not merely king of the Jewish theocracy after its miraculous restoration by God at the great "day of judgment," but also king of the very heart of regenerated humanity. I would fain put upon this ambition the noblest possible construction; for, so far from wishing to make out a case against him, I am only anxious to do him exact justice, and penetrate the spirit of the faith which he bequeathed to mankind. To become the object of human imitation and the quickening ideal of human aspiration,—to be the One Way to purity and love and peace,—to reign in men's souls, as the sun reigns in the solar system, by developing the seeds of all goodness and beauty;—this, and no selfish empire, was the ambition of Jesus. He aimed to be Lord and King by drawing all men to God, and thus to make himself the great centre of the world's divinely life. To reconcile his supreme self-emphasis with his supreme self-sacrifice, is the great perplexing problem of the gospels. The doctrine of his Deity, which is the Orthodox solution, is not a possible one to humanitarian thinkers. Where shall we find another?

The Originality of Jesus.

On the one hand, the claim of Jesus to the Messianic crown did not grow out of a vulgar lust of power, but out of a profound faith that it was God's will that he should wear it. Belief in the "divine right of kings" was universal in the Jewish world, and Jesus fully shared it. How it happened that he first became convinced of his own divine election to the throne of the "kingdom of heaven," will never, I think, be explained: that is a secret, buried with him. But that he did become convinced of it, and that this profound conviction, rather than any desire of personal aggrandizement, was the root of his Messianic claim, seems to me the simple verdict of justice. His self-emphasis, therefore, was the necessary product of his education, his spiritual experience, and his faith in God; and in the necessity of this connection between cause and effect, lies his defence against the charge of overweening and selfish egotism. But there was nothing original in this conviction of a special Divine mission; every founder of a religion shares it. The true originality of Jesus lies, I conceive, in the means he adopted to accomplish his end and realize his ambition. Here he stands alone. Strange as it may seem, he aimed to win absolute power by absolutely renouncing it. This is the identification of contradictories,—the very Hegelianism of conscience. With a new conception of what constitutes true royalty of soul, he sought to earn his kingship by the more than regal majesty of his service. The "great Masters" have been rare indeed; yet how much rarer have been the great Servants! It is the grandest and most original trait in Jesus' character, that he sought to realize his supreme Mastership through a supreme Servantship. Here lies the reconciliation of his self-emphasis and self-renunciation. Here, also, I find the secret of his wonderful success in subduing souls to his sway. He would govern, yet through love; he would secure absolute allegiance, yet bind men to it by the spontaneous outgush of their own gratitude; he would wear a crown, yet bow his head to receive it from the hands of subjects burning with eagerness to place it there. Thus, and thus alone, he aspired to reign, the welcome Sovereign of every human soul.

What astounding, yet sublime, audacity! How mean, compared with this, the ambitions of Alexanders and Cæsars and Napoleons! How brutal is the ambition that relies on force, compared with the ambition that relies on love! Yet, because it involved his own elevation to a throne, albeit a spiritual throne, his ambition was ambition still, the "last infirmity" of a most noble mind. It precluded the possibility of self-forgetfulness in service,—of that supreme modesty which teaches that the value of the grandest soul is not personal, but inheres in the universal humanity it contains, and the universal ideas it represents. There is but one ambition sublimer than to REIGN BY SERVING,—and that is, to SERVE WITHOUT REIGNING. I cannot shut my eyes to the nobler purpose; I cannot forget that Socrates both lived and died to make it real.

The Radical Defect of Christianity.

In vain is all the modern noise and bustle about a "Liberal" Christianity. Christianity is based on forgetfulness of liberty; the love of perfect freedom is not in it. Spiritual servitude is its corner stone,—none the less harmful, if voluntary. Many a slave has loved his chains. Interpret as loosely as you may the Lordship which Jesus claimed,—it is no Lordship at all, if it leaves the soul supreme Lord over itself. Run down the scale from slavish imitation to simple deference,—it avails nought; there is no spiritual freedom but in reverence for the still, small voice within the soul, as supreme above all other voices. This made the greatness of Jesus himself; would that he had fostered it in his disciples! Yet no! Even the mistakes of lofty spirits help on the great cause of human development; and, mistaken as was the Messianic ambition of Jesus, the world's debt is immense to this magnificent mistake. Mankind were not yet ripe for self-government in spiritual freedom,—are not wholly ripe for it to-day,—will not be wholly ripe for it this many a long year. The overpowering influence of a spiritual King whose law was love met the world's wants as the freedom of self-government could not then have done; and thus the gospel of authority accomplished a work not yet possible to the modern gospel of spiritual liberty. The grave responsibilities of independence befit only the ripe maturity of the soul.

Whether we consider Christianity with regard to its essence, its origin, or its history, we are thus led to one and the same conclusion,—that its fundamental characteristic as a distinct religion is its faith in Jesus as the Christ. Faith in a Christ or Messiah as "the coming man" had become, long prior to the birth of Jesus, an integral part of Hebrew monotheism; and Christianity, historically considered, is only the complete development of Judaism into its highest possibilities. "In its earliest aspect," says Martineau, "Christianity was no new or universal religion; Judaism had found the person of its Messiah, but else remained the same." All of high truth and spiritual power that are compatible with the Messianic idea, Jesus, I believe, put into it, when he made it the corner-stone of his religion. The Christian Church has expressed outwardly the genuine character of Messianism, and realized, both in their best and in their worst directions, its necessary historical tendencies. Gradually developing until the Papacy reached the zenith of its prosperity, and gradually decaying from that day to this, Christianity becomes daily more and more discordant with modern civilization and modern religion; and those sects that dream of adapting it to modern life are unconsciously officiating at its funeral. Construe it as largely or as loosely as you please, Christianity, as a great historical and spiritual power, will nevertheless remain religion within the limits of the Messianic idea. Idealize or transcendentalize the Christ as highly as you may, his practical power is gone the moment you make him aught less than a person. It is the vitality of Jesus that has made, and still makes, the vitality of his religion. Pass beyond the circle of its supreme influence, and, whether you know it or not, you have passed outside of Christianity. Detach Christianity wholly from the person of Jesus, and you destroy all meaning in the Christian name by destroying the historic root from which it sprang. The Christian Confession remains the boundary line which no Christian can overstep.

However some may yearn, having lost all faith in the Messianic idea, to retain nevertheless the Christian name, whether from love for its venerable associations or from reluctance to bear the odium of its distinct rejection, I believe that the proprieties of language and increasing perception of what consistency requires will slowly wean them from this desire. The world at large can never be made to understand what is meant by a Christian who in no sense has faith in the Christ. If Jesus really claimed to be the Christ,—if he made this claim the basis of the Christian religion,—and if through this claim he still infuses into his Church all its Christian life,—then the world is right, and may well marvel at a Christianity that denies the Lord, yet wears his livery. For myself, I cannot evade the practical consequences of my thought. The central doctrine of Christianity is for me no longer true; its essential spirit and faith are no longer the highest or the best; and with the reality, I resign the name. Far be it from me to do this in levity or mockery or defiance! Far be it from me to turn my back in scorn on my own most hallowed experiences in the past! Once I felt the full power of the Christian faith; now I cleave to a faith diviner still. If I am in fatal error, and rush madly into the woes denounced against the Anti-Christ, even so must it be; but come what may, let me never plunge into the deeper damnation of moral faithlessness, or make my heart the coffin of a murdered truth!

The Higher Faith.

If, then, there is a higher faith than Christianity, he who shall cherish it is bound to make known what it is, and how it is higher than Christianity. Bear with me while I endeavor to discharge this duty. It is no easy thing to do. Free Religion, the higher faith I hold, has no history, save the history of the human spirit, striving to work out its destiny in freedom. It is spiritual, not historical,—universal, not special,—inward, not outward. It has no list of doctrines to teach, no Church to extend, no rites to perform, no Bible to expound, no Christ to obey. With none of these things, it is the soul's deep resolve to love the truth, to learn the truth, and to live the truth, uncoerced and free. It is Intellect daring to think, unawed by public opinion. It is Conscience daring to assert a higher law, in face of a corrupted society and a conforming church. It is Will setting at naught the world's tyrannies, and putting into action the private whispers of the still, small voice. It is Heart resting in the universal and changeless Law as eternal and transcendent Love. It is the soul of man asserting its own superiority to all its own creations, burning with deep devotion to the true and just and pure, and identifying its every wish with the perfect order of the universe. It is neither affirmation nor negation of the established, but rather a deep consciousness that all the established is inferior to that which has established it. It is the spirit of self-conscious freedom, aiming evermore at the best, and trusting itself as the architect of character. In fine, it is that sense of spiritual unity with boundless Being which fills the soul with reverence for human nature, and disables it from worshipping aught but the formless, indwelling, and omnipresent One.

But the difference between Christianity and Free Religion will best be made evident by a direct comparison between the two, with respect to their leading characteristics. This will show that by the intrinsic truth or falsity of the Christian Confession, that "Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ of God," Christianity must stand or fall. Let the issue be met fairly and squarely. The heart of the great controversy which is now shaking the world to its profoundest depths can be found nowhere, in the last analysis, but in this question of the truth or falsity of the Christian Confession. Here lies the battle-ground between freedom and authority, the vast Christian Church and the spirit of the nineteenth century, the great historical faith of the Old World and the genius of American liberty,—in one word, between Christianity and Free Religion. The time has come to see and to say that the Christian Confession is not a truth. Jesus was not the "Christ of God." The "Christ" prophesied and longed for has never come, and will never come. The office and function is a mythical, an impossible one. No individual man has ever stood, or can ever stand, in the relation of Lord, King, and Savior to the whole world. It would be an infinite usurpation for any man to occupy that office, either in a temporal or spiritual sense. A comparison between the Christian idea as it has always been and must ever remain, on the one hand, and the ideas which are now asserting eminent domain over the development of humanity on the other hand, will show that this issue between Christianity and Free Religion is an absolute and irreconcilable one, and that the former is doomed by the very nature of things to fade away and make room for the latter.

The Two Corner-Stones.

The corner-stone of Christianity is the Christ himself, believed to have actually come in the flesh as the Divinely appointed Savior of the world, the one "Life, Truth, and Way." His mission is unique, not to be accounted for by historical causes, but only by a special miraculous influx of Divine Power into the course of history. However this conception is refined and subtilized by the more thoughtful minds in the Christian Church, Jesus remains still, in the religion it teaches, the one Vine of which all his followers are merely branches.

But the corner-stone of Free Religion is the universal soul of man, the common nature of humanity, as the source and origin of the world's religious life. Out of this have sprung, in accordance with unchanging spiritual laws, all churches, faiths, and religions. Nothing less than the entire history of humanity can reveal all its possibilities; and through its own inherent possibilities alone can the world ever be "saved" from its own miseries and imperfections. The spontaneous energies of human nature, which is the great fountain-head of all history, all civilization, all religion, are the power of God gushing up and revealing in each soul afresh the Infinite Life that fills all space and time. It is faith in these human yet divine spontaneities, wherever and whenever and however manifested, that inspires the free soul to its highest life, and bids it realize its own inborn ideal as the consummation of its noblest possibilities. Faith in the individual Jesus; faith in universal human nature: these are the two corner-stones.

The Two Fellowships.

As is the basis of faith, so is the fellowship built upon it. The Christian fellowship is as wide as all Christians, but no wider. Those are Christian brethren who acknowledge the same common Lord, and thus drink at the same general fountain of Christian life. It was their love for each other that made the ancients marvel at the early Christians; and they who forget this limitation of their love fail to understand the spirit of the primitive Church as impressed on the New Testament. From that day to this, the same limitation of fellowship has existed; and so long as the Christian Church continues to survive, its organic bond of union must still be the original Christian Confession.

But the fellowship of Free Religion is as wide as humanity itself. All who are born of woman are brothers and peers in virtue of their common nature. There is no right of spiritual primogeniture, no monopoly of inspiration, no precedence of creed; all men are but seekers after truth, and despite all pretensions and delusions they reach it only by using the natural faculties of the mind. The impartial God sends his sunshine and his rain to all. There is no privileged or commissioned interpreter of Divine oracles.

"Now there bubbled beside them, where they stood,
A fountain of waters sweet and good;
The you h to the streamlet's brink drew near,
Saying, 'Ambrose, thou maker of creeds, look here!
Six vases of crystal then he took,
And set them along the edge of the brook.

"As into these vases the water I pour,
There shall one hold less, another more,
And the water unchanged in every case
Shall put on the figure of the vase:
O thou who wouldst unity make through strife,
Canst thou fit this sign to the Water of Life?"

These beautiful lines of our own American poet breathe the true spirit of Free Religion,—a deep humility in the presence of infinite truth which forbids any one to despise another's earnest faith. How all dogmatic arrogance fades away, when reverence for our own souls begets an equal reverence for the souls of others! It is out of this profound sentiment of human equality in respect to all spiritual privileges that a profound regard for all other human equalities is born, nor do I see how it can have any other origin. Yet in the conscious equality of all human rights, whether before God or man, must be found the seed of all universal brotherhood that deserves the name. These, then, are the two contrasted fellowships,—the brotherhood of the Christian Church limited by the Christian Confession, the great brotherhood of man without limit or bound.

The Two Social Ideals.

A similar contrast meets us in the social ideals held up as the great end of collective human activity. The supreme object of the Christian Church is to Christianize the world, and thus secure the salvation of all in the world to come. That is, its efforts are all directed to the one aim of bringing all men within its fold, of making its brotherhood universal on the basis of the Christian Confession, of absorbing the world into itself, and thus including all men under the sceptre of its Lord. In the prime of its glory the mediæval Papacy went far towards accomplishing this object; and, although now the Christian Church is shattered into fragments, each separate piece or

"sect" endeavors to accomplish it anew. "Church Extension" is the primary aim of all denominations as such, the evidence and measure of all denominational life. To evangelize or Christianize the world is the ideal end of all Christian activity of a social kind; and this means to make contemporaneous with the globe that "kingdom of heaven" in which the Christ is the Divinely appointed king.

But the supreme object of Free Religion is to humanize the world. That is, it aims to liberate, to educate, to spiritualize, in one word, to develop the race. To bring out of man the best that is in him,—the best in thought, in feeling and sentiment, in moral action, in social, political, and religious life,—this is the work it proposes. Whatever inward or outward conditions favor this asymmetrical development of human nature, it strives unceasingly to secure; and thus all high philanthropies and all generous reforms and all noble endeavors to ameliorate society grow out of the essential purpose and dominant idea of Free Religion. Man does not need to be Christianized: he does need to be humanized. While thus the social ideal of the Christian Church is that of a "kingdom of heaven" on earth with the Christ for its king, the social ideal of Free Religion is that of a Commonwealth of Man, in which there is neither king nor lord, but all are free and equal citizens.

The Two Spiritual Ideals.

A profounder contrast still exists between the two spiritual ideals held up to the private soul. The highest possible exhortation of Christianity is—"Be like Christ"; its highest eulogy is to say—"He is Christlike." By rigid self-examination and laborious imitation to model the character after the pattern set by the "Great Exemplar," is the crowning achievement of the Christian saint. The little work of Thomas à Kempis, called the Imitation of Christ, which is said to have passed through more editions than any other book except the Bible alone, is chiefly a devoutly passionate outpouring of the Christian aspiration to attain the character of Jesus. Suppression of the stubborn individuality and complete reproduction of the Master's likeness is the spiritual ideal of the Christian mystic; and the heroes of Christian history are precisely those who, like Fénelon or St. Francis of Assisi, are supposed to have most successfully imitated it.

But the highest exhortation of Free Religion is—"Be thyself"; its highest praise—"He was true to himself, and therefore true to humanity and to God." It recognizes no absolute ideal in Jesus; it perceives that, even were it possible (which it is not), the successful imitation of Jesus by all mankind would extinguish individuality, make original and independent character impossible, and destroy the very roots of all civilization. It proclaims the servility, nay, the utter irreligion, of spiritual imitation. The character of Jesus exhibits but one out of an infinite number of spiritual types, and could be an ideal to no one but himself, even supposing that he had made his own ideal identical with his own real. The law of endless variety in natural temperaments and organizations, and in the relative strength of elementary faculties, involves another law of endless variety in individual ideals. A single absolute ideal for all mankind would be an appalling curse, if it were possible to hold all to it. Each soul must have its own ideal according to the balance of its natural capacities and powers, the nature of its surroundings and conditions in the world, and the quantity and quality of its being; and as the soul grows in attainment, so must its ideal evermore enlarge. It is supremely mischievous to be a copyist in character. Fac-similes of Jesus are impossible; good imitations of him are excessively rare; caricatures of him are plentiful. The ideal of another, like a die stolen from the mint, can at the best make me only a counterfeit. Hence the highest maxim in this matter is simply this: "Be true to yourself." Thus, while the spiritual ideal of Christianity is to sacrifice all individuality in the reproduction of the character of Jesus, the spiritual ideal of Free Religion is to develop the individuality of each soul in the highest, fullest, and most independent manner possible.

The Two Essential Spirits.

But the profoundest contrast of all lies in the fundamental unlikeness of spirit and tone. The spirit of Christianity, as manifested in the chief saints of Christian history, has always been on the one hand that of self-abnegation, self-distrust, self-contempt, and on the other hand that of utter spiritual prostration before Jesus, and utter submission to his authoritative will. To be absolutely obedient to the Christ, and to find this obedience made easy by a divine passion of love for his person and his character, has always been, and must always be, the governing, secret aspiration of every Christian heart. Whether believed to be the incarnate God, or simply the one Divinely ordained Way to God, the supreme motive to holy living has always been, in the deeply devout Christian, absorbing love for his Savior; and this love always tends to produce the suppression of the free self, the paralysis and humiliation of the individual will, in order that the will of the Master may be accomplished in heart and life. Meekness, patience, submission, resignation, passivity, absence of self-will, complete surrender of the whole soul to a will outside of itself,—these are the especial graces and virtues of the Christian character, and determine the type of the "Christian spirit."

But the spirit of free religion is fundamentally different. The same self-consecration to God, which in the Christian soul produces self-surrender and self-humiliation, produces in the free soul self-reliance and self-respect. God in Christ is God outside of self, and devotion to him must be self-suppression; but God in Humanity is God in every soul; and devotion to him becomes the putting forth of every energy to attain freely the individual ideal. The spirit of Free Religion, as the name imports, is the spirit of freedom, of manly and womanly self respect, of deep religious trust in human nature; and because its faith in self is, at bottom, faith in the divineness of universal nature, it is the perfect blending of sturdy self-reliance with noble humanity, and devout repose in God.

The Summary.

Thus, from a thoughtful and independent comparison of the great faith of the past, and the greater faith of the present, it becomes clear, I think, that there is a deep spiritual antagonism between them. The one must wane as the other waxes. The one must die that the other may live. God in Christ is the spiritual centre of Christianity; hence in Christ himself must Christianity ever have its basis and corner-stone,—in the Christian Confession it must ever have its bond and limit of fellowship,—in the universal extension of the Christian Church it must ever have its social ideal,—in the imitation of Jesus it must ever have its spiritual ideal,—in the suppression of self, and utter submission to the will of Jesus, it must ever manifest its essential spirit. But God in Humanity is the spiritual and central faith of free religion; which has thus its corner stone in universal human nature, its fellowship in the great brotherhood of man, its social ideal in a free republican commonwealth, its spiritual ideal in the highest development of each individual soul, its essential spirit in a self-respect which is at once profound reverence for human nature, and profound repose in universal Nature.

Am I not right in calling this the higher and diviner faith,—the faith of manhood as contrasted with that of childhood? I recognize the great services rendered to man by the Christian Church; I appreciate the peculiar beauty of the Christian character; I know the mighty power of the Christian spirit. But I cannot conceal from myself that Christianity is not adapted to the present as it has been to the past, and that a deeper, broader, and higher faith is to-day silently entering the heart of humanity. If, out of all the sayings attributed to Jesus in the New Testament, I were asked to select that one which most profoundly utters the spirit of his religion, I should select these beautiful, gracious, and tender words:—

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

How many aching hearts and wounded spirits have taken upon them the easy yoke of Jesus, and found the promised rest! And how many more will find repose and peace in the same gentle bondage! If the free spirit could indeed wear a yoke,—if it could indeed purchase rest on such terms without abjuring that spiritual independence which is its very life and breath,—then might it wear the yoke of Jesus. Once I rejoiced to wear it; but I can wear it no longer. The rest I need comes no longer from spiritual servitude, but must be sought and found in the manly exercise of spiritual freedom. It is to those who feel this Anglo-Saxon instinct of liberty stirring in their hearts that my words are addressed,—not to those who feel no galling pressure from the easy yoke. My duty is discharged; my task is done; and, as I have freely spoken, so do you freely judge my words.

FOREIGN.

LOUIS LUSIGNAN, a captain in the Russian service, claims the sovereignty of Cyprus, and vast estates in that island, and has begged the Russian government to intercede for him.

ST. PETERSBURG.—An imperial ukase has been issued, forbidding males to marry under the age of twenty, and females under fifteen. It is notorious that Jewish parents in Russia allow their children to marry at such an early age that it is not uncommon to meet a Jewish wife of twelve, or a father only fifteen years old.

THE OLD CHURCH of San Salvatore, in Venice, has been reopened, after ten years and eight months spent in restoring it. This church contains two works by Titian,—the great altar-piece of the transfiguration, and an annunciation, both works of his later years,—as well as several other noteworthy pictures of the Venetian school.

ACCORDING to the Paris Figaro, the Jesuits intend, should the seventh article of the Ferry bill be voted by the Senate, to establish an immense college in Jersey. It would be constructed to contain as many as three thousand pupils, and could therefore hold nearly all those who are at present studying in the society's schools throughout France.

THE SULTAN of ZANZIBAR is getting very civilized. He has practically suppressed the slave-trade, and with a determined hand. He gives dinner parties in a European fashion, with music from an excellent band, decorated menus, and all sorts of luxuries. His highness drives out in a carriage and four, with six outriders in scarlet and gold.

A LONDON journal congratulates the country that, for the first time in the history of the nation, a time of general business distress is not made worse by high-priced bread. It says: "The loaf which, thanks to American corn, the people can put on their tables to-day, is a bigger and better loaf than they have ever been able to put on their tables under similar circumstances before."

APPALLING DISTRESS is prevalent in Upper Hungary, where upward of thirty communes are without bread. The inhabitants would gladly emigrate en masse to America, had they means of undertaking a journey which would, as they think, lead them to a land of promise, as compared with the arid soil of their own country. The government is taking active measures to provide for their actual wants.

IN ST. PETERSBURG there has long existed a Dominican convent, to which was attached the care of a congregation of over twenty-five thousand persons, chiefly Germans, Frenchmen, and Italians. But, during the last fifty years, the Dominican order has suffered immense losses in Russia, so that this convent, once well endowed and established, now has only twelve aged Dominicans, and they are quite unable to discharge the duties of the parish. Recently, a Benedictine father, while in St. Petersburg, begged the Russian authorities, with whom he was on good terms, to permit the recruiting of the numbers of the Dominicans from other countries than Russia, which was granted, on condition that the new priests were not Poles. Since then, the government has undertaken to pay the expenses of the immigrants; and it is believed that the old convent will soon be able to carry on its work with due care and thoroughness.

COUNT TELFENER is reputed to be the richest man in Italy. He purchased one of King Victor Emmanuel's estates in the country, and he also bought the late king's palace at Maccao, and the royal villa outside Porta Salara. The purchase of the Maccao palace was effected before, and that of the royal villa on the Via Salara after, the death of Victor Emmanuel. On occasion of the purchase of the Maccao palace, Signor Telfener was created a count. Last year Count Telfener married, for his second wife, Ada, the sister-in-law of Mr. Mackey, the millionaire, who now resides in Paris. Part of the wedding festivities consisted in the exhibition of races between Count Telfener's horses on a course laid out in the Royal Villa, which was thrown open for the day to the public, and was honored by visits from King Humbert and the notables of Rome. The title of the Royal Villa was changed, in compliment to the bride, to Villa Ada. Honors and riches seemed to pour in upon Count Telfener, and he was elected to represent Foligno in the Chamber of Deputies; but he never took his seat, as technical objections to his return were raised on the ground that, as an Austrian subject by birth, he was ineligible to represent an Italian constituency. These objections might, of course, have been overcome by letters of naturalization. The newspapers, however, announce that Count Telfener has resigned his seat for Foligno, and intends to fix his residence in Paris, where he will open a bank. By this transfer of domicile, Rome loses a millionaire, and it may be expected that the estates and palaces purchased from the royal family will be offered for sale. The Telfener palace at Maccao is furnished with regal sumptuousity. The Villa Ada possesses very extensive grounds, commanding most magnificent views. The palace, erected by Victor Emmanuel, is not finished in the interior, but requires some thousands to render it habitable. Rumor said that these properties, on which the late king expended millions, were sold to Telfener for a comparatively trifling sum.—Paris Globe.

Poetry.

A BIRTHDAY PRAYER.

Art Thou the Life?
To Thee, then, do I owe each beat and breath,
And wait Thy ordering of the hour of death,
In peace or strife.

Art Thou the Light?
To Thee, then, in the sunshine or the cloud,
Or in my chamber lone or in the crowd,
I lift my sight.

Art Thou the Truth?
To Thee, then, loved and craved and sought of yore,
I consecrate my manhood o'er and o'er,
As once my youth.

Art Thou the Strong?
To Thee, then, though the air is thick with night,
I trust the seeming unprotected Right,
And leave the Wrong.

Art Thou the Wise?
To Thee, then, do I fetch each useless care,
And bid my soul unsay her idle prayer,
And hush her cries.

Art Thou the Good?
To Thee, then, with a thirsting heart, I turn
And stand, and at Thy fountain hold my urn,
As aye I stood.

Forgive the call!
I cannot shut Thee from my sense or soul;
I cannot lose me in the boundless whole,
For Thou art All!

1869.

ASTERISK.

—THE INDEX, Jan. 1, 1870.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DEC. 27.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

H. D. Bennett, $5; A. J. Shearer, $3.20; J. M. McDonald, $3.20; Noyes, Snow & Co., $5.50; Mrs. M. A. Stewart, $3; R. C. McLaugh, $6.75; Richard Foster, 55 cents; Emma Burton, $1.70; J. L. Whiting, $1.50; C. W. Story, $3.20; Cash, $20; F. F. Dawley, $4; H. M. Geo. W. Julian, $3; E. Bisell, $3.20; J. Seidenberg, $3.20; Raynal Doice, $1; J. L. Cutler, $1; J. E. Ruggie, $2; L. Ma-kham, $1.05; Dr. Geo. F. Howe, $2.50; Dr. G. W. Topping, $4; Seth Hunt, $3.20; Thomas Marshall, $3.20; Mrs. M. H. Eble, $3.20; Ferdinand S. Hmitz, $3.20; Clayton F. Woods, $3.90; R. Peterson, $4.00; Rev. M. J. Savage, $3.20; Alex. R. K., $3.20; Theo. W. L. 75 cents; K. H. War en, $3.20; Thomas Ranney, $1.60; F. S. Cabot, $4.20; Bertha Kos omia sky, $1.50; Wm. Green, $3.20; Dr. J. F. Noyes, $3.20; H. B. Howe, $3.20; M. O. Gues, $2.00; Jon. F. Barrett, $6.40; C. M. Cuyler, $2.50; Louis Shiveley, $8.00; A. P. Hulse, $4.20; R. F. Thomson, $3.20.

The Index.

BOSTON, JAN. 1, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO OFFICE, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENSFELDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N.Y.	5.00
A. FOLSON, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. PRESNO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York, N.Y.	5.00
Gen. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HLIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRS, New York, N.Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N.Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N.Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D.C.	5.00
GEO. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N.Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
Mrs. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
Miss H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N.Y.	1.00
Mrs. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
Hon. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N.Y.	1.00
N. LEVINSON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N.Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N.Y.	1.00
Mrs. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
Mrs. FRANCIS DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
Prof. P. A. PEILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
Dr. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
Mrs. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00
Mrs. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
Mrs. CAROLINE E. SERRILL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Bradenton, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. RISK, Winthrop, Iowa.	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N.Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00

WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D.C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N.Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N.Y.	5.00
Mrs. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N.Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " " "	1.00
MR. GAUS, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Grand Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

A WORD FOR THE NEW DECADE.

To-day the civilized world, passing out of one period of ten years in its conventional mode of reckoning time, enters upon a new period of equal length; to-day the "seventies" of the nineteenth century have closed forever, and the "eighties" begin. The "Happy New Year!" with which everybody cordially salutes his neighbor may well be enlarged to suit the occasion, and THE INDEX accordingly wishes its readers a "Happy New Decade!"

But the conditions of "happiness" are fixed and permanent. Human nature has its constant laws, to know and obey which is the only way to be happy. It is true that the circumstances of human lives vary exceedingly, and that no life, however wisely and faithfully ordered according to these laws of human nature, can escape its less or greater share of unhappiness; it is true that even the highest wisdom and the most heroic fidelity combined hold no impenetrable shield before the sensitive heart. Nevertheless, it is also true that ignorance or unfaithfulness to these laws is certain in the long run to diminish the joy and increase the pain, not only for each individual life, but just as truly for every other life that is linked to it. A large proportion of human misery is caused by the unwisdom or selfishness of others than those who chiefly suffer. The "solidarity of man" is one of those very laws of human nature on which happiness depends; whoever despises it involves many besides himself in the inevitable sorrow that follows, while he who understands and obeys it radiates happiness far beyond the narrow scope of his own vision.

The aim of THE INDEX has been and is to call attention to those great conditions of happiness which, though permanent and universal, are too often neglected by individuals and scarcely recognized at all by society. Christianity has always underrated human nature, with most disastrous consequences to human happiness; it has always decried human nature as depraved and lost, and promised happiness chiefly in another world, as the undeserved gift of the "Savior." Free Religion, on the other hand, finds human nature essentially sound, and seeks to create happiness in this world by teaching men to understand and obey natural laws. The difference is immense; and THE INDEX has striven for ten years to make it clear to all eyes. In a not unkindly notice of its first number, Rev. Henry W. Bellows, D.D., then editor of the New York Liberal Christian (since discontinued), said:—

"Before THE INDEX concludes its first decade, it will probably discover either that it is working in a vacuum, or threading the interstices of real Christian life, and so find little to run against, and little that runs against it. It will probably have its field all to itself, and freeze up with its disciples in the sunless, Christless region of that pole towards which THE INDEX points."

Well—THE INDEX has just concluded its "first decade" without making either of the discoveries here prophesied. It has certainly not been "working in a vacuum," and it has certainly not been merely "threading the interstices of Christian life." On the contrary, it has been working, not without visible effect, in the real world of human life; and it has come into such close contact with Christianity as to have exerted an influence, difficult to measure but not difficult to discover, on the course of at least one Christian sect. It has lived long enough to see the SCIENTIFIC METHOD, the supreme law of all its own thinking and the comprehensive object of all its exertions to improve the world's thinking, not only practically adopted by the Divinity School of Harvard University and by the Ministers' Institute of the Unitarian denomination, but also spreading and triumphing in all directions. And THE INDEX has not yet "frozen up," or reached the North Pole of Dr. Bellows' half-humorous prophecy!

No—THE INDEX has occupied itself with no visionary or impracticable projects, but labored to secure better observance of the great and indispensable conditions of human happiness. These conditions are what they have ever been and will ever be—the universal diffusion of Truth, Righteousness, and Love. But THE INDEX has had a real work to do, bearing vitally on the substantial happiness of the human race, in attempting to make the fundamental laws of Truth, Righteousness, and Love, which have always been misunderstood and mistaught by the Christian Church, understood correctly and obeyed faithfully by mankind. What are these fundamental laws?

1. TRUTH CAN ONLY BE FOUND BY THE HUMAN INTELLECT, EXERCISED IN PERFECT FREEDOM, AND TRAINED TO SUBMIT ITSELF TO THE FACTS OF NATURE.

This is the essence of the Scientific Method, which is the exact opposite of the Theological Method. Science teaches men to think with absolute independence of all arbitrary authority, but to submit all their thoughts to the test of actual experience of Nature. Christianity teaches them to think only according to its own foregone dogmatic conclusions, and to stick to these dogmatic conclusions in defiance of all possible experience. The issue is clear enough to everybody who is not interested in one way or another to evade it. Knowledge of the truth as it is in Nature,—knowledge of the "truth as it is in Jesus": Science aims at the one, and Christianity at the other. Because knowledge of the truth as it is in Nature is the supreme condition of human happiness, THE INDEX has labored unremittingly to persuade men of the supreme and sole validity of the Scientific Method, as the way to Truth.

2. RIGHTEOUSNESS CAN ONLY BE ATTAINED BY THE HUMAN WILL, EXERCISED IN PERFECT SUBMISSION TO THE GUIDANCE OF THE HUMAN INTELLECT, AS THE DISCOVERER AND ENUNCIATOR OF THE MORAL LAW OF NATURE.

This is the essence of the Scientific Method as applied to Ethics. Science teaches men to obey the laws of "natural morality," as discovered by intellect in its free investigation of Nature. Christianity teaches them to obey the laws of "Christian morality," as taught by the authoritative standards of Christian belief—Pope, Church, Bible, or Christ. Morality, as science teaches it, rests on no arbitrary will, but on the necessary facts of Nature, the necessary relations of individuals to each other and to all. Until these facts and relations have been clearly understood as they are, and until the conduct of individuals and the regulations of society have been conformed to them, the maximum of human happiness cannot possibly be attained. That is why THE INDEX has had so much at heart the cause of "natural morality," and emphasized so much the necessity of recognizing Intellect as the rightful guide of Conscience.

3. LOVE CAN BE UNIVERSALLY DIFFUSED ONLY BY EXERCISING THE HUMAN AFFECTIONS IN PERFECT SUBMISSION TO THE MORAL LAW OF NATURE, AS DISCOVERED AND ENUNCIATED BY THE HUMAN INTELLECT.

This is the essence of the Scientific Method as applied to the inner world of human emotion. Science teaches that love is as much under natural law as any other manifestation of human nature, and that this natural law, as declared by intellect, becomes rightfully the law of human society. Christianity has always given an unnatural supremacy to love over intellect, and the modern "free-lovers" fall into precisely the same error, by failing to recognize the fact that love is under natural moral law, of which intellect is the rightful interpreter, and to disregard which leads at last to hate and wide-spread misery. Love is no more "free" than thought; both must conform to the facts and laws of Nature, or they will equally cause disaster to human happiness. For this reason THE INDEX has always aimed to emancipate the human soul from all arbitrary human authority, but only in order to secure more profound and reverential obedience to the authority of Natural Law, as ascertained by human Intellect in conformity with the Scientific Method.

These fundamental laws of Truth, Righteousness, and Love, although prime and irrevocable conditions of human happiness on any large scale, have been fatally neglected by the Christian Church. In wishing a "Happy New Decade!" to its readers, THE INDEX may point to its own unwearied efforts in the past decade to establish these conditions of happiness, as proof that its wish, however ineffective it may be, is at least sincere.

TO THE FRIENDS OF FREEDOM.

We ask your aid in our enterprise. THE INDEX will be published at least for one year; but probably at a loss. Two thousand subscribers will make the paper self-supporting. If you who are in earnest will subscribe for as many copies as you can afford, distributing them widely, and interest yourself in obtaining other subscribers, there will be no failure. The numerous letters we are receiving from all parts of the country convince us that the times are ripe for our experiment. The land swarms with men and women who are sick of the popular religion, and wait for a faith that shall not belittle them. The mildest form of Christianity preached in the churches fails to meet their just demand. They want ideas, not dogmas,—principles, not persons,—truths, not fictions. It is to such as these that we speak our word. Give them a chance to hear it, if you think it worth hearing.

But we ask no aid from any one who is not convinced that we are on the right track. If what we have to say is not strong, timely, and true,—if it is not the word which the world waits to hear,—we hope to fail. THE INDEX would have no excuse for being, if it were a private speculation. It exists for a purpose. If the purpose is a mistaken one, let it and THE INDEX die together. But if otherwise, friends of freedom, we count upon your aid.—THE INDEX, Jan. 1, 1870.

THE McFARLAND-RICHARDSON CASE.

We intend to pronounce no judgment on the parties implicated in this wretched affair. No grounds for any such judgment have been certified to the public. Contradictory ex parte statements have been made, but no one can decide between them. Let the courts ferret out the truth, and let the public, in simple justice, suspend all judgment as to the guilt or innocence of persons whose misfortunes need no court to point them out. It is ungenerous and cruel to prejudge a case in which facts, as yet unknown, should determine the apportionment of blame. The press and the public have been too rash.

But the case raises general questions of grave importance. One of these we would point out, because it is little likely to receive due attention elsewhere; the others we leave, for the present, to the discussion of other journals. Does modern society obey the Christian law of divorce?

What is this law? It is found in the Sermon on the Mount, Matt. v., 32: "But I say unto you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery; and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery." The same explicit declaration is repeated in Matt. xix., 3-9. If the words of Jesus are the authoritative law of Christianity, then it is perfectly plain that the Christian law unqualifiedly forbids a husband to put away his wife except for adultery on her part,—that it recognizes no right in the wife to put away her husband for any cause; that the husband who puts away his wife except for adultery, and then marries again, commits adultery; and that whoever marries a woman divorced for any reason but adultery on her part commits adultery. Jesus taught unequivocally the indissoluble nature of marriage with only one specified exception; and this specified exception is adultery on the part of the wife. In all other cases, divorce is expressly prohibited by him. This, the Christian law of divorce, was restated by Augustine in the words, "Dominus praecepit ne quisquam dimittat uxorem, excepta causa fornicationis"; and the Catholic Church insists uncompromisingly on obedience to the law. It was the refusal of Pope Clement VII. to sanction the divorce of Henry VIII. from Queen Catharine that precipitated the English Reformation. In this, as in other respects, Romanism is the true Christianity; while Protestantism departs from it.

Now the increasing enlightenment of civilized countries has led to a practical abolition of the Christian law of divorce, although without public consciousness of the fact. Other causes than adultery are deemed sufficient to dissolve the marriage tie in many, if not most of the States of the Union; and not only is this practical violation of the Christian law acquiesced in by the public, but it is not even protested against by the Christian clergy. Gradually the moral sense of the community outgrows the narrow restrictions of the past, and learns to perceive the injustice of laws based on theology. What right has society to legalize prostitution by compelling a man and a woman to live together, when that mutual respect and love which alone justify marriage have died out of their hearts? None whatever.

Hence maltreatment, incompatibility of temper, and other causes, are silently admitted among the reasons which justify divorce; and the change, however irreconcilable with the Christian law, tends to the honor of the marriage state and the elevation of its ideal. The expediency of divorce for other reasons than adultery has been proved by experience and acknowledged by law; and the vast majority of the Protestant clergy tacitly sanction the fact, though it is a flagrant violation of the gospel they preach.

It is time that the authority of natural morality, by which society thus practically repudiates the obligations of what is called distinctively "Christian" morality, should be publicly recognized. Even in professedly Christian countries, the authority of the Christ is practically disowned, not only in regard to divorce, but also in regard to other important matters that might be specified. Considered from a legal point of view, the sacramental, mystical, or Christian conception of marriage is giving place to the conception of it as a civil contract; and it is this secularization of marriage which has caused the change in our laws of divorce. But how can this change be defended on Christian grounds? It cannot be thus defended. It can only be defended on the ground of natural reason, conscience, and experience. In other words, society begins to exercise the right of self-government, and to resist the attempt of theology to govern it. Let the truth be honestly confessed. In allowing divorce for other reasons than adultery, the American people are violating the law of Christ in obedience to the law of humanity.

From this point of view, the position of the New York Independent concerning the divorce question is passing strange. We quote from a recent editorial on "The Richardson Assassination":—

"The horrible case is a new illustration of the folly and wickedness of that semi-superstitious sentiment which, in the name of maintaining the sanctity of marriage, outrageously perverts the very idea of marriage, by compelling the life-long union of two persons, either of whom finds such a union to be loathsome, degrading, and unholy. There is no divine, and there ought to be no human, law to compel the continuance of any marriage which, so long as it continues, is nothing better than legalized prostitution. 'Whom God hath joined together'—that, and that only, is the divine idea of marriage. Anything short of that is abomination. To chain two human beings fast to each other's side, against the perpetual protest of galled and wounded human nature, is an offence at which the angels weep. The great indifferent public have no right to say, either on the basis of any statute law, or on the deeper basis of any popular sentiment, or on the still deeper basis of any supposed religious tenet, that any two individuals, man and woman, shall live together as husband and wife, against the inward protest of their own individual souls. Derived from whatever sources, based on whatever foundation, sanctioned by whatever tradition, such a legalized tyranny is unworthy of a Christian civilization, shamefully perverts the fundamental teachings of Christianity, and destroys the sacred claim of religion to the reverence of mankind."

Down to the closing sentence of this extract, we cordially echo every word (excepting only the allusion to the angels, of whom we know less than Mr. Tilton knows). The passage is admirable as an utterance of free religion. But the "legalized tyranny," against which Mr. Tilton so justly and so eloquently inveighs, is nothing but the practical application of the words of Jesus, forbidding all divorce except for adultery. Do the words of Jesus "shamefully pervert the fundamental teachings of Christianity"? We ask an explanation of this statement. If Mr. Tilton's protest against the "legalized tyranny" which forbids all divorce except for adultery extends to the precept on which it rests, well and good,—we join him in it. That protest is free religion. But, in the name of sincere and manly dealing, we ask him to explain what are those "fundamental teachings of Christianity" which thus abrogate the teachings of Christianity's Lord and Master? Is the disciple above his Lord? To make good his assertion, Mr. Tilton must prove one of two things,—either that his position is not a flat contradiction of the teachings of Jesus, or else that the teachings of Jesus are not the "fundamental teachings of Christianity."

If neither of these things can be proved,—and we believe they cannot be proved,—then why not frankly confess the truth, that the world needs to-day a morality higher in respect to divorce than the morality of the gospel? The age is sick of this conjuring with sacred names. It longs to hear Truth speaking in her own right, not stammering out the shibboleth of a "creed outworn." Let us dare to advocate a just reform in the name of justice, trusting that every "legalized tyranny," once unmasked, will be condemned by the universal conscience of mankind.

This is the only court from which there is no appeal. To accept the Christian law of divorce as final would be not only to legalize, but to eternize, tyranny.—THE INDEX, Jan. 1, 1870.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

SENATOR DON CAMERON, it is reported, prefers General Grant.

PARNELL and DILLON, the Irish agitators, have sailed for this country.

BISMARCK is said to have suddenly closed all negotiations with the Vatican, and the old struggle is likely to begin again.

LUCRETIA MOTT, though approaching nearly ninety years of age, recently travelled quite a distance to attend the wedding of her grandson.

IVAN PANIN, a student of Harvard, and a native of Russia, has two lectures on that country, one of which he gave at Cosmian Hall, Florence, Mass., last Sunday.

THE SERMONS of Rev. M. J. Savage, of Boston, one of the most radical and popular Unitarian preachers, are now regularly printed weekly, and are much in demand.

MISS KATE FIELD has presented to the Central Park commissioners a slip of Shakspeare's mulberry-tree. It is to be kept in a greenhouse till April and then planted, probably on the poet's birthday.

MADAME LING-TANG PAO, the wife of the Chinese Minister to Germany, is now on her way to join her husband at Berlin. She will be the first Asiatic lady who has been presented at the German Court.

MR. SEAVER thinks the resolutions of the Liberal League at Cincinnati should relieve it of the odium under which it rests in the public mind. Unfortunately, this is one of those cases when actions speak louder than words.

CARDINAL McCLOSKEY celebrated high mass on Christmas day, in vestments which cost $10,000, in the New York Cathedral. Meanwhile, benevolent people were providing dinners for many whose pennies paid for the show.

MRS. JANE GREY SWISSELM has ascertained from Buckle, a good authority, that for every twenty girls there are twenty-one boys born; and, consequently, she infers that every woman ought to have a husband, and every twenty families a good common-stock old bachelor uncle who will buy drums for the boys, dolls for the girls, and take the young ladies to the opera.

MRS. GLADSTONE, the ex-premier's wife, is one of the most charitable women in Europe, and is personally known to nearly all the poor in London. Her kind and serene countenance charms at once. She inspires respect in all, and more than once her well-directed charity after the war made Frenchmen forget that her husband's policy was not very favorable to them. She was, in consequence, very well received everywhere in Paris on her late visit.

REV. DR. TIFFANY is preaching on Sunday nights at his church, on Madison Avenue, a series of sermons for the special benefit of Jews, and in which he strives to convert Jews to Christianity. Those sermons are listened to by a large number of Christians, among whom are not a few sensible enough to perceive that their pastor is wasting time, talent, and eloquence in efforts sure to be entirely futile. Not even the publicity given them by the secular press can induce a dozen Israelites to listen to Dr. Tiffany's sermons.

CHARLES SUMNER was sitting at his desk in the senate, writing, as Preston Brooks came up behind him and beat him over the head with a gutta-percha cane. "The blood covered the head of the senator," says Doorkeeper Bassett, through the Times, of Chicago, "and he became senseless. I assisted him into the cloak-room. The cane was smashed to pieces, and I have a piece yet in my possession. I read some years ago an account of the presentation of this cane to an historical society in one of the Southern States. The pieces had grown together again, I suppose."

MR. JOHN FISKE, of Cambridge, has prepared a new course of three lectures on "American Political Ideas," as viewed from the standpoint of universal history, which he will deliver in London next spring. These lectures as a whole constitute an elaborate and entertaining sociological essay on the progress of society in government, as illustrating the law of evolution. Mr. Fiske will trace the growth of the federative idea, and show that it is the only idea that can work well in the government of a great country like the United States. Without being partisan,—on the contrary, purely philosophic and historical,—these lectures are likely to clear away a good deal of the "centralization" nonsense with which politicians have befogged the public mind.

PRESIDENT ELIOT of Harvard has issued a circular proposing a system of retiring annuities in the interest of all persons in the service of the University longer than one year. The corporation proposes annually to appropriate to the benefit of each a small per cent. (say 5 per cent.) of his salary, and to place it to his individual account. To this will also be added a small sum deducted from the person's annual salary, and the sum total of the credits upon the accounts will be separately invested under the name of the "annuity fund." The fund thus created will be increased by the addition of yearly interest; and, upon the death of any participant in the system, his administrator or executor will be paid the amount then standing to his credit; or, upon certain conditions, a participant may, if he prefer, take a retiring annuity during his lifetime.

Department

OF THE

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

THIS PORTION OF THE INDEX IS DEVOTED TO THE SPECIAL INTERESTS OF THE AMERICAN FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION, AND IS UNDER THE EDITORIAL CHARGE OF ITS SECRETARY.

The Executive Committee of the Free Religious Association accept with cordial gratitude the offer, gratuitously made by the managers of THE INDEX, of a portion of the paper each week, to be devoted specifically to the organized interests of that Association. It has constantly happened since its organization that the Association has felt the need of some regular medium of communication with the public. There are interesting facts to report connected with the general movement which it represents, notices to be given, statements to be made concerning what has been done, or is proposed to be done, extracts from correspondence which might be printed for the benefit of the constituents of the Association, occasional misunderstandings and misrepresentations in the community of the character of the Association which need official correction, and, generally, the specific aims and work of the organization need to be kept before the public.

And it is to such matters as these that this space will be devoted. It will be a department for information rather than for discussion. As to general questions and principles involved in the free religious movement, these will be amply treated in other parts of THE INDEX; and what the officers of the Association may have to say upon these general issues they will prefer to say in the general columns of the paper, in their individual capacity, rather than here as officials. The President and Secretary, and probably other officers of the Association, will, by invitation of the editor, be regular contributors to the general departments of THE INDEX; but only for this portion of the paper will the Association have any official responsibility.

The Free Religious Association, however, though having no official connection with THE INDEX beyond the limits of this department, cannot but most cordially welcome it to the "battle of ideas" which is now being fought in the domain of religion. Fulfilling, as we believe it will, its promise of fearless inquiry, scholarly ability, and a reverent spirit, it must prove a strong champion for religious liberty and progress; and as such may it be generally sustained by the public to whom it makes its appeal.

Having made these preparatory remarks in reference to the connection of the Free Religious Association with THE INDEX, we proceed to give a brief sketch of the Origin of the Association.

The immediate occasion which gave the impetus for organizing the Free Religious Association was furnished by the action of the National Conference of the Unitarian denomination at Syracuse, N. Y., in the autumn of 1866. This action, however, was only the occasion, not the cause, which gave rise to the Association. The cause is to be found in the various progressive and converging religious tendencies of the time, away from the conflicting authorities of specific religious systems and from the bonds of creeds and churches, to a union as broad as humanity itself, on the ground of common aspirations to know the truth and common efforts to live pure and beneficent lives. And it is these tendencies that the Free Religious Association was organized to represent. Still, those who first moved in the matter of organization were a few radical Unitarians, who, having made an attempt to broaden the basis of the National Unitarian Conference so as to strike out of it every implication of a creed and make it a platform simply for what was called in a general way Christian works, and having failed in that attempt, first in the conference at New York in 1865, and then at Syracuse, felt that the time had come for some new association, which should be inclusive of the freest religious thought of the time, and do a work in behalf of spiritual unity and human brotherhood which could not be done by any of the religious denominations. Upon several of the younger men who attended the Syracuse convention, this conviction seems to have been separately impressed with great force before they reached their homes, and they inwardly resolved to do whatever was in their power to carry the conviction into execution. During the autumn, two conferences were held in Boston, of some ten or twelve persons, most of whom had at least a nominal connection with the Unitarians, at which the general idea of a new association was discussed. At these conferences, opinion was about equally divided for and against organization, though all were agreed as to the necessity of protesting against the platform of the National Unitarian Conference, and also as to the importance of the objects which it was proposed to work for in a new organization. The objections came from the feeling against organizations in general (beyond the individual church), which very commonly accompanies radical religious ideas. It was urged that an association would necessarily be somewhat artificial and constrained, while the same objects could be in time more effectually reached by individual action.

Still, those who believed that there might be an association which should be perfectly free, and that the religious interests of the times demanded that the experiment should be tried, were not discouraged.

They had anticipated this objection, and only asked that it might not be thrown in the way of their action; and they urged their cause until it was agreed that a larger conference should be called to consider the question. This was done by the following letter of invitation, which was sent to all the Unitarian ministers in the country who were supposed to be more or less in sympathy with the defeated minority at Syracuse, and to some well-known representatives of free or independent churches:—

"BOSTON, Jan. 1, 1867.

"Dear Brother,—Since all prevailing denominational religious organizations set limits, more or less strict, to religious inquiry and fellowship, and since the recent attempts to organize even the most liberal denomination of Christians, as shown in the National Conference of Unitarian Churches, have fallen into the same error, and so have failed to satisfy the demands of Liberal Faith, it is believed the time has come to form a new association, in spiritual bonds, on the basis of free thought, for the purpose of bringing like-minded men together, of gathering to a head powers that are working too aimlessly in the same general direction, and of diffusing rational truths by rational methods. The desire is to make a fellowship, not a party; to promote the scientific study of religious truth, not to defend the legacy of theological tradition; to keep open the lines of spiritual freedom, not to close the lines of speculative belief.

"You are cordially invited to meet in conference some of your brethren, at the residence of Rev. Dr. Bartol, No. 17 Chestnut Street, Boston, on Tuesday, February 5, at 11 o'clock, A.M., to consider the possibility and the wisdom of forming such an association, the condition under which it should be attempted, and the means by which the project may be successfully carried into effect.

"As the interest of laymen is of great value, as giving substance and vitality to such a movement, you are invited to bring with you to the conference any friend who may be specially in sympathy with its objects and likely to add weight to its deliberations.

"In the hope that our invitation will be cordially responded to, and that the conference will result in the strengthening of our liberty in thought and deed, we are

Faithfully yours,

"O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

"JOHN WEISS.

"EDWARD C. TOWNE.

"FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

"WM. J. POTTER."

In response to this invitation, a company of some seventy-five men and women met at the place and time specified. The greater part, probably, were of Unitarian connections or antecedents. But there were also in the company some of the liberal Universalists, some representatives of progressive Quakerism, a number of the special friends, personally and theologically, of Theodore Parker, and others who could not be classed by any denominational or theological relationship. It is due to the Rev. Dr. Bartol, whose house and heart were so generously open to the meeting and to the preceding smaller conferences, to say that he was one of those whose temperament and tastes disinclined to any plan of organization, though he was very pronounced and zealous for the objects sought, and has ever been ready to speak a generous word for the Association that was formed. At this conference of February 5, a plan of organization, which had been carefully digested and prepared by Messrs. Abbot, Towne, and Potter, was presented and made the subject of deliberation. The talk was deeply earnest, searching, candid, and mostly in a broad and generous spirit of sympathy with the underlying objects of the meeting. In the sacred freedom and privacy of the place, heart opened to heart. Some utterances there made, for their keen criticism of the popular forms of religion and for their elevation of spiritual tone, can never be forgotten by those who heard them. The conference was prolonged till nearly evening. Of course the same difference of opinion was developed on the general question of organization as at the smaller meetings, though those who did not incline to organization did not press their objections as an obstacle in the path of those who believed in it. Among the Unitarian ministers present, it was evident, also, that there were some who thought it better to reserve all their influence in behalf of spiritual liberty to use in the Unitarian organizations, with the belief that after a time these could be made as broad as could be desired: to which it was replied that the plan presented in no wise conflicted with action in Unitarian or other denominational organizations, if any conscientiously believed in such action; it simply provided means for doing a work which none of these organizations were doing or aimed to do. The plan was carefully guarded from the beginning against any attempt or liability to form a new sect or to organize merely a fragment of an existing sect. It aimed rather to break down sectarian barriers than to erect new ones.

It had been thought possible that that meeting might adopt some plan of association, but what has since proved the better course prevailed. A committee was appointed by a nearly unanimous vote to call a public meeting, in any way they should deem most expedient, to consider the same questions that had been presented to this conference. This was the better course, because it helped take the movement out of its accidental but too exclusive Unitarian connections, and gave it a wider constituency. It trusted the question of organization to a popular convention. Already on the committee liberal Universalism was represented. And the committee, in their plan of a public meeting, resolved to secure as wide a representation as possible of the various phases of liberal religious thought to be found in the country. They invited representatives of radical and liberal Unitarianism, of liberal Universalism, of the Hicksite and Progressive Friends, of Spiritualism, of Progressive Judaism, of Transcendentalism, and those who could not be classed with any sect or philosophy. And having formed their plan, they issued the following call in the newspapers of Boston and New York:—

"A Public Meeting, to consider the conditions, wants, and prospects of Free Religion in America, will be held on Thursday, May 30 (1867), at 10 A.M., at Horticultural Hall, Boston.

"The following persons have been asked to address the meeting, and addresses may be expected from most of them: R. W. Emerson, John Weiss, Robert Dale Owen, Wm. H. Furness, Lucretia Mott, Henry Blanchard, T. W. Higginson, D. A. Wasson, Isaac M. Wise, Oliver Johnson, F. E. Abbot, and Max Lilienthal.

[Signed] "O. B. FROTHINGHAM, }
"WM. J. POTTER, } Com."
"ROWLAND CONNOR, }

What followed is a matter of public record. A crowded assembly gathered; most of the persons advertised made addresses, and reports of the meeting were spread far and wide. At the afternoon session, the plan of association, substantially as presented at the conference, was adopted, and the FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION was organized.

Two annual meetings have since been held, mainly on the plan of this first meeting, except that special effort has been made, and both years with success, to secure among the speakers representatives of Orthodox Christianity, and also to give a portion of the sessions to the bearing of religion on questions of practical philanthropy. At both of these annual meetings, the liberal division of Judaism has been represented, and at one of them reformed Hinduism, by an admirable letter from its great native apostle, Keshub Chunder Sen.

We here subjoin the Constitution of the Association, together with the officers for the present year, with their P.O. address:—

Articles.

I. This Association shall be called the Free Religious Association, its objects being to promote the interests of pure religion, to encourage the scientific study of theology, and to increase fellowship in the spirit; and, to this end, all persons interested in these objects are cordially invited to its membership.

II. Membership in this Association shall leave each individual responsible for his own opinions alone, and affect in no degree his relations to other associations. Any person desiring to coöperate with the Association shall be considered a member, with full right to speak in its meetings; but an annual contribution of one dollar shall be necessary to give a title to vote,—provided, also, that those thus entitled may at any time confer the privilege of voting upon the whole assembly, on questions not pertaining to the management of business.

III. The officers of the Association shall be a President, three Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and Assistant Secretary, a Treasurer, and six Directors, who together shall constitute an Executive Committee, intrusted with all the business and interests of the Association in the interim of its meetings. These officers shall be chosen by ballot, at the Annual Meeting of the Association, and shall hold their offices for one year, or until others be chosen in their place; and they shall have power to fill any vacancies that may occur in their number between the annual meetings.

IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the city of Boston, on Thursday of what is known as "Anniversary Week," at such place, and with such sessions as the Executive Committee may appoint; of which at least one month's previous notice shall be given. Other meetings and conventions may be called by the Committee, according to their judgment, at such times and places as may seem to them desirable.

V. These articles may be amended at any annual meeting of the Association, by a majority vote of the members present, provided public notice of the amendment has been given with the call for the meeting.

Officers.

President, Octavius B. Frothingham, of New York City.

Vice-Presidents, Robert Dale Owen, New Harmony, Ind.; Rowland Connor, Boston; Mrs. Caroline M. Severance, West Newton, Mass.

Secretary, Wm. J. Potter, New Bedford, Mass.

Assistant Secretary, Miss Hannah E. Stevenson, 19 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston.

Treasurer, Richard P. Hallowell, 98 Federal Street, Boston.

Directors: Isaac M. Wise, Cincinnati, Ohio; Charles K. Whipple, Boston; Mrs. Ednah D. Cheney, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; Francis E. Abbot, Toledo, Ohio; John Weiss, Watertown, Mass.; Francis Tiffany, West Newton, Mass.

—THE INDEX, Jan. 1, 1870.

I LIKE THOSE HIBERNIAN ANECDOTES, when they are new and true, and characteristic. Here is the latest I have added to a tolerably extensive repertory. An angry beldame burst into a police-court at Limerick, muttering incoherently, and gesticulating violently. "What d'ye want, in the name of goodness?" asked the magistrate. "Justice!" she shrieked. "Arrah! look at the hour it is," petulantly answered his worship, who was getting hungry; "it's four o'clock, I tell ye; an' divel a bit more justice anybody will get from this binch to-day."—London World.

Communications.

LETTER FROM MISS COBBE.

26 HEREFORD SQUARE, LONDON, S W., }
Dec. 5, 1869. }

MY DEAR SIR:—

I have received your letter, and feel much interested in your project of starting a paper which shall represent the interests of simple Theism. Most heartily I agree in your view that the retention of the Christian name by those who can allow no authority in religion even to Christ is a mistake fraught with elements of confusion and insincerity. As our noble allies and fellow-worshippers, the Brahmos of India, have gone back to the name of the Creator, so must we, if we are ever to stand absolutely straight before the world, call ourselves by the title which expresses, not the temporary and partial obligation of one nation or another, or even of the whole human race to its greatest prophet, but the eternal and universal allegiance of all to the only God.

The subjects of interest which need to be discussed in the great transition through which we are passing are of course absolutely boundless. In my humble estimation, and from all I can gather of the thoughts of leading minds in this country, the problem of the future life will occupy the foreground for some time to come. It is, in fact, the question of the day, to which a distinct "yes" or "no" must be given, and on whose decision, one way or the other, hang portentous results for both religion and morality.

I have jotted down an argument on the subject which I do not think has been hitherto distinctly stated, and which may perhaps seem to you likely to interest your readers. It has occupied my mind for a long time.

May I add that the use which you and all my American friends make of the words "radical" and "conservative" has a tendency to mislead us? Surely a radical is, or ought to be, a man who only wishes to uproot what is bad, while a conservative is one who only wishes to maintain what is good? There is no radical, I hope, who does not wish to retain what is good in the old, nor any conservative (in our day, at all events) who does not admit that some reforms are desirable. If we theists represent ourselves as nothing but radicals in religion, and not conservatives of all that is true and beautiful and holy in the creeds and hopes of the past, do we not stultify ourselves? Our broad groundwork is the universal human sentiment of religion.

With sincere wishes for your success, believe me, dear sir,

Cordially yours,

FRANCES P. COBBE.

—THE INDEX, Jan. 1, 1870.

REFORMATORY.

THE NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE at its recent meeting at Washington passed the following resolutions upon the subject of cattle transportation: "Considering the great abuses now existing in the transportation of live stock in the United States, abuses which not only unnecessarily torment the animals themselves, but also materially injure the quality of the meat as food: Resolved, That we respectfully call the attention of the Congress of the United States of America to the importance of passing, during the present session, a law for the transportation of live stock throughout the land which will be an improvement on the present one, and will ensure proper food, water, and rest to the animals in transit." The resolutions were advocated by Mr. N. Appleton, of Boston, who told the Board of the proposed offer of a prize for a cattle-car by the American Humane Association.

CINCINNATI has just inaugurated a new plan which will, we think, commend itself to the educators of the country. Ten thousand pupils in the public schools celebrated the birthdays of Beethoven and Whittier. The exercises consisted of musical selections from Beethoven and extracts from Whittier's poems, both given by the children of the schools, with interesting addresses upon the lives of each from the superintendent and principals of the various schools. This is the beginning of a new system of familiarizing the pupils of the schools with the works and lives of noted men, and it is looked upon with much interest. The schools in various sections now use Washington's birthday, the landing of the Pilgrims, and other noted events in our calendar to impress upon the pupils the lessons they teach. The Cincinnati system is only an extension of this plan, and only needs the caution of a proper limit and a wise management. The plan here indicated affords an excellent hint for radical Sunday-schools. It has been an established feature of that at Florence, Mass., for a number of years. A very interesting instance of the kind was the celebration of Whittier's seventieth birthday, when the programme above suggested was carried out. A copy of the proceedings was subsequently sent to the poet, and elicited a manuscript letter of appreciative gratification.

THERE IS NO ONE at all familiar with the experience of working-women in our great cities, who can doubt that they are often subject to much injustice from their employers. It seems, therefore, very important that there should be those to whom they can appeal to aid and befriend them in obtaining redress in such instances. We hail on this account with pleasure the report of the efforts toward this end which are being made in New York and Boston. The New York Society for the Protection of Working-women has just held its sixteenth anniversary. It is established, we learn from its statement, for the relief and protection of this class "by furnishing legal information and advice, by investigating every complaint of fraud, by the prompt enforcement of justice, and by the collection of wages earned but withheld." It has prosecuted six thousand seven hundred and fifty-seven cases of complaint, has received and paid to working-women $22,066 60, out of which they would otherwise have been defrauded, in sums averaging $3.26 each. When, less than a year ago, it was announced that the Boston Women's Union would undertake the protective work for this city, some people said: "Oh, Boston is not like New York. Such a work is not needed here." Experience has proved that it is needed. The protective committee has received upward of one hundred and twenty complaints, and this with extremely limited advertising, and hearing complaints only two afternoons a week. It may be well to state that very rarely have complaints been made against honorable employers, whether private individuals or those engaged in business; also, that no complaint is assumed to be just. The party complained of is asked to give his or her version of the case. If the debt is acknowledged and payment still withheld, the party receives a letter from a lawyer; if this does not bring the money, the case is carried into court. A full record is kept of facts, names, and dates.

ONE OF THE MOST interesting and promising movements in the way of practical beneficence is the attempt to educate children in housekeeping through what is called the Kitchen Garden. The public exhibition of the system given a few days since made a very pleasant impression on those who witnessed it. The audience was large and enthusiastic, embracing many teachers, professors, and public benefactors. Edward Everett Hale kindly introduced the children in his own charming manner, and Ralph Waldo Emerson, from a front seat, followed the movements of the classes with a love of deep interest. The pupils numbered forty-eight, one-half of whom were colored. As they marched into the church with tiny brooms, held in military fashion, they made a pretty picture. The uniform white caps and aprons were very becoming, and the regular manner in which each took the position assigned her was remarkable in pupils who appeared together for the first time, as these children were taken from the public schools, many of them receiving their first lesson yesterday. The floor of the church held four low tables, at which were placed twelve chairs. Upon the tables were tiny bedsteads, perfectly made up, with all the belongings of a well-regulated bed; upon the "pillow-spreads," commonly called "shams," were the initials K. S. At given signals from the piano, every pupil did her part toward preparing the bed for retiring; and after a song describing the process, a night is supposed to have passed and the morning work is done, which consisted of turning all the blankets and linen over the footboard, "beating the pillows into billows," and giving the whole affair a bath of sunshine and fresh air; then to the musical ripple of a merry song, order was restored once more. The setting of tables followed, each pupil being provided with a square and oblong box, from which the covers were removed, disclosing complete sets of table furniture, from the snowy cloth to the tiny napkin in its brilliant ring. The round wooden covers placed before each pupil are made to do duty as tables, and again the piano breaks forth into a merry undertone of melody, while nimble fingers arrange the dainty tables. All is done carefully, exactly, and with interest. A charming roundelay gives explicit directions as to setting table, clearing off and washing dishes, all of which gathers a charm from the sweet voices of the children as they tell so merrily how the glasses glisten and the silver shines. Next come the well-known performances of "Blue Monday." Out come the wash-tubs and boards, the bags of soiled linen, which are assorted and placed at the right of the tub. Another song tells that intricate programme through which soiled garments go and come out good as new. While the washing is going on, the teacher produces some miniature clothes-posts, which are inserted into holes at either end of the table, and as she unrolls a rose-colored clothes-line, Mr. Hale steps to the platform, remarking, "While the line is being put up, I will say that a large collection of grasses, cards, and fancy articles have just been received from the sandhills of Wilmington, a Christmas offering to the Old South." After a little instruction in wringing the clothes, they are placed upon the line, dried and removed, folded and put away. Then a figure is formed by the pupils, who take position upon the floor, and end the programme by dancing in a circle with the ropes, which are "always to be removed after washing is over." The whole entertainment was well received, and gave a practical illustration of the proper method of doing housework. When the knowledge these little ones are acquiring shall become general, we shall have more sunshine at home, less nervous exhaustion of our home-makers, who, with inferior help, so often worry more than they work. The children sing at first, "Oh, how can a poor little maiden like me ever hope in the service of ladies to be." After the lesson, they sing in chorus, "Who sweeps a room as for thy laws, makes that, and the action, fine." The originator of the Kitchen Garden is Miss Emily Huntington, of New York, who has published a manual and text book for teachers in connection with the movement. Edward Everett Hale was right when he told the little ones: "You have done well, children; you have done a noble thing for Boston to-day by your example."

JESTINGS.

THE BOY who was kept after school for bad orthography said he was spell-bound.

MAKE YOURSELF an honest man, and then you may be sure that there is one rascal less in the world.

AN UNLUCKY IRISHMAN was once imprisoned for an infraction of the law. His faithful wife visited him, and found him greatly cast down. With the intention of cheering him up, she said: "Arrah be aisy, Paddy; shure ye'll have an upright jedge to thry ye, any way." "Ah, Biddy," he groaned, "the devil an upright jedge I want; 'tis wan that'll lane a little."

A GRAY HAIR was espied among the raven locks of a charming young lady. "Oh, pray pull it out!" she exclaimed. "If I pull it out, ten more will come to the funeral," replied the one who made the unwelcome discovery. "Pluck it out, nevertheless," said the dark-haired damsel; "it's no consequence how many come to the funeral, provided they all come in black."

AN ENGLISH undergraduate at examination, on being asked to repeat the parable of the Good Samaritan, thus did it: "A certain man journeying from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves." Then he stopped. "Go on, sir," said the examiner. "And—" "And what? Go on, sir." "And the thieves sprang up and choked him!" triumphantly ended the youth.

THE Sunday Courier is responsible for this: "A popular clergyman was greatly bored by a lady who admired him without reserve. 'Oh! my dear Mr. —,' said she, last Sunday afternoon, 'there isn't any harm in one loving one's pastor, is there?' 'Certainly not, madam,' replied the worthy cleric; 'not the least in the world, so long as the feeling is not reciprocated.'"

THE STORY is told of a clergyman that, after preaching an interesting sermon on the "Recognition of Friends in Heaven," he was accosted by a hearer, who said: "I liked that sermon; and I now wish you would preach another on the recognizing of people in this world. I have been attending your church three years, and not five persons in the congregation have so much as bowed to me in all that time."

A LABORING MAN at Monkwearmouth is the owner of a donkey, which in the summer months does duty on Roker Sands. One day this year the donkey had been put to grass on a very bleak spot, its exposed position only being equalled by the scantiness of the herbage. On this being pointed out to the owner the latter replied, "Noa, thor isn't varry much to eat; but, man, she's got a grand view!"

A BOY was caught in the act of stealing raisins in a shop, and was locked up in a dark closet by the grocer. The boy commenced begging most pathetically to be released, and, after using all the persuasion that his young imagination could invent, proposed: "Sir, if you'll let me out and send for my daddy, he'll pay you for the raisins, and lick me besides." This appeal was too much for the grocer to resist.

A GOOD COLORED MAN once said, in a class-meeting: "Brethren, when I was a boy, I took a hatchet and went into de woods. When I found a tree dat was straight, big, and solid, I didn't touch dat tree, but when I found one leaning a little and hollow inside, I soon had him down. So when de debil goes after Christians, he don't touch dem dat stand straight and true, but dem dat lean a little, and are hollow inside."

A SCOTCHMAN ought to know what whiskey is good for; and here is what Dr. Guthrie once said: "Whiskey is good in its own place. There is nothing like whiskey in this world for preserving a man when he is dead. But it is one of the worst things in the world for preserving a man when he is living. If you want to keep a dead man, put him in whiskey; if you want to kill a living man, put whiskey into him."—Advertiser.

A "PROFESSIONAL LADY" advertises that she wishes to have her hair dressed evenings in exchange for piano and singing. The idea is not bad. Suppose the musical profession were to imitate her, and that a mutual trade could be established between artists and dealers in the necessities of life. The following scale might be adopted: A sirloin steak—a song, by Abt; a box of grapes—a transcription of a Scotch song for piano; a pair of pants—an aria from "Robert le Diable," and two songs to be selected among a repertoire of fifty pieces; a loaf of bread—one major and two minor scales; a bottle of table claret (not common kind)—one of Millard's songs; a quart of vinegar—a ticket to Jerome Hopkins' festivals, etc. We only give specimens of a scale, which should be carefully prepared and sanctioned by every member of the profession.—Musical Times.

ACCORDING to the Hartford Courant, the deacon of a Congregational church gives one of the reasons why Rev. Mr. Blank was dismissed from the pastorate: "Mr. Blank lived next to a neighbor whose hens and chickens troubled him very much by digging up his garden. He spoke about it several times, but it did no good; those fowls kept in his garden all the time. And what do you think he did? Instead of shooting some of them, or building a high fence around his garden, he came here to Hartford and bought the best game-cock he could find, and took him home, and turned him loose in the garden. The next day that neighbor heard a great commotion among the poultry; and, when he looked over the fence, there were all his hens and chickens lying in windrows, and that game-cock walking over the bodies, and crowing. Now you can't say that was un-Christian conduct, but it was certainly calculated to destroy Mr. Blank's usefulness in that section."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
"13" "25" "8" " "
"26" "51" "6" " "
"52" " " "5" " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
HENRY S. STEBBINS.
Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
ny, N.J.

J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large," and later still "read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 40 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

FREE

RELIGIOUS
ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $4.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "the Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Eliezer, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Cakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newnson, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO
FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:
FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
ny, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
Mass.

THE INDEX aims—
To increase general intelligence with respect to religion;

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual;

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS, SENT BY MAIL AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).....	1.50
ALCOOT (A. BRONSON). Tablets. Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, M-g, J-o, Beth, and A-v-y. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrations.....	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins".....	1.50
Under the Lilacs. Illustrated.....	1.50
Work: A Story of Experience.....	1.75
Silver Pitchers and Independence. A Centennial L-v Story.....	1.25
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Sawdust Straps.....	1.00
Caps and Chow-Chow, &c.....	1.00
My Girls, &c.....	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinafore, &c.....	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
Culture and Anarchy, with an Essay Last Essays on Church and Religion.....	3.00
Mixed Essays.....	2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of "Objections to "Literature and Dogma.".....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism, with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.....	1.75
Isaiah XLVI-XLVI. With the shorter Prophetic alluded to. Arranged and Edited with Notes.....	1.50
French Poem.....	1.00
New Poem.....	1.00
Bible Reading for Schools.....	.25
Higher Schools and Universities in Germany. With New Preface.....	2.00
RACON'S Essays.....	1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.50
Physics and Politics.....	2.50
Lombard Street.....	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.....	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
Mind and Body.....	1.50
Logic, Deduction and Induction.....	2.00
Cloth.....	1.50
Emotions and the Will.....	5.00
BARING GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages.....	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.....	.75
King and Country.....	.75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper.....	.50
BRACKETT (ANNA O.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CHADWICK JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. 1 cloth, extra.....	1.50
A Book of Poems.....	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist, With Memorial Verse.....	1.50
CHENEY (Mrs. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals.....	1.25
CLARKE (Dr. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
CLIFFORD (W. K.). Being and Thinking. Lectures and Essays, 2 vols.....	7.00
CLOD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	1.25
Childhood of Religions.....	1.50
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	5.00
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.00
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.50
Idals and Ideals.....	1.50
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces. A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpentier, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE; Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.00
Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., Studies, Pictures, and Fancies.....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	3.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Difficulties of Flowers.....	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
Under the Lilacs. Cloth.....	2.00
Habit of Climbing Plants. 1 v l. (1 cloth, 1 paper).....	1.50
Archives.....	1.50
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization.....	2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.....	1.75
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated.....	1.50
Daniel Deronda. 2 vols.....	3.00
Elphinstone, the Historical.....	1.00
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.00
Romola. Illustrated.....	1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner. Illustrated.....	1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series. Portraits.....	1.50
Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portraits.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Love and Solitude.....	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. ("George Eliot's" translation.).....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. A History of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols. 6.00	6.00
The Unseen World, and other Essays.....	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Transcendentalism in New England.....	2.50
History of Moral Philosophy.....	1.00
Creed and Conduct.....	1.00
Cradle of the Christ.....	1.50
Rising and Setting Faith.....	1.00
Visions of the Future.....	1.00
Mellets of the Unbelievers.....	.25
Sermons. Old Series. 40 numbers, each 10c. 2 vols half calf.....	5.50
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each 10c.....	1.00
Stories from the Life of a Teacher.....	1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs.....	1.00
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Safety of the Faith.....	1.50
Wisdom and Faith.....	1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	1.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
German and Goethe. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.....	2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	2.00
Round my House.....	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River. The two in one volume.....	2.00
Wendell Holmes: A Tale of Yorkshire and America.....	2.00
Modern Frerchmen. Five Biographical.....	2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner, R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts.....	2.00
Eching and Echers.....	5.00
Henry Flourens, the Boy's Lady on Land and Sea.....	1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living.....	1.50
Gala Days.....	1.50
Woman's Wrong.....	1.50
Summer Rest.....	1.50
A New Atmosphere.....	1.50
Woodbine Blocks.....	1.50
Woe G-thering.....	1.50
Sermons to the Clergy.....	1.50
Ski mishes and S-etches.....	1.50
First Love is Best.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters.....	1.00
Ve-sea. Enlarged Edition.....	1.25
Thompson and Corcoran. Romp-pope covers Bits of Travel.....	.75
Bits of talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks.....	1.00
Rits of Travel at Home.....	1.50
Nelly's Silver Mine. A Story of Colorado Life. Illustrated.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Our Door Papers.....	1.50
Admiral's Own Port.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.25
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
Critiques and Addresses.....	1.50
American Addresses.....	1.25
Physiography, an Introduction to Study of Nature.....	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.....	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.....	1.50
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance," to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50
No. III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
No. IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
No. V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
No. VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Keck, Jr.....	2.00
No. VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
No. VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Astronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
No. IX. Responsibility. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
No. X. Responsibility. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
No. XI. Animal Mechanism. By R. J. Marryat.....	1.75
No. XII. The History of the Conflict between Mind and Matter. By J. W. Draper.....	1.75
No. XIII. The Theory of Descent, and Darwinism. By Prof. Oscar Schmidt.....	1.50
No. XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Vogel.....	2.00
No. XV. The Mind of the Future. By L. D. Elwell.....	1.50
No. XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.....	1.50
No. XVII. Money and Mechanism of Exchange. By Wm. Stanley Jevons.....	1.75
No. XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Edmund Whittaker.....	2.00
No. XIX. Animal Parasites and Men. By Mons. Van Beneden.....	1.50
No. XX. O. Fermentations. By P. Schützner.....	1.50
No. XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Müller.....	1.75
No. XXII. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.....	1.50
No. XXIII. Studies in Spectroscopy. By J. N. Lockyer.....	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. China.....	5.00
Josephus. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analyses and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	8.00
KNAPPET (J. J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.....	1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of Europe from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	3.00
LEGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings... Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	4.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life. Problems of Life and Mind. Vols. I and II. P. vol.....	3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind.....	3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method.....	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	2.00
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
A Fable for Critics.....	.75
Under the Willows and other Poems.....	1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal.....	.75
Three Memorial Poems.....	1.25
Wide awake.....	1.00
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each.....	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	2.50
Autobiography.....	2.50
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras. 1 vol.....	1.50
Sea and Shore.....	1.50
The Ship in the Desert.....	1.50
Songs of Italy.....	1.25
MIVART (ST. GEO.). On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
Man and Apes. An Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol.....	1.00
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.....	2.00
Contemporary Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes.....	1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, &c. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
On Missions. A Lecture delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec 3 1873.....	1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India.....	2.00
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
P. LAKES (THOMAS). Discourses of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. 1 and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolley Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In. A Story.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.50
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Aris.....	1.50
The Story of the Sun, etc.....	1.50
Seaton's Cakes, and other Stories.....	1.50
POE'S (ALFRED A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet of Poets.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Philosophy of the World as we see it under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.50
Essays on Astronomy. A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Illustrations, etc.....	5.00
The Expense of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHLELLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.A., M.D.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. L. G. By W. S. Jevons.....	.50
10. Intellectual Geometry. By Spence.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL.) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.....	2.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Science.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	4.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER) Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	2.00
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	.70
Excursions in Field and Forest. F. R. S. It. The Maine Woods.....	1.00
Cape Cod.....	.20
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	1.50
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.00
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Local Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Ass'n at Belfast.....	.40
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Saunterings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.00
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.....	2.00
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Boys.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITFIELD'S (JOHN G.) Poems.....	2.00
Child Life.....	.40

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A NOTABLE TREATISE WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A MASTERLY BOOK.A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of 'improvements' which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY—PRICE
TWO PENCE.*THE SECULAR REVIEW.

EDITED BY CHARLES WATTS.

THE SECULAR REVIEW is the leading organ of Secularism, and each week has Special Articles on Theological, Social, Scientific and Political Subjects. Its distinctive features are the advocacy of Constructive Secularism, and the dissemination of useful information on all questions which affect the welfare of the people. Letters are inserted in its "OPEN COLUMN" from all who are courteous in the expression of their views; while a special department is allotted for "NOTES AND QUERIES."

The Contributors to the SECULAR REVIEW comprise the principal advocates of Secularism, including its founder, G. J. Holyoake.

CHARLES WATTS, Publisher,
84 Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

FOR

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,

23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?
11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.
23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 80 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTINGNEW BOOKS*For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kuonen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 283 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederick Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 283 pages. Price $1.25.

THE GHOSTS; Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child, etc. By Col. E. G. Ingersoll (his latest lectures). 232 pages. Price $1.50. Also, THE GODS, etc., same style. 233 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Enigma of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demi Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half calf, $6.00. Will be ready March 30.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 8,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH
AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL, 27th YEAR.

A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.

FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.
... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried. . . .
E. C. WALKER.

MR. MILLS'
LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
2. Max Müller.
3. Emerson.

For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N.Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR.

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest Inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & CO. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all Inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & CO. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 524.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JAN. 8, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

LIBERAL LEAGUE PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N. Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution; including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSSES.

CONFUCIUS said: "I learn without satiety, and I teach without being tired."

THE ALBANY LIBERAL ASSOCIATION publish a bright little weekly half-sheet, called the Liberal Bulletin. It requests Rev. Dr. Darling to correct various egregious blunders in a recent discourse of his in that city; but the Doctor seems to be afflicted either with deafness, or a melancholy obliviousness of his obligations to truth.

THERE is a great demand for "martyrs" in the lottery business. The post-office department is tyrannically interfering with it, on the hypocritical plea of protecting simpletons from swindlers. Here is another huge conspiracy to crush free thought by persecution. Wanted—two or three first-class martyrs, who shall be "liberally" rewarded. N.B. No Christian need apply.

THE SPRINGFIELD Republican quotes this beginning of a "leader" in the New York Witness, as a ludicrous specimen of "some 'religious' journalism": "The disciples once toiled all night and caught no fish; but when they let down the net by the Lord's direction on the right side of the ship, in the morning they caught abundance. There is a lesson in this that certain times and ways will, by the Lord's blessing, be much more successful than others. Now the month of December is the right time of the year for obtaining new subscribers."

HERE IS the Scholasticism of Thomas Aquinas reduced to practice: "LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 4.—Bishop McCloskey of this diocese has issued a decree prescribing that as soon as possible parochial schools be established everywhere. It ends as follows: 'Now it is our will and command that, where there is a Catholic school in the parish, parents and guardians in such places should send their children or wards under nine years of age to such Catholic school, and we hereby direct that this obligation be enforced under pain of refusal of absolution in the sacrament and penance.' This decree took effect January 1, 1880. The edict causes much commotion in Louisville, as about seven thousand Catholic children attend the public schools."

THE BOSTON Advertiser says: "Beginning with the first day of the year, the Vatican issues a periodical of its own, called the Aurora. It is begun upon the suggestion of the Pope, and will be his semi-official organ. Such organs have not generally succeeded. It would be wrong and misleading to make the Holy See responsible for what the Aurora may contain, for the Vatican is to be judged only by its official acts and its authenticated promulgations, and at law the editor is exclusively responsible for the Aurora. On the other hand, the new journal is a concession to the modern spirit, and as such both interesting and important. Unlike his illustrious predecessor, Pope Leo is a scholar of uncommon attainments; he is an excellent Latinist, and fond of Aristotelian philosophy. If the Aurora could be made a reflex of his clear mind, there is no doubt that thoughtful people of all nations and creeds would read it with interest and respect. But there is an inseparable barrier between a spiritual monarch and publicistic interests."

A YOUNG AMERICAN student, it is related, once called upon Professor Christlieb, the eminent Orthodox scholar of Germany, with a note of introduction, and was cordially received by the Professor, who, while he praised this country, expressed much solicitude about its future. On being asked his reasons, he frankly expressed his opinion that "the Spirit of Christ" was not here, and proceeded to illustrate his meaning. He seriously declared that on more than one occasion he had heard an American woman say to her husband, "Dear, will you bring me my shawl?" and the husband had brought it! Worse than this, he had seen a husband, returning home at evening, enter the parlor where his wife was sitting,—perhaps in the very best chair in the room,—and the wife not only did not go and get his slippers and dressing-gown, but she even remained seated, and left him to find a chair as he could. These things, as Professor Christlieb pointed out, suggested a serious deficiency of the Spirit of Christ in the community.

GEORGE H. LEWES, in the introduction to his History of Philosophy, thus confirms the positions taken in our paper on "The Influence of Philosophy upon Christianity," which is published this week in THE INDEX: "Theology was first quietly yet firmly excluded from cosmology, its explanations of the world being set aside as myths; then it was excluded from Biology, and now even Sociology is claimed as amenable to scientific methods, because all social phenomena are seen to be under the dominion of law. History shows a curious reversal of the principle of accommodation. Just as science was formerly compelled to accommodate its conclusions to theology, no matter at what cost of consistency, with what sophistical excuses, so theology is now compelled to accommodate its dicta to the conclusions of science, by utterly distorting the meaning of words. After having for centuries pursued its researches under the denunciation of theology, and under the burden of a fear, terrible to delicate consciences, of approaching heresy when it was seeking truth, science has at length ceased its timorous and futile efforts to reconcile its conclusions with anything but its own principles."

UNITARIANS frequently fail to understand that Trinitarians cleave to the doctrine of the Trinity, not simply as a logical statement, but still more as a vital spiritual fact—which they conceive it to be. When we maintain, as we do in this week's leading essay, that Orthodoxy is Christianity, we mean that philosophical self-consistency and spiritual vitality are equally on its side, as contrasted with all forms of Neo-Christian heterodoxy, and that Romanism (the only rigorously complete Orthodoxy) possesses both these qualities in a higher degree than any form of Protestantism. The spiritual side of the Trinity-doctrine is well brought out in this extract from an article on "The Triune God," in the Christian Union of Dec. 3, 1879: "The objection to Unitarianism is that it impedes, as Deism cuts off, two of the approaches to God; and thus leaves him a God afar off. Looking up through Nature unto Nature's God gives the soul only a notion of a First Great Cause; a knowledge of a divine Artist and Mechanician, nothing more. The value in the doctrine of the Trinity is that it gives the soul a knowledge of God in life and an acquaintance with God in spiritual fellowship. There are indeed some Deists and many Unitarians who deny the doctrine of the Trinity in theory and accept its teachings in practice. They derive their conception of God's character from a study of the life of Christ in the New Testament. They rejoice in communion with God in spiritual fellowship. They deny the doctrine of the Trinity; none the less they have faith in Christ and faith in the Holy Spirit. And there are many Trinitarians who maintain the doctrine of the Trinity in theory, and deny it in practice. They derive their conception of God from inexorable and often cruel nature; and the experience of personal fellowship with a living God they scorn as a fanaticism of Quaker origin. Men are rarely logical. They are both better and worse than their creeds. But true Trinitarianism, the Trinitarianism of the New Testament, is that of a threefold progressive acquaintance with God; a knowledge about him through his works; knowledge of him through his incarnate life; and fellowship with him in spiritual communion."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....	Boston, Mass
Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....	Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....	Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....	St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH.....	Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....	Irevington, Ind.
MR. WM. J. POTTER.....	New Bedford, Mass.
MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....	Boston, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....	San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....	Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....	Boston, Mass.
RABBI B. FELSENTHAL.....	Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER.....	Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....	Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....	Detroit, Mich.
RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Editor of "American Israelite,"	Cincinnati, O.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....	New York
W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Editor "Freethought Journal,"	Toronto, Can.
REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....	Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....	Peoria, Ill.
DR. T. L. BROWN.....	Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....	Franklin, Pa.
ELDER F. W. EVANS.....	Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....	New York City
MRS. AMY POST.....	Rochester, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH OADY STANTON.....	Tenafly, N. J.
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....	Lottsburgh, Va.
JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....	Albany, N. Y.
RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....	Albany, N. Y.
Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN.....	231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....	142 Chandler St., Boston.
Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....	8 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Board of Directors.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....	W. H. HAMLEN.
F. E. ABBOT.....	C. D. B. MILLS.
D. G. CRANDON.
Executive Committee.
Alabama.....	J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....	JOHN A. HENS, Monticello.
California.....	J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado.....	DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
Connecticut.....	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....	JOSEPH D. GOBLT, Greenville.
Florida.....	T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....	DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.....	DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
Indiana.....	N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
Iowa.....	J. C. MICHENER, Adel.
Kansas.....	JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kentucky.....	S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
Louisiana.....	EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Maine.....	W. H. B. BROWN, Bangor.
Maryland.....	J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
Massachusetts.....	E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
Michigan.....	KARL SCHMERMANN, Detroit.
Minnesota.....	J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Missouri.....	R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Nebraska.....	W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
Nevada.....	V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
New Hampshire.....	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New Jersey.....	FRANCIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
New York.....	C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
North Carolina.....	J. W. THORNE, Warren.
Ohio.....	E. D. STABE, Cleveland.
Oregon.....	SAMUEL COLE, Humboldt Basin.
Rhode Island.....	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
South Carolina.....	P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Tennessee.....	DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Texas.....	DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
Vermont.....	R. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Virginia.....	L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
West Virginia.....	DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
Wisconsin.....	ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Dakota.....	D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
District of Columbia.....	W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Utah.....	W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming.....	NORMAN S. PORTER.
Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....	Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....	137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE.....	231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

Chartered by the National Liberal League of America.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Florence Liberal League.
SYRACUSE, N. Y.—[Officers not reported.] Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Onondaga County Liberal League.
ALBANY, N. Y.—President, Thomas J. Hennessey; Secretary, Thomas Dugan. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.
BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
PASSAIC CITY, N. J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Passaic City Liberal League.
JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jacksonville Liberal League.
ROCHESTER, N. Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Cale. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jefferson Liberal League of Rochester.
CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.

N.B.—The above is an acknowledgment of the fact that a charter is due and will be sent as soon as possible. Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues originally chartered by the "National Liberal League" will receive charters from the "National Liberal League of America" without extra charge, if they send a certified copy of their vote to accept the following invitation:—

"Voted, That all Local Leagues that approve the formation of the National Liberal League of America are invited to dissolve their connection with the old League, and to join this League."

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y.	MOSES HAYS, Rochester, N. Y.
FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. URBINO, West Newton, land, N. Y.	Mass.
Z. T. WATKEYS, Syracuse, N. Y.	W. D. HUNT, Scott, N. Y.
NETTIE C. TRUESDELL, Syra-FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, cuse, N. Y.	Mass.
GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MOSES W. DODGE, Albany, N. Y.	Waukegan, Ill.
HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y.	J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N. J.
SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.	HOPE WHIPPLE, Boston, Mass.
W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass.	D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
T. C. GAGE, Fayetteville, N. Y.	CHARLES ELLIS, Boston, Mass.
F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.	JOHN W. TRUESDELL, Syra-cuse, N. Y.
CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Al-bany, N. Y.	H. P. STABE, Rochester, N. Y.
EBEN TURE, Chelsea, Mass.	JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N. Y.
JOHN NILL, Watertown, N. Y.	W. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N. Y.
E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass.	JOHN PREST, Albany, N. Y.
THOS. D. GAN, Albany, N. Y.	D. P. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y.
JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N. Y.	R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. I.	D. B. MOREY, Malden, Mass.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Influence of Philosophy upon Christianity.

AN ESSAY DELIVERED BEFORE THE UNITARIAN MINISTERS' INSTITUTE, AT PROVIDENCE, R.I., OCTOBER 21, 1879.

BY FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

When, by the courtesy of your committee, I was invited to prepare a paper for this session of the Ministers' Institute, the first of the topics they suggested was "The Influence of Certain Schools of Philosophy upon Christianity." I have ventured to modify this title so far as to omit the words "of certain schools," and to treat of the more general question—"The Influence of Philosophy upon Christianity." Permit me to say at the outset, as indeed justice to the Institute requires me to say, that I understand myself to have been invited to discuss this subject, not because I represent the views of the Institute or of any of its members, but on the contrary because I represent views not yours—views which I suppose to be shared by no one in your membership. If I do not entirely misconceive the spirit and object of the invitation, I appear in this pulpit to lay before you a calm, fair, and friendly statement of opinions with which you have no intellectual sympathy, but which, nevertheless, you are desirous to hear with candor, and to discuss with impartiality in the love of truth. Here, most assuredly, you and I occupy common ground; and I congratulate you on the broad and catholic basis of an organization which not only tolerates, but even invites, the presentation of both sides of a question so momentous and fundamental as that on which I am now to address you. Believe me, the generous hospitality which you thus extend to convictions profoundly at variance with your own shall not be abused. It may well be that these convictions, as convictions, may cause some pain, for I doubt not that your unlike convictions are as dear to you as mine are to me. But it will be in utter unconsciousness, and in deeply regretted contradiction of my purpose, if I drop a single careless expression that shall wound the reverence of the tenderest and most religious spirit here. If I were capable of entertaining a desire to inflict such wounds, surely the fraternal confidence implied in your invitation would have disarmed me of it. It shall be my aim to prove that your confidence has not been misplaced. If I cherish a reciprocal confidence that you will listen to me without prejudice and will receive whatever may be thoughtfully said with the respect which is due to thought, I believe that my own confidence will be equally justified.

Without further preface I will address myself to my subject.

Definition of Philosophy.

In considering the influence of philosophy upon Christianity, the first thing to be done is to determine what we mean by those two terms. Probably we shall not differ much in our conception of the former. Without going into an abstruse discussion of the different definitions which have been made of philosophy, I think I may here describe it with sufficient accuracy as the endeavor of the intellect to rationalize the universe—to render the universe as a whole intelligible and comprehensible by reason. Philosophy seeks simply to know the truth about the universe—to understand the relations of part to part and of all the parts to the whole—to discover how the One can be Many, and how the Many can be One. It seems to me to be the essential object of philosophy to introduce unity into our thoughts of the universe, and to make an orderly intellectual system corresponding to and explaining the complex world of inner and outer reality. Hence the history of philosophy has been from the beginning a history of successive systems. All the great original thinkers who have written their names imperishably in the records of human thought have been system-makers; the rest have been merely imitators, or eclectics, or critics. But this is not all. No intellectual system of the universe is entitled to be called philosophic which has been constructed by any other instrument than human reason. Philosophy constructs only by the laws of thought; the introduction of any foreign element, such as revelation, removes the work at once to a different class of constructions. Only the rationalizing spirit is recognized as philosophic; only the reasoned systems which the human mind has built find place in the history of philosophy as such. It is not a little significant that the use of the Greek word κόσμος to denote the universe dates, according to Plutarch [2: 886 C] and Diogenes Laërtius [8: 48], from Pythagoras, in the earliest and semi-mythical age of Greek philosophy, being chosen to express the dawning conception of the universe as "order" or system, in contradistinction to the rudis indigestaque moles of chaos.

If this notion of philosophy, therefore, is correct, the influence of philosophy will be discernible in every attempt to introduce rational order or system into human thought. That is its essential characteristic and sure indication, for the reason that philosophy is simply the application of the intellect to phenomena, with a view to render them intelligible by detecting their causes and mutual relations. In a word, philosophy is the endeavor of man to rationalize the universe and systemize his own thought concerning it. In this I suppose we shall all substantially agree.

Definition of Christianity.

With reference to Christianity, however, I do not expect agreement, but solicit your candid and indulgent attention to the explanation of a distinction which seems to me a very important one. Whatever more it may be (and it certainly is a great deal more), Christianity is a system of thought respecting the universe as a whole. It would be foreign to our present purpose to consider Christianity in its other aspects; but, if one of its aspects were not that of a system of thought, then this whole discussion would be meaningless. The influence of philosophy is to affect thought. If Christianity creates no thought, of course philosophy cannot influence it at all. But if Christianity does create thought, then it is a proper question to inquire how far and in what way philosophy affects that thought. I beg you, therefore, not to imagine me blind or indifferent to the emotional, moral, spiritual, and other important aspects of Christianity, if in this discussion I assume that it has also an intellectual aspect, and confine myself to a consideration of the influence of philosophy upon that.

With this preliminary statement, I must point out that, at the present day, Christianity offers to the world at least two very different systems of thought. Not to consume time uselessly in discussing minor differences, I cannot avoid the recognition of this deep and broad difference.

Christianity Proper and Neo-Christianity.

On the one hand, Christianity presents the venerable system of thought known as Orthodoxy, which I shall now treat as one system, since the differences among the various Orthodox communions, Catholic, Protestant, and Greek, are entirely overshadowed by their greater doctrinal agreements.

On the other hand, it presents a much less clearly defined, yet still clearly recognizable system of thought known as Liberal Christianity. This latter system is comparatively of modern origin, at least under that name. I am well aware that its adherents regard it as substantially identical with the system of thought preached by Jesus himself, and that they therefore describe it not infrequently as "Primitive Christianity." In this view I am unable to coincide. The system of thought which Jesus preached as the intellectual framework of his gospel centred in the doctrine of his own Messianic mission; if the Gospels as we have them contain anything that may be fairly considered historical (and this I do not doubt), all his ethical and spiritual teachings rested on this Messianic doctrine as their broad and underlying ground. On this point James Martineau, than whom Liberal Christianity has no more distinguished, candid, or able expositor, writes thus:—

"The whole difference [between Judaism and Christianity] arose from two causes scarcely appreciable in their earliest action: the personal characteristics of Christ's divine humanity, and the Pauline doctrine of a heavenly and universal Redeemer. In these is contained the living essence of the new religion; and their intense power cannot be adequately estimated till we fully picture to ourselves the original identity, which they have so absolutely destroyed, between the Hebrew and the Christian ideas. In its earliest aspect, Christianity was no new or universal religion: Judaism had found the person of its Messiah, but also remained the same. . . . Whoever can read the New Testament with a fresh eye must be struck with the prominence everywhere of the Messianic idea. It seems to be the ideal framework of the whole,—of history, parable, dialogue; of Pauline reasoning; of Apocalyptic visions. 'Art thou he that should come?' this question gives the ideal standard by which, on all hands, on the part of disciples, relations, enemies, of Saul the persecutor and Paul the apostle,—the person and pretensions of Christ are tried. His birth, his acts, his sufferings, are so disposed as to 'fulfil what was spoken' by the prophets: so that the whole programme of his life would seem to have preëxisted in the national imagination." [National Review, April, 1863.]

This is the testimony of one of the most brilliant, scholarly, and universally venerated representatives of Liberal Christianity; and I believe no one can read the New Testament through in course, with single reference to the degree of prominence therein assigned to the Messianic mission of Jesus, without confessing it to be the truth. Yet no Liberal Christian, not even Dr. Martineau himself, accepts this Messianic mission in the plain, earnest, intense meaning of the Testament, with its swarming and vivid descriptions of the second coming in the clouds of Heaven, the Day of Judgment, the Separation of the Sheep and the Goats, and the lasting doom of the one class to Heaven and the other to Hell. All this is explained away by allegorical interpretation as simply parabolic; all its dread reality as Jesus preached it is evaporated away as mere poetic imagery; nothing is left of the central, burning, victorious, and blood-attested faith which mounted the throne of the Cæsars save a few mild moral aphorisms and a few sweet pictures of a beautiful example. That Liberal Christianity is indeed the revival of the Primitive Christianity of Jesus and his apostles, is a proposition which I am unable to accept; for I see that it carefully cuts out the core of that early faith, and allegorizes away its most vital convictions. For this reason I must regard Liberal Christianity, which is far more rational, pure, and elevated than the burning Messianic faith which it allegorizes and spiritualizes away, as by no means identical with, or even similar to, the Primitive Christianity of the Gospels. It is evidently a new and very modern system of thought, created by combining certain beautiful ethical teachings of Jesus with the enlightened views of modern science and philosophy. It is strikingly analogous to the new and often allegorical interpretations put upon the teachings of Plato by the Neo-Platonists, Philo, Ammonius Saccas, Plotinus, Proclus, and the rest; and for this reason it may be best described, in contrast with Orthodoxy, or Christianity proper, as NEO-CHRISTIANITY. Orthodoxy is the system of thought which grew up gradually, and conquered the whole Western world in the name of the Catholic Christian Church; and I see no fairness in refusing to that Church the right to decide what meaning shall be given to the name Christianity, when the history of that name is identical for at least fifteen hundred years with its own history. The Protestant churches still profess to accept substantially the same system of thought, and assign no other doctrinal significance to the Christian name.

For myself, therefore, I simply accept, as the proper doctrinal definition of Christianity, that which has been fixed by history: namely, Christian Orthodoxy. I make no new definition of it whatever; I concede, as in my opinion incontestable, the right of the Christian Church as a whole to define what Christianity is; and the Christian Church as a whole has decided, by a history of eighteen hundred years, that Christianity, in its intellectual aspect, is Orthodoxy. For the sake of distinguishing accurately between the two widely differing systems of thought, presented on the one hand by the Orthodox Catholic and Protestant churches, and on the other hand by the various Liberal Christian churches, I shall call the former Christianity and the latter Neo-Christianity; and you will please not misunderstand me to mean the one when I name the other.

Orthodoxy the Product of Christian Evolution.

Between philosophy and Christianity, therefore, there exists a profound difference of method, which it is indispensable to note in estimating the influence of one upon the other. Philosophy judges all things by the test of reason; it builds all its systems by reason alone, criticises them by reason alone, destroys them by reason alone, and replaces them with new systems by reason alone. But Christianity, while largely employing reason in the construction of its system, introduced also another element which was superior to reason: namely, revelation. These two elements, reason and revelation, entered equally into the gradual creation of the Christian system of thought—sometimes consciously, and sometimes not. It was the element of revelation which caused the fixity of this system, when once developed, and gave a semblance of truth to the proud, ancient boast of Rome: "Semper Eadem." It was the element of reason, however, which caused this system to grow up gradually, and to have a history of doctrinal development. If revelation had been all, there would have been no historical development of the system; if reason had been all, there would have been no fixity or finality about it. Nothing but this rational, human element renders Christianity capable of being influenced by philosophy; launched into the world as a completed system of revelation alone, like Minerva from the brain of Jupiter, it could have possessed no flexibility, no development, no history. This necessity of development in all things human; and therefore in Christianity so far as it is human, is quite forgotten by those Neo-Christians who dream of it as given to the world by Jesus in full, divine perfection, totus, teres atque rotundus, incapable of improvement or growth, and capable only of deterioration and corruption during these eighteen long centuries, until it should be first comprehended by themselves. No mind possessed of the "historic sense" can easily persuade itself, even in the absence of all investigation, that the great doctrinal system of Orthodoxy, which has had enough vitality to weather the storms of nearly two millennia, and shows even yet no signs of near dissolution, could possibly have been all the time a vast mass of mere accretions, corruptions, and degenerations, gathered about the nucleus of the perfected gospel, the original revelation of Jesus. But such a persuasion would seem to be an utter impossibility to any one who has ever studied the history of Christian doctrine, and intelligently followed the course of its constant logical development from age to age, beginning with the germ of the Messianic belief and culminating in the ripened systems of Thomas Aquinas and John Calvin.

This point is fundamental to the present discussion. Philosophy can have had no influence whatever upon Christianity, if the latter has had no development. What then was the nature of the intellectual movement which steadily and irresistibly pressed the human mind forward in the gradual growth and universal spread of Orthodoxy? Was it a mental disease, more potent to ruin than the originally perfected revelation of Jesus was to regenerate? If so, then "carnal reason" has richly deserved all the maledictions that have ever been heaped upon it, and the revelation of Primitive Christianity, being addressed to a race intellectually too infirm and imbecile to profit by it, was a melancholy mistake in the Revealer.

To such paradoxical conclusions one would seem to be reduced, who should urge that the primitive gospel alone was Christianity in its purity, and that the growth of Orthodoxy was a corruption, not a development, of it. Orthodoxy itself is driven to no such conclusions; for, while it contends on the one hand that Jesus revealed all the truth necessary to salvation, it equally contends on the other hand that human reason has simply unfolded this revealed truth, and performed a legitimate work in developing it logically into the form of Orthodox theology. Simply as between these two positions—that of the Christian, who recognizes the necessary development of Christianity as a system of thought, and that of the Neo-Christian, who tells me that no such development was needed, but that Christianity was born full-grown and continued to be sick almost unto death until this nineteenth century came in,—how can I, as a believer in the law of evolution in all human affairs, refrain from giving my suffrage to the opinion of the former? I think he holds much the stronger position, intellectually considered, of the two. Perhaps no better statement of it can be quoted than these words of Origen: "The Apostles taught only what was necessary; many doctrines were not announced by them with perfect distinctness; they left the more precise determination and demonstration of many dogmas to the disciples of science, who were to build up a scientific system on the basis of the given articles of faith." Hagenbach begins his Compendium of the History of Doctrines with a strikingly similar statement:—

"The incarnation of our Redeemer, and the introduction of Christianity into the world, may be considered as the germ of the history of doctrines. The object of all farther investigations is, in the positive point of view, to develop this germ; in the negative, to guard it against all foreign additions and influences. Accordingly, we assume as an apologetical axiom, that Jesus Christ brought to light something which, in relation to the past, was new and original, i.e., a revelation, and, in relation to the future, is theoretically perfect, and does not stand in need of any correction or improvement. This is the principle on which the history of doctrines proceeds, and according to which we judge of all its phenomena. . . . There is therefore no room within the history of doctrines for a new revelation, which could supersede that system of which Jesus is the founder. . . . Jesus is not the author of a dogmatic theology but the author and finisher of faith, not the founder of a school but emphatically the founder of religion and of the church. On this account he did not propound dogmas dressed in a scientific garb, but he taught the word of God in a simply human and popular manner, for the most part in parables and sentences. . . . It is the common object of evangelical interpretation, of the history of the life of Jesus, of apologetics and Biblical theology, to ascertain their peculiar contents, and to reduce them to certain fundamental ideas and one uniform principle."

This, then, is the Christian or Orthodox view of Christianity as a system of thought: namely, a germ of infallible, divine revelation developed and unfolded by human reason. It appears to be certainly more harmonious with the law of evolution than the Neo-Christian view that the original infallible revelation was perfectly developed at the outset, and was only corrupted by human reason in the attempt to develop it. If no element of infallible revelation is conceded at all, then the view taken is neither Christian nor Neo-Christian, but really Anti-Christian; for it denies the very essence and existence of the Christian revelation. As a matter of fact, the history of Christian doctrines proves that the successive changes they underwent in the lapse of time were successive advances, not only in logical consistency, completeness, and precision, but also in spiritual power. It would be tedious to illustrate the fact at length; it is enough to mention the doctrine of the person of Christ, beginning with the simple Messianic epithet, "Son of Man," and ending with that masterpiece of speculative genius and audacity, the "Symbolum Quicunque"—miscalled the Athanasian Creed. This doctrine, combining the Hebrew notion of the Messiah with the Alexandro-Hellenic notion of the Logos, became, says Hagenbach, "the proper spring of all Christian theology." The New Testament itself, in the fourth Gospel and the writings of Paul, contains abundant evidence of the early germinal union of these two ideas. The subsequent history of the doctrine was one of successive stages of enlargement, made necessary by the rational demand for unity, consistency, and logical concatenation. What is true of this central doctrine is true of the whole Christian system of thought. The simple and undeveloped πίστις, or "faith," of the first Christians grew normally and healthily into the Christian γνώσις, or scientifically perfected body of doctrine of subsequent ages. The whole process was one of development, dominated throughout by the desire to achieve a rational system of Christian thought; and the conquest of the world by this system was proof of its adaptation, not only to the practical needs of humanity at that period, but also to its rational needs as well.

Relation of Philosophy to Christianity.

Viewed, therefore, as a system of thought in which the primitive revelation of Jesus and his apostles was normally developed by the steady and long-continued application of reason into the great doctrinal whole known as Orthodoxy, Christianity has from the beginning been influenced and intellectually formed by philosophy. The view in question is not mine alone; it is that of history. No history of philosophy stands higher than that of Ueberweg, and this is his testimony:—

"The philosophic thought of Christian times has been mainly occupied with the theological, cosmological, and anthropological postulates of the Biblical doctrine of salvation, the foundation of which is the consciousness of the law, of sin, and of redemption. . . . In the Patristic period, philosophic thought stands in the closest union with theological speculation, and coöperates in the development of Christian dogma. In the Scholastic period, it passes into the service of theology, being employed merely to reduce to scientific form a body of dogmatic teaching for the most part already at hand, by introducing a logical arrangement and bringing to its support philosophical doctrines from ante-Christian antiquity. In Modern Philosophy it gradually acquires, with reference to Christian theology and ancient philosophy, the character of an independent science, as regards both form and content. . . . The dogmas of the Church were developed in the course of the contest waged by its defenders against Jews and Greeks, against Judaizers, Gnostics, and heretics of all sorts. To this development philosophical thought lent its aid, being employed before the Council of Nice in elaborating and perfecting the fundamental doctrines, and subsequently in expanding them into a comprehensive complex of dogmas. Whatever was new and peculiar in the doctrine of Augustine was the result of the contest in which he was engaged, either inwardly or outwardly, against the doctrines of the Manicheans, Neo-Platonists, Donatists, and Pelagians. But when the belief of the Church had been unfolded into a complex of dogmas, and when these dogmas had become firmly established, it remained for the School to systematize and verify them by the aid of a corresponding reconstruction of ancient philosophy: in this lay the mission of Scholasticism." [1: 261, 262.]

In this view of the subject Ueberweg is supported by every other historian of repute. In all candor, friendliness, and love of truth, I would put this question for your serious consideration: do not the proven facts abundantly justify me in the distinction I have drawn between CHRISTIANITY, as identical with Orthodoxy, and NEO-CHRISTIANITY, as a very modern departure both from the undeveloped primitive gospel of Jesus and from the developed gospel of the Orthodox Christian Church?

Leaving this question to your thoughtful consideration, and assuming the justice of my distinction between Christianity and Neo-Christianity, I will proceed briefly to trace the past influence of philosophy upon Christianity as defined, and to indicate its probable influence in the future.

Pre-Christian Philosophy.

Philosophy is older than Christianity by many centuries. Without venturing into the vastness and obscurity of oriental speculations, we all know that Greek thought endeavored to rationalize the universe long before the authentic records of its history begins. Three great periods may be distinguished in Greek speculation prior to the advent of Christianity. The first of these may be characterized as the Objective Period, in which the philosophic mind occupied itself mainly with constructing cosmological theories and attempting to create a scientific conception of the unity of the universe before the development of science had rendered such a conception possible. The Ionic School, the Pythagorean School, the Eleatic School, and the later Natural Philosophers (Empedocles and Anaxagoras, Lucipus and Democritus) belong to this period. The second was the Subjective period, in which attention was largely turned from cosmology to anthropology,—more particularly to ethics and logic as sciences based on the laws of thought itself. To this period belong the Sophists, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Zeno the Stoic, Epicurus, and the Sceptics. The third was the Transcendental or Theosophical Period, in which the doctrine of the transcendence of the Deity eclipsed the claims of Nature and Man to the attention of thinkers, and made Theology the absorbing interest of philosophy. The Neo-Pythagoreans and the Neo-Platonists, together with the Græco-Judaic school of Alexandria, belong to this third period. Theosophy was a strictly legitimate development of Greek thought, which thus inevitably came into direct contact with nascent Christianity. From this time forth philosophy and Christianity stood in close relation to each other, exerting a powerful reciprocal influence. What has been the character of this influence?

The Four Periods.

Philosophy, as we have seen, is essentially the endeavor of the human mind to rationalize the universe: i.e., to explain it by reason alone, determining both the facts and their connections by the laws of reason alone. But Christianity, as a system of thought, is the endeavor of the human mind to rationalize, not the universe as reason apprehends it, but revelation as God and Jesus Christ have given it. That is the essential difference between the two. Philosophy ceases to be philosophy as such, and becomes theology, the moment it accepts the contents of revelation as a fixed point of departure in its speculations; yet this is precisely what Christianity demands that it shall do. At the very outset, Christianity made this demand, and has never ceased to make it. How has philosophy met this demand? That is essentially the question to be answered, and the answer is shortly this:—

1. Philosophy at first resisted the demand of Christianity.
2. It submitted and obeyed.
3. It rebelled and won its freedom.
4. It now demands in turn that Christianity shall submit revelation to reason and abide by the result. Christianity to-day resists; I believe it will yet submit and obey. In Neo-Christianity it has already done so.

Now here are four great periods to be distinguished with reference to the relation which philosophy has borne to Christianity, the period of Resistance, the period of Subjection, the period of Revolt, and the period of Conquest. The first three are in the past; the fourth is in the present and the future. I will touch upon the history of these four periods as briefly as possible.

The Period of Resistance.

Neo-Platonism had its origin in the "Platonic principle of transcendence" [Ueb. 1: 234], which was renewed and further developed by Eudorus and Arius Didymus in the time of Augustus as an offset to Stoic Pantheism and Epicurean Naturalism, and which was developed still further by the Neo-Platonists themselves. Plato's attempt to translate Oriental mysticism into scientific speculation ended, according to Robert Zimmermann, in the retranslation by Neo-Platonism of thought into images. The Oriental element thus introduced into Greek philosophy by Plato himself was the seed of the theosophic ecstasy, rhapsody, and enthusiasm that came later. A fusion was effected between Judaism and Hellenism in the Jewish-Alexandrian school. The vague speculations of Aristobolus concerning the Divine dyavavos and of the Pseudo-Solomon concerning the Divine sofia culminated in Philo, who introduced the distinction between God and his world-building forces, which in their totality constituted the Divine logos. Here the approximation of Philo to Christianity stopped. Holding to the doctrine of the essential impurity of matter, it was logically impossible to accept the doctrine of the incarnation of the Logos, or to identify the Logos with the expected Messiah. "The incarnation of the Logos in Christ," says Ueberweg, "forms the fundamental speculative... doctrine by which Christianity separated from Alexandrian theosophy." At this point, therefore, philosophy made a stubborn resistance to Christianity.

The founder of Neo-Platonism proper was Ammonius Saccas, who lived about 175 to 250 A.D. His most distinguished disciple was Plotinus, who carried the doctrine of the Divine transcendent so far as to teach that the Supreme Essence, the Good per se, transcended the category of Being; and, affirming that it was exalted above the rational nature, he even denied to it the faculty of thought. Here again philosophy resisted Christianity.

The most eminent of the later Neo-Platonists was Proclus, born about 411 A.D. In opposition to the Christian Trinity, he taught the doctrine of a mystical Triad of the intelligible, intelligible-intellectual, and intellectual essences. But his opposition, no less than that of Porphyry and the other Neo-Platonists, proved abortive. In the year A.D. 529, the Emperor Justinian closed the School at Athens, and interdicted the giving of instruction in philosophy altogether.

The Period of Subjection.

None the less, however, while Pagan philosophy fought a losing battle against Christianity, was Christianity itself unable to dispense with philosophy in the construction of its own dogmatic edifice. In vain did the fiery Tertullian denounce philosophy as the mother of heresies, and exclaim with vehemence, "Credo quia absurdum est": even he was obliged to maintain that "the divine mysteries cannot, in the last analysis, be opposed to reason."

There was no help for it. The systemizing reason asserted its rights as far as it could, and, being forced to accept the data of revelation as its unquestionable first principles, proceeded to erect on this foundation a new system of thought, scientific and philosophic at least in form.

Says Ueberweg: "In the writings of the Apostolic Fathers we see principally the fundamental doctrines, theoretical and practical, of Christianity being developed in the struggle with Judaism and Paganism." [1: 274.] "The so-called Gnostics, in their endeavor to advance from Christian faith to Christian knowledge, made the first attempt to construct a religious philosophy on the Christian basis. The Gnostic speculation was less logical than imaginative, the various abstract elements of religious belief being realized in the form of personal beings, forming a Christian or rather semi-Christian mythology, underneath which lay hidden the germs of a correct historical and scientific appreciation of Christianity." [1: 280.] So also says Lipsius: "Gnosticism was the first comprehensive attempt to construct a philosophy of Christianity; owing, however, to the immense reach of the speculative ideas which pressed themselves on the attention of the Gnostics, but with which they were wholly lacking the scientific ability to cope, this attempt ended only in mysticism, theosophy, mythology, in short, in a thoroughly unphilosophical system."

There were men of a philosophical turn of mind among the early Christians, however, such as Clement of Alexandria and Origen, teachers in the school for catechists in that city, who represented a better class of Gnostics and strove to reduce the principles of the gospel to philosophic form without departing from the catholic faith of the Church. They found fault with the Gnosis of the heretics for the sake of a better one. "Alexandria," says Baur, "the original home of Gnosis, is also the birth-place of Christian theology, which, in its first form, itself aimed to be nothing else than a Christian Gnosis." Although, as Hagenbach points out, the germs of a dogmatic theology are contained in the New Testament itself,—"the central point of John's theology," he says, "is the incarnation of the Logos in Christ; the fundamental principle of the Pauline doctrine is justification by faith,"—still there existed no system of Christian doctrine prior to Origen. The teachers at the school of catechists were the first to perceive and feel the practical necessity for such a system. Clement collected the materials of it, and Origen reduced them to something like order in his book περί ἀρχῶν—of which only fragments remain.

Origen's attempt was the first, but not the last. Gregory of Nyssa (331-394 A.D.) developed the Christian doctrine in systematic order in his book λόγος κατηχητικός, by which he rendered the most important service. But it was by Augustine (354-430 A.D.) that the ecclesiastical doctrine of the Patristic Period was developed in its most complete and perfect form. His works were numerous and elaborate, and have given him permanent fame as the great philosophical organizer of the Christian religion in the West. In the Eastern church Neo-Platonic and other philosophical speculations on Christian doctrines were made by Synesius of Cyrene, born A.D. 375; Nemesius, Æneas of Gaza, Zacharias Scholasticus, Johannes Philoponus, the Pseudo-Dionysius Areopagita, and others; while Johannes Damascenus (about 750 A.D.), in his work on "The Source of Knowledge," gave a minute and systematic exposition of Orthodox Dogmatics, which still retains great authority in the Greek Church. He, however, unlike Augustine, contributed nothing to the development of Christian doctrine, which he regarded as completed; and he is therefore entitled to be considered only a careful and orderly compiler.

Philosophy had now substantially completed its task of accomplishing the intellectual organization of Christianity. It had created Orthodoxy, the completed system of thought which reason had logically developed out of the unsystemized data of revelation. But the period of its service was not yet ended. From the ninth to the fifteenth or sixteenth century, under the name of Scholasticism, it continued to be the ancilla theologiae, a mere hand-maid of the Orthodoxy which it had itself created. During that long period it had many great names to boast of: Johannes Scotus Erigena, Roscellinus, Anselm of Canterbury, Abelard, Thomas Aquinas, Alexander of Hales, Albertus Magnus, Duns Scotus, William of Occam,—the list is too long for enumeration; and it had great questions to deal with—none greater than the controversy between Realism and Nominalism, which, as Tennemann well says, was "never definitely settled." It is destined to come up again for settlement when the reform in philosophic method now going on shall have been at last completed.

"Scholasticism was philosophy in the service of established and accepted theological doctrines, or at least in such subordination to them that, where philosophy and theology trod on common ground, the latter was received as the absolute norm and criterion of truth. More particularly, it was the reproduction of ancient philosophy under the control of ecclesiastical doctrine, with an accommodation, in cases of discrepancy, of the former to the latter." As during the Patristic period philosophy had been made to construct the great dogmatic edifice of Christianity, so during the Scholastic period it was made to fortify it, defend it against attack, and compel even Aristotle himself to do duty as a good Catholic. There is no occasion here to rehearse the details of this long slavery of the human mind. The Scholastic period at last drew to a close, and the Modern Period began to dawn.

The Period of Revolt.

"Unity, servitude, freedom—these are the three stages," says Ueberweg, "through which the philosophy of the Christian era has passed, in its relation to ecclesiastical theology." Modern philosophy is simply a revolt against an intellectual authority always unnatural, and at last become intolerable. It is the definite refusal of the human mind to endure that element of revelation which Christianity so long forced upon it. It is the affirmation of reason's right of eminent domain over the whole world of thought—of her right to rationalize the universe in accordance with her own laws alone. This revolt of philosophy against the claim of Christianity to dictate the premises of philosophic thinking is more than a revolt; it is a revolution, and the revolution is already an accomplished fact. Philosophy is to-day totally emancipated from its long subjection to Christianity; it no longer builds upon the basis of revelation, but of experience. Its independence is complete, if not unquestioned; even if some philosophers of repute retain the element of revelation to some extent in their speculations, they justify it solely on the ground that reason sanctions it, and this is to deny the essential character of revelation, which is sanctioned by authority, not by reason. The spirit of all Christian faith is expressed by Augustine, who believed that the Church was inspired directly by the Holy Spirit: "I should not believe the gospel, unless the authority of the Church Universal constrained me." The spirit of all Christian philosophy is expressed in the saying of the Scholastic Abelard: "If we suppose Aristotle, the leader of the Peripatetics, to have been in fault, what other authority shall we receive in matters of this kind?" Slavish dependence upon authority of some kind was the central principle of Christian philosophy; but modern philosophy fails even to understand the word, as applied to persons. It recognizes no authority as valid but that of experience, of facts, of verified truth, of the Consensus of the Competent.

A revolution so vast could, of course, come about only by degrees. There was a period of transition, full of confusion and contradiction, before philosophy learned to know its own rights to their full extent. It is not my task now to trace the stages of this great change, but only its influence upon Christianity.

The Protestant Reformation, in itself considered, was less a revolution in theology than in church government; for the great features of the system of thought known as Orthodoxy have not been substantially altered by it. Nevertheless, Protestantism was the beginning of disintegration in this system, and a fruitful cause of it. Piece by piece, the doctrinal unity of Christianity has been crumbling away under its influence, reinforced as this has been by the influence of philosophy and of science—which are at bottom one. The Latin, Greek, and various Protestant churches, however, embracing a vast majority of Christian believers, adhere still, in its main features, to the Orthodox system of thought which is justly entitled to be called Christianity. But the influence of philosophy, especially in the form of modern science, has not only detached immense multitudes from these communions, but powerfully affected the belief of multitudes that remain within them. There is not a single Christian doctrine, whether concerning God, Nature, or Man, that has escaped this invisible but potent influence.

In my judgment, the most striking visible effect produced by the disintegrating influence of philosophy upon Christianity has been the appearance of Neo-Christianity. All the Evangelical sects of Protestantism retain the fundamental and distinctive characteristics of Christianity; but the changes in its system of thought wrought by the Neo-Christian movement are so vital and profound, that scarcely a vestige of it remains. Were it not for the aid of allegorical interpretations, by which utterly new ideas are introduced into the ancient symbols of Christian belief, and by which their almost total rejection of the Christian belief is effectually concealed from the Neo-Christians themselves and from others,* the Neo-Christian movement would appear to be what it really is: namely, fundamentally and sweepingly ANTI-CHRISTIAN. The system of thought which they cherish, their philosophical conceptions of the universe, its cause, its laws, and its relations to themselves, are substantially as broad and enlightened as those which characterize modern philosophy and modern science; and the effectual concealment of the true relation they hold to the ancient and long developed Christian system is only one more illustration of the wondrous witchery of words. Michael Servetus, Lælius and Faustus Socinus, Priestley and Belsham, Schleiermacher and the Coquerels, Channing and Parker, and the host of other honored names which lend lustre to the Neo-Christian movement, represent an interpretation of the Christian gospel far more radically unlike the thought of Jesus and his apostles than the interpretation of Platonism by Philo, Plotinus, Porphyry, and Proclus was unlike the thought of Plato. The disintegrating influence of philosophy upon Christianity is more strikingly illustrated by the emergence of this new interpretation of the Christian gospel than by any other phenomenon of the past three centuries. Neo-Christianity, with its rational and enlightened views, its pure ethics, its earnest humanitarian spirit, its cheerful and genial temper, its elevating and ennobling spirituality, is one of the best results of the influence which philosophy in the modern period has exerted upon the Christian system of thought. It only needs emancipation from the deceitful witcheries of a name to know itself, and be known by all, for what it is in fact—the child of reason rather than of faith, and the heir of a great and noble future.

For fifteen centuries the servant and bondsman of Christianity, to-day, after a long and arduous struggle, philosophy stands free and independent. What is to be the influence which henceforth it must exert on the Christian system of thought? What is henceforth to be the relation of philosophy to Christianity?

The Period of Conquest.

I have shown that philosophy is the endeavor of the human mind to rationalize the universe by the laws of reason alone, and that Christianity, as a definite historical system of thought, has already rationalized the universe on a fixed and unchangeable basis of revelation. If these conceptions of the two are correct, amity between them is impossible. To Christianity, philosophy must appear as a blasphemous denier of her own corner-stone of revelation. To philosophy, Christianity must appear as an inflexible denier of her own dearest rights. Peace on such terms is impossible. An irrepressible conflict must continue to exist until either one or the other is the sole mistress of human thought. Which shall it be? Let us look closer at the issue here made.

* The "brilliant opening sermon" of the Institute, by Rev. Mr. Calthrop, was parenthetically mentioned by the essayist as a strikingly pertinent illustration of this allegorizing tendency.

Christianity is the most complete illustration of personalism, as the basis of a system of thought. It exalts a single human individual as the Divine Ruler of the universe and the Savior of every human soul that cleaves to him with unquestioning faith. Its supreme law is the law of love—love to God in Christ and love to the neighbor for his sake. Its supreme authority is the word of God in Christ, as the revealed and absolute norm of truth.

Philosophy is the most complete illustration of impersonalism, as the basis of a system of thought. Its supreme authority is reason, and its supreme law is the law of truth.

The profound and irreconcilable antagonism between the two is created by the demand of Christianity that every human mind shall accept the revelation of God in the words of Christ as absolute truth, without criticism or correction or abatement, in the spirit of unquestioning faith. This is a demand to which philosophy cannot yield without committing suicide. Hence the irrepressible conflict between the two. It is the conflict between head and heart, caused (I think most unwisely) by the heart's usurpation of the head's natural prerogative of deciding what is truth. The intellect alone is the faculty by which truth is determined; it cannot abdicate in favor of sentiment without deep and damning disloyalty to the very nature of things. Whatever can be stated in the form of a proposition, with subject and predicate, is and must be a question of truth as such, to be affirmed or denied by the intellect, the sole judge of evidence; and it is immoral in the last degree to affirm or deny it on the warrant of mere feeling. Philosophy is compelled to confront Christianity with rejection of her supreme demand, not flippantly or wilfully, but with solemn consciousness that she must defend the rights of thought and the cause of intellectual rectitude against unwarranted aggression. The heart makes a woful mistake in assuming to do the work of the head; it should follow, not lead, and the consequences are most disastrous if it undertakes to lead. The function of the head is to think, not to feel; the function of the heart is to feel, not to think. Reverence for the integrity of human nature and solicitude for the highest interests of the human soul command philosophy to be steadfast in refusing the unnatural demand of Christianity to accept revelation as a substitute for proof. It is a demand she cannot grant without deep dishonor to reason and deep disaster to the cause of truth.

No—the cause of philosophy is the cause of the human mind itself. In the long run, the heart always adapts itself to the conclusions of the head. Consciously or unconsciously, it has always done so; and it always will. The time has now arrived to do it with full consciousness. The clinging sentiments of the human soul, once Pagan, adapted themselves gradually to the Christian system of thought, as Orthodoxy was gradually developed by reason out of the assumed revelation of the gospel; and the so-called "Christian consciousness" was the result of this adaptation. Now the educated reason of mankind, or philosophy, gravely asserts its right to discard revelation altogether, and to build up a new, scientific system of thought on the basis of experience; and the clinging sentiments of the human soul will again adapt themselves to the change. The "Christian consciousness" will slowly and gradually, but surely and irrevocably, transform itself into a rational consciousness; it is already doing so, and the process must go on. Philosophy, long the slave of Christianity, and afterwards a power independent of and unrelated to it, now begins to claim dominion over it; and the claim will prove to be irresistible. All the uneasy attempts of Orthodoxy to adjust itself to the discoveries of science are so many confessions of the fact. Orthodoxy is melting away like an iceberg in southern seas; and Neo-Christianity is the form it takes just before it disappears from sight. Henceforth the empire of philosophy is to grow like the Roman Empire, swallowing up province after province of belief until all human thought obeys in all its departments the one imperial law of reason. There is no room left in the modern world for revelation. But the human soul will still remain the same, with all its sweet affections and lofty aspirations and poetic, religious sentiments. All these will yet adapt themselves, completely and happily, to whatever reason shall show to be the discovered truth of things. The universe is still here, in all its mystery and majesty; the human soul is still here, in all its beauty and its tenderness. Reason alone can ever reestablish harmony between the two. Christianity in its day created a truly universal or catholic unity of human thought on the basis of revelation, and named its rationalized system of the universe Orthodoxy. Reason is to-day creating a new catholic unity of human thought on the basis of science or experience; and the name of this new rationalized system of the universe is Philosophy. Nothing that was true, useful, or good in the one will be lost, when the other shall have taken its place. Let us fear no more the rising sun of reason!

Gentlemen, I have spoken with great plainness of speech, but, I trust, with no spirit or purpose incongruous with the spirit and purpose of your generous invitation. My endeavor has been to be faithful both to truth and to you. If I have failed in either duty, I crave forgiveness. That Christianity is a great deal more than a mere system of thought,—that it has ministered, and still ministers, to the moral and spiritual wants of countless souls,—that it has done, and is still doing, incalculable service to man in many ways,—I have not forgotten and rejoice to admit. But, for all that, it remains a system of thought still, and must remain so; and it concerned my subject to treat it in no other light. Do me the justice, I beg you, to acquit me of insensibility to the tenderer aspects of Christianity, though unable to touch upon them here. High and imperative obligations rest upon him who would tell the truth in the spirit of love; and obligations no less high and imperative rest upon all who would listen in the spirit of candor and love of truth. That I have been faithful to mine, I hope; that you will be faithful to yours, I know. I thank you for this opportunity, after an interval of thirteen years since our paths divided for conscience' sake at Syracuse, of meeting you once more with mutual confidence and respect; and I cannot but believe that, however widely divergent these paths have been with regard to intellectual convictions, we are all still working side by side for the religion of truth, of righteousness, and of love.

REFORMATORY.

A WRITER in the Independent, in its sanitary column, gives this excellent advice for the New Year: "It is a great thing for the health of a man or woman if they begin a New Year with the fixed resolves and active determination to find out wherein they are treating the body differently from the intent of its creation, and then resolve to strive to keep it under the reign of law. We heard recently one of our most prominent teachers, from an experience of forty years, say that next to a changed heart there was no sign of character to him so decided in a boy or girl as when personal neatness and a strict regard to health became a settled principle of the life. If you ever seek to reform a squalid man, the first thing to do is to send him to a bath, dress him in clean, plain clothing, and then go on in the work of his elevation. There is a home-teaching as to personal habits as important for your children as any they can get out of books in the public schools. We mean not merely that negative condition in which one is not conspicuous for an unkempt exterior, but that positive care of the personal self which extends to right eating at proper times, to regular hours for sleep or work, to exercise as a recreation and duty, which leads one to feel that this body is a bestowment, and that it is the part of good sense and due to the Giver that it shall not be abused."

THE New England Journal of Education comments as follows upon the proposition of President Eliot of Harvard University to introduce the French system of public pensions for teachers into our common schools. "President Eliot belongs to a class of able and progressive educational men and women in New England, who assume that the development of American society is to come chiefly from the old East, and to land us in a new Europe, revised and corrected. But the future American society is now being sprouted largely beyond the Alleghanies; and New England has far more to learn of common schools from the North-western American States than from any system now in operation in Europe. Indeed, the elaborate systems of Pestalozzi and Froebel have already been greatly humanized by passing through the minds of the great masters of the new education in England and Scotland. The Oswego methods of instruction are still better; and, within a quarter of a century, the experience of thousands of wide-awake teachers in our own American free schools well elaborates the most valuable scheme of instruction on earth for the children of a free State. But what the better sort of American teachers now demand is not a backing-down upon the European system of life-appointments and public pensions, but a waking-up of the whole people, intelligent supervision, fair play and fair pay, with freedom to do their best for the children."

COL. F. W. PARKER has recently been giving a series of Practical Talks at Melrose to the teachers and others of the town. We subjoin from a report in the Boston Journal some of his views upon the mode of teaching geography. The child should be brought face to face with nature; and in every town, as in Melrose, there are all the various forms of a continent which can be brought vividly before the pupil,—the brook-basins, the hills, the ponds, the plains and plateaus. The trouble has been that the child has memorized from the school-book definitions of all the various divisions of the earth, without having any mind conception of them. He had heard scholars recite these matters, and, upon inquiring as to whether they had ever seen a bay or a cape or other division, they would answer in the negative, when from the school-house window all these could be seen, if the child had been taught by the eye and common-sense method instead of the book stereotyped form. He would begin the first year of the school-life to teach geography in its elementary forms outside, but not begin the book-teaching before the fifth year; but he had never yet seen a book on geography which he would implicitly follow, and the system of learning, parrot-like, the boundaries of States, the names of counties, capitals, and other old forms which children have been taught for many years, without any comprehension of what the words meant, he condemned as utter nonsense. The teacher should go with the children out of doors, into the woods and on excursions, for the purpose of instructing them in the peculiarities of the earth, though it would take a thorough teacher to keep the pupils in order while on such rambles. The problem of the rain coming from the clouds and going into the ground would much interest the children, and awaken their questioning powers. So also with mountain ranges, elevated plateaus, water-basins, and a year could be profitably spent upon these outside forms, and more especially the various forms of water and its uses, enforcing the idea that it is the blood of the earth; and also the changes constantly occurring in water-sheds and the formation of coast lines, as in the case of wearing away of that of Massachusetts Bay. The child in connection with these exercises should mould the continental forms and also draw them on the board, and should not use the printed maps or see them until the moulding and drawing have been well learned. Incidental to the teaching of continents and countries, the teacher might, to good advantage, couple some historic event, some pleasant bit of history, biography, or travel, or incident connected with river, forest, or desert, and thus give the child vital information. It is wonderful how much the child is ready to receive if brought to it in this fresh manner, and how little if in the old-fashioned way; and through this manner the great end is gained of having the child think for and be ready to speak for itself, and an illustration of the opposite method was aptly introduced. The comparison can be still further carried by studying the adaptation of the earth to the life of man, the variation of soils, vegetation peculiar to different localities, the principal cities, the great political divisions and, secondarily, the smaller political States. But these should be taken up separately, and the parts should be grasped by the pupil before the whole, always. The great matter of the earth's revolutions around the sun should not be studied in the primary and grammar schools, but reserved for the high school. The child should be earlier brought into contact with nature than it usually is. The first things that should be taught children, and they are generally the last, are in regard to the very air they breathe, the water they drink, and the earth they live on; and let the boy and girl be brought to love nature in some of its various moods and forms,—to love birds, flowers, beasts, rocks,—and their salvation is secured as far as this world is concerned.

Poetry.

A STAR IN HIS CROWN.

MISSOURI, 1872.

BY MARGARET STEWART SIBLEY.

The old log school-house seats were full,
On western prairie green;
The corn "laid by," revival came,
And ne'er such zeal was seen.
Sharp-featured dames in spectacles,
Hard-fisted farmers brown,
And rosy girls and bashful boys
Were there to win the crown.
Foremost was Captain Reynolds then—
Such fervent prayers he made!
Men said indeed, as say they will,
He prayed more than he paid!
"My brethren, we must bear the cross,"
He cried with growing zeal:
"I am a soldier of the Lord,
To fight for him I feel."
"I've lost a mighty heap o' debts,
The Lord will put it down;
I gin some garden-truck, 'twill be
A star onto my crown!"
Then Farmer Adams took the floor,
A worthy man was he,
Not pious overmuch, perchance—
But God likes honesty!
"I make no sorter kind o' doubt,
All's true the Cappen said,
We'd orto be kind to the pore,
An' see the hungry fed.
"I ain't a prayin' man myself,
But somehow kinder feel
As tho' a bar'l o' flour would help
More'n sich a mighty zeal.
"An' then last year the Cappen strained
My m'lasses bar'l old,
And charged me for a right smart lot
More'n it was built to hold!
"But if he'll make that syrup good,
Pay me its vally down,
I've an idee the Cappen'll have
Two stars onto his crown!"

—Springfield Sunday Republican.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JAN. 5.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

William Dudgeon, $5; M. H. Doolittle, $13; Hon. J. B. Stallo, $6.40; George Riker, $6; D. F. Henderson, $1; Edw. L. Crane, $3.25; McGregor Steele, $1; Joseph Horton, $3; Mrs. L. C. Sleeper, $3.20; Dr. Jehu Hiatt, $3.20; Atherton Blight, $3.20; J. C. Grierson, $3.20; Paul Zimmerman, $3.20; Jas. R. Stone, $3.20; Mrs. Dr. W. Wilber, $3.20; Geo. C. Schaedel, $3.20; S. R. Hazelton, $3.20; C. Houghton, 50 cents; S. P. Chamberlain, $4; F. A. Angel, $3; Rich. Dusenbury, $5; J. Seibert, Jr., $5; C. A. Thurston, $4.45; Mrs. E. T. Cowperthwait, $3.20; Cash, $7.90; Fred'k Beck, $3.20; Daniel Johnson, $5; Henry Townsend, $3.25; W. L. Foster, $3.20; W. B. Studley, $3.20; W. P. Draper, $3.20; Henry Whittemore, $3.20; L. S. Judd, $3.20; F. W. Christern, $3.20; J. C. Kearns, $1.50; Hon. E. P. Hurlbut, $5; A. W. Harbaugh, $23.20; Jas. W. Bartlett, $20; William Engell, $1.50; Mrs. I. Thompson, $10; J. J. Barker, $6.40; Jno. Gardner, $8; Wm. G. Babcock, $3.20; J. G. Whyte, $3.25; Dr. M. Schlesinger, $3.20; James Thompson, $3.20; Dr. N. S. Townsend, $3.20; Alex. Fix, $3.20; Geo. B. Young, $3.20; Mrs. J. E. Judd, $3.20; W. W. Wilson, $14; Mrs. J. A. J. Perkins, $1.60; Isaac Le Mahieu, $2; E. P. Clark, $1; Sam'l T. Brooke, $3.10; Miss J. F. Foster, $1; M. M. Pratt, $3; D. B. Hale, $1; W. C. Fuller, $3.20; H. H. Bigelow, $3.20; Mrs. M. E. Brown, $3.20; R. P. Hollowell, $3.20; Cash, $4; L. F. Gardner, $3.35; Rev. Amos Smith, $3.20; M. B. Bryant, $3.20; Jos. T. White, $3.20; Wm. H. Dixon, $3.20; Mrs. A. C. Richards, $4.70.

The Index.

BOSTON, JAN. 8, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENSFELDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N. Y.	5.00
A. FOLSOM, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. PRESNO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York	5.00
Gen. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRES, New York, N. Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N. Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHSCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N. Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D. C.	5.00
Geo. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N. Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EABLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N. Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HON. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N. Y.	1.00
N. LEWINSON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBAUGH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N. Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N. Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MRS. FRANCIS DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
Prof. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
DR. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R. I.	1.00
MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R. I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERRILL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Bradenton, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. RISK, Winthrop, Iowa.	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N. Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00

WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D. C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N. Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N. Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N. Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " " "	1.00
MR. GAUS, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Grand Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	5.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford.	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston.	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa.	1.00
F. B. MERCER, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston.	5.00
Mrs. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
Mrs. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio.	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
Mrs. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

THE POPE AND THOMAS AQUINAS.

In connection with the essay on "The Influence of Philosophy upon Christianity," which was read before the Unitarian Ministers' Institute at Providence last October, and is now for the first time printed in full in this issue of THE INDEX, it will be pertinent to notice the attempt of Pope Leo XIII. to rehabilitate the Scholastic Philosophy, as taught by the greatest of its mediæval expositors, Thomas Aquinas.

The now famous "Encyclical Letter," addressed by the Pope to "all the Patriarchs, Primates, Archbishops, and Bishops of the Catholic world, in favor and communion with the Apostolic See," and "given at Rome, at St. Peter's, on the fourth day of August, 1879, in the second year of our Pontificate," is a truly remarkable document. Singularly enough, it has been eagerly seized upon by over-sanguine Protestants as proof of a disposition on the part of the present Supreme Pontiff to abandon the ground held by his predecessor, Pius IX., in opposition to the tendencies of modern civilization,—in fact, as a timely pronunciamento in favor of these very tendencies, and an encouraging sign that the Roman Catholic Church is about to liberalize itself in its practical policy towards modern thought. No more egregious blunder could be made. Such a revolution would be the suicide of the Church; and the Pope is not the fool that such Protestants imagine him to be. On the contrary, he is a very intellectual, shrewd, and capable ruler, fully aware that it is to-day the only possible policy of the Church to "fight the devil with fire," and employ reason against reason in the cause of Catholic supremacy. Hence his Encyclical Letter is simply a trumpet-call to the clergy to arm themselves with all the offensive and defensive weapons of philosophy as the Church teaches it, in order to cope successfully with the tremendous power of philosophy as science teaches it. It is only the issuing of new orders to the "Church Militant," to the end that it may come out of the terrible conflict at last as the "Church Triumphant." That such is the case will be abundantly clear to all who read understandingly the following copious extracts from the Pope's Encyclical (the italics are ours):—

Since, indeed, as the Apostle warns us, "through philosophy and vain fallacy" (Coloss. xi., 8) the minds of the faithful are deceived and the sincerity of faith is corrupted in man, therefore the supreme pastors of the Church have always thought it to be their duty to advance with all their might science really deserving of the name, and to provide at the same time with singular vigilance that all human learning should be taught according to the standard of the Catholic Church, MORE ESPECIALLY PHILOSOPHY, on which, in a great measure, the right conduct of all the other sciences depends. . . .

Whoever contemplates the bitterness of our age and the condition of public and private affairs will discover that the fruitful cause of those evils which overwhelm us, and of those which we fear, consists in this, that erroneous doctrines concerning Divine and human affairs, already gone forth from schools of philosophy, have invaded every order of the State, and have been received by the common suffrage of multitudes. . . . But natural aids which, by the goodness of Divine Wisdom strongly and sweetly disposing all things, belong to the human race, are neither to be despised nor rejected. In these aids the right use of philosophy is manifestly the chief.

Not in vain did God implant the light of human reason in the mind; and, so far is it from being the fact that the super-added light of faith extinguishes or diminishes the intelligence, it rather perfects it, and with increased strength makes it able for greater things. Therefore the method of Divine Providence itself demands that, in recalling the people to faith and salvation, aid should be sought even from human learning. . . . The most benign God, in the Divine order, not only has disclosed, by the light of faith, truths which cannot be reached by the human intelligence, but also has manifested others not wholly impervious to reason, so that by the assistance of the authority of God [i.e., the authority of the Roman Catholic Church], they may become known to all without any admixture of error. . . . It clearly follows that human reason reconciles with the word of God the fullest faith and submission to authority. . . .

These most solid foundations being thus laid, a perpetual and manifold use of philosophy is still required, that sacred theology may receive and put on the nature, habit, and genius of a true science; for, in this noblest of studies, it is necessary that many and various parts of celestial doctrines should be gathered into one body, so that, each arranged in its own place and derived from its proper principles, all might cohere with a fitting connection. . . . Lastly, it is also the function of philosophical discipline to religiously defend the truths of Divine tradition. . . . As the enemies of the Catholic name, about to attack religion, borrow their weapons of war for the most part from philosophy, so the defenders of the Divine sciences take many weapons from philosophy by which they can defend revealed dogmas. . . .

The Church herself not only advises, but commands Christian doctors to seek that assistance from philosophy. For the Fifth Council of Lateran, after it had decreed that every assertion contrary to the truth of illuminated faith was altogether false, because what was true never contradicted truth in the least degree (Bulla Apostolici Regiminis), ordered teachers of philosophy to carefully practise themselves in solving crafty difficulties, since, as Augustine testifies, "if reason is given against the authority of Divine Scripture, no matter how acute it may be, it deceives with the appearance of truth, for true it cannot be."

But that philosophy may be found adequate to bring to us these precious fruits we have mentioned, we must never depart from that path on which the venerable antiquity of the Fathers has progressed, and the Vatican Synod, by its SOLEMN SUFFRAGE OF AUTHORITY [i.e., by the decree of Papal Infallibility], has approved. Inasmuch as it is manifest that we must accept many truths of the supernatural order, which far surpass the acumen of any talent, let not human reason, conscious of its own infirmity, dare to attempt greater tasks than it can accomplish, or to deny these truths, or to measure them by its own power, or to interpret them as it pleases; but let it rather accept them with a full and humble faith, and hold it the highest honor that it can, as a handmaid and servant, be associated with celestial doctrines, and by the blessing of God reach them in some way. In those departments of knowledge which human intelligence can naturally reach, it is manifestly just that philosophy should use its own method, principle, and arguments—not so, however, that it should seem to withdraw itself from the Divine authority [i.e., the authority of the Church]. But, as it is evident that what is known by revelation are certain truths, and what is opposed to faith is equally at war with right reason, let the Catholic philosopher know that he will at one and the same time violate the rights of faith and of reason, if he embraces any conclusion which he understands to be repugnant to revealed doctrine.

We know that there are not wanting those who, immeasurably extolling the faculties of human nature, contend that the intelligence of man, when once subjected to the Divine authority [i.e., the authority of the Church and the Infallible Pope], is deprived of its native dignity, and is very much retarded and kept back by a certain yoke of servitude from advancing to the highest point of truth and excellence. But these are errors and fallacies, tending, etc.

With these transparently clear provisos, forbidding philosophy to travel an inch beyond the limits of authorized dogma or to presume to think for itself on any matter on which the Church has dictated beforehand the conclusions which must be humbly accepted, Pope Leo XIII. proposes simply to fortify and defend Catholic theology as it already exists, and not in the least to encourage any disposition to modify or liberalize this theology out of deference to modern thought. All that he has in view is to educate his own clergy more thoroughly in the method and results of Scholasticism—the mediæval philosophy of the Catholic Church. With this sole object of reviving and reëstablishing a form of philosophy by which human reason was absolutely enslaved to ecclesiastical authority, the Pope further declares:—

The doctors of mediæval times, who are called the Scholastics, undertook a task of great magnitude: namely, carefully to gather, and, having gathered, to reduce to shape for posterity's use and convenience, the rich and prolific harvests of doctrine scattered all over the voluminous writings of the Holy Fathers. . . . Now, among the Scholastic doctors, far away towers in eminence the prince and master of all, Thomas Aquinas, who, as Cajetan observes, because he greatly venerated all the elder holy doctors of the Church, did therefore in some measure acquire the knowledge and understanding of all. . . . As in like manner he applied this method of philosophizing to refute the errors of heretics, he has earned for himself the distinction that singly he demolished all the errors of former times, and supplied irresistible weapons to vanquish all those which in the revolution of ages may rise up. . . . It is a fact that nearly all the founders and law-makers of religious Orders laid it down as a precept to their subjects to study and religiously cling to the teachings of St. Thomas, with a monition that none of them could with impunity depart from the pathway marked out by so great a man. To pass over the Dominican family, which, by a certain family right of its own, glories in this eminent master, the statutes of the Benedictines, the Carmelites, the Augustinians, the Company of Jesus, and several other sacred Orders, bear witness to this. . . . And now it has resulted that Thomas has been throned as chief in those great homes of human wisdom [the Catholic universities of Salamanca, Alcalá, Douay, Toulouse, Louvain, Padua, Bologna, Naples, Coimbra, and very many others], as it were in his own kingdom; and that the minds of all, whether teachers or hearers, have settled down with wondrous unanimity on the teaching and authority of the Angelic Doctor.

In support of this latter opinion, the Pope quotes the similar opinion of his predecessors, the Popes Sixtus V., Clement XI., Nicholas V., Benedict XIII., Pius V., Clement XII., Urban V., Innocent XII., Benedict XIV., and Innocent VI.; also of the General Councils of Lyons, Vienna, Florence, Trent, and the Vatican. In fact, Thomas Aquinas was the very incarnation of mediævalism. For this reason alone the present Pope holds him up to the world as the greatest teacher of Catholic theology and philosophy, in contrast with "a certain new-fangled system of philosophy" which owed its origin to "the struggling Reformers of the sixteenth century," and has been adopted by a few "Catholic philosophers" who have been "drawn by the love of imitation" into the "pursuit of novelties." So far from antagonizing in any degree the example of his predecessor Pius IX., or indirectly throwing overboard the latter's celebrated Syllabus Errorum, Leo XIII. has entered upon a new fanatical crusade to reestablish that ancient and obsolete mediæval philosophy which was the fountain-head whence the Syllabus itself was derived. In his letter to Cardinal di Luca, Bishop of Preneste and Prefect of the Congregation of Studies, published since the Encyclical was promulgated, he declares explicitly with reference to it:—

We have specially exhorted the Bishops to add their efforts to ours in the endeavor to revive that ancient philosophy, deprived of its rank and now almost fallen, and to reinstate it in its old place of honor by rendering it back to the Catholic schools. Our joy has been great on learning that everywhere, with the assistance of God, our letters have been received with a complete deference and a rare unanimity of assent. . . . Only one voice, one opinion, is apparent in the recognition of the fact that our letters have truly indicated the roots of the present evils, and where consequently we must seek a remedy. All are agreed that human reason, if it abandons the Divine authority of faith, exposes itself to the waverings of doubt and the dangers of error, but that on the contrary it will easily avoid these perils, IF MEN WILL ONLY SEEK REFUGE IN CATHOLIC PHILOSOPHY.

The Pope then goes on to state that the revival of Aquinas's system of Scholasticism has been already begun in Rome. He has taken care that first of all in the Roman Seminary, the Gregorian Lyceum, the Urbanian College, and in the other schools under the Papal control, "the philosophic sciences shall be simply, clearly, and fully taught and cultivated according to the spirit and principles of the Angelic Doctor." He recommends everywhere the holding of meetings and the formation of societies for the cultivation of Scholasticism; and he himself has already "decided to establish at Rome an academical institution, under the title and patronage of St. Thomas Aquinas, which will apply its energy and zeal to expound and interpret the works of that holy man . . . and to refute the errors which have been multiplied by recent discoveries." Moreover, to facilitate all this active and energetic work, the Pope "decrees that all his [Aquinas's] works shall be newly published in their entirety," in a new and corrected edition, together with the works of his chief commentators, such as Thomas del Vio and Cardinals Cajetan and Ferrari.

All this indicates unmistakably that philosophy is once more to be the great, decisive battle-ground between "Rome and Reason." The powerful endeavor of Leo XIII. to bring Thomas Aquinas into fashion again, as the ablest expositor of that Scholastic philosophy which was supposed to have been safely buried in its mediæval grave, will probably prove that the Church has ability to raise the dead, as it certainly has to raise a breeze. Father Scully's recent performances in the cause of Catholic education, and the whole agitation of the Catholic school question, are connected not remotely with the same efforts.

It will be a fatal mistake not to learn what these efforts mean. The Pope's attempt to revive Scholasticism is not a wholly new thing, though it is a far more important thing than all the previous attempts combined. Giovachino Ventura, Superior-General of the Order of the Theatines, who died in 1861, was the leader of a party whose chief ambition was to restore Scholasticism to its old position as the recognized Catholic philosophy, and to give practical effect to its fundamental principle that the authority of the Church is superior to all other sovereignty, including that of individual reason and conscience. Ventura held that philosophy reached its climax in Thomas Aquinas. The Jesuit Liberatore, another member of the same party, likewise teaches that above nature and man is the authority of the Church, the infallible guide in philosophy as well as in theology. Other members of it were or are Sanseverino, Crescenzo, Capozza, and the Jesuit P. Tapparelli d' Azeglio. The well-known monthly review, La Civiltà Cattolica, was especially established in 1850 as the organ of this party, and has had the Jesuits Liberatore, Perrone, Azeglio, Bresciani, Curci, and others, as its editors. The world-famous Syllabus of Pius IX., published in 1864, was the adoption and proclamation of the fundamental ideas of this party by the highest authority of the Catholic Church. In this document the Pope condemned as damnable heresies these and similar propositions: "Moral science and philosophy are independent of the authority of the Church"; "Philosophy may be treated without regard to revelation"; "The principles and the method of the Scholastics are not in accordance with the needs and the progress of science"; "Common schools ought to be exempted from the authority of the Church." All these propositions, which simply express fundamental truths of modern civilization, were condemned as heresies, involving damnation to all who hold them, by the Vatican Council of 1870, when it adopted the decree of Papal Infallibility,—a decree which is pronounced by Professor Vincenzo Botta, Ph.D., formerly of the Royal Colleges of Turin, to be "the logical consequence of Catholicism and the highest synthesis of SCHOLASTICISM."

That verdict is true. The Scholasticism of Thomas Aquinas is the philosophical foundation and bulwark of radical Jesuitism, ultimating as it does in the utter abasement and prostration of human reason at the foot of an Infallible Pope. This is the philosophy which Leo XIII. is now concentrating all the vast resources of the Catholic Church to render dominant throughout the world—the only philosophy which utters the innermost heart and soul of Christianity in a form consistent with the laws of the systemizing scientific intellect—the philosophy of spiritual absolutism with which the philosophy of modern science can alone successfully cope. Orthodox Christianity and Neo-Christianity are only more or less consistent applications of the distinctively Christian principle—that of personal authority in religion; and this principle is the tap-root of the Scholasticism of the Angelic Doctor. Pope Leo XIII. is right in fortifying himself on the foundation of Thomas Aquinas, and thereby following faithfully the example of Pius IX. and all his predecessors; for he who cuts loose from Thomas Aquinas cannot logically stop till he has surrendered Christianity altogether. But Scholasticism breaks itself into innumerable fragments on the solid rock of the Scientific Method, universalized as Modern Philosophy and Free Religion. The main positions of the essay published to-day find abundant confirmation in the fixed determination of the Roman Catholic Church to stand or fall with the philosophy of St. Thomas Aquinas, the Angelic Doctor of Scholasticism and the chief Apostle of Mediæval Theology.

A REJECTED LETTER FROM MR. UNDERWOOD.

Mr. Underwood hands to us for publication the subjoined letter, which was refused by the journal to which it was originally addressed.

EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER:—

Since it is but fair and just that your readers should see the letters referring to D. M. Bennett, for which I am censured in the Truth Seeker of last week, I enclose them herewith, trusting you will give them a place in your columns.

Whether these letters contain any calumnies or misstatements, whether I "boast" of any sympathy I have shown Mr. Bennett, whether I evince a disposition to do him a wrong, your readers will judge for themselves.

The genuineness of the letters, extracts from which were published in the Religio-Philosophical Journal, had been denied. They had been declared by the editor of the Truth Seeker probably fabrications, or perfectly innocent letters, interpolated and changed by Comstock, or by the girl to whom they were sent, or by some other persons. From many persons I received letters on the subject. Not a few of these declared the letters must be forgeries, and that in justice to Mr. Bennett the matter should be investigated. I had reason for believing the letters genuine, but I was in no haste to express an opinion. But Col. Bundy wrote me, declaring he was willing to put the letters into my hands for examination, on condition that I would state, after reading them, whether in my opinion they were Bennett's letters, whether they bore evidences of interpolation, and whether the extracts published in the Religio-Philosophical Journal were given accurately. Indeed, he urged me to make the examination. I went to Chicago, and examined the letters. Had I found them forgeries, I should have said so. But I saw they were genuine, and I did not shrink from stating the truth. This is the head and front of my offending.

While Mr. Bennett is in prison, I wish no controversy with him on personal matters; nor will I have any, unless it shall be forced upon me by him or those acting by his advice. Hence, at this time, I make no reply to his references to me further than to say that, from our first acquaintance to the present, my treatment of him has been, I believe, just and even generous. If I have any complaints of a personal nature to make against him, this is not the time to make them, if indeed at any time such a matter should be obtruded upon public attention. Mr. Bennett evidently writes—and no wonder—in an inflamed state of mind, and I am not disposed to hold him rigidly responsible for all that he says. The spirit of his last letter is almost ferocious. "I am a poor miserable sinner, but down with any other man who says or admits it!" are words that seem fitly to express his present feelings. If I had been the cause of his folly, or if the notes complained of had—which I by no means intimate—interfered with a design to produce an impression that his letters were the fabrication of Comstock, he could not have been more chagrined or offended at me than he now seems to be.

In regard to his explanation of his conduct, his estimate of himself, his charges against the girl, and his statements respecting others than myself, I do not feel called upon to make any comments. Too much will be said by others without any words from me.

More than once have I told Mr. Bennett, in private conversation, that I thought he gave too much space in his paper to the details of the amours of the clergy, for the reason that, while they show beyond doubt that the clergy, like other men, are liable to go astray, in no manner do they prove the falsity of the doctrines they advocate. And now, when the clergy and religious press all over the country are pointing to Mr. Bennett as an illustration of the demoralizing influence of liberalism, it is quite as evident that, although his letters and confession prove that the editor of an anti-Christian paper may act as foolishly as a Christian minister, or even a Christian bishop, yet his conduct is no argument whatever against the truth of the great principles of free-thought. Col. Ingersoll is reported as saying that, if the Bennett letters are genuine, their author should be "put in a bag with Bishop McCloskey and both be thrown into the Bosphorus"; but there is no man more generous or lenient to the erring and unfortunate than the eloquent Colonel, and I am sure that, while neither he nor any other true Liberal will attempt to justify or apologize for D. M. Bennett's conduct, all right-minded men and women will feel pity for him in his misfortune, indulge the hope that he will learn wisdom from his past folly, and encourage every well-meant and honorable effort to regain self-respect and the respect of his fellow-men. That his standing and influence among Liberals will remain unimpaired, he certainly cannot expect, unless, indeed, his estimate of their character is lower than I have reason to believe it really is; but it is "never too late to mend," and if Mr. Bennett, instead of attempting to crush the girl that would not yield to his desires, and wrangling with those who object to his past method and past conduct, will honestly try to repair the injury he has done the cause of Liberalism, sympathy and encouragement will not be withheld from him in such an effort.

Any expressions of sorrow for him personally from me would be received by him, in his present state of mind, with derision, and what I have already written will probably give serious offence; but I have my own views, and the occasion demands their expression, let them please or displease whom they may. I should despise myself if fear of offending any man or the desire to retain the good-will of a paper could induce me to remain silent when duty called upon me to speak.

I wish to write no more on this unpleasant subject, and this will be my last word, unless the course of the Truth Seeker toward me shall compel me, in self-defence, to make additional statements.

Yours truly, B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Boone, Iowa, Nov. 26, 1879.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

PARNELL has arrived.

SIR WALTER SCOTT'S Ivanhoe has been brought out in Hebrew at Wilna.

MR. JENKINS, the author of Gina's Baby, is to give readings of his works.

B. F. UNDERWOOD will lecture at Union City, Mich., Jan. 10, 11, and 12.

IT WAS the Rev. L. K. Washburn up to Wednesday last. It is now Rev. L. K. Washburn and wife.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA, the English journalist, is lecturing in this country "On the Shows that I have Seen."

THE DEFENCE of the Governor of Maine is pronounced rather thin. This is not strange, as it is that of Gov. Gas-salone.

LOUIS KOSSUTH, now seventy-seven years old, is living in voluntary exile near Turin, Italy, where he has mainly occupied himself with scientific studies since 1862.

MAYOR PRINCE has received $20 from an unknown friend in Maine, with a request that he give $10 of it to Miss Jennie Collins, $5 to the Lying-in Hospital, and "$5 to the charity which begets the most good and least laziness."

MRS. ELIZABETH COMSTOCK, of Michigan, the widely-known Quaker missionary, has visited one hundred and fifteen thousand prisoners, and of this number she finds that one hundred and five thousand were brought to prison through strong drink.

MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD was in Boston a few days since, on a brief holiday visit to his New England home and friends. He returned at once to the West, where his engagements crowd thick and fast upon him and already extend through the whole of the present season.

MRS. MAY NIERICKER, the sister of Miss Louisa M. Alcott, and youngest daughter of A. Bronson Alcott, has just died unexpectedly in Paris, where she has been living for a few years past. She shared in the gifts of the family, and had already made considerable reputation as an author and artist.

REV. W. J. POTTER delivered a commemorative discourse, Sunday, the 28th of December, before his society at New Bedford, appropriate to the twentieth anniversary of his settlement as its minister. There are few, we feel quite sure, who can review so long a pastorate with less occasion for regrets, or behold at the close a richer fruitage of harmonious fellowship, love, and reverence.

DE TOCQUEVILLE, in his Old Régime, speaking of serfdom, informs us that, though it was nominally abolished in Prussia in 1717, it did not wholly disappear in that country till 1809. Two years later, namely, in 1811, it was abolished in Austria. Its abolition in other parts of Germany took place in the early part of this century. The last place to retain it was Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, where it flourished till 1833. We all know how it disappeared from our own country and Russia only a few years ago.

HERE IS RATHER a curious literary item from an English exchange: "The widow of Adolph Strodtmann, the biographer of Heine, desires it to be known that she is in possession of a lock of hair that was cut from the poet's head after death, and also of an oil portrait of Heine painted by Ludwig Gassen of Munich, representing him in his twenty-eighth year. She is anxious to part with these two relics to amateurs of the poet for 'amateur prices,' whatever that may mean. Offers are to be addressed to her, care of Dr. Engel, 35 Königin-Augusta Strasse, Berlin."

THE HISTORIAN, LECKY, in his England in the Eighteenth Century, states that the last traces of serfdom did not disappear in England till the time of James I., and that in Scotland colliers and laborers in the salt works were in a condition of slavery for the greater part of the eighteenth century. They were legally attached for life to the works on which they labored. The children were bound to the same employment in the same place, and on the sale of the works their services were transferred to the new owner. It was only in 1775 that an act was passed for their emancipation.

MR. BJORNSTERN BJORNSSON, a Swedish poet and novelist, whose works are considerably read in the United States, has quarrelled with his sovereign and had to leave his country. King Oscar, who is nearly as much a literary man as he is a king, published an unfavorable criticism of one of Mr. Björnson's works, and spoke lightly of the general character of his productions. The poet wrote to his majesty, demanding that he should apologize for his remarks or fight a duel with him. The king called the attention of the police to the matter, and the saucy subject found it expedient to take a trip to Vienna.

REV. DR. BUCKLEY, a Brooklyn Methodist, writing in the Independent, says: "It is proper for us to admit and honor the piety of many men whose sentiments on various subjects we could not allow to be preached in the pulpits of the church to which we belong." He then names Dean Stanley as one such man to be honored for learning, piety, and service to our common Christianity; but "the very ministers and bishops who delighted to pay him respect when he recently visited this country would be obliged to use their influence against his admission [to Methodist pulpits], because the preaching of some of his convictions and expressed doubts would undermine and disintegrate the structure."

MRS. ABBA GOOLD WOOLSON, whose Conversational Lectures upon the Literature and the History of England have been given with great success in Boston, Cambridge, Concord, N.H., Portland, and New York City, has been engaged to deliver in Arlington, Mass., a course of twelve lectures upon eminent English authors, taken in chronological order, from the days of Chaucer to the present time. These lectures are to be given without notes; and they will present not only studies of the literature of successive periods, but also such introductory pictures of the History of Europe, and of the various political and religious influences then at work, as shall be needed for a clear understanding of the authors themselves.

A DISGRACEFUL fight, according to the following newspaper report, occurred on a recent Sunday in the Presbyterian church at Pittsburg, Pa., between two factions, one favoring Rev. Mr. Woodside and the other another clergyman. Mr. Woodside attempted to go into the pulpit, when his rival attacked him. A general fight ensued, extending throughout the whole congregation, and joined in by the ministers. For a quarter of an hour the battle raged furiously. Heads were punched, eyes were blackened, arms broken, and women knocked down. The yells and screams were frightful. The police finally quelled the riot and made several arrests. In the row, pews and other furniture were broken; and hymn-books, Bibles, hair-pins, and false hair were scattered in every direction. Much indignation prevails in church circles, and the presbytery will investigate the matter.

THE FOLLOWING note from Mr. Holyoake appears in the Secular Review of December 13: "My object in going to America was rest, and contributing to papers is not rest. I was told by my friends, before I left England, that what I needed to learn was the art of doing nothing for a time; therefore, I made that my study in the United States, and acquired such proficiency in it that I no longer wish to do anything. It is true I went immense distances, and spoke in many cities, and in six or seven churches; but unforeseen friends took from the transit all thought or care on my part, so that I never knew fatigue; and neither on land nor sea was I ever unwell. Next Sunday evening, at South Place Institute, I shall give some account of the secular aspect of America. When the passion for activity returns to me, I shall send you some account for the Secular Review of what I may be able to think interesting to your readers. G. J. HOLYOAKE."

TO BE A KING or an Emperor in Europe nowadays does not appear to be a very comfortable berth for a nervous person, or one who desires to preserve his hold on this state of existence. According to the San Francisco News-Letter, a page of the Czar's diary runs as follows: "Got up at 7 A.M. and ordered my bath. Found four gallons of vitriol in it, and did not take it. Went to breakfast: the Nihilists had placed two torpedoes on the stairs, but I did not step on them. The coffee smelt so strongly of prussic acid that I was afraid to drink it. Found a scorpion in my left slipper, but luckily shook it out before putting it on. Just before stepping into the carriage to go for my morning drive, it was blown into the air, killing the coachman and the horses instantly. I did not drive. Took a light lunch of hermetically-sealed American canned goods. They can't fool me there. Found a poisoned dagger in my favorite chair, with the point sticking out. Did not sit down on it. Had dinner at 6 P.M., and made Baron Laisheounowski taste every dish. He died before the soup was cleared away. Consumed some Baltimore oysters and some London stout that I have had locked up for five years. Went to the theatre, and was shot at three times in the first act. Had the entire audience hanged. Went home to bed, and slept all night on the roof of the palace."

REV. J. VILA BLAKE, who was a few years since the minister of the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society of Boston, is delivering a series of thoughtful Sunday discourses at Quincy, Ill., where he is now settled. We give below the introduction to a printed one on faith that has just reached us. "I continue the subject of faith. In the first sermon, I defined faith to be belief and trust in the universe as moral order. In the second sermon, I said that trust in the universe of moral order involves trust in our own souls; in other words, a conviction of the trustworthiness of the reason and moral nature of mankind. This, I said, proceeds necessarily from our trust in the universe as moral order, because: First, unless our minds be trustworthy, we cannot know that we interpret the facts of life correctly, or that the universe is moral order. Indeed, to trust in anything, if our faculties be untrustworthy, is absurd and impossible. Second, we are part of the moral order, and therefore must partake its poise, security, and trustworthiness. Third, our intellectual and moral natures answer in wonderful ways to the visible creation, whereby we see that mind conforms to the plan and reflects the nature of that mysterious matter which appears to sense at present as the clothing or dwelling place of thought. In this discourse, I shall answer some objections often brought against trust in our own souls."

FOREIGN.

THERE ARE one hundred and fifty thousand sufferers by the famine in Upper Silesia: most of them are Poles.

THE LEIPSIK police have forbidden the circulation of a work called The Battle between Large and Small Capital; or, Tailoring in London. It bears the date of 1876.

THE ARCHBISHOP of Moscow has gone ahead of the Pope, and has publicly taught that the Emperor of Russia is the vicar of God, inspired and infallible in his utterances, and to be obeyed as God himself.

THE MUNICIPALITY of Paris voted five hundred thousand francs for the relief of the poor, in consideration of the inclement weather. They have also voted two hundred thousand francs for the redemption of pledged bed-clothes.

THE RUSSIAN police have not as yet arrested anybody who they can be certain was concerned in the recent attempt to blow up the train conveying the Czar to Moscow. A large number of people, however, have been arrested on mere suspicion.

MR. GLADSTONE'S return from Scotland has been in every way as triumphant as his visit there. There was a large crowd to greet him at Preston; and at Wigan, in a dense black fog, thousands stood listening to him for half an hour, although they could not see him.

AMONG THE MOST recent of charitable institutions founded in Paris is a home for Students and Jewish Workmen which was inaugurated last week. The Home, which is intended to shelter young men from the temptations of the great city, will be supported partly by voluntary contributions and partly by small fees paid by the inmates.

A BOAR'S HEAD is usually sent to Queen Victoria from Germany each Christmas. For fourteen Christmases, from 1837, it was the custom of King Ernest, of Hanover, to send one to each of his political friends in England. His list was a somewhat lengthy one when he left the country; but, if a man abandoned his rigid creed of High Toryism in Church and State, he was at once expunged, and at his death it had dwindled down to a very few names indeed.

A VIENNA DESPATCH says the Russian Nihilists are circulating among the peasants a story that the Czar has issued a decree ordering landed proprietors to divide their estates among the peasants. The peasants on the estate of Count Schouvaloff in the Sengievskoi district, seeing that the count was not taking any steps for a division of the property, gathered at the castle, seized it, expelled all the servants, and sacked it. Two companies of soldiers, who were ordered to disperse the rioters, were received with showers of missiles. The affair has assumed a threatening aspect. The peasants of several neighboring communities have joined the rioters, all of whom are excellently armed.

THE NOW NEARLY ubiquitous Chinaman has become a source of grave anxiety in the colony of Mauritius. He has five pagodas or joss-houses in Port Louis alone; and these, it is said, are richer than all the Catholic and Protestant Churches combined. In fact, the Chinese element forms a colony within a colony, governed by a Supreme Council with its presiding Mandarin, which council really governs John Chinaman. A recent writer expresses his opinion that the Celestials will ere long find their way into the most western parts of Europe. We devoutly wish this prediction may not be verified: there will be, in England at least, no room for the outpourings of Asia until all our people have become landed gentry.

THE ARCHDUCHESS CHRISTINA, now Queen of Spain, has a great deal of intellect, and is very accomplished, speaking French, English, and Italian, and is now making rapid progress in Spanish. She is pale, her figure is pretty, her mouth is small, her hair light and curly. Her eyes are blue, and her expression is somewhat severe. She is a reserved and generous young woman. She passes her time chiefly in reading, and in works of charity. She decidedly knows her own mind, and made King Alfonso understand, it is said, that her consent to the marriage depended upon his granting several conditions. One of them was the privilege of having about her her own German attendants,—this being contrary to Spanish court etiquette. The king has yielded his assent to this condition.

AS THE KING and QUEEN of SPAIN were driving through the gate of the royal palace at Madrid recently, a young man dressed as a workman fired a shot from a revolver at the royal carriage. But his aim was bad, and nobody was hurt. The ball has since been found, and it weighs one ounce. It passed close to the head of one of the royal footmen. King Alfonso was driving at the time. The would-be assassin was immediately arrested, and has confessed his crime. His name is Gonzales, and he is nineteen years old, a waiter by occupation, and a native of Galicia. The Diario Español newspaper says two shots were fired at the royal carriage, the second passing quite close to the Queen's face. The weapon used was a double-barreled pistol. The diplomatic body visited the palace to congratulate their Majesties upon their escape. The attempt at assassination excites general indignation in Madrid. Gonzales is believed to have had an accomplice, and three persons have been arrested on suspicion. Gonzales has been living in Madrid for some time. The King and Queen attended the opera, and were greeted with enthusiastic demonstrations of loyalty and gratitude at their escape. At the close of the performance, an enthusiastic crowd, bearing torches, accompanied the royal carriage to the palace.

Communications.

MRS. UNDERWOOD'S ESSAY.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 18, 1879.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

I have for some years been a contributor to and reader of THE INDEX, and great has been my enjoyment in it, although I sometimes silently dissent from some of the articles found therein. Now the impulse to do so openly has moved strongly within me, knowing that every individual has the right of protest and is kindly received in its columns, even if his thought is not born in the clearest wisdom. Mrs. Underwood has always seemed to me a just and fair writer, keen and subtle in her reasoning, and tender in her attitude towards all. Her last article, in THE INDEX of Dec. 11, does not seem to me to betray the same spirit, and part of what she says about love seems to me wholly unworthy of the divine thing it is. I wish to distinctly state here I am not in any sense a free-lover, save in the highest significance that all love must be free and not compulsory. I am simply a contented wife in the happiest of homes. Nether can I claim, as Mrs. Underwood does, to have read all the arguments these so-called reformers use in its favor. Indeed, the doctrine as I understand it is very repulsive to my nature, and not at all in accord with the highest purity or the future well-being of the race. Still this does not prevent me from listening patiently to any who conscientiously differ from me; and I am willing to believe the fact, if I throw aside all prejudice, that some of its advocates are misguided but sincere men and women, whose writings and actions are based on what seems to them principle. Mrs. Underwood accuses them of breaking up homes and sundering marriage ties, and cites two instances to prove it, both of which are equally distasteful to me as illustrative of the fact. When she would have her readers infer that these two homes were happy resting places, founded on mutual love and interest, and would have so continued but for the influx of free love books and pamphlets, I for one doubt it. Underneath the daily routine of home duties there must have been the consciousness of effort to keep the semblance of union, for real union could not have been so severed.

All marriages and homes not sufficiently welded in the holy fire of love are liable to fall asunder at the first entering wedge of any theory that promises greater satisfaction and content. I am not going to discuss here what should be done in such ruptures: that is another question and an after consideration. The innocent should always be protected in all issues; and, if the parties possessed a spark of honor, the adjustment would be based on the noblest scale possible for them. I only wish to say Mrs. Underwood charges free-lovers with something entirely beyond their limit of power to accomplish. Marriage seems to me so high and holy that I do not like the suggestion of a fetter regarding it. I am speaking only of its spiritual side.

Of course I admit the necessity of laws to govern it, so far as it is a civil contract. It is an alliance based on mutual love and respect, perfect equality, and entire independence of thought and action, and needs no watching or guarding. The abiding love, deeply rooted in the heart of each, makes it impregnable against any and all external pressure. I say emphatically, What God has joined together man cannot put asunder. Mrs. Underwood would seem to excuse George Eliot and such celebrities from conduct in itself reprehensible by saying: "Exceptional people lead exceptional lives, that are not always to be faithfully copied." I confess she calls it a flaw in an otherwise noble structure, virtually admitting the character of the woman was not wholly corrupted thereby. Does genius make the moral code any the less rigid to its possessor? If it is a sin for the most obscure woman to live with one of the opposite sex illegally, to whom her heart is irrevocably given, it is just as great an evil for the most gifted among us, and ought to be equally condemned without attempt at palliation. In the latter instance, the harm done to the community is immeasurably greater. The world's intellectual leaders should bear unblemished records. What does Mrs. Underwood mean, when she says, referring to free-love ideas, "The evident burden of their gospel is that marriage is only a matter of the bestial passions of men and women"? Is she referring to the sexual functions? If so, all the motherhood and wifehood within me rebels at the statement. Would God have left the continuance of the race to the baser part of us? Would it not be wiser to acknowledge and teach that it is just as much a part of us as conscience, brain, or heart? It is certainly the highest endowed function, for through its agency life is generated and souls launched on the universe. The very divinity inherent in it should make abuse or violation impossible. Let us not irreverently trail it in the dust, but rather let us exalt it, that all may catch the glory of its reflected godliness, and be afraid to render it unchaste. Mrs. Underwood speaks of "the adoring love John Stuart Mill was not ashamed to avow for his wife." Does she remember that the all-abiding affection and interest was not due to the fact of her being his wife, but was just as surely recognized and cherished before the closer relation was entered upon, and while she was another man's wife? It was the woman that struck the key-note in his soul, and both heard and listened to its echoes, the perception of which was sufficient happiness for both. Does any one doubt the real marriage was outside of the legal bond? The invisible tie that united was stronger than visible ones, and needed no intercession of death to reveal it. Would his tribute of praise have been less, had the marriage never been consecrated in law? In conclusion, I would say, if any of my words seem bitter or unkind, certainly they are not in accord with the spirit that prompts them, for that is eager only for light, which leads ever onward towards truth. C.

SOME QUESTIONS ABOUT RELIGION.

As a humble inquirer after truth and the right, I desire to ask a few questions with a view to getting some light.

I find it claimed on all sides that religion is a priceless boon, a sine qua non of inestimable value. Says Rev. L. D. Bevan, of New York, in a recent discourse to students: "I claim for religion in all its forms, even taking the superstitions by which it has been corrupted, the honor of having more than aught else aided man in his long and weary pilgrimage of progress."

Now, understanding religion as I do, I find it difficult to recognize the truth of this almost universal assumption. Mr. Bevan says: "Religion renders the student reverent. All wisdom is humble."

But I do not understand that reverence for truth is a characteristic of religion at all, or that there may not be humble, reverent wisdom without anything of religion.

By religion I understand what is generally meant by the word: namely, a worship of what cannot be proved or known, a superstition about the darkness, a praying, supplicating attitude set over against science and knowledge, a bowing before the mysterious and wonderful; and in this view I think I am sustained by critical, patient observation both from the inside and outside of faith in supernatural revelation.

I have carefully noted what the ablest men, both inside the Church, and outside, have said, and I cannot possibly rid myself of the persuasion that religion is the propitiation or reverence of invisible personal forces, homage paid to will and thought as enthroned by the human mind, in creative and omnipotent supernatural action.

If I am incorrect in this view, I desire to be set right; and what I wish to know is whether all virtue and all goodness are identical with religion, or if virtue and patience, and a noble, loving life are not consistent with simple knowledge of what is,—in other words, with atheism?

I hear a great deal said against atheism as a crime, and the atheist is everywhere spoken of as a fool and a criminal. Even Professors Huxley and Tyndall apologize and defer to the popular universal belief that evolution is an untenable hypothesis; and it is necessary, at last, to fall back on the assertion of a miracle; and faith justifies the worship of mystery or a personal deity who transcends Nature and the universe.

Is piety the greatest virtue, the noblest growth in man? Are progress and civilization favored and advanced more by reverence for the gods than by knowledge, by critical, sceptical inquiry? I have not so read history and life; and yet I observe that this assumption enters into all literature and news-publications, excepting those of the out-and-out rational school. Any endeavor to open the columns of the country press to a question or doubt on the point is resisted and denounced, as at once utterly inadmissible and preposterous.

I do not, please bear in mind, affirm atheism or deny the truth of theism. I do ask for a candid consideration of the facts. The Rev. Mr. Bevan says: "Religion is human. It is that which differentiates us from the brute."

Now, if this be true, either all atheists are brutes, or religion is essentially not piety, nor conjoined with belief in a personal deity. If religion be simply the possession of moral qualities or peace of mind in respect to personal destiny and the course of Nature, it by no means follows that these are inseparable from acceptance of the Christian system or any other historical religious system, as is assumed and asserted. There may be—begging pardon of the knowing ones—there may be peace of mind, quietness, and loving reverence of what is pure and good, without the theistic faith or piety, which is supposed to be the talismanic key to some strange heaven.

Only, as it appears to me, by changing the definition of religion, by making it something not essentially a conscious worship of invisible personal forces, but a quality of life, a moral force, do we bring it into intelligent harmony with knowledge and human progress.

If we admit that the "evolutionist" may be religious, then we give up prayer and fasting and worship as essential acts or forms of religion, and are forever estopped from accusing atheism as irreligious.

I fain would know if the ecclesiastical assumptions which hold sway over pulpit and press are correct, and to be justified and taught. A. N. A.

FAIR HAVEN, Vt., Dec. 1879.

DARWINISM.

Darwinism must forever be repugnant to the masses of mankind, unless the higher sentiments of human nature be radically changed. I can conceive of no man or woman, possessing any degree of refinement, to whom the theory of the Descent of Man would not be repulsive. Liberals have rejected the Orthodox idea of human depravity and maintained the inherent excellence of man. But what are the figurative "worm of the dust," the "filthy rags," and all other Christian ideas of man's weakness and degradation to the liberal beastliness with which Darwinism invests human nature! Darwinism is the sum of all that is hateful to the self-respecting feelings of our nature. I do not believe there is a man or woman of any culture who would not be shocked at the first thought of the subject. If one accepts the theory of man's descent as set forth by Darwin and his followers he must do it against the protest of his finest and best feelings. The instincts of self-respect recoil from this idea of man's origin with unutterable disgust. Theology with all of its absurd myths has never taught anything more humiliating and loathsome to the dignity of man than the ancestral link of beasts and slimy reptiles which Darwinism bids us venerate.

Think about teaching this disgusting theory of man's being a lineal descendant of monkeys, hyenas, and snakes, to children! What a lovely catechism might be prepared to take the place of fairy stories in the nursery of zealous evolutionists! How "Jack, the Giant Killer," would pale before the monsters of the "chain," living and extinct, that the scientific expounder of man's origin might introduce to the little fellows of winter evenings!

Man is beastly enough at best, with all his ideas of his native nobility. To convince him that he is "of the earth, earthy," in the evolutionary sense, would not elevate him in his own esteem. A general acceptance of Darwinism would, I believe, degrade every conception of human life. I confess that I am wanting in that devotion to truth which would make the evolution of man from monkeys an agreeable thought to me, if I knew it to be true. If this is the real origin of man, I think it would be a great misfortune for him to discover this truth. (If this be treason against science, make the most of it.) But Darwinism lacks everything of being demonstrated. It is yet but a very crude theory. It never can be satisfactorily established until there are new facts bearing on the subject. The chain of Darwinism is deficient in more than one link, and it seems to me the supremest arrogance to claim for this theory the authority of established truth.

H. CLAY NEVILLE.

OZARK, Mo.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

IN THE North American Review for January, M. Ferdinand de Lesseps examines the different schemes that have been proposed for the construction of a ship-canal across the Isthmus of Darien, connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. He pronounces the Nicaragua Canal project to be inadequate, and insists upon the necessity of a canal having one level of water from ocean to ocean. The Nicaragua route is in the first place too long, being two hundred and ninety-five kilometres; then its twenty-one locks would make navigation so slow that there would be practically no saving of time, and great steamships could more profitably go round Cape Horn. Even were the Nicaragua Canal to be constructed, M. de Lesseps holds that it could never be anything else than a channel for inferior navigation: it could never accommodate the large vessels which now carry the world's commerce. The second article is by Francis Parkman, who reviews the arguments adduced in favor of woman-suffrage by five advocates of that measure in the November number of the Review. When the great mass of womankind demands the right of suffrage, it will be accorded, says Mr. Parkman; but, with all the agitation of this question during several decades, the female sex is still content to be represented in political affairs by their male relatives. Nevertheless, women may exert a very great power in the commonwealth. If they are sound in body and mind, impart this soundness to a numerous offspring and rear them to a sense of responsibility and duty, there are no national evils that we cannot overcome. Mr. Froude, in the latter half of his article "Romanism and the Irish Race in the United States," recounts the history of English rule in Ireland. That history is, according to him, a succession of blunders on the part of the successive English governments. The one English ruler whose policy might have resulted in good, both to England and to Ireland, was Oliver Cromwell. If the Irish people had been subject to such a ruler as he for two generations, they would in all likelihood have followed the example of the Scotch Highlanders, and become Calvinists. Henry James, Jr., contributes an article on the life and letters of the eminent French critic, Sainte-Beuve, one of the most interesting figures in the annals of literature. The author analyzes with rare skill the mental constitution of Sainte-Beuve, exhibiting the remarkable combination of qualities possessed by him, namely, a passion for scholarship and an intense sympathy with human life. An article by Prof. Alexander Winchell on "The Metaphysics of Science" goes to demonstrate the existence of a realm of thought deeper than the data of physical science, on which the principles of science are dependent for all their validity. Science may pronounce with authority upon questions purely phenomenal; but, when it assumes to utter conclusions on themes which lie within the realm of metaphysics, it transcends its limits. Mr. Cuthbert Mills, in his closing paper on "The Permanence of Political Forces," considers the question of the currency. His conclusions are: first, that so long as financial questions are an issue in national politics, no resting place will be found till it is finally determined whether coin or an inconvertible paper currency is to be the money of the country; second, that the Greenback organization will never be anything but a third party, and as such will go to pieces; third, that the result of the agitation will be a decision, either by constitutional amendment or otherwise, that the national government shall not under any circumstances issue an inconvertible legal-tender paper money. The literary notices are by Richard Henry Stoddard, who reviews three volumes; namely, Arnold's Light of Asia, Dr. Joyce's Blamid, and Bayard Taylor's Poetical Works.

"MAMMA," asked a little girl, "why is it they sing in church 'We'll dine no more,' and then go right home and dine?"

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
" 13 " 25 " "	8 " "
" 26 " 51 " "	6 " "
" 52 " " " "	5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. OLARK, Florence, Mass.
MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
fy, N.J.

J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 50 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

FREE

RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Bonneschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Galtrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting, 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
fy, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS, SENT BY MAIL AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES! ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).....	1.50
ALCOOT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Meg, Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men; or, The Annual.....	1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Annual.....	1.50
Travels.....	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins".....	1.50
Under the Lilacs. Illustrated.....	1.50
Work: A Story of Experience.....	1.75
Silvered Locks and Independence, a Centennial Love Story.....	1.25
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Cupid and Chow-Chow, &c.....	1.00
My Girls, &c.....	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinafore, &c.....	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
Culture and Anarchy.....	3.00
Last Essays on Church and Religion.....	1.50
Mixed Essays.....	2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma".....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism; with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.....	1.75
Isaiah XL--LXVII. With the Prophecies allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes.....	1.50
French Eton.....	1.00
New Poems.....	2.00
High Reading for Schools.....	.35
High School and Universities in Germany. With New Preface.....	2.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Baron de Montesquieu.....	1.25
Lombard Street.....	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.....	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
Mind and Body.....	1.50
Logic. Deductive and Inductive. 1 vol. Cloth.....	2.00
Emotions and the Will.....	5.00
BARING-GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages.....	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.....	.75
Eating and Drinking.....	.75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper.....	.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. Cloth, extra.....	1.50
A Book of Poems.....	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist, with Memorial Verse.....	1.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals.....	1.25
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
CLIFFORD (WM. K.). Seeing and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols.....	7.00
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	1.50
Childhood of Religions.....	1.25
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.20
COONWAY (MONOURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Idols and Ideals.....	1.50
COORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter; with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.80
Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	3.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Different forms of Flowers.....	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth.....	2.00
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol. Cloth.....	1.25
Orchids.....	.75
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization.....	2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.....	1.75
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated.....	1.50
David Deronda. 2 vols.....	3.00
Felix Holt, the Radical. Illustrated.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.00
Komola. Illustrated.....	1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner. Illustrated.....	1.00
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.....	.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series. Portrait.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
Essays.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FABER'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols. The Unseen World and other Essays.....	8.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Transcendentalism in New England.....	2.50
Life of Gerrit Smith.....	2.00
Creed and Conduct.....	1.00
Cradle of the Christ.....	1.75
Stories from the Life of a Teacher.....	1.00
Visions of the Future.....	1.40
Beliefs of the Unbelievers.....	.25
Sermons. Old Series. 40 numbers, each 10c. 2 vols half calf.....	5.50
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each 10c.....	.10
Stories from the Life of a Teacher.....	1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs.....	1.00
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Safest Creed.....	1.50
Knowledge and Faith.....	1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by E. V. Rieu. 2 vols. Per vol. Elective Affinities.....	1.00
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.....	2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	2.00
Kindred and Home.....	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River. The two in one volume.....	2.00
Wendeholme: A Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire.....	2.00
Modern Frenchmen. Five Biographies.....	2.00
The Life of John Ruskin. R.A. Nine Illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts.....	2.50
Etching and Etchers.....	5.00
Harry Blount. Passages in a Boy's Life on Land and Sea.....	1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living.....	1.50
Gala Days.....	1.50
Wanderer's Wange.....	1.50
Summer Rest.....	1.50
A New Atmosphere.....	1.50
Struggling Blocks.....	1.50
Wool-Gathering.....	1.50
Sermons to the Clergy.....	1.50
Ski-mishes and Sketches.....	1.50
First Love is Best.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters.....	1.00
Verses. Enlarged Edition.....	1.25
The Story of Boon. A Poem. Paper covers.....	.35
Bits of Talk in Prose and Verse for Young People.....	1.00
Rite of Travel at Home.....	1.50
Nelly's Silver Mine. A Story of Colorado Life. Illustrated.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Adopted by.....	2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
Critiques and Addresses.....	1.50
American Addresses.....	1.25
Physiography, an Introduction to Study of Nature.....	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.....	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.....	1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.
No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance," to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50
III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
X. Science of Life. By E. J. Marey.....	1.75
XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Marey.....	1.75
XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper, M.D., LL.D.....	1.75
XIII. The Theory of Descent, and Darwinism. By Prof. Oscar Rehnisch.....	1.50
XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Vogel.....	2.00
XV. Fungi. By M. C. Cooke, M.A., LL.D.....	1.50
XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.....	1.50
XVII. Money and its History of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons.....	1.75
XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel.....	2.00
XIX. Animal Parasites and Mesmates. By Long.....	1.50
XX. On Fermentations. By S. J. Bergey.....	1.50
XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Bernstein.....	1.75
XXII. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. By E. F. B. Saenger.....	1.50
XXIII. Studies in Spectrum Analysis. By J. N. Lockyer.....	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
China.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek in Cambridge.....	8.00
KNAPPERT (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.....	1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	3.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. Problems of Life and Mind. Vols. I. and II. Per vol.....	3.00
The Physical Basis of Psychology.....	3.00
The Study of Psychology: its Object, Scope, and Method.....	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
Under the Willows and other Poems.....	1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal.....	.75
Three Memorial Poems.....	1.25
Fireside Travels.....	1.50
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each.....	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty and both on.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	2.50
Autobiography.....	2.50
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
The Ship in the Desert.....	1.50
Songs of Italy.....	1.25
MIVAT (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
Man and his Environment. Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol.....	1.00
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.....	2.00
Comparative Psychology. Essay on some Recent Social Changes.....	1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN.) Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.....	2.50
Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., etc.; completing the work. Four vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion. In Opposition to a Lecture delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873.....	2.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India.....	2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE.) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.90
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Two Christmas Celebrations.—A. D. I. and MDCCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolley Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Avis.....	1.50
Trity's Wedding Tour. Illustrated.....	1.50
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.....	1.50
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc., with 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHELLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.A., M.D., F.R.S.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. Logic. By W. S. Jevons.....	.50
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	1.25
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.2
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	.60
Cape Cod.....	.60
Walden.....	.20
A Week in the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.00
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Association at Belfast.....	.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Slings and the Stones. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Sauterlings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.....	1.50
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.....	2.00
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.30
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems.....	2.00
Child Life.....	.30

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.
Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A NOTABLE TREATISE WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A MASTERLY BOOK.A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N.Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N.Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent them in the service from doing their best work. The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workingman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY—PRICE
TWO PENCE.

THE SECULAR REVIEW.

EDITED BY CHARLES WATTS.

The SECULAR REVIEW is the leading organ of Secularism, and each week has Special Articles on Theological, Social, Scientific, and Political Subjects. Its distinctive features are the advocacy of Constructive Secularism, and the dissemination of useful information on all questions which affect the welfare of the people. Letters are inserted in its "OPEN COLUMN" from all who are courteous in the expression of their views; while a special department is allotted for "NOTES AND QUERIES."

The Contributors to the SECULAR REVIEW comprise the principal advocates of Secularism, including its founder, G. J. Holyoake.

CHARLES WATTS, Publisher,
84 Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

FOR

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,
23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?
11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.
23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Pre-existent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

for

TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 80 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

- VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTINGNEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kuenen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 283 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE GHOSTS: Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child. By Col. R. G. Ingersoll (the Boston lecturer). 232 pages. Price $1.50. Also, THE GODS, etc., same style. 253 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Bathbone Greg, author of the Enigmas of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions. $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half Calif. $6.00. Will be ready March 30.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected edition of the work, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 8,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH

AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27TH YEAR. A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS ANADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.

FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.

"THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried."

E. C. WALKER.

MR. MILLS'LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
2. Max Müller.
3. Emerson.

For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N.Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR.

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & Co. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 525.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JAN. 15, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

LIBERAL LEAGUE PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. No other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSES.

THE BEST THING that Joseph Cook ever said is this: "Men are measured by their heroes." No wonder that the world turns away disgusted from a party that points to such heroes as have been canonized by the National Liberal League.

THE BERLIN SOCIETY for the promotion of Christianity among the Jews reports that the visible results of its work do not correspond with its wishes. The total number of Hebrews in the world, it is said in an interesting statistical appendix, is about what it was in the days of David—between six million and seven million.

THE BOSTON Herald wittily says: "The prospectus of Pope Leo's new organ, the Aurora, announces, as the larger portion of its mission, its purposes to combat error, respect persons, and maintain right and justice. We want to see if it can respect Gov. Garcelon and the members of his council." And we want to see if it can respect the "martyrs" of libertinism.

THE BOSTON Herald had the following in its column of "Men and Things" a few days ago: "THE INDEX has completed its first decade, but shows no signs of decay." The Herald is the only secular journal of Boston that has a kind word to say for this "haughty infidel sheet." But then the Herald's circulation is so large that a kind word in that paper probably reaches more readers than all the other papers combined could muster.

DR. E. B. WOLCOTT, Surgeon-General of Wisconsin, and one of the most prominent and honored citizens of his State, died in Milwaukee on the 5th of January. He was a subscriber and stanch friend to THE INDEX, and a stockholder in the Index Association who never forgot or neglected the obligations to it which he had kindly assumed. The Milwaukee Sentinel published a long and well-deserved tribute to his character and career, for which we hope to find room in these columns next week.

THE CONTINUED PUBLIC approval and honor defiantly given by the free-love ring and its sympathizers to men who have been proved guilty of gross immorality constitute one of the most scandalous phenomena in the present state of the liberal cause. For instance, Dr. E. B. Foote's Health Monthly for January still glorifies one of these men as a "martyr," as follows: "Liberty never quite keeps pace with progress. Every age has its martyrs. We have one to-day. A volume of 565 pages comes to us from the pen of one who is serving a term in the Albany penitentiary. It is by Mr. D. M. Bennett, one of Comstock's victims," etc. The ground of sympathy here is no mystery. Dr. Foote himself was fined $3,000 a few years since for violating the same postal law under which his "martyr" was convicted; and he continues to clamor for "repeal" of that law in this very issue of his Monthly. Joseph Cook's lashing of the libertinism which upholds such men as Dr. Foote's hero is richly deserved.

IT MAY BE very illogical, but mankind generally infer that moral conduct is a correct indicator of the practical tendency of professed moral and religious principles. An item illustrating this point is going the rounds of the press, as follows: "The movement among the Hindus of India toward Christianity, begun last year, is still going on. Mr. Marshall, of the American Free Baptist Mission, in Bengal, states that hundreds of families among the Orlyas are renouncing Kishnu, and asking to be taught about the Christ who put it into the hearts of the English and Americans to deal so kindly with the famine-stricken. An anonymous circular, of native origin, is being widely circulated in Madura, calling attention to the character of the gospel of Christ as shown in the lives of Christians, and especially in their spontaneous gifts to suffering India, and exhorting the people to accept the religion which has so singularly proved its divine origin. There were sixty thousand converts last year, and it is expected that there will be many thousands this year." It is idle to quarrel with such inferences; everybody makes them, and liberals cannot escape them.

SIR GEORGE BOWYER, an English Roman Catholic who represents an Irish constituency in Parliament, refuses any longer to support the policy of the home-rule party, because that policy has been changed. He concludes a public letter in these words, which evince a spirit just as noble in a Catholic as it would be in a liberal: "I have now, as an old Irish member, performed a painful and unpopular duty. I will not obey civium ardor prava jubentium any more than I would vultus instantis tyranni. I may be doomed to exclusion from Parliament. If so, I will retire from public life altogether and into perpetual obscurity; but I will not connive, even by silence, at a policy leading to treason, and doctrines opposed to morals and religion, and subversive of government and civil society." The Advertiser justly says in comment on these words of Sir George Bowyer: "This short passage from his letter contains much more than a warning to the Irish people. It is the utterance of a patriot, who will retire to private life rather than do what his conscience tells him is unwise and hazardous." A plentiful diffusion of the same spirit is precisely what the liberal cause in America most needs to-day.

THE REPORT of the Postmaster-General, sent to Congress on January 12, contains statements which are very pertinent, in connection with Joseph Cook's well-deserved excommunication of the National Liberal League, and shows that, whether ignorantly or willfully, the "repealers" are doing the work of enemies of the human race: "He refers to the case of Edgar W. Jones, alias Union Publishing Company, alias the Magnetic Watch Company, of Ashland, Mass., and having several other aliases under which he sent through the mails, in 1876, eighty thousand circulars and advertisements of obscene books, and a 'genuine Swiss magnetic time-keeper,' which was, in fact, a brass compass of no value. For months, complaints of parents, teachers, etc., from all parts of the country, in regard to the vile documents sent by Jones to their children, were piling up on the hands of the Postmaster-General, until Jones was indicted, and his business broken up." The National Liberal League, by its wicked warfare on postal laws which are indispensable to the public protection, has richly earned the execrations of the community, and, if it is not repudiated with energy and unanimity by all decent liberals, will sink the liberal movement itself into the abyss of perdition.

THIS EXPLICIT recognition of the necessity of a total separation between liberalism and libertinism is from the Portland (Oregon) Medical Journal for December, 1879: "Of our Eastern exchanges, we observe that THE INDEX and the Religio-Philosophical Journal are publishing very damaging disclosures with regard to the private moral character of D. M. Bennett, publisher of the Truth Seeker, now incarcerated in prison for circulating an obscene publication known as Cupid's Yokes. As Bennett has a large following and many friends in the ranks of the liberals, who seem to believe that he is the persecuted martyr he claims to be, the attitude of these two able journals will no doubt, if Bennett is really guilty, as he seems to be, receive the support and commendation of the better class of liberals, while those who still have faith in him, and are not over-scrupulous in morals, will be measurably offended. Thus the Bennett case bids fair to become a dividing wedge in the ranks of the liberals. This is as it should be. Those who are inherently nasty will sympathize with and cling to him more closely, while every lover of truth and decency will have cause to rejoice in the operation of the great law of social affinity, which finds its fullest expression in the not less true than trite aphorism, 'Birds of a feather flock together.'"

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Indianapolis, Ind.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FEISENTHAL.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York, N. Y.
 W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Editor "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....Chicago, Ill.
 COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill.
 DR. T. L. BROWN.....Binghamton, N. Y.
 HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa.
 ELDER F. W. EVANS.....Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
 MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City.
 MRS. AMY POST.....Rochester, N. Y.
 MRS. ELIZABETH STANTON.....Penack, N. J.
 MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....Albany, N. Y.
 JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N. Y.
 RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N. Y.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MRS. JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....W. H. HAMLEN.
 F. E. ABBOT.....C. D. B. MILLS.
 D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLBY, Selma.
 Arkansas.....JOHN ABRENS, Monticello.
 California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
 Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
 Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
 Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOELT, Greenville.
 Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
 Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
 Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
 Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
 Iowa.....J. G. MICHELER, Adel.
 Kansas.....JOHN BARNES, Scott.
 Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
 Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
 Maine.....DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
 Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
 Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
 Michigan.....KARL SCHMANN, Detroit.
 Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
 Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
 Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
 Nevada.....V. G. BAERTZ, White Rock.
 New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
 New Jersey.....D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Passaic.
 New York.....C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Passaic.
 North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
 Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
 Oregon.....SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
 Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
 South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
 Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
 Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
 Vermont.....R. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
 Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
 West Virginia.....DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
 Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
 Dakota.....P. W. WILCOX, Yankton.
 District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
 Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
 Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.

D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

Chartered by the National Liberal League of America.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Florence Liberal League.
 SYRACUSE, N. Y.—[Officers not reported.]
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Onondaga County Liberal League.
 ALBANY, N. Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.
 BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
 PASSAIC CITY, N. J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Passaic City Liberal League.
 JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jacksonville Liberal League.
 ROCHESTER, N. Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Cale.
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jefferson Liberal League of Rochester.
 CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon.
 Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.

N.B.—The above is an acknowledgment of the fact that a charter is due and will be sent as soon as possible. Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues originally chartered by the "National Liberal League" will receive charters from the "National Liberal League of America" without extra charge, if they send a certified copy of their vote to accept the following invitation:—

"Voted, That all Local Leagues that approve the formation of the National Liberal League of America are invited to dissolve their connection with the old League, and to join this League."

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y. MOSES HAYS, Rochester, N. Y.
 FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. URBINO, West Newton, Mass.
 Z. T. WATERBURY, Syracuse, N. Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N. Y.
 NETTIE C. TRUEBDELL, Syra-FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, Mass.
 GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MOSES W. DODGE, Albany, N. Y.
 HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y. J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N. J.
 W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
 T. C. GAGE, Fayetteville, N. Y. D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
 B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, CHARLES ELLIS, Boston, Mass.
 CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y. JOHN W. TRUEBDELL, Syracuse, N. Y.
 EREN TURK, Chelsea, Mass. H. P. STICK, Rochester, N. Y.
 JOHN NILL, Watertown, N. Y. JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N. Y.
 E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass. M. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N. Y.
 THOS. DUGAN, Albany, N. Y. JOHN PREST, Albany, N. Y.
 JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N. Y. C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. F. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
 Mass. D. B. MOREY, Malden, Mass.

Is American Infidelity Liberalism or Libertinism?

PRELUDE TO A LECTURE GIVEN IN THE OLD SOUTH MEETING HOUSE, BOSTON, DEC. 22, 1879.

BY JOSEPH COOK.

A cool recital of facts authenticated by official documents is all that is needed now to run a red, zigzag thunder-bolt through American infidelity.

1. On May 31, 1878, a committee of Congress, in reply to a "petition of R. G. Ingersoll and others," for the repeal of certain of the national postal laws, used this language: "In the opinion of your committee, the post-office was not established to carry instruments of vice, or obscene writings, indecent pictures, or lewd books."

2. The indisputable historical authority of this document, preserving as a fly in amber the name of the foremost infidel lecturer in the United States, shows that he and others asked for "free mails," and what was meant by this request in the opinion of a congressional committee, and why that request was not granted by Congress.

3. The same fathomlessly infamous demand which this congressional document holds up to public execration was made by a majority of the infidel liberal leagues at a meeting in Syracuse in October, 1878.

4. A minority of the leagues seceded from that convention because of the infamy of this demand, and have since denounced with vigor the majority as representatives of libertinism rather than of liberalism.

5. Notwithstanding this secession and denunciation, the majority of the infidel liberal leagues, in a convention at Cincinnati in September, 1879, renewed their demand of 1878, concerning the repeal of certain national postal laws.

6. A convicted cancer planter now in Albany Penitentiary for the violation of these laws was made the hero of this convention and the object of a resolution of defence and sympathy, offered by R. G. Ingersoll, and declaring that he had committed "no offence whatever against any law of this country."

7. On account of the refusal of the President of the United States to pardon out of the penitentiary this convicted poisoner of youth, R. G. Ingersoll has left the Republican party [applause], and the Cincinnati Convention of infidel liberal leagues has resolved to cast its political influence only in favor of candidates of its own principles as to the secularization of the Government.

8. The secretary of the Cincinnati Infidel Convention and of the National Infidel party has been shown, by legal documents quoted in a Boston infidel paper (see THE INDEX for Oct. 30, 1879), to be a convicted bigamist. The felon in the Albany Penitentiary has been proved by the same paper and by the Religio-Philosophical Journal of Chicago to be guilty of enormous social crimes, and the cancer planter has himself confessed the authorship of infamous letters which have been published to establish his guilt.

9. In spite of these scathing exposures of the character of its chief hero and of its secretary, the party represented by the majority of infidel leagues continues to uphold both these men, and to emphasize its demand for the repeal of established and measurelessly important postal laws of the nation.

10. The minority is the unimpeachable witness against the majority of American infidels.

11. The organization of the minority, however, has in it many officers who are also officers in the organization of the majority.

12. The minority is very feeble in numbers. It is important to notice that it is made up of only eight auxiliary leagues, while the majority has one hundred and seventeen.

13. It is evident, therefore, that American infidelity, as a mass, means not so much liberalism as libertinism.

On this table I have a coil of knotted adders, that is, of infidel newspapers defending the poisoners of youth. Without naming any of these sheets, I propose to show you a few of the fangs of the vipers. Here I pull out of the tangled mass an adder born in Boston [sensation], and its writhing form is swollen by containing the resolutions of the Cincinnati Infidel Convention, which I have been challenged to read aloud to this audience. Even when I look into a viper's fangs I shall not, I hope, be guilty of evasion. These resolutions are evasive, and so thoroughly so, that, face to face with the notorious public facts which I have just recited, I need only read them to show you how shrewd but fruitless the attempt of Ingersoll was, in preparing the resolutions, to cover up the stiletto with which it is purposed to stab the youth of the nation.

The Queen of Spain was once approached by a messenger, who offered her a letter in a perfumed handkerchief. The silken scarf was loosely folded about the missive, and the wretch held behind it a stiletto. As he took the letter out and presented it to the Queen, he drew also his dagger. Infidelity seeks, under universal suffrage in the United States, to use the sacredness of the mails as a stiletto sheath through which to stab the youth of the land. The purpose seems too fiendish to be real, but its existence is unfortunately proved by the result of scores of suits brought against infidel publishers for the abuse of the mails. "Free mails" is the latest infidel watchword. The officers charged with the execution of our present postal laws have astounding evidence before them that the infidel attack on the purity of the mails does not hesitate to employ the most subtle forms of deception. I solemnly believe, as these officers unqualifiedly assert, that it is the purpose of those who clamor for the abolition of our present laws against the transmission of infamous matter through the mails to cheat the general public, if they can, by pretending to be against the distribution of infamous publications. What the Cincinnati Infidel Convention did was to fold a silken handkerchief around the stiletto. I will show you the stiletto first, and afterward the handkerchief. Here is the murderous blade:—

"Resolved, That we are in favor of such postal laws as will allow the free transportation, through the mails of the United States, of all books, pamphlets, and papers, irrespective of the religious, irreligious, political, and scientific views they may contain, so that the literature of science may be upon an equality with that of superstition."

Notice that this resolution asks for something practical. It demands the repeal of certain laws now on the statute books. What those laws are, we are to learn by the past official record of this enterprise for the repeal of the laws which infidels, and only infidels, find pinching their souls. It is, by the way, a large, suggestive fact that only infidels in this country complain of the laws against the corrupt use of the mails. Speaking roundly, nobody is troubled by the postal regulations of 1873 except infidels. Their organizations, and theirs only, are convulsed with the question whether poisoners of youth shall have aid from the postal service paid for by the whole people. I beg you to make a distinction between the minority and the majority of infidel liberal leagues, and also between the majority and the Free Religionists. Many of the latter act with the minority, and many with the majority. But the demand of the majority has been one identical thing from first to last. They want to get rid of "sections 1785, 3878, 3893, 5389, and 2491 of the Revised Statutes" (see the petition in question, quoted in full in the prelude to the one hundred and twenty-first Boston Monday Lecture). This is what they asked for in Congress in 1878. Precisely this is what the Committee, of which Mr. Bickford was the chairman, told Congress that they could not be allowed to have, without opening the public mails to the transmission of infamous publications.

Probably R. G. Ingersoll knew what he wanted when he asked for the repeal of particular sections of the Revised Statutes. His petition specified the sections by their numbers. He is a lawyer. You may take either horn of the dilemma, for you must hold either that he went before Congress with a serious petition, and did not know what he was asking for, and was, therefore, shallow, hap-hazard, and untrustworthy in places calling for the greatest discretion; or else that he really meant what he said. In law and equity, he is to be held responsible for what he asked for; namely, the repeal of the laws which prevent the transmission of infamous matter through the mails.

What the congressional petition of infidels asked for in May, the Syracuse Convention of liberal leagues asked for by its majority in October, 1878. Go behind the scenes. Look at the notorious although obscure record of this execrable infidel enterprise. The Cincinnati resolutions of the infidel majority mean what the Syracuse resolutions of the same majority meant. The latter meant what the congressional infidel petition meant. What that meant Congress has officially told you. In every case you come back to these numerals specifying the sections of the postal laws which infidels wish to repeal, and to the opinion of Congress that these bars cannot be taken down without letting out upon us the beasts of paganism.

The first resolution of the Cincinnati Infidel Convention is the stiletto. The second is the handkerchief wound around it.

"Resolved, That we are utterly opposed to the dissemination through the mails, or by any other means, of obscene literature, whether 'inspired' or uninspired, and hold in measureless contempt its authors and disseminators."

Notice that this resolution is an expression of opinion merely. It does not call for anything practical. The first resolution does. It asks for the free transportation of "irreligious" matter through the mails. That is one of the broadest demands that could be ventured, and requires something definite in legislation. Your first resolution, infidels of Cincinnati, has teeth in it. Your second is suspiciously toothless. You say that you are against the dissemination; but are you in favor of any laws to prevent the dissemination of poisonous literature through the mails? If you are, you do not say so. You fail to say so precisely where you would be naturally expected to say so. This set of resolutions was very adroitly drawn. It is the deliberate official utterance of the Cincinnati Infidel Convention; and I claim that the second resolution has an enormous and most significant omission in it. It does not call for any laws whatever against the dissemination of infamous matter through the mails, while the first resolution does call for the repeal of such laws. The mask put on the first resolution by the second does not deceive for an instant the officers charged with the execution of the postal laws. It does not deceive the minority of infidels themselves. The second resolution, read with the microscope, read with due emphasis on its very deceptive phraseology, read with the eye on what is between the lines in it, read with attention to the record of the majority in their congressional petition, is simply the handkerchief wound around the stiletto.

Two grave judicial decisions have been given concerning that document which the infidel hero in the Albany Penitentiary has been imprisoned for circulating. Both have declared the document indictable, and its circulation actionable at law. R. G. Ingersoll rises in the Cincinnati Convention, and with immense applause offers the following:—

"Resolved, That we express the deepest sympathy with D. M. Bennett and his family for the reason that he has been convicted by religious bigotry and ignorant zeal, and has been imprisoned and is now languishing in the cell of a felon, when in truth and fact he has committed no offence whatever against any law of this country."

This resolution decisively interprets the second. It shows how much Ingersoll means by saying he is opposed to the dissemination of infamous literature. In his opinion, it is "no offence" to disseminate such literature as Bennett has been imprisoned for sending through the mails. The whole convention of infidels adopted enthusiastically this resolution of Ingersoll's, and we thus learn how little the second resolution is worth. Eliza Wright of Boston, president of the organization which represents the majority of infidel leagues, has repeatedly maintained in public prints the monstrous proposition that Congress has no right to legislate against any document sent through the mails, no matter what its character. He, too, is a whitewasher of Bennett.

It was my fortune to be present in the post-office building of New York City when this cancer planter, the now convicted hero of infidels, was before the court there, and the sickening evidence was being read against him. I was beginning a trans-continental trip. If I needed anything to lift me to a white heat of indignation as to the infidel attack on the purity of the mails, it was to see, as I did then and there, O. B. Frothingham and Andrew Jackson Davis sitting cheek by jowl with D. M. Bennett. [Applause and a hiss.] Who hisses? Is there a friend here of the Albany felon? If so, let him contradict me, if he can, as to a single matter of fact. Speak out. The Old South has had interruptions before to-day. [Applause.] We have had stormy meetings here, and we will have them again, if American law is not honored. [Applause.] "The persistent whitewashers of D. M. Bennett," says an infidel paper published in Boston, "will have a costly settlement to make with the outraged public." Parson is one of the whitewashers. "The very life of liberalism," continues the editor of this journal, "is at stake. If the great liberal body, organized and unorganized, is already too far corrupted by the poison of free-love to care for these revelations, if it feels no burning, immediate necessity of speech and action in defence of its own purity and good name, if it lazily or stupidly consents any longer to be represented by the Bennetts and the Rawsons who have thrust themselves forward before the world as our 'saints' and 'martyrs' and 'victims of religious bigotry,' then its damnation is coming swiftly, and I care not how soon it comes. The breach between the genuine and the spurious is made. Let it grow wide as the Amazon and as deep as the bottomless abyss!"—INDEX, Oct. 30, 1879.

Men are measured by their heroes. The minority which speaks thus scathingly of the majority is but a feeble fraction of American infidelity. A little while ago this editor was sowing the seeds for the harvest which now terrifies him. I think he is an honest erratic [applause], with little foresight or breadth of view. He is a pure man. I am not denying that Ingersoll in his family relations is a pure man; but here is the public action of this lecturer, here is the official record proving that the chief whitewasher of Bennett is the man who is called the Pope of Infidelity in the Mississippi Valley. Prof. Curtiss of Chicago Theological Seminary, with his superb stores of learning, has lately subjected himself, by answering Ingersoll, to the charge of using howitzers to shoot sparrows. He has shown most conclusively what no man of even moderate intelligence has ever doubted, that this man is a blunderer of the most irredeemable kind, not advanced beyond poor outgrown Paine in his knowledge of the methods by which Christianity can be attacked. (See "Ingersoll and Moses," by Prof. Curtiss.) But Ingersoll is more than a blunderer. He is an apologist for the poisoners of youth. He is the public champion of this Albany felon. He is a whitewasher of convicted cancer planters. He is a petitioner to Congress for the abolition of laws which Congress says cannot be repealed without allowing the mails to mix themselves with infamy. It is the duty of the public to look beneath the surface, and not be misled by the silken handkerchief wound about the infidel stiletto.

As the Spartans exhibited to their children drunken helots to disgust them with intemperance, so I am willing to read the whole of this infamous series of resolutions as a keen and sure public provocative of disgust for infidelity.

"Resolved, That we call upon the Christian world to expunge from the so-called 'sacred' Bible every passage that cannot be read without covering the cheek of modesty with the blush of shame; and, until such passages are expunged, we demand that the laws against the dissemination of obscene literature be impartially enforced."

That sounds like lunacy. That is pitiful and wicked pettifoggery, and nothing else. [Applause and laughter.] It needs only a slight amount of spiritual insight or of literary penetration to understand the Bible, as the writer of that resolution does not, even in the passages to which reference is made. Ingersoll has told the public that he has read the Bible through since the first of January. This resolution shows for what he has read it. [Laughter.] A farmer was met near Dayton, Ohio, by a young man who asked him how far it was to Dayton. "Twenty-five thousand miles," said the farmer, "that is, the circumference of the earth, if you keep straight on. A quarter of a mile, if you turn square around." A knowledge of the Bible is twenty-five thousand miles from Ingersoll's present position, if he keeps right on: it is a quarter of a mile away, if he turns around. [Applause.]

"As to the propriety of taking political action, your Committee further report that we deem it expedient for the Liberals of this country to act as a political organization for the accomplishment of the following objects, and that the following resolutions be adopted by the League:—

"Resolved, That we mutually pledge each other that we will, in our several localities, use our influence and cast our votes for such candidates for office who publicly declare their belief in the actual secularization of the government, and we recommend that the State and auxiliary leagues act together upon all political questions.

"Resolved, That we claim it the duty of every true Liberal to extend to all others every right that he claims for himself; that he cannot politically discriminate against any person on account of religious belief, provided only that such person is in favor of perfect civil and intellectual liberty.

"Resolved, That the President of the League be authorized and requested to call a Liberal National Convention, to meet at such time and place as he may deem expedient, in the year 1880, to determine the propriety of nominating candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States, and to take such other political action as may be deemed expedient."

The head of the infidel free-love viper is under the heel of what? Of the feeble minority of cultured infidels in the United States. Do you think there is weight enough in the heel to crush the head of the viper? What is the evidence in the case? The editor who sowed the dragon's teeth has endeavored to draw under his wing the Liberal Leagues which have sprung from his instructions. Here is his paper, and I find in it a list of eight such leagues. When I turn to the columns of a paper representing the majority which he so justly pronounces infamous, I find a whole column in fine print taken up with the names of one hundred and seventeen leagues. The Mississippi Valley is well represented here. Prof. Curtiss knows the West, and had the best of reasons for publishing his recent volume. The people whom these leagues address rarely or never go to church anywhere. They take pains not to hear both sides. They are half-educated and mis-educated. They can be misled by discussion as utterly shallow and worthless as most of that which is published by the papers I have before me. They can be amused by papers as corrupt as this one, which is not fit to be handled with the tongs, and whose editor is in jail.

For one, I more than doubt whether there is force enough in the thin heel of the minority of American infidels to crush the head of the free-love viper which coils around the majority. What is needed is the vehement uprising of the indignant Christian sentiment of the whole land. A petition was circulated in New England, and received the signatures of hundreds of our soundest and most revered public men, against the pardon of this felon in the Albany Penitentiary. There is in New York City, there is in Boston, a Society for the Prevention of Vice. Supported by the righteous laws which infidels attack, but otherwise single-handed and alone, the secretary of the New York society, who is also an agent of the Federal Government, is fighting the ghouls and ogres of the slums of our great towns all the way across the continent to San Francisco. He has strong friends, and links them to himself by hooks of steel, otherwise before now he would have been crushed by slander. He goes to his duties every day in peril of his life. There is on his cheek a heavy scar, incurred in the defence of our sons and daughters, of your schools and homes, from the poisoners of youth. One hundred and seventeen American infidel leagues demand the repeal of the postal laws which this experienced agent and Congress find necessary for the protection of the purity of the mails. Let the people at large understand these facts; and the laws and the agents who execute them will have overwhelming moral and financial support. Moncure Conway writes from England that marriage is fit only for common people. We need the linked thunder-bolts of Almighty God to purge our legislation not only of the careless laws which now are taken advantage of in spite of the improvements we made in 1873, but to purge civilization itself in this country of the men and women who can applaud to the echo, as the Infidel Cincinnati Convention did, an unsexed female who said, "We must get rid of these vile, miserable, loathsome dens called homes in our land." Another applauded speaker wanted the words "In God we trust" taken off the American dollar. Those words are written on the hearts of the American people; and you will repeal the Alleghanies, you will repeal the Rocky Mountains, you will repeal Niagara and El Capitan off the face of the continent, sooner than you can save the head of the infidel free-love viper, when once America sees its fangs glittering in the boxes of the post-offices, from being crushed under the heel of national legislation. [Applause.]—Golden Rule, Dec. 31.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

EXAMINER NOTES.

BY REV. EDWARD C. TOWNSE.

UNDERBANK PARSONAGE, STANNINGTON, {
Near SHEFFIELD, Eng., Dec. 17, 1879. }

MY DEAR ABBOT:—

Just at the time you were reviewing in THE INDEX one of the judicial decisions or charges connected with the battle as to what is criminal license and what is decent liberty, I began a letter to you, designed to be carried out into a series. I was stopped by change of circumstances, and have until now been unable to renew my purpose. I write now from a nook, or rather an outlook, on the side, and almost the top, of one of the hills of Yorkshire, the country of Charlotte Brontë and Robert Collyer, but nearer to that south-eastern point of Yorkshire which touches the spot, in Nottinghamshire, where the Pilgrim Fathers originated. I will not now attempt a fresh letter, but send what I wrote more than a year ago. It runs as follows:—

Oct. 4, 1878.—Three numbers of THE INDEX issued since the return of the editor to his work have reached me in Manchester, England, and they seem to me to especially indicate the journalistic sagacity and strength with which the special work of the paper is done. That I should like to see the work widened, and its front changed, does not hinder my watching with admiration what is done, especially in the current battle of moral reform. I can well believe that the editor has convinced the judge against his own decision, for the leading article reviewing the decision seemed to me of a force and clearness and moral tone rarely equalled in the reasoned statements of either bench or bar. The battle of THE INDEX against radical libertinism cannot but be of immense service to liberty of thought and speech throughout the civilized world; and, however the existing leagues may act, THE INDEX side of the question ought to keep the field, and more than ever press on the work of organization. The defeat of the Libertines by the Liberals will do more than anything else could to clothe the League with that certainty of character and distinctness of aim which the public wish to see before they can lend general and hearty support. If the League, however, is swamped by the libertines, the occasion will be a grand one for organizing a National Reform League on the distinct basis, not of Libertinism, but of genuine Liberalism, the purpose of which can never stop with mere freedom, but always means welfare as well as freedom. If occasion should favor, I can give many English and European illustrations of the necessity for putting the reform aim first, and making freedom the means to that supreme aim. I trust THE INDEX may be able to give, either by the present League or by a reformed one, an enduring character to the distinction it has made conspicuous; and that Libertinism, without or with the present League, may be definitively scotched. To do that would alone give the existence of THE INDEX the character of a mission to civilization, for it would initiate a work which is pressing to be done in all the lands where freedom is known. And, by such breadth of view, journalism is especially vindicated, and especially liberal journalism, which ought above all things to fill the office of a prophet to secular human progress. Nothing is more disappointing in Unitarianism than the narrowness of its actual work, especially in that part of its work where there might well exist complete human breadth,—its journalistic survey of facts and study of faiths.

Journalism is the most difficult of the great professions, and the least successful journalists are the religious. It is an unhappy fact, but it is true, both for America and for England, that no journals do so little, compared with what they might do, as the Unitarian. In England they are starved, and barely live as the organs of a small sect. New England Boston ought before now to have made a Unitarian journal of the highest character and the widest influence; an organ of the good learning, the fresh thought, and the improved principles of life, which are the fruits of modern devotion to knowledge and to progress. It has conspicuously failed to do this. I have known the Christian Register since 1860, in the last days of a then venerable editor, under whom I wrote a great deal for it. It has done well in good intentions and general spirit, and in some of the minor departments. But in the three foremost and supremely important matters, of scholarly instruction, of well reasoned religious thought, and of the application of knowledge and thought to practical questions, it has made, editorially and in itself, apart from accidental pieces of work that now and then light a candle under the sectarian bushel, no attempt to stand at the front, or to stand to much purpose of leadership anywhere. It gleams very well, and represents as well as can be desired a Unitarianism which has had a tendency to be a sort of Religious Fragment Society, living at first by gathering up the fragments that remained of an exploded pseudo-Christianity, and now going on to live upon gleanings after the great reapers of modern progress. If this were enough, it is well done, and no fault could be found. But it is not enough. The opportunity has been and is the greatest ever seen in history; for one of two things is to be done,—either religion is to be reconstructed with the rejection of Christianity, or Christianity is to be reconstructed with the rejection of pseudo-Christianity. The world at large takes the first of these alternatives, and puts Christianity into the public hearse, and sends all its empty coaches to the dumb hypocrisy of funeral disposal of an object which is felt to have outlived its usefulness, and to have come at last to happy release after a painfully prolonged dotage.

France, Germany, and England are at one in this, with the characteristic differences that the French funeral is a festival, buried in flowers; the German is a political procession and scientific carnival, ending in lectures, beer, and smoke; and the English is alone as perfect an hypocrisy as can be achieved by undertakers, the monstrous gloom of whose turn-outs still counterfeits the "Death and Hell" solemnity of the darkest ages of superstition. The effect of an Established Church, with a Queen (or King), an aristocracy, and some great and rich prizes for select clergy, in bishoprics which admit to the House of Lords, and in wealthy benefices, has been to mould the peculiar English mood of mind into such a habit of hypocrisy as no conjunction of human circumstances has ever elsewhere produced; and not merely vulgar hypocrisy, though that is fearfully developed and is distressingly vulgar, but eminently respectable and brilliantly intellectual hypocrisy, the tribute paid by the most eminent men to established, endowed, and socially respectable superstition. To a very great extent, English Christianity is a form without reality, a survival of respect like that which belongs to a funeral. And this is the average modern attitude towards Christianity. The world looks on respectfully to see it decently disposed of. It reproaches harshly anything like disrespect to the remains: the venerable and respectable deceased must have as quiet and decent a burial as if it were everybody's grandmother going to her long home; and, when the last attention has been paid, even forgetfulness must be respectful, at least to the extent of a tombstone. Christianity passes thus with the world as having had its place, but having it no longer now. This is one aspect of the age in which we live, and by far the more characteristic aspect.

The contrast to this appears for the most part in the pains which a declining minority take to delay this disposal which the world is making of what is on all hands called Christianity. To some the state of Christianity so-called is not death, but ripe and precious maturity; or at least it is like the state of a corpse which in life "never looked so lovely" as it looks in death; or, if defence cannot quite say this, it at any rate makes out that Christianity, even if it be dead to our honest thought, our sure knowledge, and our active interest, is yet the most respectable and sacred of mummies, a thing of the spices and the linen and the embalming tenderness of our fathers, and even as a dead form highly useful for the odor of sanctity which it diffuses, and the suggestions which, after the manner of an idol indeed, but yet in reality, an idol being the most natural thing in the world, its mere dead presence awakens. There is little left in the world of the faith which made what is commonly understood as Christianity really alive. Average popular Christianity is mostly a delayed funeral; Mr. Moody is little more than a stout coffin, in which one may see the best show that can now be made of the features of the deceased; and the great Mr. Cook is a stylish trotting hearse going at a lively pace to the house of mourning, where Mr. Murray has closed the eyes of the departed, or would have closed them, if he had not been detained elsewhere.

To the life of a religion, a century should be as a year; and the popular Christianity not only dies young, but it has had only a feeble hold upon life for from two to three centuries. A man bred in a nook of secure piety has only to step out into the great field of history to see that this Christianity of common opinion has been dying ever since our modern history began to displace the middle ages, and that it has died soonest and fastest in the best and most honest minds of English lineage, from Wycliffe and Chaucer and Shakspeare, to the present time. What may be called the free English mind has never been Christian in the sense of the common belief, but has been human and English simply; and it is now, over all the world, treating common Christianity as dead. The main difference between opposing parties for and against Christianity, as all understand it, is not so much whether it is dead, but how long it shall be kept, and whether it shall not have a perpetual funeral, or at least a holy sepulchre in everybody's garden. Go where you will, you never find this Christianity about; and you will find that, however well people have laid it out, they carefully close its eyes and hide as much as they can what was once its terrible power.

II.

If the facts relating to the undoubted death of the popular Christianity were the whole case, one, and only one, result must come. The funeral must take place at last, and Christianity become a mere memory. But there is an alternative which is in contrast with both of these funeral feasts. Is it the real Christianity which lies dead at the feet of the young men who represent the honest life of the modern world? THE INDEX has said that it is, and it says to Protestant Christianity, the survivor of Romanist Christianity: "The feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out." And if the Ananias were indeed Christianity, the Sapphira can but share his fate. If the Holy Mother in celibate attire which at Rome offers the Bambino, or dressed image of Jesus, to the thronging women who think there is miracle in its garments, is Christianity of one sort, mainly Christian by its offer of Jesus, then is Dr. Furness' dressed image of Jesus, and all that lies between the two extremes, Christianity, of one or another sort, by the same offer of Jesus; and the judgment which sweeps away the one cannot consistently spare the other.

It is commonly said that this offer of Jesus is the essence of Christianity, on the no doubt indisputable ground that the so-called apostles and evangelists made this the essence of their Christianity. That is supposed to settle the question. But does it? If I have studied the subject to any purpose, Christ and his disciples were contrary to each other in fundamental opinion: he aiming, as freely and purely as any teacher has ever aimed, at a religion of natural love and trust, and not as a religion either, but at these as offices of universal humanity; and they aiming at supernaturalism in and through him, and within the narrow lines of a strictly special religion.

I will not argue it here, because my present purpose is only to point out that, if Unitarianism is to be more than the little end of a Christianity which the world is already treating as dead, it must constitute itself the prophet of a separation between the truth of Christ and the errors of the Apostles; between Christianity, as Christ's natural religion of love and trust, and the Christism of the Apostles and of history since, which is contrary to reason and humanity. To have done this for even fifteen years past would have raised a Unitarian journal to a position which would have made it the organ, not of a denomination, but of the thinking and studious and free in all sects and in the world at large.

But nothing of the sort has been attempted. Unitarianism looks out of its windows at the Orthodox funeral, and lectures its children on the truths and errors of the deceased, about as ready as the Orthodox themselves to assume that the Apostolic Christism is all that we had, and that we must make the best we can of the remains of the undeniably dead Apostles, and of Evangelists that were, it now appears, dressed up clay figures from the start.

Dr. Furness has given forty years to dressing a Unitarian Bambino, which he calls "Jesus the Only"; and, when he poses as a Holy Mother with the paper clothes and the life-size image in his arms, a quite Catholic effect is produced, and scholars like Dr. Hedge listen gravely while Dr. Furness declares, as I myself heard him, that on the paper used by him the ink of the Apostles is still "wet," with which they wrote what he asks us to take from his scissors as a miraculous dress for "Jesus the Only." Rationalist to agnostic scepticism as Dr. Hedge is, he yet undertakes to play Joseph to Dr. Furness as Holy Mother; and he has lately whacked the head of the editor of the Register in great wrath, because he allowed a contributor to question the perfect honesty of Catholic holy dramatics on a Unitarian stage, and especially of a Unitarian Bambino stuffed with the holy bran of pious fiction. I was the offending contributor; and Dr. Hedge tried to break my head by a most foul blow, grossly misrepresenting my criticism, both as to its point and as to its spirit, and violently protesting against my admission to the columns of the Register.

Dr. Hedge is the last man to make this protest, for he is my godfather in this sort of thing. When I wrote for the Register a very sharp criticism on Dr. Huntington, Dr. Hedge sent me a letter of commendation. He put into the Christian Examiner a paper of mine on a book by Dr. J. P. Thompson, which caused the Independent to protest precisely as Dr. Hedge does now. And my paper on "Pseudo-Christianity," which gave very great offence in one of the latest numbers of the Christian Examiner, was first accepted by Dr. Hedge, though published by Dr. Belows, when he had succeeded to Dr. Hedge. Dr. Hedge has but one qualification for playing Joseph to Dr. Furness' "Jesus the Only": he can honestly say that no learning of his has begotten it. He very well knows, too, that his angry demand on the Register to shut me out has no honest ground under it. Mr. Mumford would have dropped his note into the waste-basket, instead of crucifying it in a leading article. I was, before I came to England, one of Mr. Mumford's paid contributors, invited to furnish both articles and editorials, which I did; and the most directly personal criticism I ever wrote (in reply, so far as it was personal, to an attack), Mr. Mumford published, with the expression that the Lord had delivered the subject of it into my hands. The present editor allowed Dr. Hedge to be scandalously personal, and to grossly misrepresent, and then apologized for the boorishness of my plain dealing with pious fiction, and slammed his door in my face. I was not allowed a word of reply, and am not likely to be permitted to contribute again.

If it were only personal to me, it would matter little. But the lines of the Register are laid in a mere corner of the modern world, where any large outbreak of a thoroughly rational Christianity would startle from its unfamiliarity. It does not even aim at a defence of Christianity, based upon the only lines which, in respect of learning and philosophy, can be defended with any more than make-believe success. It gets good odds and ends of the common learning into its columns, and keeps well alive the familiar thoughts which everybody understands; but for new scholarship and fresh thought, adequate to save spiritual Christianity from going down into the grave of Apostolic Christianity, it has no head and no hand. Its lesser work is well done: its great work is left undone. But the blame lies far less with any editor than with the body which he represents. It is enough to merely remark how much of Mr. Mumford's credit rested on his "Brevities," and how distinctly the present editor represents neither the scholarship nor the religious philosophy of the body, nor even a secular and literary power of learning and thought, but rather an excellence and abundance of feeling and homely sense and quick wit, which are as capital for popular work of the pulpit and the platform as they are, alone, inadequate to the far greater tasks of a journalism which must either rescue religion amid the overthrow of Christianity, or rescue Christianity out of the ruin of the Pseudo-Christianity which all the sects without exception are corrupted by. The strength of my own interest lies in the fact that I believe that not only an ideal Christianity, such as at one time contented me, but the historical Christianity of Christ himself can be saved, provided we can thoroughly reopen the gulf of distinction which separated Christ from his apostles, and which separated all apostolic Christianity—Popish, Orthodox, Prot-stant, or Unitarian—from the perfectly pure Humanitarian Theism which I find to have been the Christianity of Christ himself. But for further illustration I must wait till another time, when I wish to speak of Dr. Martineau's position.

ECCELESIASTICAL INTIMIDATION.

A Massachusetts jury, at Holyoke, has given a verdict of $3,433 against Father Dufresne, who had been sued by one of his parishioners, who keeps a livery stable, for damages done to his business by the Rev. Father. The facts are these:—

The Rev. Mr. Chiniquy, the ex-French Canadian priest, who some years since renounced Romanism and became a Presbyterian, came to Holyoke and delivered a lecture, stating the reasons for his change of creed. Father Dufresne forbade the members of his flock to attend the lecture and listen to the renegade from the true faith. A Mr. Joseph Parker, who was one of his parishioners, concluded to exercise his own liberty, and, having attended the lecture, he refused to acknowledge his error. For this the priest excommunicated him from the Church, and then threatened to excommunicate all members of his flock who should venture to patronize him in his business as a hackman. The proof showed that a funeral party went to church with Parker's carriages, and that the priest turned them away, saying: "When you know better than to come in those hacks, I will do your work, and not before. I forbid all members of this church from hiring the hacks or carriages of Joseph Parker, or using them, on the pains of excommunication from this church." The proof further showed a long list of persons who by the priest's denunciation and threats had been intimidated from dealing with this Mr. Parker, to the serious damage of his business.

Mr. Parker, in this state of facts, concluded to try the efficacy of law, and brought a suit against the priest, claiming damages to the amount of ten thousand dollars, and charging him with "fraudulently wilfully, violently, and maliciously intending to injure the plaintiff in his business." To this complaint Father Dufresne made answer that he was the settled and installed pastor of the French Roman Catholic Church of Holyoke; that the plaintiff was at the time of the action which he denounced a member of this church; and that what he said and did was in the exercise of his ecclesiastical authority and in the proper discharge of his duties and functions, and hence that he was not amenable therefor in a suit for damages.

Judge Bacon, in his charge to the jury, said: "This case rests upon the principle of law by which a man has a remedy if another interferes with his lawful business by fraud or by threats and intimidation, and so injures it." He further said in reference to the priest's justification:—

"It would be no excuse for him [the priest] if he did utter what is in fact unjustifiable, what is injurious to this plaintiff, that he had an idea that his ecclesiastical authority authorized him to do it. There is no ecclesiastical authority to be recognized under our government which allows a wanton and unreasonable interference with a man's private business, not connected with the church from which he has been excommunicated. Our institutions and our law recognize no such power. The Church may excommunicate him; but they must not pursue him further, and interfere with his private business. If they do, they do a wrongful act. . . In other words, our laws do not allow any ecclesiastical authority to interdict a man from pursuing his ordinary business, or prevent even the members of the same denomination from which he has been excommunicated to deal with him."

The judge distinctly told the jury that, if the defendant had done the things charged, the plaintiff was entitled to recover all the damages shown to have resulted therefrom; and, under this ruling, the jury gave a verdict of $3,433 in his favor. The lesson to Father Dufresne and to all Catholic priests is a good one. Their spiritual authority has its limits under law, and the moment it invades the civil rights of others it becomes a trespasser. The American citizen, though he be a Catholic, is entitled to protection against priests, as well as laymen. A priest has no more right than any other man to slander a member of his flock, or to injure him in his private business. Father Dufresne was practically a persecutor, and took advantage of the ignorant and misguided consciences of his parishioners to effect his purpose. This sort of despotism, while a source of great power with the Catholic priesthood, is an abominable tyranny, that ought to be alike despised and resisted. We commend the pluck of Mr. Parker in using his own ears as he pleased, and then in suing Father Dufresne for violating his rights as a citizen. A goodly number of such examples would make an important contribution to the emancipation of the Catholicity from ecclesiastical domination. Catholicism in this country ought to be taught the fact that the civil law rules priest and people alike, and that no powers or functions assumed to pertain to the former can excuse any violation of the law.—Independent, Nov. 27.

REFORMATORY.

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS of Governor Long, the new executive of Massachusetts, just delivered, was a document of great excellence, and contained some very valuable hints pertaining to reformatory matters. Under the head of "Health, Lunacy, and Charity," occur the following suggestions: "The treatment of the insane is a subject on which public sentiment is justly tender, and each year more exacting. It may be doubted whether the congregate system is the best, especially in any future provision for an increase of the insane, but we are not in case to adopt any other at this time. The great safeguards, whatever the system, are humane and actively interested Trustees, elastic to public sentiment, and not too quick to stand on the defensive; occasional fresh appointments among them; an ample medical staff of competent and experienced physicians,—a proportionate number of them women,—and, above all, vigilant inspection by officials possessed at once of firmness, and also of tact as well. It is of more consequence that that inspection should be constant, thorough, and imminent than that it should be under the direction of a single or a consolidated board. The lunacy laws should be codified and made more simple, especially in regard to the mode of discharging patients and of transfers from prisons and from other institutions to hospitals. An act codifying all laws relating to our charities would be still better. An earnest effort is now making to secure closer care and watchfulness over the female wards of the State, who have been placed on probation either in their own homes or with other families. The women of Massachusetts have accepted invitations to take part in this work, and it is expected that soon every female child committed to the custody of the board will at all times have a friend of her own sex to help her to a happier and a brighter life."

In referring to the general subject of Prisons, Governor Long said: "It is a matter rather for the courts than for you, but it would be a great improvement if there could be more uniformity of sentences imposed on convicts for the same class and degree of offences. In our penal institutions, it is not infrequent to find side by side criminals of substantially equal guilt, but with such wide differences in their terms of confinement that a natural sense of injustice impairs their respect for the law, and impedes their reformation and discipline. The treatment of criminals is a most important and interesting subject. Any attempt to perfect our prison system is limited at the outset by the present arrangement of our prison structures and appointments, which cannot be abruptly changed for the purpose of trying experiments, or at great and unreasonable cost. Reformation, the great desideratum in connection with punishment, is easier said than done. On the one hand, there are convicts surprised into sudden guilt, or led by trains of circumstances into crimes they had hardly contemplated till entangled in their commission: these are reformed from the moment of their arrest and exposure. There are others of whom crime seems to be the normal condition. Between these two classes, and contaminated by one of them, there are some to whom a period of years of confinement ought, by judicious influences, to bring something of an education of the moral sense and an ambition for better life. The familiar plan of classification occurs; but, by reason of the limitations I have already suggested, a thorough classification at once is impracticable, and should be attempted rather by a step at a time. I therefore refer you to the plan suggested by the Commissioners of Prisons of attempting such a single step, and of making what seems to be a cheap, simple, and practicable attempt at reformation, by transferring to some one of our present public institutions, where accommodations can be provided, some of those few convicts who evince genuine elements of reform, and whose punishment, as punishment, is not so much demanded by the nature of their offences as their reformation; and of there trying faithfully what can be done for them by a life of industry under more wholesome surroundings, and by the concentration upon them of good influences and teaching."

The interests of education were dwelt upon at considerable length, and led to these reflections: "The desirability of teaching the elements of industrial knowledge renders worthy of attention the provision of some practical plan which shall combine such a training, or at least a drift or habit of mind toward it, with the ordinary school exercises. The stimulus given to industrial art education has already proved of practical utility, and is significant of future results in the direction of our manufacturing interests."

It is stated that "the effect of the law compelling the attendance of all children between the ages of eight and fourteen years upon the public schools has been to increase the average attendance seven per cent." Governor Long concluded this portion of his address with these words: "No more sacred charge, certainly, is in your hands than that of our common schools,—the nursery now for so many years in country and in town of the distinctive elements of New England character and progress. Take care of them; preserve them in their integrity; and the rest of the educational problem will take care of itself." In regard to dealing with the liquor traffic, though avowing that his sympathies are with "that great body of men and women throughout the commonwealth who, having its best interests at heart, believe that the remedy of the evil must sooner or later be found in the line of its prohibition," Governor Long thinks the best method, under existing circumstances, would be to leave the question to the option of the people with respect to the granting of license. He also approves the recommendation of his predecessor that wages due for labor be exempt from taxation. He further includes among his recommendations legislation for insuring accuracy in the counting and return of ballots, for protecting the community against medical impostors; and for the better enforcement of the laws against gaming.

FOREIGN.

THOUSANDS OF PERSONS crossed over the Seine on the ice on Christmas day.

THE SHAH OF PERSIA is about to make a pilgrimage to Meshed, accompanied by ten thousand troops.

OF THE LAND in Ireland, two hundred and ninety-two persons hold six million four hundred and fifty-eight thousand one hundred acres, or about one-third of the island.

THE POPE is calling for more Peter's pence, as all the receipts of 1879 have been spent in assisting schools, poor churches, alms, and the restoration of ecclesiastical works of art.

THE SPANISH SENATE has passed the bill for the abolition of slavery in Cuba by a vote of 134 to 14. Eight Cuban senators voted with the minority. No Cuban senators voted with the majority.

A SOCIETY HAS BEEN formed for the purpose of providing London working men and women with Coffee Music Halls, at which popular and attractive entertainments will be held, and the refreshments provided will be of a temperance character.

A LETTER FROM FAYAL states that United States Consul Dabney and his aged father rescued four drowning men from the surf, at the imminent peril of their own lives. The men were part of the crew of a French barque wrecked, only five being saved of a crew of thirteen.

THE OLDHAM COTTON-WORKERS are complaining that most of the mills are now working over time, and that all of the work-people, above eighteen years of age, are practically compelled to acquiesce in this matter, whether or not they are willing, as they are threatened with immediate discharge, should they refuse to comply.

THERE IS QUITE a general feeling throughout Canada in favor of Canadian independence. The feeling extends to prominent politicians and many who have held high positions in the government. If the indications are not deceptive, the country will ere long be startled by having the question of independence openly broached as a political issue.

THE Morley Observer is a very pious journal, and its editor seems to think that any coarseness is fair against heretics. It indulges in a wild war-dance of delight because the Coöperative Hall at Morley is closed against freethought lecturers. If the hall is not available before the fine weather arrives, we shall have to hold some open-air meetings in Morley.—National Reformer.

DESCENDANTS OF CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS are still in existence. One of them, Don Diego Colomb, gentleman of the royal chamber, was present at the wedding of the king of Spain. The others are Don Ferdinand Colomb, deputy for Porto Rico, and Christophe Colomb de la Cerda, marquis of Jamaica, admiral and governor of India. All three belong to a collateral branch, the direct male line from the great navigator being extinct.

THE LETTER from Vera Sassulitch, which was contained in the revolutionary paper smuggled from Switzerland into Russia, explains that her attempt to kill M. Trepoff was made under orders from the revolutionary committee, and not, as was urged by the defence at her trial, from personal indignation at the cruelties to political prisoners. Several persons, including two women, drew lots as to who should kill M. Trepoff, and Vera Sassulitch drew the task.

VESUVIUS is not as it used to be, and presents a very striking aspect at present. Around the great cone, three craters launch steam and incandescent lava, which loses itself in the deep valley between Vesuvius and Mt. Somma. At the end of October, two small craters opened, blowing off portions of the mountain which obstructed the issue of lava. This is flowing slowly in a north-easterly direction, as is visible to the naked eye from Naples. In spite of the smoke, showers of pumice-stone, scoria, and red ashes, curious visitors do not hesitate to approach the edge of the crater. The heat is bearable there at a distance of twenty-five to thirty metres.

A SCOTCH DAILY paper has a leading article headed "A Freethinking Peer," in which the Marquis of Queensberry is taken to task for his outspoken communication to Vanity Fair. The tone of the article throughout is that of an enraged theologian, who aims at covering the Marquis with ridicule in default of the thumb-screw, rack, and other like "arguments," of which the kirk authorities have long since been deprived. It pretends that the Marquis is, after all, a nobody, nearly as unimportant a person as the man who writes to order in defence of a moribund superstition; and endeavors to weaken the force of the open repudiation of Christianity by this nobleman by insinuating that he is not qualified to express an opinion upon the matter. It calls the Marquis a "fashionable fribble," desirous of achieving a new sensation, and reckless of the pain which his egotistic outpouring may cause to men of finer mould and more thoughtful spirit than himself." Even the medium through which Lord Queensberry's opinions were expressed is depreciated. Of course all such comments as these show how much the religionists are surprised and annoyed by the open disavowal of the popular fetish by one of the "upper ten thousand" whose example will, it is apprehended, be only too likely to prove contagious. As might have been expected, the ultima ratio of all Christian controversy is not forgotten, as will be seen from the following delicate "hint" to the Scotch peers: "He (the Marquis) is, we are sorry to say, a representative peer, and understood to be a conservative one. It will, therefore, fall to the Peers of Scotland, at the approaching election, to see that the Marquis of Queensberry be not sent again to the great Council of this Christian nation, now that he has announced that he contemns the creed and the principles which have made the nation what it is," etc. We can but smile when we see otherwise "canny" folk endeavoring to keep back the advancing ocean with the besoms of their own particular "doxies." In our age, persecution is but a blunted weapon; and we have the best authority for stating that the Marquis of Queensberry is not to be frightened or flattered into silence.—Secular Review.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

BENEATH.

This gentle brook in onward flow
In modest littleness e'er flings
Sweet murmur to the mountain's brow,
At whose low foot it sings.

I saw thee, O thou soft-eyed stream!
One bright day 'neath an August sun:
"O life!" I cried, as in a dream,
"Why dost thou not so run?"
Alas! life's voiceless lips impart
No sound unto my eager heart,
But thou, O stream, did'st whisper low,
With meaning that I could divine:
"Stranger, e'en as thy life is mine,
My way is rough,—what mists I know!
Shelterless, sad as thine!
I win I by peaceful fields and hills,
And murmur love to hearts that pine:
How often have I soothed their ills,
Who come to me and mine!
Yet harsh I find my hidden bed,
Though on my face content is read!"

I saw thee, O thou soft-eyed stream!
That bright day 'neath an August sun,
And heard thy song as one would dream
Of sympathies that more than seem,
And knew our lives were one!

HORACE L. TRAUBEL.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JAN. 10.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

W. H. Faber, $1.50; J. W. Braley, $3.25; George Jacob Holyoake, $6; J. F. Foster, $1.50; H. Ladd, $4; Johannis Ellenbaas, $4.20; Thomas Richards, $1.50; Cash, $3.20; S. Corner, $3.20; Mrs. Emma Burton, $3.20; J. P. Quincey, $3.20; J. H. Howland, $3.20; Gen. A. J. Warner, $3.20; W. R. Cole, $3.20; C. S. Palmer, $3.20; Dr. Robert Ormiston, $3.20; Cary Brothers, $10; A. P. Rose, $6; Dr. Israel Betz, $3; Geo. R. Taber & Co., $22.19; Wm. J. Potter, $70; S. G. Morgan, $6.40; J. S. Johnson, $3.20; J. P. Titcomb, $1.60; Rev. F. Frothingham, $3.20; John Coulson, 80 cents; S. C. Noyes, $3.20; Dr. M. J. Safford, $3.20; S. E. Urbino, $3.20; D. H. Bond, $3.20; William Bartlett, $1.70; Mrs. U. T. Appleton, $6.40; Wm. E. Parmenter, $9.60; M. S. F. Wason, $3.20; O. A. Bailey, $3.20; James Humphrey, $3.20; Sam'l D. Bardwell, $4.40; J. F. Pratt, $3.20; S. L. Hill, $7.40; B. Fereival, $3.20; Mrs. J. H. Bennett, $3.20; William Eliene, $3.20; Wm. H. Spencer, 50 cents; Joseph McDonough, $5; P. S. Crowell, $6.40; Dr. Jno. P. Atwater, $3; Hon. J. H. Williams, $6.40; B. F. Chapman, $6; H. W. Moore, $4; Jacob S. Howes, $1; J. W. Graffan, $3; Keonyn News-paper Agency, $2.70; A. W. Baker, $2.50; J. R. Hawley, 85 cents; Samuel Colt, $3.20; Mrs. J. E. D. Laundon, $3.20; Dr. G. W. Topping, $3.25; H. G. Thomas, $3.20; H. W. Robinson, 80 cents; Richard Cogar, $4.86; William Berrian, $16; S. R. Honey, $4.04; R. E. Grimshaw, $9.60; F. M. Sanford, $3; F. Dessaur, $3.20; Mrs. C. M. Rotch, $50; Charles Aplin, $7; J. T. Warrington, $3.

The Index.

BOSTON, JAN. 15, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SEUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENSFELDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N.Y.	5.00
A. FOLSOM, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. FRESHO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York	5.00
Gen. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRS, New York, N.Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N.Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHSCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SAOHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N.Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D.C.	5.00
GEO. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N.Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HON. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N.Y.	1.00
N. LEWINSON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N.Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MRS. FRANCIS DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
Prof. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
DR. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00

MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERBILL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Braintree, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. RISK, Winthrop, Iowa	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N.Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D.C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N.Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N.Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N.Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " " "	1.00
MR. GANS, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Grand Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	5.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa	1.00
F. B. MERCEUR, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston	5.00
MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
MRS. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHN V. GRIEBEL, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
JOHANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRALEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN	200.00
MRS. A. B. PERCIVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
Capt. P. S. CROWELL, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
MISS MARIANNE CHRISTERN, New York	1.00
MRS. CHRISTERN, " " "	1.00
MR. F. W. CHRISTERN, " " "	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " " "	1.00
MRS. MARY F. DAVIS, " " "	1.00
M. S. FECHHEIMER, " " "	10.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Tewksbury, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. HAYNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIE S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
R. B. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
Total	$1,151.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

TWO, AND NOT ONE!

There are two kinds of "liberalism," as wide apart in purpose, spirit and tendency as the North Pole is from the South Pole. They both go, and will inevitably continue to go, under the name "liberalism," simply because this is the general term which includes all practical efforts to increase "liberty," for any object whatever. The difference of the two kinds lies in the objects for which increased liberty is sought. The one kind seeks increased liberty for the purpose of conforming human life more closely to the laws of natural morality, and of governing conduct by a still higher and purer code than that which has been incorporated either in Church or State. The other kind seeks increased liberty for the purpose of escaping all responsibility whatever to moral law, of overthrowing all regulations both of Church and State which recognize morality as a social necessity, and of abandoning conduct to the control of sentiment, caprice, or passion. Church and State alike embody only the average conscience of a given period; the one kind of liberalism demands a higher conscience than the average, while the other kind demands a lower. This is the essential difference of the two, constantly illustrated in the history of mankind; and it is illustrated to-day.

By methods as unscrupulous as itself, the second kind of liberalism, better known as libertinism or license or free-love, has succeeded in thrusting itself forward before the American public, almost to the exclusion of the other kind, as the recognized representative of the majority of such liberals as are now ready to organize. We do not believe in the least that it represents the great bulk of the really liberal people of this country, of whom we believe better things; but it does seem to represent the majority of those who are most forward in each community to take up the work of organization actively. Either through secret sympathy, or through indifference to moral issues, or through ignorance and credulity, the organizing and organizable liberals of America mainly follow the leadership of the National Liberal League; while the main body of those slow to organize, who were already beginning to become interested in that League prior to the Syracuse Congress, and who would eventually have made it a tremendous power for good in the service of genuine liberalism, now stand back disgusted and mortified by its record since that date, and cannot be induced for the present to connect their names with any liberal organization that comes even inferentially under the black shadow of such a record.

What this record has been is set forth with partisan hostility, yet in the main, notwithstanding some inaccuracies, with a substantial truthfulness in which lies the real sting of his scorpion lash, in the extract from a lecture by Joseph Cook which is contained in this week's issue of THE INDEX. This lecture we heard; and we owe it to candor to admit that the lecturer seemed this time, as he did not seem in his similar lecture of last year, to tell the truth as fairly and honestly as his intensely belligerent nature permits. The facts are substantially as he states them, if stripped of his peculiar rhetoric and occasional extravagance of phraseology; that is our unalterable conviction. But what a humiliating exhibit for American liberalism, as it stands before the world to-day!

We disclaim the shameful record utterly. It is not in the least a harvest of our own sowing, as the lecturer amiably suggests that it is. We sowed no "dragon's teeth," when for six long and wearisome years we labored to create for genuine liberalism alone a mighty national organization based explicitly on regard for "natural intelligence and natural morality." The harvest comes from no seed of our planting; it comes from seed dropped by buccaneers turned husbandmen in a stolen field. They are proud of their crop of disgrace; they may have it undivided, and enjoy it if they can.

But it is a serious question for the great mass of liberals, who do not want to blush and apologize for a name they cannot shake off if they would, how long they shall suffer themselves to be misrepresented to the world by this impudent free-love ring, and how long they shall endure its self-seeking, cunning, and conscienceless sway. Their present submission will not last forever. But it must and will last until they find some other public voice than the National Liberal League, and utter some other public and collective word than the scandalous record of that League. Silence is itself submission. The necessity for a pure and noble national organization, equally brave and prompt to act, was never so apparent as now, when the difficulty of obtaining one is greater than ever. What public protest against the infamies of "repeal" and "free-love" can decent liberals point to now, except that made by the seceding minority at Syracuse? And how can they parry Joseph Cook's thrust, when he sneeringly reminds them that this protest has only eight auxiliary leagues to back it up? Is not that true? Has any other liberal organization given public expression to the better mind of liberalism at this time? Is not the inference natural, however false, that the vast majority of liberals sympathize with the National League in its warfare on public morality? Is not this inference accepted by rapidly increasing thousands in the general community, just because it cannot be refuted so long as that better mind of liberalism fails to rouse the liberals themselves to collective and energetic protest?

It is very easy for individual liberals to turn away with indifference, saying, "It is no business of mine." It is very easy to become absorbed in one's own immediate affairs, and to forget the imperative interests of the liberal cause. But whoever takes pains, out of intelligent concern for those interests, and out of unselfish zeal for the general welfare, to study comprehensively at this time the needs and prospects of genuine liberalism, as contrasted with libertinism, will find abundant cause for mortification in the apathy that prevails among liberals themselves on questions of public morality. We do not wonder at Joseph Cook's conclusion, when he says: "It is evident, therefore, that American infidelity, as a mass, means not so much liberalism as libertinism." What reason has he, or any other keen Orthodox observer of the course of events, to draw any different conclusions? Rev. Dr. Newman, of New York city, in a recent sermon on modern unbelief, said: "Infidelity annihilates the moral sentiment and organizes an army of occupation. I do not say that all free-thinkers are free-lovers; but I do say that all free-lovers are freethinkers, who constitute the majority of infidels, and who would strike down our homes with a ruthless hand."

Such conclusions are inevitable from the apparent facts of the case, and show what sort of impression the collective activities of liberalism, taken as a whole, make on the non-liberal public. On a question of freedom, the liberals hold conventions and buzz like a disturbed hive of bees from one end of the country to the other; on a question of morality, they all take a nap. The natural inference is that they care for one, and do not care for the other. At least, that is the inference drawn by the general community; and it operates most disastrously to the liberal cause, since it goes to confirm the stock argument of the pulpit that Christianity is indispensable to public morality. It is that argument chiefly which persuades legislatures to perpetuate the exemption of churches from taxation, to keep the Bible in the schools, to maintain Sunday-Sabbath laws, etc. The only way to secure reforms of these abuses is to convince the people that morality will be safer without them than with them. By its recklessness and contempt of moral considerations, the National Liberal League is doing the exact opposite, and postponing indefinitely the success of the principles it professes to serve.

The fact is that the only liberalism which either can or will succeed in taking the place of Christianity in the hearts of men is the liberalism which not only insists on liberty, but also on the right use of liberty—which is morality. That is the kind of liberalism for which THE INDEX has worked unweariedly and consistently from the beginning: namely, liberty and morality combined. We have pleaded the cause of liberalism simply and solely because we believe that it will make the world wiser, better, and happier than Christianity has ever made it. But if the only alternative to the morality of the Church were to be that of the National Liberal League, the world would infinitely better adhere to the former, as it certainly would. The liberal cause has not the shadow of a chance of success, until genuine liberalism, and not libertinism, comes to the front, and until the great liberal party has given proofs, both in word and deed, that it holds itself fatally and shamefully misrepresented by the free-love horde that have wrought it such disgrace. The conflict between liberalism and libertinism is irrepressible; it cannot be ignored or evaded; it is paralyzing the whole liberal movement at this time, and any attempt to ignore or evade it is to play directly into the hands of libertinism. There is but just one safe and honorable course to-day for those liberals who believe not only in liberty, but also in the right use of liberty: namely, to recognize the deadly feud between the two kinds of liberalism frankly and fearlessly, and to oppose the false as vigorously as they uphold the true. Neutrality is surrender to those who have invited and necessitated the well-deserved excoriations of Joseph Cook, Dr. Newman, and the numerous other Orthodox critics who eagerly seize upon the record of the National Liberal League to prove the demoralizing tendencies of liberalism itself. It is the free-love ring that opposes all discrimination or division between the two kinds of liberalism, and cracks the whip over the heads of all who insist on distinguishing between them. To shun recognition of the distinction is to aid directly in executing the schemes of that ring and perpetuating its rule. It is the first and most imperative duty of all true liberals to meet the issue bravely, and see to it that the reign of libertinism in the liberal movement shall be as brief as it is unspeakably damaging and disgraceful. The very life of this movement is at stake. The mischief already done to it is enormous, and threatens to extinguish its usefulness for years. If liberals hope or expect to benefit mankind by their principles, they cannot too soon set the seal of their emphatic repudiation on the libertinism that now eclipses those principles in the eyes of mankind.

FOURIERISM.

On the 7th of April, 1772, was born at Besançon Charles Fourier, the celebrated French Socialist; not to be confounded with the distinguished mathematician of the same name, born about four years earlier, at Auxerre. Educated at an academy in his native town for the mercantile profession, he early manifested success and diligence in study, and gave evidence of that genius for theoretical and speculative reforms that characterized his life-labors up to his last moment. At nine years of age, he lost his father, who left him property to the value of about twenty-five thousand dollars, which did not, however, come into his own possession until he came of age in 1793, when he invested his capital in trade at Lyons. The breaking out of the French Revolution involved him, as so many others, in the wide-spread ruin it brought upon the mercantile classes, and probably thus gave his mind its controlling impulse; as he was thrown into prison, and afterwards compelled to serve for two years as an ordinary private in a regiment of cavalry. Obtaining his discharge at last, on account of illness, he procured employment at Marseilles, where occurred to him another memorable incident, as he was directed to superintend the destruction of a large quantity of rice, which had been held for purposes of speculation until it had spoiled, in a time of great scarcity of food. This fact so impressed him with the injustice attendant upon the existing conditions of society, that he henceforth devoted his spare time to the study of social problems, until he developed the system of socialism, commonly designated as Fourierism. His first work was published at the age of thirty-six, and denominated Theory of the Four Movements, and of the General Destiny of the Human Race. Fourteen years later, in 1822, his treatise on Domestic and Agricultural Association was given to the world; and, in 1829, The New Industrial and Social World. His next publication, in 1831, consisted of an attack upon the socialistic schools of Owen and St. Simon, and was entitled Snares and Quackeries of these two sects in promising Association and Progress. This he followed up in 1835 by the publication of another work which bore the title of False Industry, Fragmentary, Repulsive, and Lying, and its Antidote the Natural, Combined, Attractive, and Truthful Industry, giving Quadruple Products. He died in Paris on the 8th of October 1837, in his sixty-sixth year, his death having been hastened, it has been asserted, by the unsatisfactory results proceeding from the efforts of his disciples to realize in a practical form the fruits of his system.

For many of the last years of his life, he waited at a fixed hour the arrival of some wealthy patron, who should—as he hoped—afford him the opportunity of vindicating his theories as susceptible of realization. He is said to have excelled in the special studies of geography, mathematics, music, and the natural sciences. In his earlier life, he travelled in his mercantile vocation in France, Holland, and Germany, and made most elaborate and painstaking observations on all he saw; noting the peculiarities of every place he visited, climate, and cultivation of the soil; characteristics of the population, architectural details of both public and private buildings, etc., and is said to have retained with surprising accuracy the dimensions of all buildings visited by him, as also the topography of the various towns he saw. Altogether, a patient, laborious, earnest, and sincere thinker, who devoted his life to the service of his fellow-men, and only needed the broader culture and more comprehensive intellect to have rivalled the achievements of Auguste Comte in the same field. His social system is contained not only in the list of works before named, but in a large collection of hitherto unpublished manuscripts, and must be judged as well by the writings of his disciples, Brisbane, Considerant, Lechevallier, and others. It differs materially from Communism, and professes to be based on natural laws. His cardinal idea seems to have been that "Attractions are proportional to Destinies." Assuming that chemical affinities in the shape of attractions or repulsions form the governing forces of the entire universe, Fourier taught that the desires and passions of men, their respective capacities and inclinations, would produce their greatest happiness, if permitted free scope,—which is essentially the same idea inculcated by Rousseau; and it is in this assumption that the weakness and falsity of his entire system stand revealed: for the Calvinistic idea of total and natural depravity in human kind is no further removed from the real facts of the case. The premises of his argument once admitted, it would be extremely difficult to deny his deductions, so logically and consistently does he reason; and, aside from the general immorality of the animating motives he ascribes to mankind, the study of Fourier's works cannot fail to be of benefit to all persons interested in sociological inquiries; but, in making the inducements and incentives to all exertion the mere desire of luxury, sensual pleasures, or the ambition of leadership, he has again totally misconceived the end of existence for a by no means unimportant class among mankind,—that class who live to perform their duty, as they understand it. Exception must also be taken to the many dogmatic assertions as to the future of the human race, which abound in his works: thus he taught that the duration of the species is to be precisely eighty thousand years; that the present period is the ascending phase for humanity, during which human society must continue in its comparatively crude and undeveloped stage, after which a middle era of prosperity and happiness is to succeed, to be followed by a declining phase or term. That society has to pass through these phases is not to be doubted; but there is better reason, perhaps, to believe we have already passed through the two first stages, and entered upon the period of decadence, than for accepting the term of existence for the human race as eighty thousand years.

Fourier considered our present civilization a false and imperfect condition of affairs, where poverty, idleness, and ignorance, added to repugnant labor, must inevitably produce misery, crime, and oppression, leading on to civil commotions, wasting wars, disease, famine, anarchy, and the antagonism of classes. Believing in a universal harmony, flowing from and centring in a personal God, the centre of all harmonies, he taught himself to believe that an association of human beings would produce universal happiness. Arguing that as all things, from solar systems to minutest atoms of matter, range themselves in certain fixed groups and series, according to the laws of attraction and repulsion, he labored to discover the natural group or order that must eventually result from human association. This he thought he had found in the "Phalanstery," which was to consist of four hundred families or eighteen hundred persons, which number he asserts includes the entire circle of human capacities. These were all to live in one immense edifice, in the centre of a highly cultivated garden or farm, furnished with workshops, studios, and all the essential appliances of industry and art, which were to include as well all the sources of pleasure and amusement. The whole earth was to be covered ultimately with perfect palaces of attractive industry, where the descendants of cannibal South Sea Islanders were expected to vie with the progeny of intellectual Anglo-Saxons; and tigers and sharks to develop the characteristics of sheep and gold-fish! Ignoring the fact that God sends the devastating earthquake as well as the fruitful sunshine, permits poisonous serpents to perpetuate their species as much as the harmless ring-doves, Fourier believed that general prosperity would eradicate the baneful predilections of human nature, and create a heaven upon earth, in which the very poorest person should enjoy more than the richest millionaires and the mightiest monarchs can at present command or possess. Meantime, the economy of living on the large scale in the "Phalanstery" would reduce by two-thirds the expenses, while scientific industry would quadruple the products of industry.

It was one of those beautiful dreams which the kind-hearted of all ages have been fain to indulge in. There was to be but one single universal language, but one central, "unitary" government. The only armies were to be "armies of industry," whose duty it was to reclaim waste lands, and make the deserts blossom like the rose. Forests were to be planted, climates to be ameliorated, the salt sea to be perfumed, and the aurora borealis to do duty instead of gas. In the Phalanstery, property was to be held "on shares"; the entire net product to be divided into twelve parts, of which five parts were to go to the laborers, four to the capitalists, and three to the directors and managers. The apartments were to be of various prices; and, while the minimum of creature-comforts was to be greater than any individual possesses at the present time, the wealthy were to have opportunities of enjoyment surpassing all possible conceptions.

Asserting a principle of "universal analogy," akin in certain respects to that of Swedenborg, Fourier steadily set his mind upon the perfectibility of the human species, and by his optimistic faith in the future actually succeeded in gathering about him a small group of intellectual enthusiasts, whose survivals still linger among us; and when confronted with the demonstrated facts of history, to the plain effect that, whenever the passions of men have been left in the unrestrained freedom which the theories of Rousseau and Fourier would require, the result has always been not improvement, but ruinous demoralization, their only reply has been, in the language of their master, that "attractions are proportional to destinies," and these excesses belong only to the present state of our civilization, and are mere incidents of the general ignorance and poverty, certain to be outgrown in "the true society" of the future!

Meantime, of the many attempts made to carry out the ideas of Fourier, both in France and America, not one can be pointed out as resulting in the success anticipated by its projector.

ALBERT WARREN KELSEY.

A MISPLACED SWITCH.

In THE INDEX of December 4, we published at length the circular of the Free Religious Association, asking for financial aid in the extension of their work, and sketching the outlines of a practical plan of work to be carried out, if sufficient aid should be given. This plan we cordially approved in our comments at the time, and we seconded it with an earnest "personal appeal" to "all our readers and friends." This approval and personal appeal of ours were grounded wholly on the supposition that the plan adopted did not include or intend, on the part of the Association as such, any direct encouragement of local organization. We said explicitly: "If we believed that the Association would ever enter upon the work of organizing local societies without clearly foreseeing and adequately providing against the grave perils which experience has shown to be inseparable from that work, we could not favor the present plan at all."

It is with extreme regret that we now feel constrained by a sense of duty to recall the approval we gave to this plan and the appeal we made in its support. A difference of opinion has arisen as to the meaning of that clause of the circular which makes it part of the duty of the proposed General Agent "to furnish, as occasion may offer, information and suggestion to persons anywhere desiring to form local societies on the general basis of this Association." We originally understood this clause as meaning that the General Agent is to furnish such "information and suggestion" on his individual responsibility alone. The Executive Committee have unanimously voted not to adopt this understanding of the clause in question; and the only possible alternative is that the Executive Committee, and therefore the Association as such, will hold themselves responsible for whatever "information and suggestion" the General Agent may offer. At the same time, the adoption of a carefully matured plan of action with reference to local organization is postponed to the future. In our opinion, therefore, the Association has already taken the first step in "entering on the work of organizing local societies, without clearly foreseeing and adequately providing against the grave perils which experience has shown to be inseparable from that work." In other words, the Office Committee, the general Executive Committee, and ultimately the Association as such have decided to hold themselves responsible for the nature of the General Agent's suggestions; and they will be, therefore, inevitably held by the public in some measure responsible for the character and conduct of any and all local societies which may be formed in consequence of those suggestions. It is in our judgment extremely perilous to the Association and its cause, unless the utmost vigilance is exercised in advance, to risk the probable or possible results of this policy, in the present demoralized condition of the liberal movement throughout the country. True, it is only a risk; but it is so great a risk that we cannot conscientiously approve the running of it, or remain, by our silence after what we said at first, a supposed approver of it. We must, therefore, explicitly recall the approval which we gave to this general plan under a misunderstanding of its essential nature.

The point may seem to superficial minds a trivial one, whether the "suggestions" of the General Agent shall be made at his own discretion and on his own individual responsibility, or under the direction and on the responsibility of the Association. But it is a point which determines whether the Association as such does or does not enter on the work of local organization. A misplaced switch is a trivial matter—only a change of two or three inches in the position of a couple of iron rails; but it may determine the safety or destruction of the train, with its load of life. In our judgment, the Free Religious Association is switching itself off upon a road on which the rails have not been laid in advance. Danger of a serious nature seems to us inseparable from this misplaced switch.

Nevertheless, we do not at all oppose the present plan; we wish it success, and shall continue to hope for the best practical results, notwithstanding the risk that is run. The ladies and gentlemen composing the Executive Committee are individually, without exception, entitled to the utmost possible confidence of all our friends. They have done and will do nothing which they themselves consider to involve the slightest peril to the highest public interests. Though obliged once more to stand in a minority, and this time in a minority of one, we all the more earnestly bear testimony to the spotless purity of their intentions in this very matter. It is perhaps to their credit—it is certainly to their happiness—not to have become aware that there are two kinds of liberalism struggling for the mastery at this time, the one striking hands with all that is foulest and most devilish in society, the other seeking to make society purer and nobler, sweeter and happier, than Christianity has ever yet made it. They have not become aware that the demoralizing tendency has got to be sternly recognized and sternly met, before the better tendency can prevail. They will find this out soon enough, if they ever get far into the work of organization; and we shall still continue to hope for the best, though we cannot now cooperate with them. The difference of opinion as to practical measures has wrought no alienation of spirit or diminution of personal friendship; and that fact is sufficient consolation for the necessity of walking henceforth our separate path alone. Time will show where wisdom lies in the special point at issue; but it will be no fault of ours if there is ever any letting-go of hands in the common cause of truth, righteousness, and love.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

DR. FELIX ADLER spent a day in Boston last week. COL. INGERSOLL is lecturing upon "Human Rights."

JULIA WARD HOWE is speaking upon "Culture" before Western audiences.

PROF. DENTON has been delivering popular lectures this winter on Geology, at Hartford, Conn., and Washington, D.C.

ROBERT BROWNING is described as "stout, comfortable, and fine-looking" in face and figure. He spends his mornings regularly in his study.

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON, of New York, has sent Fred Douglass her check for $250 to aid the North Carolina exiles in cases of pressing necessity.

A "CARLYLE SOCIETY" has been formed in England for the purpose of promoting a better knowledge of his writings, and aiding in the dissemination of his ideas.

BISHOP McCLOSKEY, of the Roman Catholic diocese of Louisville, requires the immediate establishment of parochial schools, and threatens that all parents who fail to send their children shall be deprived of absolution.

MISS LENA GILBERT, of New York, is a philanthropist who is working to reform convicts, and prevent crime, and improve the condition of the prisons. She needs financial help, and it would seem as if she eminently deserved it.

REV. A. D. MAYO, a noted Unitarian minister of the conservative wing of the denomination, and prominent in connection with the cause of education, has become associate editor of the New England Journal of Education.

MR. PARNELL, says the Boston Herald, is curiously of the opinion that money is better than food for the starving people of Ireland. About thirty years ago, a shipload of bread and meat was found to answer a very good purpose.

KING JOHN, of Abyssinia, is described as short in stature, but perfectly proportioned, with a finely cut profile, delicate mouth and chin. He is a truly good prince, who rises every morning at 3 o'clock and reads the Psalms of David for two hours.

MR. S. BEGELOW, late editor of the Independent Age, a liberal paper of Alliance, Ohio, has retired from the conduct of that journal. It will hereafter be known as the Alliance Standard, and probably give less attention to reform and religious matters than formerly.

MR. THOMAS HUGHES—"Tom Brown"—is quoted as saying to Mr. James Redpath: "Do you know there is nothing that astonishes us English so much as to see you Americans come over here for lecturers. Why, sir, I can name all the orators of England on the fingers of one hand; while you are a nation of orators."

TENNYSON is getting a little old, but a London paper says he is still very fond of waltzing. That he waltzes well, his best friends would be slow to assert; but many a fair lady is glad to sacrifice the perfect performance of a few moments for the honor of having her waist zoned by the illustrious right hand that wrote, "Come into the garden, Maud."

LUCRETIA MOTT, at the last monthly meeting of the Friends at Philadelphia, we learn, "was reminded that, by virtue of her old age and the inclement season near at hand, it might be her last opportunity of meeting with them. She would that Friends might be preserved in their simplicity and untrammelled by dogmas." She pleaded for the six thousand colored refugees in Kansas, and reminded the Friends that their mid-week meetings were established by the "fathers as a testimony to their belief that the first day of the week was not exclusively a holy day, but that the worship of the Heavenly Father might just as properly be engaged in on one day as on another."

Communications.

NOTES FROM GERMANY.

What would an American audience say to the following? Prof. Jaeger, of Stuttgart, gave a lecture, not long since, on his supposed discovery of the soul (which he thinks resides in the sense of smell). The audience was a mixed one, composed of gentlemen and ladies. Part of his lecture dealt with the relation of the sexes. This question he thought not suited for the ears of ladies; such parts were therefore, without comment, deliberately delivered in Latin.

For boys who have passed through the common schools of Germany there are provided two kinds of higher schools, either of which prepare them for the university. For the girls there are only the common schools, which are free. If they wish for something more to satisfy the cravings for knowledge, they must be sent to some one of the very numerous boarding-schools. These boarding-schools are as a rule very superficial in their training. The modern languages, music, and drawing, with a little history, suffice.

Württemberg is Protestant in its religion. There are, however, many Catholics and Jews scattered over the state. All children of the peasants are compelled to attend school from the age of seven to fourteen years. Out of the thirty hours of weekly instruction, eleven are devoted to the teaching of religion. This instruction is carefully arranged by commissions from the Protestants, Catholics, and Jews, so that the rights of neither are infringed. The instruction is general and historical up to a certain age, after which it is in some cases given by special teachers (Catholic, Protestant, or Jew), or by the same teacher, who has very definite printed guides telling him what he shall do in each case. Thus all these classes of believers have the benefit of the schools without religious intolerance. The instruction in any of the three cases consists largely in compelling the children to memorize catechisms, passages of Scripture, hymns, and short histories taken from the Bible. As many as thirty hymns are thus taught to the Protestant children.

The practice of duelling is carried on very extensively at the smaller universities in Germany. There are twelve different societies (Vereins), containing about twelve hundred students, scattered over the whole Empire. The main business of these students is fencing, fighting, and beer-drinking. The members of each corps or Verein wear a designating ribbon over the chest and a uniform cap. Most of them are scarred and disfigured with the most ghastly cuts about the face and head. These disfiguring marks of their combats they are proud of. The fighting is done with a slender, pointless sword, about forty inches in length, sharpened on both front and back. The chest, arteries of the fencing arm, and neck are protected. The eyes are covered with iron goggles. The blows are all aimed at the head, which, except the eyes, is entirely unprotected. The two combatants fight without uttering a word until one or the other receives a cut in the face or on the head: they are then stopped by their seconds, who always stand by. One of the two surgeons (one for each man) examines the cut. If it is not dangerous, they are at once called again to position, and must fight until one or the other receives a thrust which requires the immediate tying of arteries, when the duel is ended. Eight or ten of these duels are often fought in succession, requiring the whole day. The German government has passed strict laws against this barbarous practice; but they are so framed that the students manage to evade them. They generally slip off quietly in closed carriages with their surgeons and attendants, and halt at some remote inn eight or ten miles out of the city. Here they throw out guards along the road, and proceed to their work, which they call sport.

The churches here in Germany do not believe in making religion attractive. The seats are hard wooden benches, the sermons long and tedious as a rule, and the whole interior is more barn-like than church-like. In fact, the Germans as a nation do not believe in the luxury of a fire in church. The warmth must be internal, in the believer. This requires a strong degree of religious fervor, when the thermometer is (—5° F.) five below zero, Fahrenheit, as it has been during the past week (Dec. 1-7). The consequences are that a score or two tells the number in the church, while the skating-rink is crowded by hundreds. In fact, the Germans are not a church-going people. They think they have found something better to do. In the smaller cities, the parents take the children in summer, with lunch prepared for the day, and go into the woods. To accommodate this tendency of the people, there are isolated inns located here and there, where they rest, procure coffee and beer, and meet their friends, while their children romp about them in the woods, pick flowers, collect insects or stones, or study the habits of the birds. In the larger cities, the parks and gardens, the museums and art galleries, are all thrown open on Sunday. Such as require a fee on other days are generally free on Sunday. This is to encourage the thousands, who must work very hard during the week, to go out into the air and woods, the parks and galleries. Those who have both time and money can go on week-days; but there are thousands in every city who work hard, have little money, and need recreation. The German government, recognizing this fact, not only opens these places of recreation free on Sunday, but often provides the best of music on the public squares. Besides this, the railroads (all managed by the government) reduce their fares one-half or more on excursion trains which run into the country. I spent the past summer in Berlin, and observed carefully the habits and customs of the people. I think it a small estimate to say that one hundred thousand men, women, and children, too poor to spend the time on another day or pay the ordinary rates, were thus refreshed by the country every Sunday. I went often myself, and never saw any disturbance or boisterousness, or drunkenness during the summer. The Germans always go at such times with their wives and children. Where in America men would go alone, Germans go as families. They live a certain home-life out of doors, in the free, open air, of which we as Americans know little. W. P. W.

AN ENGLISH LETTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Sir,—I have often thought of dropping a line to you about some of the matters in your paper, as well as in respect to the journal itself. So, in the first place, I think your paper to be a most admirable one, both as regards the quality of work in it, and likewise as regards the position it takes in general on most subjects. From some twenty years' reading of freethought periodicalism, it seems to me that freethinkers have been disposed—just because they have found many things in the intellectual and moral world in a decrepit condition—to assume therefore that everything else was so, and to attack indiscriminately everything in heaven and earth,—one of the most absurd positions which can possibly be taken. Surely men have not existed so long as they have, without finding out a great deal which is good for them!

I notice in your issue just received, for Nov. 20, a letter on "Prejudicing the Soil," in which the writer objects to even "prejudicing the infant mind in favor of truth." The letter is a very good one, but still its perusal leaves a curiously odd impression on one's mind. What the writer appears to mean is, not that a child should be taught nothing,—not even truth,—but simply that it should not be stuffed with people's opinions about what is true. That is, there should be no dogmatizing to the child on what is true or not true, but it should be taught rather how to gather up for itself, from its own observations, the relations the facts presented to it have to one another. How we are to avoid dogmatizing altogether I cannot see, unless we stop the teaching of foreign languages, and even of geography; for it is not every child who can afford to make a voyage round the world, even if it were convenient.

The writer of the letter referred to, as well as others who have stirred up the same subject before in your columns, has hit a blot which I am afraid runs over a great part of our present scholastic systems; namely, that, though there is a lot of teaching, there is very little education. The wretched youngsters are examined, to see not in what condition their minds are for active work, but to find out how much rubbish they have got inside their heads. We have, I believe, a lot to learn, on both sides of the Atlantic, in the way of education. We know enough and too much of teaching. How to cram strings of names or the contents of the Second Book of Samuel into juveniles, we know all about; but how to lead out minds to think truly, and to will rightly, very little is as yet understood. The only way to understand it better is for each one to challenge the points in the prevailing systems in which he sees wrong.

There is another point which has often struck me in reading your paper, and that is what appear to be signs of a strong prejudice against the extreme section of the freethought party in America,—a prejudice which seems to be shared not only by the usual Orthodox sects, but also by our Unitarian friends. This seems surprising to me, and also to my Unitarian friends about here. For in this benighted and backward old country, with its dreadful State Church, we have nothing of that sort. Instead of soreness on the part of Freethinkers being felt from the peculiar activity of the Orthodox and their allies, it is just the other way; and in fact I have seriously thought, if we progressed as we have done of late years, that some of us of the freethought party would have to stand out for fair play to those honestly holding Orthodox opinions. As regards the Unitarians in this country, they are continually wondering why the freethought party does not join them in a body, and telling the latter what an exhibition of narrow-mindedness they make in not doing so. And I am inclined to think them right.

As an illustration of the attitude of Unitarians in England toward the extreme section of Freethinkers, I may give the case of the Rev. Mr. Smith, late of Doncaster. This gentleman had given expression to what he thought of that section by saying that "he should do his best to put down the Secularists in his congregation," or words to that effect. The West Riding Unitarian Association replied to that by refusing a grant of some £40 they made toward the support of the Unitarian Church of which the Rev. Mr. Smith was minister, specifically stating that their reason was Mr. Smith's resolution as expressed by him "to put down the Secularists." Mr. Smith had to resign.

Another illustration occurred prior to the one just related. Prof. F. W. Newman joined "The British and Foreign Unitarian Association," finding that the Association included his Theism. Mr. Moncreu D. Conway, of South Place Chapel, Finsbury, refused to do so, as the word "Unitarian" made the association a "sectarian" society. A gentleman (Mr. Hargrave), who had become a Unitarian minister from a Roman Catholic priest, said that, though

Mr. Conway's Theism was not wide enough to hold his (Mr. Hargrave's) Unitarianism, his (Mr. Hargrave's) Unitarianism was quite wide enough to hold Mr. Conway's Theism. So I think for one that the attitude of Unitarianism in England is certainly a long way in advance of that of America, in relation to freethought, judging at least from the tone of your paper.

Again with regard to split in the Secularist Party in England on account of Mr. Bradlaugh's action relating to the Fruits of Philosophy. It seems altogether different from the split of the cognate party in America. Cupid's Yokes, from what I can understand both from descriptions and extracts, is a regular attack on the institution of the Family,—an idea which is confirmed by the particulars given in your columns of the characters of some of its chief defenders. Now Mr. Bradlaugh's and Mr. Besant's defence of the Fruits of Philosophy is altogether of another sort than that. It is really an attempt to defend the institution of Family. It is a genuinely English attack on monopoly; that is, a monopoly of the babies. With present arrangements, a comparatively few are privileged to have children. The principle which Mr. Bradlaugh and Mrs. Besant support is that all shall have their share; not as now, when the few have more than they can support, and the rest none at all. In a few words, Cupid's Yokes ends in no Family at all, whereas Fruits of Philosophy is for the extension of the blessings of the Family life to as many of the community as are fitted for it. The simple fact is the split in the Secular Party occurred because of, primarily, what appeared the high-handed action of Mr. Bradlaugh toward Mr. Watts; secondly, that the Secularists were by no means agreed on the main principle involved, which is proved indirectly by the formation of a Malthusian League independently of the Secular Party; thirdly, by the fact that the book defended was by no means up to the mark, as it was hardly likely it would be, being some forty years old. It was a stupid book in its way, if meant to aid in the repression of population, as it gave recipes for exactly the reverse. This third point is indirectly proved in the fact that the book was practically withdrawn, when another, said to be a better one, was substituted; namely, Mrs. Besant's Law of Population. As far as I can judge, Mr. Bradlaugh and Mrs. Besant would be the last persons in the world to attack the principle of the Family as is done in Cupid's Yokes, in fact would be the first to trounce any such attempt. To sum up, what all of us have to do as Freethinkers, and I believe THE INDEX has ever striven for, is to keep Humanity in full view as an object to be worked for, and in Aug. Comte's words to have "Love for principle, Order as basis, and Progress for our end." Yours, J. WHITELEY.

21 UXBRIDGE ST., LIVERPOOL, England.

A FREE SOCIETY'S CHRISTMAS.

It was my pleasant fortune to celebrate Christmas this year with the Sunday-school of the Free Congregational Society of Florence, Mass. This society began its existence with the organization of a Sunday-school. Although this school has always had a character of its own, quite unlike that of the churches, it has preserved all those features of the church Sunday-schools which are consistent with its own rational aims. Hence the Cosmian Sunday-school is accustomed to observe, in connection with special days of its own appointing, nearly all of the church days and festivities, but in a way peculiar to itself. It has its celebration of Easter, its spring day, the resurrection of Nature, its annual picnic, Decoration Day observance, and Christmas festival.

A prominent and somewhat original feature of the latter is a dinner, to which all the members of the school, both old and young, are invited, with the parents of the children and the choir of the society. Good-eating is usually enjoyed by most people, even the most cultured and intellectual, and I have not been able to discover that radicals are in this respect an exception. At least those of Florence do not appear to be. They certainly make very excellent provision in this line, not only as to substantials, but also the choicer viands and delicacies. On this occasion, one hundred and thirty-five testified their hearty appreciation of the feast.

When all were seated, Mr. A. T. Lilly, one of the oldest members of the society, asked for a few moments' attention. He said that the committee of arrangements had decided to have but very little speaking, only one short speech and that before eating. As they know, continued Mr. Lilly, that I am very easy to exhaust, they have assigned that part to me. Perhaps it will be interesting for the children to hear something in relation to our society. Sixteen years ago last May, a few of our citizens found themselves outside of the churches. Many of them had been in the church, but had voluntarily withdrawn. They had outgrown the creeds of Christendom. Feeling the need of organized effort to promote the welfare of each and all, they formed the Free Congregational Society of this village, and, instead of a creed, adopted as their bond of union the inscription which appears on the tablet of stone in the porch of our building. The Sunday-school began its existence with that of the society. Sixteen years ago to-night, we had our first Christmas celebration. Our place of meeting was in a hall, much smaller than that which we at present occupy. It had been set apart for us by the direction of its esteemed donor, our friend and benefactor, in the building now known as the school-house, not then completed. The room, though in an unfinished state, was ample. Everybody was invited, and the invitation was quite generally accepted. A Santa Claus was provided for the occasion; and when he appeared, loaded with presents, so great was the excitement that he could maintain his footing only by the use of a powerful wand, which he wielded very freely. Our annual Christmas festival has been regularly maintained, though we have from time to time varied the manner of celebrating it. We have had our Christmas tree adorned as if by the work of the fairies, and the favors of Santa Claus have been bountifully bestowed. On one of these occasions, instead of a Christmas tree, "our ship came in," laden with gifts. Four years ago, we substituted for the tree and the ship a Christmas dinner, which has now become an established mode of this observance with us. During these sixteen years, though we have experienced our share of changes, of losses and bereavements, the society has nevertheless been prosperous. Outside of us there is a growing demand for such organizations. We are having frequent inquiries as to our methods, and have every reason to believe that the example of our success is tending to stimulate liberal minds elsewhere to like efforts. There is a radical change rapidly taking place as to religious dogmas. When the older persons present were children, of the age of those I see before me, we were taught by our religious teachers that we could not do a good or meritorious act in the sight of God, unless we were regenerated, or born again, as they expressed it. But we teach that you may commence early in life to do good; that, if you are correct in your conduct, in all of the social relations of life; if you are upright, truthful, just, and reliable in your dealings, acting in every instance, amid all the trials of life, up to the higher law within you, then most assuredly will you attain to a good standing in the community and win the respect of all who know you. I enjoy your presence to-day, and my hopes as to the prosperity of this society in the future rests upon the youth now before me.

Mr. Lilly's remarks were warmly applauded at the close, and the dinner proceeded with an exuberance and cheerfulness of spirit greatly heightened by the cordial comingling of childhood, youth, and age peculiar to the hour. After the repast, Santa Claus, laden with gifts and thickly wrapped in furs, made his appearance. Strange to say, he seemed to bear a very close resemblance to a well-known member of the society, always in requisition for such performances. When the distribution of the numerous gifts of the season was over, those present broke up into little groups, while the children and younger persons lost themselves in games, or in the whirl of the dance, or such pastimes as the time and place favored, until at last the zest of the festivities was expended, and Christmas at Cosmian Hall was once more most happily and successfully concluded.

OBSERVER.

FROM A TRUE FRIEND.

F. E. ABBOT:

Dear Sir,—Enclosed, I send $3.20 in payment for THE INDEX for 1880.

Could any words of mine, expressing my high appreciation of your paper, add to the gratification which you must feel at the great amount of good you are accomplishing, I would gladly give them.

Having had the pleasure of being a subscriber throughout the whole period of its publication, I have found that THE INDEX can be depended upon to defend the right, simply because it is right, and to condemn the wrong, because it is wrong, always alike fearlessly, whether it appears in the garb of time-hallowed superstition or in false robes of pretended liberalism.

For these reasons, we, as a family, read your paper, not only with interest, but with trust and reliance; and we have felt, one and all, that its place could be filled by no other.

In regard to the Free Religious Association, I am with you in sympathy and good-will, and will gladly aid you, as far as to request that my name be enrolled in its membership, and to pledge myself to give a dollar each year to the work.

If my purse were as deep as my heart, I would send greater aid to this cause, but economy forbids that at present. Perhaps I may in future be able to do more.

This membership fee I shall send as directed to Felix Adler, President of the Association.

Hoping you will ever depend on my assistance so far as lies in my power, and with fullest confidence in the success of the noble cause in which you are engaged, I remain, Yours with highest regard,

MRS. A. M. WIGHT.

201 SUMMER ST., WORCESTER, MASS.

JESTINGS.

A NEBRASKA belle is engaged to marry a Mr. Lemon. He has promised to be her Lemon aid.

WHY IS A YOUNG lady forsaken by her lover like a deadly weapon? Because she is a cutlass.

A WESTERN EDITOR wishes no bodily harm to his subscribers, but he hopes some of them will be seized with remittent fever.

LADY (behind counter to cabman): "Pair of gloves? Yes. What is your number?" Cabman: "A hundred and eighty-nine!"

A CONNECTICUT MAN recently said: "Lend me a dollar. My wife has left me, and I want to advertise that I am not responsible for her debts."

BEFORE MARRIAGE a girl frequently calls her intended "her treasure"; but when he becomes her husband she looks upon him as "her treasurer."

A STAGE-DRIVER in the White Mountains when asked what he thought of the Notch, replied: "Well, I was born around here, you know, and I don't mind it so much. But if I should go down to New York I reckon likely I'd gawk around considerably myself."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM R. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. OLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
 fly, N.J.

J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 O. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
 Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 50 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"); with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting, 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newn, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
 fly, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
 Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of these several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,
SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture). 1.50
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets. 1.50
Gondard Days. 1.50
Records of a School. A new edition. 1.50
ALCOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Meg, Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols. 3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories. 1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl. 1.50
Little Men. 1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrations. 1.50
Heaven in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins." 1.50
Under the Lilacs. Illustrated. 1.50
Work; A Story of Experience. 1.75
Silver Pitchers and Independence. A Centennial Love Story. 1.25
My Boys, &c. 1.00
Shawl-Straps. 1.00
Cupid and Chow-Chow, &c. 1.00
My Girls, &c. 1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinafore, &c. 1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. 1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Orthodoxy. 2.00
Culture and Anarchy. 3.00
Last Essays on Church and Religion. 1.50
Mixed Essays. 2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma." 2.00
Literature and Dogma. 1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism, with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England. 1.75
Isaiah XL-LXVI. With the shorter Prophecies added to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes. 1.50
French Eton. 1.00
New Poems. 2.00
Bible Reading for Schools. .35
Higher Schools and Universities in Germany. With New Preface. 2.00
BACON'S Essays. 1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution. 2.25
Physics and Politics. 1.50
Lombard Street. 1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science. 1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 5.00
Mind and Matter. 1.50
Logic. Deductive and Inductive. 1 vol. Cloth. 2.00
Emotions and the Will. 5.00
BARING-GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages. 1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms. 2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations. 3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems. 2.00
The Rising Faith. 2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols. 5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics. .75
Eating and Drinking. .75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper. .50
BRACKETT (ANNA O.). The Education of American Girls. 1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols. 4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 1 vol.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 3 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol. .80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Moral Conditions. 3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. Cloth, extra. 1.50
A Book of Poems. 1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing. 1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse. 1.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside. 1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience. 1.00
Billy Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated. 1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals. 1.25
CLARKE (Dr. E. H.). Sex in Education. 1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions. 3.00
CLIFFORD (Wm. K.). Seeing and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols. 7.00
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of Old World. 1.25
Childhood of Religions. 1.50
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays. 3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age. 2.00
CONWAY (MONOURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage. 1.75
The Sacred Anthology. 2.00
Idols and Ideals. 1.50
COORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol. 2.00

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans. 2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship. 2.00
Historical Story Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies." 1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species. 2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols. 3.00
Journal of Researches. 2.00
Different "forms of Flowers." 1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals. 3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated. 5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth. 1.25
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol. Cloth. 1.25
Orchids. 1.75
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization. 2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth. 1.75
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated. 1.50
Daniel Deronda. 2 vols. 3.00
Felix Holt, the Radical. Illustrated. 1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols. 3.00
Romola. Illustrated. 1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner. Illustrated. 1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated. .50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series. Portrait. 1.50
Essays. Second Series. 1.50
Miscellanies. 1.50
Representative Men. 1.50
English Traits. 1.50
Conduct of Life. 1.50
Practical Wisdom. 1.50
May-day and Other Pieces. 1.50
Society and Solitude. 1.50
Letters and Social Aims. 1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger. 1.50
The Life and Work of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols. 5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion. 2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation. 3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols. 6.00
The Unseen World, and other Essays. 2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity. 1.50
Child's Book of Religion. 1.00
Transcendentalism in New England. 2.00
Life of Gerrit Smith. 2.00
Creed and Conduct. 1.00
Cradle of the Christ. 1.75
Rising and Setting Faith. 1.00
Visions of the Future. 1.00
The Life and Work of Rev. Amos A. Phelps. 2.50
Sermons. Old Series. 40 numbers, each 10c. 2 vols. half calf. .10
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each. 10c. 2 vols. 1.00
Stories from the Lips of a Teacher. 1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs. 1.00
The Spirit of the New Faith. 1.00
Sea-Creed. 1.50
Knowledge and Faith. 1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols. 9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences. 2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol. 1.00
Elective Affinities. 1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols. 3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham. 1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life. 2.00
Literary and Social Judgments. 2.00
Creed of Christendom. 7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead. 2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait. 5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France. 2.00
The Rights of Art. 2.00
The Intellectual Life. 2.00
Chapters on Animals. 2.00
Round my House. 2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River. 2.00
The two in one volume. 2.00
Wanderholms: A Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire. 2.00
Modern Frenchmen. Five Biographies. 2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner, R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts. 5.00
Etching and Etchers. 2.00
High Blount. Passes of the Alps. Land and Sea. 1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living. 1.50
Gala Days. 1.50
Woman's Wrongs. 1.50
Summer Rest. 1.50
A New Atmosphere. 1.50
Stumbling Blocks. 1.50
Wood-Gathering. 1.50
Sermons to the Clergy. 1.50
Skirmishes and Sketches. 1.50
First Love is Best. 1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures. 3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures. 1.50
2. Logical Lectures. 1.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters. 1.50
Verses. Enlarged Edition. 1.25
Bits of Talk about Art. Paper covers. 1.25
Bits of Talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks. 1.00
Rite of Travel at Home. 1.50
Nelly's Silver Mine. A Story of Colorado Life. Illustrated. 1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Old-Poor Papers. 1.50
An Old-Poor Romance. 1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment. 2.00
Atlantic Essays. 2.00
Oldport Days. 2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits. 10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life. 1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature. 1.25
On the Origin of Species. 1.00
More Criticism on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism. .50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals. 2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews. 1.75
Critiques and Addresses. 1.25
Physiology, an Introduction to Study of Nature. 2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures. 1.20
The Ghosts, etc. 1.25
The Mistakes of Moses. 1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.
No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall. 1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance," to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot. 1.50
III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith. 1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain. 1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq. 1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah F. Cooke, Jr. 2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine. 1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion, or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew. 1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D. 1.50
X. Science of Law. By Prof. S. Amos. 1.75
XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Marey. 1.75
XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper, M.D., LL.D. 1.75
XIII. The Theory of Descent, and Darwinism. By Prof. Oscar Schmidt. 1.50
XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Vogel. 2.00
XV. Fungi. By M. C. Cooke, M.A., LL.D. 1.50
XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney. 1.50
XVII. Money and Mechanism of Exchange. By Prof. B. Bosson. 1.75
XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel. 2.00
XIX. Animal Parasites and Mesmates. By Mons. Van Beneden. 1.50
XX. On Fermentations. By P. Schützenberger. 1.50
XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Bernstein. 1.75
XXII. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna. 1.50
XXIII. Studies in Spectrum Analysis. By J. N. Lockyer. 2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India. 5.00
China. 5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian. 2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato, Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols. 8.00
KNAPPET (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong. 1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols. 4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols. 3.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings. 4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics. 2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham. 1.50
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. Problems of Life and Mind. Vols. I and II. Per vol. 3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind. 3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method. 2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol. 2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols. 4.00
The Biglow Papers. Second Series. 1.50
Among my Books. 2.00
My Study Windows. 2.00
A Fable for Critics. .75
Under the Willows and other Poems. 1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal. .75
Three Memorials. Poems. 1.50
Fireside Travels. 1.50
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times. 5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols. 8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter. 1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol. 2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire. 1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations. 1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each. 2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each. 2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition. 2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol. 2.50
Representative Government. 2.50
Autobiography. 2.50
Memorial Volume. Life and Works. 1.00
Three Essays on Religion. 2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras. 1.50
Songs of the Sun Land. 1.50
The Ship in the Desert. 1.50
Songs of Italy. 1.25
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species. 1.75
Man and Apes. An Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol. 1.25
Lessons in Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter. 2.00
Contemporary Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes. 1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire. 2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols. 5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories. 1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series. 2.50
The Same. Second Series. 3.50
Chips from a Giant's Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., etc., comprising the work. 2 vols. 2.50
Chips from a Giant's Workshop. Vol. I. Lectures on the Science of Religion. 2.00
On Missions. A Lecture Delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873. 1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India. 2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Monarchy. 4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy. 1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical. 4.25
PARKEE (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion. 1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols. 4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham. The Two Christmas Celebrations.—A. D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	1.50 .60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHILIPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trothy Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Avis.....	1.50
Tr. itty's Wedding Tour. Illustrated.....	1.50
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.....	1.50
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHERLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S. flexible cloth.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By Foster, M.A., M.D., F.R.S.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.A.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. Logic. By W. S. Jevons.....	.50
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Economic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology.....	2.50
The Principles of Psychology 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology, Parts I, II, and III, each.....	1.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	2.00
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	2.00 2.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada. The Farewell Banquet to Rivers.....	2.00 1.50
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Saunterings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.....	1.50
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.....	2.00
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.30
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems.....	2.00
Child Life.....	.30

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.
VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving Principles of the Ox Brain and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.
A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, New York.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discloses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY—PRICE TWO PENCE.

THE SECULAR REVIEW.

EDITED BY CHARLES WATTS.

The SECULAR REVIEW is the leading organ of Secularism, and each week has Special Articles on Theological, Social, Scientific, and Political Subjects. Its distinctive features are the advocacy of Constructive Secularism, and the dissemination of useful information on all questions which affect the welfare of the people. Letters are inserted in its "OPEN COLUMN" from all who are courteous in the expression of their views; and a special department is allotted for "NOTES AND QUERIES."

The Contributors to the SECULAR REVIEW comprise the principal advocates of Secularism, including its founder, G. J. Holyoake.

CHARLES WATTS, Publisher,
84 Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

FOR

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,
23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?

11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS FOR 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING

NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kneen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarch; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 253 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Immense; Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE GHOSTS: Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child, etc. By Col. R. G. Ingersoll (his latest lectures). 232 pages. Price $1.50. Also, THE GODS, etc., same style. 253 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Enigmas of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half Calif., $5.00. Will be ready March 30.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. ANY OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 8,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH

AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27th YEAR. A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS'

LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
2. Max Müller.
3. Emerson.

For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N. Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR,

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest inventions and the most recent advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & Co. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 526.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JAN. 22, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

LIBERAL LEAGUE PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution; including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSES.

THE NEW YORK World remarks: "A misprint in the Alliance, whereby a Baptist contributor is made to speak of 'the diving plan for Christianizing the work' is almost too good to be accidental."

MR. KARL HEINZEN, who has been for twenty-six years editor of the German Pionier of this city, and who has recently been seriously ill, has now merged his paper in the Milwaukee Freidenker, for which he will still continue to write.

THE Christian Union remarks in reference to the late political convulsion in Maine: "Whenever in this country any considerable number of voters are more anxious for a party triumph than for a fair execution of the actual will of the people, the nation will be in a danger compared with which that involved in the civil war was light."

POPE LEO XIII. does not confine his interest to his proposed revival of Scholastic Philosophy, but, 'not content with establishing an 'organ' of his own, has under consideration a proposition to establish a Congregation of the Press. All the Catholic journals are to have at the Vatican a seat of tribunal and office for giving and receiving instructions. In other words, the whole Catholic press would take their tone from the Vatican. It is evident what a power this would place in the Pope's hands."

THE BOSTON Advertiser, the New York Independent, and other journals, try hard to believe that somehow or other Pope Leo XIII. is more "liberal" than Pope Pius IX., and has a secret repugnance to the latter's Encyclical and Syllabus Errorum, of 1864. But Cardinal Manning, in the North American Review, quotes from Leo's own Encyclical of 1878 the declaration that public authority derived from the people is a "novel impiety, unheard of even among the heathen nations." That is a good cud for journalistic ruminants.

THE BOSTON Sunday Herald thus forcibly expresses the principle which ought to settle the school question forever: "What the State needs is good citizens, and not good Congregationalists, Methodists, Catholics, Unitarians, Baptists, Presbyterians, Spiritualists, Jews, or Mohammedans. But there is one error which many worthy people fall into; namely, that this is a Protestant government. It is nothing of the sort. It is purely secular, and one religion is as free as the other. In this respect, we would have the public schools like the government."

THE Christian Herald, of London, reports that Sir Moses Montefiore, who has often been in Palestine with a view to the improvement of the Jews, and for whom he has expended large sums of money, is now seeking to secure the reestablishment of his race at Jerusalem, and has taken steps to restore the city. He recently gave orders for the cultivation of all the land in front of the Judah Torah houses. The rocks will be removed, terraces will be built as they probably existed in the time of King Solomon, and divided into twenty-two partitions, so that every inmate of the Torah houses may cultivate the necessary vegetables for himself and family. Sir Moses has also caused a very large cistern to be constructed in the centre of the field, which will secure a full supply of water.

HERE IS A shrewd defence of the "policy of silence" on religious questions, taken from a letter to the Springfield Republican: "The newspapers here are helping on as cleverly as it was thought they would the little speculation that brings 'Prof. Denton' here to lecture. The 'professor' lets fly at the Christian religion. Pious people pour into the papers their replies to him: others, un-Christian, reply to these. Some are refused in one paper, and triumphantly printed in another. War, smoke, and all other confusion and discord, are developed, with, behold, the expected result. Prof. Denton is quite the hero of the hour, and his course is well enough advertised to be certain to pay. It is remarkable to what extent people of good Christian faith feel it their duty to silence all who speak against their creed. They forget that advertising is an act developed since the Christian era began, and that, in literally interpreting their Scriptural instructions as to proper conduct and the propagation of their faith, they may be hurting their cause far more than by keeping still, since they are holding up to prominence, 'which now always means an audience, the very one they want to put down. They do not know, what is the fact, that, by outsiders who follow these new lights of Dentonism, spiritism, and other 'offs,' this rushing to the defence of what is sacred is regarded as attempting to protect what is weak, and does more harm than good."

HERE IS AN ITEM of interest, quoted from Unity: "The Modern Review, a new quarterly, appears with the new year with Richard Acland Armstrong, B.A., Dr. Carpenter, Miss Cobbe, Wickstead, Dr. Vance Smith, and other familiar names on the first list. The following sentence from its prospectus leads us to expect to find in this an able ally in the propagation of Freedom, Fellowship, and Character in Religion: 'Close observation reveals the fact that types of orthodoxy, more or less pledged to tradition, and types of agnosticism, more or less distinctly atheistic, divide the chief hospitality of existing Reviews; while types of religious belief, spiritual, yet reasonable, fail of adequate expression. It ensues that religion and science, faith and reason, tend to be popularly regarded as contradictories; nor will it be disputed that the opinion is rapidly spreading that such is their relation. If, then, there are men who, amid many diversities of thought and habit, yet agree in fervent loyalty to the principles of free inquiry, in fearless welcome to the teachings of modern science, and in deep conviction that the sanctities of faith and hope must be permanently characteristic of sound manhood, these constitute a third party in the intellectual world with peculiar claims to share the public heed. To afford competent writers within this circle their due influence, whatever that may be, in the formation of the national thought and sentiment, is the purpose of the Modern Review.'"

THE ART OF "spirit photography" has been developed to a marvellous extent: "Prof. Leuchin, of Moscow, has just published The Mysteries of Hell and its Inhabitants,—a folio volume, enriched by seventy photographs. Some of these are portraits of the leading native celebrities, while others reproduce the processes of torment most in vogue among the present administrators of the Tartarean penal code. In his preface to this remarkable book, the learned professor gravely remarks: 'We have heretofore only been able, by the aid of conjecture, to arrive at a dim apprehension of the tortures that await us in the subterranean realm; but I have at last, after protracted and all but superhuman exertions, succeeded in throwing light upon all this more or less vague information, and in producing an absolutely authentic description of hell and its inhabitants. Seventy striking original photographs of eminent infernal personages, and a faithful depiction of the last judgment, will be found to represent completely and exhaustively all those phenomena which have hitherto proved insolubly enigmatical to humanity at large.' It is to be regretted that the professor should have preserved a sphynxian silence respecting the details of his journey in the lower regions, and of the visits he must have paid to the diabolical dignitaries who so amiably permitted him to photograph their expressive lineaments. In enabling us, however, to contemplate undoubted likenesses of Lucifer, Ashtaroth, Beelzebub, and sundry other distinguished characters of the same class, Prof. Leuchin has established a claim to our lasting gratitude."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass
Vice-Presidents.
HON. F. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo
HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Irvington, Ind
MR. WM. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass
MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....Boston, Mass
MR. F. SCHUMEMANN.....Pottt.....San Francisco, Cal
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass
RABBI B. FELSENTHAL.....Chicago, Ill
REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich
RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York
W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Editor "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can
REV. ROBERT COOLYER.....Chicago, Ill
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill
DR. T. L. BROWN.....Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa
ELDER F. W. EVANS.....Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City
MRS. AMY POST.....Rochester, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH CODY STANTON.....Tenafly, N. J.
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....Lottsburgh, Va
JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N. Y.
RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N. Y.
Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.
Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Board of Directors.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....W. H. HAMLEN.
F. E. ABBOT.....O. D. B. MILLS.
D. G. CRANDON.
Executive Committee.
Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....JOHN ABBENS, Monticello.
California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOELT, Greenville.
Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
Iowa.....J. C. MICHEER, Adel.
Kansas.....JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Maine.....DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
Michigan.....KARL SCHMEMMANN, Detroit.
Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
Nevada.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New Jersey.....FRANCIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
New York.....O. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
Oregon.....SAMUEL COIT, Humboldt Basin.
Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
South Carolina.....F. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
Vermont.....E. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
West Virginia.....DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Wyoming.....W. F. WILCOX, Yankton.
District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.
Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 27, 1878.
WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and
WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and
WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and
WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,
Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.
Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.
The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y. MORRIS HAYS, Rochester, N.Y.
FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. UEBINO, West Newton, land, N.Y.
Z. T. WATKINS, Syracuse, N.Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N.Y.
NETTIE C. TRUESDELL, Syra-FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, cuse, N.Y.
GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MORRIS W. DODGE, Albany, N.Y.
HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
T. O. GAGE, Fayetteville, N.Y. HOPE WHIPPLE, Boston, Mass.
B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
JOHN W. TRUESDELL, Syra-cuse, N.Y.
CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Al-bany, N.Y.
EBEN TURK, Chelsea, Mass. H. P. STARK, Rochester, N.Y.
JOHN NILL, Watertown, N.Y. JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N.Y.
E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass. M. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N.Y.
THOS. DUGAN, Albany, N.Y. JOHN PREST, Albany, N.Y.
JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N.Y. O. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
D. B. MOREY, Malden, Mass.

Paine Memorial Building.

QUESTIONS FOR LIBERALS TO CONSIDER.—WHAT HAS BECOME OF THE JAMES LICK LECTURE FUND?—HAVE THE STOCKHOLDERS OF "PAINE MEMORIAL CORPORATION" A GOOD TITLE TO THAT PROPERTY?

The Boston Investigator of January 7, 1880, contains three announcements all fraught with importance to "the liberal public," as follows:—

PAINE MEMORIAL CORPORATION.

The First Annual Meeting of the Paine Memorial Corporation will be held in Paine Memorial Building, Appleton Street, Boston (Mass.), Jan. 29, 1880, at 11 o'clock A.M., for the selection of officers and the transaction of other business. A full attendance, in person or by proxy, is respectfully requested.

ELIZUR WRIGHT, President.
J. S. VERITY, Treasurer.
E. MENDUM, Secretary.

Also, the same paper of same date editorially announces a "Paine Celebration" for the same day and place, and says:—

PAINE CELEBRATION.

"The friends of liberal principles and of universal mental freedom are invited to attend the one hundred and forty-third anniversary of Thomas Paine's birthday. . . . As this meeting will be one of much importance to the cause in which every liberal is interested, it is to be hoped there will be a general attendance of all who can be with us."

And, lastly, the following appeal is also made for money:—

THE PAINE MEMORIAL AND HOME OF THE BOSTON INVESTIGATOR.

"We again appeal to the friends of liberal principles, and especially to the friends of the Investigator, for help to enable the Corporation to hold and keep the Paine Memorial Building, which has now become the property of said Corporation. But a few months remain before the mortgage runs out. To meet the debt, it is only necessary that all who have subscribed for stock pay their subscriptions immediately, and that others interested in the enterprise come forward and take stock at once. The stock cannot fail to be a good investment, and therefore we urge all friends to the Investigator to secure stock at once,—$25 a share."

Why they are Important.

Disclaiming in the outset all personal feeling in the matter upon which I write, I wish to say, by way of introduction, that the above announcements naturally suggest that now is the proper time for "every liberal" to find out what kind of a "cause" it is in which he is so earnestly solicited to become "interested." With a sincere desire to cast light upon a dark way and enable those "Interested" in Paine

Memorial to ascertain exactly how that enterprise stands, I shall bring forward some points for general consideration.

The Commencement of Paine Memorial.

In an article published in the Boston Herald, May 26, 1879, J. P. Mendum says that the Investigator of Jan. 18, 1871, contained a card "to the liberal public," which stated:—

"At a meeting of gentlemen of Boston and vicinity, favorable to the establishment in the city of Boston of a permanent location for the Investigator, . . . the undersigned were selected to act as trustees: . . . J. P. Mendum, Horace Seaver, T. L. Savage, J. M. Beckett, Trustees of the Building Fund.
"BOSTON, Jan. 10, 1871."

Mr. Mendum says further in the same article:—

"In accordance with the request made in the circular, contributions came in from persons in all parts of the country."

It is unfortunate that he did not state how much did so come into his hands between the 18th of January, 1871, and the 1st of March, 1871, for on the latter day a new card was issued as follows:—

Boston Investigator Supplement.
Circular to the Liberal Public.

DEAR SIR,—We propose to purchase or erect in the city of Boston a building to be known as the Paine Memorial Hall, as a testimonial to the great services of Thomas Paine. . . . To accomplish this, we need the assistance and contributions of all the friends of Mr. Paine and of the Investigator; and, believing you to be one of the number on whom we may rely, this circular is sent to you, hoping you will give it your aid and assistance by contributing liberally yourself and inducing others to do so. . . .

We send out these circulars to the liberal public, trusting that each one will consider himself or herself a special missionary to procure and forward to Josiah P. Mendum, our Treasurer, all possible contributions. We trust, also, that in forwarding pledges of money, to be paid when called for, the subscriber will rest assured that, in developing a plan for the success of this enterprise, the highest practical business talent of Boston shall be employed in devising a legal method by which our rights, the rights of the subscribers, will be perpetually guaranteed.

[Signed] J. P. MENDUM,
HORACE SEAVER,
J. M. BECKETT,
T. L. SAVAGE,
M. ALTMAN, } Trustees.

March 1, 1871.

(In 1872, J. M. Beckett died, and D. R. Burt accepted his place on the above board of so-called "Trustees": they were not a legalized body at all.)

In response to this call, money was donated and subscriptions or pledges made of money to be paid upon demand. In January, 1873, Mr. James Lick, of California, being a liberal man, an admirer of Paine, and also a believer in the integrity of the supposed "Trustees" of the proposed "Paine Memorial Hall," made a very handsome donation of real estate. He named these men as Trustees of his grant. They accepted his Trust, and were therefore, in the matter of the Lick donation, legally appointed "Trustees," but in no other. The following, from Mr. Lick's Trust Deed, will fully explain his wish and purpose in making his donation:—

James Lick's Deed of Trust.

This Indenture, made the sixteenth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, between James Lick, of the County of Santa Clara, State of California, party of the first part, and J. P. Mendum, Horace Seaver, T. L. Savage, Morris Altman, and D. R. Burt, of the City of Boston, State of Massachusetts, parties of the second part, witnesseth that the said party of the first part hath donated, given, granted, and confirmed, and by these presents doth donate, give, grant, and confirm, unto the said parties of the second part and the survivors or survivor of them, all that certain parcel of land situate and being in the County of Santa Clara and State of California, and being a portion of the place known as "Lick's Mills"—[here follows a full description of the granted premises]—to have and to hold, all and singular, the said hereinbefore granted and described premises, with the appurtenances, unto the said parties of the second part, and the survivors or survivor of them, upon the Trusts, nevertheless, and to and for the uses, interests, and purposes hereinafter limited, described, and declared, that is to say, UPON TRUST to take possession and charge of said hereinbefore granted and described premises, and to sell and convey the same within a reasonable time, and to pay over the proceeds of such sale to the association, corporation, or society known as the Paine Memorial Hall, of Boston, Massachusetts, one-half of such proceeds to be applied by said association, corporation, or society to the Paine Memorial Hall Building Fund, and the remaining half of such proceeds to be invested by said association, corporation, or society, and only the interest or income from such investment to be used as a fund to defray the expenses of Lectures to be delivered under the direction and supervision of said association, corporation, or society. In witness whereof, the said party of the first part hath hereunto set his hand and seal, the day and year first above written.

Seal. Signed, sealed, and delivered, being first duly stamped in the presence of [Signed] JAMES LICK.

The word "three" being written over an erasure on the fifth line of the first page before signing—
[Signed] EDGAR POMEROY.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, } ss.
COUNTY OF SANTA CLARA, }

On this sixteenth day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, before

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

Chartered by th National Liberal League of America.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Florence Liberal League.
SYRACUSE, N.Y.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Onondaga County Liberal League.
ALBANY, N.Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.
BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
PASSAIC CITY, N.J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Passaic City Liberal League.
JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jacksonville Liberal League.
ROCHESTER, N.Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Gale.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jefferson Liberal League of Rochester.
CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandall.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.

N.B.—The above is an acknowledgment of the fact that a charter is due and will be sent as soon as possible. Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues originally chartered by the "National Liberal League" will receive charters from the "National Liberal League of America" without extra charge, if they send a certified copy of their vote to accept the following invitation:—

"Voted, That all Local Leagues that approve the formation of the National Liberal League of America are invited to dissolve their connection with the old League, and to join this League."

me, Cornelius Finley, County Clerk and ex-officio Clerk of the County Court in and for said County, personally appeared James Lick, known to me to be the person whose name is subscribed to the within instrument, and acknowledged to me that he executed the same.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said court, the day and year in this certificate first above written.

[Signed] CORNELIUS FINLEY,
Seal. County Clerk and ex-officio clerk of said County Court.

The Property is sold.

In the spring of 1873, D. R. Burt was sent to California by the "Trustees" of Mr. Lick's grant to dispose of the property. He sold it in August of that year, and forwarded the money to J. P. Mendum.

In the winter of 1878, I wrote to D. R. Burt, asking if he held receipts for the money paid to Mendum from the proceeds of the Lick property sale. In reply, he wrote as follows:—

DUNLEITH, Ill., Feb. 16, 1878.

CHARLES ELLIS, Esq.:

Dear Friend,—... You ask me if I have a receipt for the money paid over to Mendum from the sale of the Lick property. I hold his letter acknowledging the receipt of a draft of $19,888.88 from that Fund, and also another of later date acknowledging a draft of $3,000 in gold, less exchange of $15. Gold at that time was twelve per cent., which amounted to $3,853.20, the aggregate amounting to $20,242.08. ...

Respectfully yours,

D. R. BURT.

The receipt of this money was never acknowledged in the Investigator.

But in his article in the Herald of May 26, 1879, J. P. Mendum acknowledges the receipt of the proceeds of the sale of the Lick property as follows:—

"In 1873, James Lick, of California, made a donation of real estate; and the proceeds, which amounted to $19,619.88, were paid over to me, as Treasurer of the Trustees."

It will be observed that there is a discrepancy of $622.20 between the two statements.

Of course that half of the proceeds of that sale which was intended for the Paine Memorial Building went into the building; but the question which thousands of people have asked, and which has never been satisfactorily answered by the men in whom Mr. Lick trusted, is this:—

The Question.

WHERE IS THAT HALF OF MR. LICK'S GIFT WHICH HE INSTRUCTED HIS TRUSTEES TO INVEST SO AS TO PROCURE AN INCOME TO DEFRAY THE EXPENSE OF LECTURES?

In his Herald article of May 26, 1879, Mendum states that on the 8th of May, 1874, "at the office of the Boston Investigator,—present, Josiah P. Mendum, Horace Seaver, Theodore L. Savage, Morris Altman, and Morris Altman as proxy for D. R. Burt,"—a meeting of the above named "Trustees" of the Lick grant was held. Mendum speaks of their action at that meeting as follows:—

"By this meeting, at which every one interested was present, it was voted that all moneys, which included the so-called Lick Lecture Fund, be used for the purpose of erecting the building. By a careful perusal, it would seem that every safeguard was thrown around the funds possible, to prevent their being devoted to any other use than that intended. After it was determined to erect a building, a lot of land was secured on Appleton Street; and, as two of the Trustees declined to act any further, and refused to contract any personal liability, the deed was made to J. P. Mendum, Horace Seaver, and Theodore L. Savage, as joint tenants, they being legally advised so to do. There being no corporation, they could not hire money as trustees. Contracts were made for the building, and a mortgage was raised of $40,000, the notes of which were signed by myself, Horace Seaver and Theodore L. Savage. The cost of the building was $97,220.71, and now how to raise this money was the question. Mr. Seaver could not raise it. Theodore L. Savage could not raise it, and he never did contribute but $100. The mortgage of $40,000 was not sufficient, with the contributed funds; and, as we required at that time some $20,000 more, what remained to be done? We found a party who was willing to advance $50,000 on a first mortgage; and, therefore, the old mortgage was cancelled, and a new one was executed. Then we had to raise some $10,000, in addition to the contributed funds; and, as funds were immediately needed, it was voted by the Trustees that the best investment to make of the Lick Fund was to put it into the building, and pay off the contracts, and this was done by the full consent of Seaver, Seaver, and myself."

J. P. Mendum in the above makes a plain and positive avowal that on two different occasions the Trustees of the Lick Lecture Fund voted to invest it in Paine Memorial Hall:—

First: At a meeting of the Trustees on May 8th, 1874; and

Secondly: After Paine Hall had been built and they had raised $50,000 on it by a first mortgage, and needed $10,000 in addition,—and, as funds were immediately needed, it was voted by the Trustees that the best investment to make of the Lick (Lecture) Fund was to put it into the building and pay off the contracts, and this was done by the full consent of Seaver, Savage, and myself."

Now what are the facts?

1. The law requires that trustees shall always take good and sufficient security for invested trust funds, and that the security so taken shall be publicly recorded in the office for such records made and provided.

2. An act of a board of trustees done in good faith will be done officially: will be proposed in meeting and carried by vote, and will be duly entered upon the records of the Board by the proper official.

3. At the only meeting of the Trustees of the Lick gift to American Liberalism, the Trustees organized and did their work in proper order, and placed it on their records, as far as it related to Paine Memorial, and we cannot therefore suppose them to have been ignorant of their duties.

4. But they made no record whatever regarding the Lick Lecture Fund which Mendum and Seaver now claim was invested in Paine Memorial by vote of the Trustees in regular meeting.

I will here produce the official record of the Only Meeting ever held by the Trustees of the Lick Funds.

The Investigator of May 13, 1874, contains the following official record of the first and last meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Paine Memorial Fund and the Lick Lecture Fund. It is of importance here only to show what was not done by the Trustees of the Lecture Fund. The report is as follows:—

THE PAINE HALL FUND.

At the first regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Paine Hall Fund, held May 8, 1874, at the office of the Boston Investigator,—present, Josiah P. Mendum, Horace Seaver, Theodore L. Savage, Morris Altman, and Morris Altman as proxy for D. R. Burt,—

Upon motion of Morris Altman, Mr. J. P. Mendum was chosen temporary chairman, and on motion Morris Altman was chosen temporary secretary.

Upon motion of Morris Altman, it was voted that the Board now consider the state of the finances, which was adopted.

The Treasurer reported cash received by contributors up to date.....	$28,536.30
Amount expended up to date.....	371.83

Balance now in Treasury.....	$28,164.47
------------------------------	-------------

Upon motion, the report of the Treasurer was accepted with thanks.

Morris Altman offered the following resolution, which was adopted:—

Resolved, that a committee of three be appointed, with power to select and purchase suitable land upon which to erect a building no less than four stories high, in Boston, to be called and known as the Paine Memorial Hall and Investigator Home; the lower stories of which shall be let for business purposes; the second floor to be forever devoted to a lecture-room, open to all comers, and for the discussion of every question, without any exception, upon equal terms and conditions; one of the remaining floors to be forever used as the publication home of the Investigator without cost, so long as it is devoted to its present purposes, and the remaining portions to be rented to suitable tenants.

Upon motion of Morris Altman, the following Trustees were appointed such Committee: Horace Seaver, Josiah P. Mendum, and T. L. Savage.

It was also moved and seconded that the expenditures by the above Committee should not exceed the sum of $60,000, which was unanimously adopted.

Upon motion of T. L. Savage, it was

Resolved, that no moneys shall be drawn from the Treasury except upon a requisition drawn and signed by the permanent Secretary of the Board, and countersigned by the permanent President thereof, and that such requisition be a voucher to the Treasurer for said payments.

Upon motion of Morris Altman, it was also

Resolved, that all bills and contracts entered into by the Committee, before being paid, shall be properly itemized, and shall all be preserved by the Treasurer, and by him presented before the next meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Morris Altman moved, and Horace Seaver seconded the motion, that upon the purchase of the land and the proposed erection of the building, and as fast thereafter as may become necessary, all money on hand, and as fast as it should come into the Treasury, be used for the purposes voted upon, which was adopted.

Upon motion of Morris Altman, it was

Resolved, that the interest upon one-half of $19,619.88 be placed semi-annually in the hands of T. L. Savage, and by him "used as a fund to defray the expense of lectures delivered under the direction and supervision of the Board of Trustees, or a majority thereof."

Upon motion of J. P. Mendum, it was

Resolved, that all contributors to the Paine Memorial Hall Fund be requested to forward at once such parts or the whole of the amounts so contributed by them.

Horace Seaver and Morris Altman were appointed, upon motion, a committee to frame suitable and proper by-laws by which the Board shall be governed.

An election of permanent officers of the Board of Trustees then took place, and the following gentlemen were elected: President, Horace Seaver; Treasurer, J. P. Mendum; Secretary, Morris Altman.

Upon organizing the permanent Board of Trustees, Horace Seaver assumed the chair, and Morris Altman acted as secretary. The above resolutions were then read, and regularly adopted as a whole.

Mr. Mendum then moved that the entire proceedings of the Board be published in the Investigator, and that all papers friendly to the project be requested to copy.

Adopted. The Board then adjourned.

[Signed] HORACE SEAVAR, President.
MORRIS ALTMAN, Secretary.

BOSTON, May 8, 1874.

Such is the official record of the first meeting of the Trustees, who, as Mendum says, voted to invest the Lick Lecture Fund in Paine Memorial Building.

Now where is the official record of a second meeting of the Trustees of the Lick Lecture Fund, after the Paine Memorial had been built, and $50,000 had been raised on it by a first mortgage, and the "Building Committee" "needed $10,000 more immediately," and it was then "voted," as is alleged by J. P. Mendum, "by the Trustees that the best investment to make of the Lick Lecture Fund was to put it into the building?"

Where is the record of that meeting of the Trustees of the Lick Lecture Fund, Mr. J. P. Mendum? "The liberal public" that gave its money to build Paine Memorial, the heirs and admirers of James Lick, who created a Lecture Fund for the advancement of honest mental culture, have a right to examine it. Justice to yourself requires that you produce it. You cannot produce it? Very well, then, the inevitable conclusion is that the Lick Lecture Fund never was legally invested in Paine Memorial or anywhere else.

What the Treasurer of the Lecture Fund has to say.

One of the Trustees of the Lick Lecture Fund, Morris Altman, is dead. Another of them, D. R. Burt, was not present at the only meeting the Trustees ever held. A third one, T. L. Savage, I have "interviewed" with the following result:—

Question.—"How many meetings did the Trustees of the James Lick Lecture Fund and gift to the Paine Memorial ever hold?"

Answer.—"They never held but the one meeting of the 8th of May, 1874."

Q.—"Did they at that meeting in any way invest that half of the Lick grant which was to be a permanent fund to defray the expense of lectures?"

A.—"No, sir, they did not. There was no movement made to invest it there; or, at the most, there was nothing more than informal talk of what might be done. We certainly would not have dared to invest the money without making some record of it and taking some security for it; and I know that there is nowhere in existence a scratch of pen or other sign to show what has become of that money since it went into the hands of J. P. Mendum. If he put that money into Paine Hall, he did so without my knowledge and consent."

Q.—"What is the meaning of the resolution passed at your meeting of May 8, 1874, to place the interest on a certain sum of money in your hands semi-annually, if the money had not been invested by the Trustees?"

A.—"The money had been placed in Mendum's hands by D. R. Burt, who sold the mill property given by Mr. Lick as the accredited agent of the Trustees, in September, 1873; and, without any official investment, it was understood that he had banked it in his own name, and that it was drawing interest; and that is the interest that was voted into my hands. We had not time to consider the best method of investing that money, and, as we expected to hold frequent meetings of the Board, it was not considered important to take any measures in regard to the investment of the Lecture Fund at that time."

Q.—"And you never had another meeting of the Trustees?"

A.—"No, sir, that Board of Trustees never met again."

Q.—"Have you ever received or disbursed any income from this Lick Lecture Fund?"

A.—"No, sir, I have never received or handled or caused to be paid out one cent of that money, either of principal or interest."

BOSTON, Jan. 9, 1880.

The above "answers" are correctly reported.

THEO. L. SAVAGE.

But Messrs. Mendum and Seaver, each over his respective name, in the Investigator of June 11, 1879, charged against Mr. Savage, their co-Trustee, that he could not be believed, even under oath. As his statement above conflicts with theirs, they may renew their charge. Hence I will anticipate their objection and meet it here.

Let us suppose, then, that Mr. Savage is not truthful; let us even suppose that Mendum did put the Lick Lecture Fund into Paine Memorial, and that Savage knew of it at the time, and winked at the misappropriation of a trust fund thus surreptitiously dropped into a property of which they jointly held the title, without making any record of the investment and without placing a mortgage upon the property as security for the Trust so used; let us suppose that Savage has been equally delinquent to duty with Mendum and Seaver, or with Mendum alone, if Seaver knew nothing of what was being done; let us suppose that Savage connived at Mendum's misappropriation of the Lick Lecture Fund so far as to have largely enticed Mr. Mendum to sin, and yet adroitly managed to keep himself behind the door or in a position where he might reap, with his cat's-paw Mendum, some benefit from the lost, strayed, or stolen Lecture Fund, if the fraud should not be exposed, or where he might with apparent honesty of purpose turn State's evidence against Mendum, or run away from his old comrade if he saw danger ahead,—let us suppose all this possible, probable, or, if you like, true. But how can that affect this case?

This question can be answered beyond cavil in two simple propositions:—

1. If Savage has told the truth in his answers to the above questions, there will be no record in existence of any investment of the Lick Lecture Fund.

2. If Mendum has told the truth in his statements in the Herald of May 26, 1879, and in the Investigator of June 11, 1879, there must be in existence records that will prove beyond question that the Lick Lecture Fund was invested in the Paine Memorial Building.

But the fact is, as is evident, that there is not a scratch of pen, not a letter or a line or other sign anywhere in existence, to prove that anything has been done with the Lick Lecture Fund by its Trustees since it was placed in the hands of J. P. Mendum, in September, 1873.

In the light of the foregoing record and statement, I wish to call attention to

The Opinion of Seth J. Thomas.

A bit of Paine Hall history will be necessary at this point. In the spring of 1877, Savage agreed to deed to a Board of Trustees, whom Mendum should select, all his interest in Paine Memorial. On the 18th of May, 1877, the auctioneer's flag fluttered over the Hall. At 12 M., the property would be sold, unless Savage would sign a deed containing a clause to the effect that all the Lecture Fund money had been used in erecting Paine Memorial. Savage positively declined to sign such a deed, claiming that the Lecture Fund had not been invested anywhere. The meeting occurred in Seaver's room in the Paine Memorial. The time had passed in a war of words until 11.30 A.M. There was no time to lose. At last, the following agreement was made, and a postponement of sale secured:—

BOSTON, May 18, 1877.

We, the undersigned, agree to sign a good and sufficient deed conveying the Paine Memorial Building to a Board of Trustees named in a deed or papers now in the hands of A. B. Brown, on or before five o'clock to-morrow, the 19th. . . .

[Signed]

J. P. MENDUM.
HORACE SEAVER.
T. L. SAVAGE.

On the same day, this agreement was supplemented with the following:—

BOSTON, May 18, 1877.

It is hereby agreed the time for making the conveyance within referred to should be and is extended to Tuesday, May 22, at or before five o'clock.

[Signed]

J. P. M., H. S., T. L. S.

On the 21st, Savage received the following note from Mendum's agent:—

125 TREMONT STREET, BOSTON,
May 21, 1877.

MR. T. L. SAVAGE:

Dear Sir,—I have copied the articles of Trust (by Mr. Brown's request) into a deed, and the papers are with Seth J. Thomas, Esq., who is to look the matter over and see that it is all right. Will you please have Mrs. Savage come to his office with yourself to-morrow, Aug. 22, at 3 o'clock P.M., when I hope everything will be adjusted and papers signed satisfactorily all round.

Yours truly,

J. M. WADE.

On receipt of this note, Savage and myself called at Wade's office to examine what had been "copied by Mr. Brown's request." We found that a new deed had been prepared with the objectionable clause touching the Lecture Fund altered and reduced and brought in again in such a way as to make Savage's signature to the deed still serve as an admission that the Lick Lecture Fund had been put into Paine Memorial. The objectionable words in this new deed, which is now before me, were these:—

"Together with the Lecture Fund, so called, all of said funds having thus far been used in the construction and expenses incurred in said building."

The result of our visit was that Mrs. Savage did not come to the city to execute said deed. But at the appointed hour Mr. Savage and myself went to Mr. Thomas' office, and there found Mendum, Seaver, and Wade, their auctioneer. Mr. Thomas inquired their wishes. Mendum explained that they had met to execute the deed in his hands, as per agreement of May 18. Savage explained that on the 18th he had refused to execute a deed, because it embodied the Lick Lecture Fund, and agreed to sign a deed which should omit that clause. The present deed had been altered slightly, but still contained a clause affirming the investment of the Lick Lecture Fund in Paine Memorial, and, as it had never been so invested, he should not sign such a deed. Seaver supported Mendum in his statement that the Lecture Fund had been invested in Paine Memorial; and Mr. Thomas gave the gentlemen the following advice:—

"Gentlemen, I can do nothing for you until you first agree among yourselves as to what you will do. If you have put this Lecture Fund into Paine Hall without security, the first and right thing to do is to place a mortgage upon the Paine Hall property covering the Lecture Fund; or you may make a declaration of trust covering this Fund; or you can settle in equity; but I think you had better settle without going to law."

I have this day, Jan. 9, 1880, submitted the above to Mr. Thomas, together with the deed which was placed in his hands by Mr. Wade (see Wade's letter to Savage, May 21, 1877); and he recalled the circumstances of the meeting at his office, and said that, while he could not exactly remember his language used at that time, he thought that my statement of it was probably correct; and he gave me permission to use his name to that extent in this connection.

We have now:—

First: A statement from one Trustee, J. P. Mendum, that the Lick Lecture Fund was twice voted into Paine Memorial by the Board of Trustees. And Second: A counter-statement from another Trustee, T. L. Savage, that there never was but one meeting of the Board of Trustees, and that at that meeting there was no vote to invest the Lick Lecture Fund anywhere.

1. In support of his position and statement, Mendum produces the record of one meeting of the Trustees; but, unfortunately for him, it contains no record of any investment or proposed investment of that Fund.

2. He produces no record whatever of his alleged second meeting and vote of the Trustees.

3. He produces no mortgages or other security of any kind taken by the Trustees to cover the money which Mr. Lick gave them "upon trust," and which Mendum declares they invested in Paine Hall.

4. The evidence is overwhelmingly against Mr. Mendum.

If he put the Lecture Fund into Paine Hall, he did so illegally, and therefore he misappropriated it.

If he does not now make it good to the Trustees, he must fall under the charge of something worse. For the honor of Liberalism, it is to be hoped that Mr. Mendum will restore both principal and interest.

Have the Stockholders of the Paine Memorial Corporation a Good Title to that Property?

It is well known that the property when the Memorial was completed stood deeded to J. P. Mendum, T. L. Savage, and H. Seaver as "joint tenants." They took it so under the advice of Hon. John P. Healy, one of the ablest lawyers of Boston. Mr. Healy has repeatedly given his opinion in this case, to the effect that the joint tenants were trustees in fact, under every legal restriction that binds trustees. The deed runs as follows:—

The Deed.

Know all men . . . that I, Joseph F. Paul, . . . in consideration of $25,000 to me paid by Josiah P. Mendum, . . . Horace Seaver, . . . and Theodore L. Savage, . . . the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, do hereby give, grant, bargain, sell, and convey unto the said Mendum, Seaver, and Savage, as joint tenants and not as tenants in common, their heirs and assigns forever, a certain parcel of land situated on Appleton Street in said Boston, . . . to have and to hold the above granted premises [the Paine Hall land] to the said Mendum, Seaver, and Savage as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common, their heirs and assigns, to their own use and behoof forever. . . .

Twentieth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-four.

[Signed]

JOSEPH F. PAUL.
RACHEL PAUL.

In May, 1877, Savage, being anxious to get clear of Paine Hall and the annoyance of Mendum's choleric uneasiness, agreed with Seaver to deed that property to Mendum personally, if he (Mendum) would release Savage from his liability on the notes held against Paine Memorial.

The deed was drawn up, and Savage carried it home on the 3d of May, 1877, for his wife to sign. She did sign it. It runs as follows:—

An Unexecuted Deed.

Know all men by these presents that we, Theodore L. Savage . . . and Horace Seaver, . . . in consideration of one dollar paid by Josiah P. Mendum, . . . do hereby give, grant, bargain, sell, and convey unto the said J. P. Mendum, his heirs and assigns, a certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated on Appleton Street, Boston, . . . [description of Paine Memorial] to have and to hold . . . to the said J. P. Mendum and his heirs and assigns to their own use and behoof forever. . . . This third day of May, 1877.

[Signed]

AUGUSTA M. SAVAGE.

(Witness) E. F. COLEMAN for A. M. S.

The next day, May 4, at 12 o'clock, Paine Memorial was to be sold at auction, unless Savage would execute this deed, under foreclosure of Mendum's second mortgage, according to the following advertisement in the Boston Transcript:—

Mortgagees' Sale of real estate on Appleton Street, Boston, known as "Paine Memorial Hall" building. . . . Friday, May 4, 1877, all and singular. . . . OWEN JONES, Assignee of Mortgagee.

By J. M. WADE, Auctioneer.

The sale was to take place at 12 o'clock, noon. At 10 A.M., Savage was to meet Seaver and Mendum at the office of Mendum's attorney to execute the above deed. At 9 A.M., Savage and myself called upon Mr. Healy, and placed this deed before him. He looked it over, and said to Savage with much emphasis:—

"Don't put your name to that paper. You are a Trustee of that property, and cannot sell it legally. If you do so, you become at once liable to prosecution for misuse of your trust. Don't you sign it! You, as joint tenants, can recommend any persons you please as trustees of the property, and after they are appointed you can assign your trust to them; but you cannot make them trustees. That can only be done by court. And any deed that you execute, conveying that property to any but legally appointed trustees, is not worth the paper it is written on."

(I have submitted the above to Mr. Healy, together with the deed in question. He recalled the occurrence, and said: "I have so many questions asked me on so many different subjects that I cannot precisely recall an opinion given so long ago, but this, as you have it, is just about what I should have said."

"Is that what you would say now if a similar case were presented to you?"

"Yes, sir, that would be my opinion."

"May I use your name in a statement of the above as a matter of history?"

"Yes, sir, I have no objection."

We then went to meet Mendum. Savage gave him Mr. Healy's opinion, and declined to execute the deed. Mendum declared that the property should be sold at 12 o'clock. Savage threatened an injunction on this sale, on the ground that his (Mendum's) second mortgage was fraudulent, or not good for its face. Mendum admitted the charge, and the building was not sold.

Finally, on the 15th of June, 1877, Savage did sign a deed conveying the property to Trustees. In four months, the property was under the red flag again, on foreclosure of Mendum's mortgage, and, there being no one to proceed against the mortgage as being fraudulent, Mendum on the 27th of October, 1877, bought the property himself, and has now deeded it to the Paine Memorial Corporation.

The subjoined extract from

Mr. Mendum's Deed

of Paine Memorial to the Paine Memorial Corporation will show the following points of interest to liberals:—

1. That J. P. Mendum has assumed that his title to the property was good, though his mortgage was not good for its face, and that he has deeded the property to a Corporation.

2. That this Corporation has assumed the first mortgage on the property now standing at $39,000; and that therefore every stockholder is liable for that debt.

3. That no mention is made of the Lick Lecture Fund as having been invested in the building, and no attempt made to recognize it as a claim upon the property.

4. That Mendum, after having maintained for months and years that he did put the Lick Lecture Fund into Paine Memorial without recognizing it or taking any security for it, now agrees to warrant and defend the Paine Memorial Corporation in its title to the Paine Memorial property, thereby putting himself squarely upon ground where he must either pay the Lecture Fund himself or become the chief actor in its utter loss to "the liberal public" in whose interest the Trust was created.

Extract from the Deed.

Know all men by these presents that I, Josiah P. Mendum, . . . in consideration of sixty-five thousand ($65,000) dollars to me in hand paid by the Paine Memorial Corporation, . . . the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, do hereby revise, release, and forever quit-claim unto the said Paine Memorial Corporation, its successors and assigns, the following real estate situated on Appleton Street in the city of Boston . . . and known as the Paine Memorial Building property. . . .

Said premises aforesaid are conveyed subject to a mortgage for the sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars held by the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company, which the grantee hereby agrees to assume and to pay as its own debt.

To have and to hold the granted premises . . . to the said Paine Memorial Corporation and its successors and assigns to their own use and behoof forever. And I do for myself and my heirs, executors, and administrators, hereby covenant with the said grantee, its successors and assigns, that the granted premises are free from all incumbrances made or suffered through me; and that I will, and my heirs, executors, and administrators shall, warrant and defend the same to the said grantee and its successors and assigns forever against the lawful claims and demands of all persons claiming by, through, or under me, but against none others. In witness whereof, I, the said Josiah P. Mendum, hereunto set my hand and seal, this fifteenth day of October in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine.

[Signed]

JOSIAH P. MENDUM.

Since Mendum obtained personal possession of the property, there has been a continual appeal to "the liberal public" for money to pay the debt on it.

In two years and more, they have received, doubtless, a good deal of money. I called on the Hospital Life Insurance Company with Savage, a few days ago, and learned that the first mortgage on Paine Memorial has been reduced $11,000. That is the amount that has been raised toward paying off the first mortgage in two years. If the stockholders of the Paine Memorial now own that property, they are individually responsible for the debts against it. Those debts are:—

First: The first mortgage for $39,000;

Secondly: The Lick Lecture Fund, if, as Mendum and Seaver say, it was really put into the Memorial,—principal $10,000 and interest for six years and a half, which, if we charge twelve per cent. per annum (the same rate that Mendum charged the liberals for the money he loaned to them), will make $7,800, or $17,800 in all.

Total debt, $56,800 cash, besides Mendum's claim of $15,000.

For this debt the stockholders are liable.

But, even if they pay off this debt, have they a secure title?

1. If Mr. Healy is correct, they have not! If the joint tenants were trustees and could not sell their trust; if they could not appoint their own successors and deed their trust to them; if only the Court can create a trustee, then the transfer of Paine Memorial on the 15th of June, 1877, was null and void.

2. Again, if Mendum's second mortgage was not good for its face, he could not foreclose it; he could not legally sell the property; and, if he should do so without being opposed, any title he might obtain in that way would be worthless.

T. L. Savage, who is familiar with all the financial transactions of Paine Memorial, says:—

BOSTON, Jan. 9, 1880.

I am familiar with the placing of a second mortgage on Paine Memorial. It was dated April 20, 1875, and run to Henry A. Norris, a personal friend of Mendum. But Norris did not advance a dollar of the money. Mendum had advanced $4,000 in January, 1875; and in April he advanced about $7,000 more, which would make about $11,000 and took back a second mortgage upon Paine Memorial for $12,000 at twelve per cent. interest, agreeing to make up the full amount of $12,000 by paying certain bills that had not come due. The latter he did not, however, do. Whether he has ever made good the amount of the mortgage I do not know; but I have not the slightest hesitation in affirming that the second mortgage was not good for its face.

THEODORE L. SAVAGE.

Summary.

The facts, then, are:—

1. The stockholders who now hold Paine Memorial took their title from J. P. Mendum.

2. J. P. Mendum obtained his title on foreclosure of a second mortgage that was not good for its face.

3. Such a mortgage is illegal, and a sale effected under it or a title obtained under it is not valid.

4. This will therefore throw the title of the property back to the Trustees who held it at the time of the sale.

5. But they were not legally appointed trustees, and the deed conveying the property to them was not, in the opinion of one of the most eminent lawyers in Boston, worth the paper on which it was written.

6. Therefore, the stockholders of Paine Memorial Corporation have no legal title to the Paine Memorial property, and can only hold it by toleration. That is, as long as no one comes forward to put the concern into the courts, so long they may call themselves the owners of a property that, in my opinion, does not belong to them, but to the donors represented by the three joint tenants unto whom the original deed was made in which they accepted a trust that has never since been conferred upon others according to law.

All of which is respectfully submitted, in the interest of an honest liberalism, to "the liberal public."

CHARLES ELLIS,
8 Portland Street.

Boston, Jan. 10, 1880.

[For THE INDEX.]

EXAMINER NOTES.

BY REV. EDWARD C. TOWNE.

UNDERBANK PARSONAGE, STANNINGTON, {
Near SHEFFIELD, Eng. }

Before I take in hand the Dr. Martineau delusion of radical rationalism behind a semi-Orthodox mask, I wish to put in a word written some time since—perhaps two years—on the question of the method in definition and argument used by THE INDEX. To my view, the rigor of the method has been a good deal relaxed since I wrote, and possibly what I regard as its false face may be by this time ready to drop off. By false face I mean the use of terms in the orthodox sense, and reasonings which assume that sense, where full and fair truth requires not only new truths in place of the old ones, but new senses according to the new truths for all good and useful terms. My meaning is illustrated by what I have written below. If I have searched keenly between the joints of my friend's logical armor, it is only because I want to see him out of it, and showing his natural, living, and admirable power of spiritual idealism. What I wrote some time since is as follows:—

MY DEAR ABBOT:—

Scanning carefully your columns week by week, as I do, I often feel strongly moved to put in a word of argument or appeal, although I very well know that you rigorously hold your journal to a method and aims exactly contrary to my own, and I do not forget that you have generally given small quarter to any views but your own. I should hold my peace now, did I not want to take occasion to say that, much as I do not go with you, and strongly as I feel that you have injured and are injuring the cause of Free Religion, I never take up a fresh number of THE INDEX without wishing that I were able to divide with you some spoils of fortune, in substantial proof of my sense that good-will ought to cross all lines, and especially that those who strive amid great difficulties to serve right and truth should be generously helped to do their best, irrespective of what that best may be. You, doubtless, would fare like a prince, if there should be any general conversion of the world to this view of mitigating the condemnation of opinion by the demonstration of generous kindness. But the danger is not at hand, I fear: at least, I have no spoils to divide but those of toil and of sacrifice; and, if I challenge your opinion, I have no means of adequately mitigating my criticism, especially if I press it strongly. It is but a word, therefore, on a single point, which I will venture, and it is this. You say of "the logical faculty":—

"It is to this extent an 'intuitive' faculty, in the correct or philosophical meaning of the word 'intuition,' which has nothing to do with the theological meaning of it."

"You here admit that, in the correct or philosophical meaning of intuition, your 'scientific philosophy or theism,' as you name it, is based upon intuition. Why, then, do you not consistently clear away false meanings, and give the correct one its due? And since, as intuition may be taken in a correct sense, so belief and faith may be, why do you not deal justly by them also? John Stuart Mill, for example, says:—

"In common language, when belief and knowledge are distinguished, knowledge is understood to mean complete conviction; belief, a conviction somewhat short of complete; or else we are said to believe when the evidence is probable (as that of testimony), but to know when it is intuitive, or demonstrative from intuitive premises."

I should say that we know only where we can positively verify and prove, and that we believe merely or have faith where we think, upon more or less impulse thereto, within or without, but without the possibility of knowing. Faith, in the correct sense, is holding such thought as our minds are able to hold, and as thought, not as knowledge; and its legitimacy depends upon the care, candor, and wisdom with which we think. You think wisely upon the aspects of natural revelation, and come to a conviction such as your theism expresses. But you do not and cannot know: you only believe. Your theism is scientific only as thought, not as knowledge; and it is scientific thought only so far as you have used all available knowledge as guidance to your thought. Science has these two realms, the nearer one of real knowledge, and the more remote one of thought guided by knowledge. Gravitation, the nebular hypothesis, evolution, theism, immortality, are all objects of scientific thought, and, in some degree, of a reasonable and just faith. Faith, though not resting on knowledge directly, may yet be very strong and steadfast, or, if not strong, it may yet be worthy of the deepest respect. There are all degrees of the light of reason, by which we discern, or think we discern, truth. You appear to profess a completed personal acquaintance with the truth of the universe, on the strength of which you can scorn as proved delusions a large proportion of the beliefs or affirmations of thought of other thinkers. In my judgment, you affirm your own leading thoughts too much as if you knew where you only think, and you scorn as delusions the faith—the well-considered and well-reasoned thoughts—of others as free and as faithful to reason as yourself, when their thoughts, whether as well grounded as yours or not, are as really as yours instinct with a portion of truth and as much entitled to respect. You seem to me to talk unreason itself, when you speak of "the freethinker's relinquishment of the glowing torch of faith." Unreason! it is sheer nonsense, for the simple reason that it means, in a correct sense of faith, relinquishment of thought. And when you stigmatize "revelation," "intuition," and "faith" as will-o'-the-wisps which "will guide us only to bogs and fens," you put the knife to the heart of Free Religion, you cut off at a blow the hopes of freethought. If you would use complete fairness, and discriminate between true and false, the service would be as great as the injury now is, to my view, comprehensive and fatal. On the one hand, you seem to me to have no warrant for confusing scientific knowledge and scientific thought to the extent that you do, as if by some hocus-pocus you could efface the gulf of distinction between the two, and get "science" to "answer" questions of thought. And permit me to ask where your reading has been, if you speak of Prof. Tyndall as having "insufficiently studied" this question, and as "unconsciously misusing" the logical faculty, to make it give as knowledge what is mere faith. Prof. Tyndall discriminates here better than you yourself do. He knows very well that science may guide thought to make a wise start, but cannot go with it over the boundary of experience, and that the answers of thought to questions outside that boundary are not and never can be answers of science in the positive sense, but only in the quite secondary sense peculiar to a wholly distinct realm. You illegitimately construe your affirmations of thought as science in the one high sense of strict and proper science. And, by claiming for your affirmations of thought a name which they are not entitled to, you establish a dogmatism, the rigor and harshness of which, with the organic form it is taking in your established church of leaguers, promise, in my view, to have the effect of a sceptical papacy. This is what I deem your false use of the claim of "science." On the other hand, putting one or two of your own thoughts under the shelter of "science," you without the least just reason proclaim against other people a slaughter of the innocents, as much as if to think, to hope, to trust, however rationally and without pretension, of the false orthodox sort, were a folly and a crime. If I have at all justly considered the matter, your course is the suicide of freethought, and, so far as your limitations in this respect work out their natural result, the extinction of Free Religion. Happily, I am well aware that very many do not accept this influence, and that you exert other influence as well. At the same time, I cannot conceal from myself that a lower stratum, and not a very low one either, of current thought, is influenced most profoundly by your scorn of thought, under its usual forms of faith, belief, intuition, or clear-seeming glimpse of truth; and that you have made a place for your own method and aims as a secularist by expurgating even your own original method and aims as a religionist, and forcing into exile from the seat of the common cause nearly all that Free Religion naturally and necessarily means to most of those who believe both in freedom and in religion. It is with this view that I ask you why you do not kill the false forms of good things, instead of the things themselves good and bad together. No man, if I may give an illustration of very strong faith, could more ably and happily give rational faith, reasonable intuition, well guided and grounded belief, their due than you could, unless I have been utterly at fault in my "intuitive" judgment of your mind and character. And it is the thing that needs doing above all others. Any intellectual savage can knock in the head the common hopes of the human heart, with new dogma of scepticism on which he has written the word Science, and earn thereby little but the curse of mankind. It is another task, both great and greatly beneficent, to lift high above these common hopes the torch of a thoughtful faith; a faith which uses real knowledge as far as it will go, including the light it can throw forward, and then further uses the best seemings and suggestions there are, to keep the direction as true as possible, taking heed also to have the mind in as good a state as possible for its never wholly secure work.

FOREIGN.

THE DISTRESS in Italy is very great, and is resulting in threats of rebellion, and in some cases in absolute riot.

A BILL FOR THE establishment of Freedom of the Press in Servia will be shortly brought before the Skupstchina.

THE AUTHORITIES in Cuba are preparing to give General Grant an enthusiastic reception. The hospitalities of Captain-General Blanco's palace will be accorded the distinguished visitor, during his stay in Havana.

SIGNOR BURGAGLIOTTI, editor of the Ateo, Leghorn, is to be tried for "grave insults offered to the Deity." God is in a most unhappy position. Hundred of millions of people may insult him every day, and he is only on the rarest occasions championed by some faithful servant, who brings a suit for libel on his behalf in a court of law.—National Reformer.

THE EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH has conferred the gold medal for science and art on Mlle. Camilla Ruzicka Ostoic for a new Turkish and German dictionary which the authoress recently published, with transcriptions of the Turkish words into Roman characters. That learned young lady has already distinguished herself in the department of Oriental Languages at the Imperial Oriental Academy at Vienna.

THE REV. G. J. CAWLEY BROWN, of Salisbury, says that parochial clergy have not time to prepare the necessary weekly sermons, so he has initiated a system of avowedly reading the sermons of other divines. Mr. Brown has commenced with a course of Jeremy Taylor. Clergymen complain even now of empty churches: we should think under this system they will soon become emptier, especially if the sermons are read with the same carelessness and monotony with which most clergymen read the ordinary prayers.—National Reformer.

MR. BOOTH'S SALVATION ARMY has been having a grand field-day in Darlington. Colors were presented, meetings held in the snow, and also in the Livingstone Hall; and altogether the series of demonstrations has been most extraordinary. Mr. Booth himself was present at these meetings, and claimed that the "Salvation" movement was "founded on facts, philosophy, Scripture, and inspiration." We recommend to the clergy of the different churches this successful revivalist's declaration that "all existing religious organizations had failed completely and most disastrously in reaching the masses of Heathen England. Organized religion had failed—and all the world knew it but the organizers—to win the multitude for Christ." That this is true not even these "organizers" will, we think, deny. Mr. Booth himself is a well-meaning zealot, and, though we know how pitiful is the fanaticism which underlies the movement which he conducts, we do not hesitate to affirm our conviction that his religion has that which other forms of Protestantism only pretend to possess; that is to say, it has energy and life. When "Heathen England" has become something different from Unenlightened England, when the masses have profited by fifty years of education, then revivalism will be made an impossibility, and the complete failure of Christianity will have to be acknowledged by all.—Secular Review.

AT THE FREE-TRADE demonstration held in Rochdale last Thursday, Mr. John Bright, M.P., in speaking of the United States, and comparing their Government with that of England, said: "There were no bishops in their Senate. They have not constructed a machine, mostly political and partly religious, in which the State bolsters up the religious on the condition that the religious bolsters up the State. They have not got any favored great Church organization which will lend to the crimes of monarchy and statesmen the sanction of the stimulated voice of God, by which Christianity is demoralized and degraded: they have no land monopoly, no system of law which is intended to maintain great families in possession of vast estates, that they may confer on those families great political power, which may be used, and has been almost always used, in opposition to the true rights and interests and freedom of the people. They have not preferred, as we have preferred in this country, to maintain a thousand great houses and great proprietors when we might have had hundreds of thousands of comfortable and happy homesteads. I spoke of France as a republic, as the United States are a Republic. If you have a good history and consider it, you will find that the wars and the extravagance of Louis XIV. of France, the profligacy of his successor and his nobles, laid the foundation of the French Republic, and you will find that the folly, the tyranny of George III. and his ministers, and the perverse obstinacy of their majority in Parliament, laid the foundation of the North American Republic. I wonder whether it ever occurs to the crowned heads of Europe what comes of the policy they are now pursuing. Everywhere great armies eating up the comforts of the people; everywhere military exactions becoming more and more unendurable; everywhere menaces and acts of war; everywhere extravagance and growing debt: these things create discontent, invite disorder, make insurrection almost certain, if it be not absolutely necessary, and lay the foundation of fundamental changes in States such as we have witnessed in France and in America."

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JAN. 17.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

Doerflinger & Co., $1.45; Rev. A. B. Camm, $3.64; T. B. Skinner, 25 cents; Mrs. M. J. Regan, $1.75; Geo. Johnson, $3.20; E. D. Burleigh, $3.20; Thos. H. Matthews, $3.20; J. A. Gager, $2; John Logan, $4; John C. Haynes, $3.20; W. E. Harriman, $3.10; W. McNeil Clough, $10; Hon. S. T. Douglass, $5; Miss Marion Hovey, $50; A. H. Roffe & Co., $18.90; J. S. Shaller, $1.20; Wm. Phillips, $3.45; Rev. J. W. Winkley, $1.60; D. G. Crandon, $4.40; G. P. Putnam's Sons, $3.54; A. Williams & Co., $6; Rev. J. C. Learned, $3; J. C. Godfrey, $3; A. B. Swaine, $3; Henry Pratt, $3; N. B. Guernsey, $3; Dr. Jas. M. Aldrich, $3.20; W. C. Fisk, $3.20; C. R. Purdy, $3.20; Mrs. C. G. Tallman, $3.20; Mrs. W. P. Southworth, $3; E. P. Gibbs, $1; Rev. J. W. Chadwick, $10; J. Knight, 20 cents; F. Crosby, $34.13; Henry Keist, $3.20; Gen. Wm. Lilly, $5; Richard T. Hall, $6; Nath'l Cummings, $13.20; B. Westerman & Co., $2.70; J. Chappell Smith, $8.20; Aaron Batbrick, $4; S. L. Hill, $6.70; W. H. Smith, $4.25; Nath'l Little, Jr., $3.20; Hattie M. Tattle, $1; Henry S. Griggs, $2.50; E. Phelps, 2; A. Folsom, $3.20; Miss A. Seegur, $3; Julius Churchill, $3; Henry Smith, $3; H. N. Winslow, $3; D. B. Morey, $3.20; U. H. Crocker, $3.20; W. W. Baker, $3.20; Mrs. S. E. Muliken, $3.20.

The Index.

BOSTON, JAN. 22, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENSFELDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N.Y.	5.00
A. FOLSOM, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. PRESNO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York	5.00
Gen. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRS, New York, N.Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N.Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N.Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D.C.	5.00
GEO. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N.Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HON. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N.Y.	1.00
N. LEWINSON, " " "	1.00
J. RÄUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N.Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MRS. FRANCIS DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
Prof. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
DR. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00
MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERRELL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Bradenton, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. RISK, Winthrop, Iowa	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N.Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D.C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00

JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N.Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N.Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N.Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " " "	1.00
MR. GANS, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Grand Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	5.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford	2.00
W. L. POSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa	1.00
F. B. MERCER, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston	5.00
MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
MRS. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHN V. GRIEBEL, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
JOHANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRALEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN	200.00
MRS. A. B. PEROVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
Capt. P. S. CROWELL, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
MISS MARIANNE CHRISTEN, New York	1.00
MRS. CHRISTEN, " " "	1.00
MR. F. W. CHRISTEN, " " "	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " " "	1.00
MRS. MARY F. DAVIS, " " "	1.00
M. S. FECHHEIMER, " " "	10.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Tewksbury, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. HAYNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIE S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
R. B. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
C. W. WENDT, Cincinnati, Ohio	1.00
MRS. CAROLINE A. TUCKER, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
HANNAH E. STEVENSON, Boston, Mass.	10.00
AVERY W. HARBAUGH, Toledo, Iowa	2.00
HON. FRANCIS SPRINGER, Columbus City, Iowa	5.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
E. D. BURLEIGH, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
JAMES MCGRATH, Quincy, Mass.	1.00
Rev. J. C. LEARNED, St. Louis, Mo.	2.00
W. C. FISK, Toledo, O.	2.00
JOHN CHAPPELLSMITH, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
MARGARET " " " "	1.00
MRS. HINCKLEY, " " " "	1.00
THOS. MUMFORD, Sen., " " " "	1.00
J. S. JOHNSON, Almont, Mich.	5.00
HENRY PRATT, New York City	2.00
Total	1,192.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

WANTED—A COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION.

A week from to-day, on the birthday of Thomas Paine, January 29, the Paine Memorial Corporation will hold their First Annual Meeting in this city. At the same time an appeal is made by the Investigator for new subscriptions to the Corporation's stock, on the ground that "the stock cannot fail to be a good investment." By an article published in this issue of THE INDEX, Mr. Charles Ellis shows that there are grave reasons for doubting the truth of this representation. His statement presents so terribly strong a case prima facie that we cannot evade the duty of laying it before our readers.

The obligation to do this is twofold: first, to the individual liberals of the country, and especially to our own subscribers, who have a right to expect fair warning from us, when we have such serious grounds as these to fear that they are in danger of being made the victims of imposition in the name of "liberal principles," and involved in heavy but unsuspected pecuniary liabilities; and, secondly, to the liberal cause itself, which has been already sufficiently degraded and disgraced by unblushing licentiousness without becoming loaded down still further with financial dishonor. We are not of those who believe that it is the duty of liberals to cover up wrong-doing in their own ranks for fear of scandal. On the contrary, we believe that it is their duty first of all to make their cause so pure and honest that scandal shall be impossible; next, if wrong-doing is suspected and charged, to investigate the matter thoroughly and impartially to the very bottom; and, lastly, if wrongs are proved to have been committed, to root them out and rectify them without delay. On no other terms than the faithful discharge of these duties can the liberal cause receive or deserve the respect of mankind; and that is why we publish Mr. Ellis' article. It would not have been published, if there were not reason to believe that its publication is the only way left to bring about a thorough and impartial investigation of a matter which closely concerns the entire "liberal public."

The person chiefly interested in the article is Mr. J. P. Mendum, publisher of the Investigator. We have never had the slightest trouble with Mr. Mendum; we entertain no unkindly feeling whatever towards him; and we do not now prejudice the case against him. If he is able to explain all his transactions satisfactorily, we shall heartily rejoice; and we offer him the free use of these columns, in order to make his explanation in the same journal where those transactions have been challenged. We want nothing but justice and truth in the affair; and while we do not propose to permit in THE INDEX any war of personalities, least of all by outsiders of the case, we invite from Mr. Mendum himself a clear statement of any and all facts which are relevant to his defence. Mr. Ellis' article is simply an attempt to bring before the "liberal public" facts which, if true, it would be iniquitous to conceal. The "liberal public" have an unquestionable right to know whether these facts are real or fictitious when "the friends of liberal principles" are everywhere called upon to take stock in the Paine Hall enterprise as "a good investment."

Two main points are made by Mr. Ellis, one respecting the Lick Lecture Fund, and the other respecting the title to the Paine Memorial Building. His positions, apparently substantiated by unimpeachable documents, are essentially these with respect to the first point:—

1. That in 1873, James Lick gave the equivalent of about $20,000 to five trustees: one half to be put into the Paine Memorial Hall Building Fund, the other half to be used as a Lecture Fund, and (by necessary implication) not to be put into the Building Fund.

2. That the whole sum was paid over to Mr. Mendum, receipted for by him, and held as the treasurer of the trustees.

3. That it is claimed by Mr. Mendum that this Lecture Fund was voted by the trustees into the Building Fund (notwithstanding the plain contrary intent of the donor), as the "best investment" of it.

4. That no minute of such vote is contained in the published record of the only meeting ever held by the trustees.

5. That, if such a vote had been passed, the trustees would have been obliged by law to mention the fact formally in their official record, to place a first mortgage of $10,000 on the Memorial as security for this special trust-fund, and to record this mortgage publicly.

6. That no record of such a vote has ever been produced, and no such mortgage has ever been placed or recorded.

7. That the Lecture Fund has been traced directly to Mr. Mendum's hands, and no further.

8. That Mr. Mendum tried to induce Mr. Savage to sign a deed containing a clause that the Lecture Fund had been invested in the Building, when no such investment had been legally made.

9. That, if the Lecture Fund was, although informally and illegally and by a misappropriation of trust money, invested in the Building, it is a claim still good against the Building, which has not been, but ought to have been, recognized by a first mortgage; whereas, if that Fund never was so invested or used, then Mr. Mendum still holds the money, subject to the original conditions of the trust created by Mr. Lick, and is still liable for the same.

10. That, besides the present first mortgage on the Building of $39,000, the stockholders of the Paine Memorial Corporation are also liable, if Mr. Mendum's account of the affair is correct, for an additional $10,000 and accrued interest of several years, on account of the Lecture Fund—a fact of which they are mostly ignorant, but which has important bearings on the representation of the stock as a "good investment."

Concerning the title to the property, Mr. Ellis makes still more disquieting statements, substantially as follows:—

1. That the original deed of the Paine Memorial land was executed to Messrs. J. P. Mendum, Horace Seaver, and T. L. Savage, as "joint tenants," or (in effect) trustees.

2. That Messrs. Seaver and Savage undertook to sell the Memorial for one dollar to Mr. Mendum in his own name, but were prevented from doing this by the advice of counsel, who warned them that trustees cannot sell or dispose of their trust, and that new trustees can only be appointed by the Court.

3. That nevertheless the property, on June 15, 1877, was finally deeded by the three "joint tenants" to trustees not appointed by the court.

4. That Mr. Mendum, however, held in his own name a previous second mortgage on the property of $12,000; that Mr. Savage had previously prevented a foreclosure of this mortgage and sale of the Memorial, on May 4, 1877, by threatening an injunction on the ground that this mortgage was fraudulent and not good for its face; but that, on October 27, 1877, after Mr. Savage had retired, this mortgage was nevertheless foreclosed, and the Memorial was sold at auction to Mr. Mendum.

5. That Mr. Mendum, on October 15, 1879, deeded the property to the Paine Memorial Corporation in his individual name, and the corporation take their only title from him, although his own title was invalid.

6. That the legal title to the property still vests in the three "joint tenants" to whom the land was originally sold, Messrs. Mendum, Seaver, and Savage, and the Paine Memorial Corporation have no legal title at all to the property which they imagine they have bought.

If these are the facts, the stock issued by the Paine Memorial Corporation is worthless, instead of being a "good investment," and the "liberal public" who are now urgently solicited to take stock on that ground have an indefeasible right to be informed fully on all these points. Those who have already taken stock are still more interested to know the truth. The stockholders can have no more important business, at their approaching First Annual Meeting, than to appoint a committee of investigation, composed of their most capable, honest, and disinterested men, whose duty it shall be to institute a thoroughly exhaustive inquiry into the actual status of the Lick Lecture Fund, and the actual status of their own title to Paine Memorial Building. No less than this is absolutely necessary for their own financial security and personal honor,—for the integrity of the liberal cause and the good repute of the liberal name. As a party deeply interested in that cause and name, we believe that we express now what will prove to be the unanimous demand of all honest liberals and all honest men, when we call for the appointment of a COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION at the approaching meeting of the Paine Memorial Corporation.

LETTER FROM MR. MOUNTFORD.

The following letter from Rev. William Mountford will interest our readers, for whom we presume it was intended:—

23 BEACON ST., BOSTON, Jan. 14.

MY DEAR SIR:—

I have received a copy of THE INDEX, which you perhaps may have been so kind as to send to me. Your essay on the Pope and Aquinas is well grounded and seasonable. The Pope can never really make even a slight concession doctrinally. For even the suspicion of such a thing would, for Roman Catholics, be like the dry-rot in his chair. Nor need he be particularly concessional at present. He has lived through many ages, of which each one has had a spirit of its own; and he will live through this present distinctive period, and he very well knows that he will. The Pope has lost largely of the universal entail of souls, for which he was once credited; but as an everlasting survivor he is in the way to get remainders from all the suits and fights among his fellow-Christians, and fellow-creatures too. To the mere diffusion of knowledge, he can easily adapt himself. For knowledge, among the people that have it, is apt to be quarrelsome and separating. Men crave religiousness of some kind, and after awhile they prefer walking or kneeling among the ruins of an old church to sitting at a lecture by gas-light, or listening to doctrinal arguments, which often the arguers themselves do not quite understand. The spirit of the age, so subtle as it always is, does so easily infect and befool even the most earnest thinker that they cannot express even themselves purely; nor because of that, would they be able to do so, even if ordinary verbiage and phrases did not fail them. And, to appear grandly in a confusion of tongues, the Pope has only to seem self-consistent, and to seem to be at ease in his chair, and to call Thomas Aquinas his old, old friend, and to get himself talked about as a household word.

And that last thing would be for him a very great thing. In a great folio, which I consulted at college, there was, for its age, a wonderfully fine engraving of a scholar in his chair, and an angel speaking into his ear, "Recte dixisti, O Thoma Aquina." No doubt the time is coming more expressly when they will be doing God service, who can show the people that that "Recte" was itself not well said.

It has happened to me to live for years in France and Italy, and I do not suppose that his Holiness would expect much directly from his challenge to the spirit of the time, nor care at all about having it accepted. But what certainly he would wish, and that perhaps mainly, would be to have the feeling started all over the United States, in every city and village, that he is there; expectant, patient, and, like a good old father, abiding his time. There is something human about the papacy, as the name implies; and it answers, as it happens, to a certain infantile estate of spiritual consciousness. And if ever the time should come when even the Pope may renounce himself as an anachronism, there will be people still to believe in his old clothes.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM MOUNTFORD.

MR. CHARLES BRADLAUGH'S PUZZLEMENT.

[Mr. Holyoake sends us for publication a copy of the following letter, which has already appeared in the paper to which it is addressed.—ED.]

THE EDITOR OF THE BOSTON HERALD:—

SIR,—The letter you some time ago published from Mr. Bradlaugh, I first saw when too late to notice before leaving America. He states that in neither of two cases which he cites (books of Owen and Knowlton) did the Lord Chief Justice of England use "anything like the language" attributed to him by me. I spoke from recollection of newspaper reports of the case, in which it was said his lordship declared that the prosecution was ill-advised, and reflected upon the wisdom of those who set it on foot. What was this but saying that such books as the one Mr. Bradlaugh defended were best left alone? This is what I said. Indeed, a more objectionable book, entitled Physical and Sexual Religion, or Elements of Social Science, of the same class, on sale at the time, still remains unprosecuted.

Mr. Bradlaugh tells you he is "puzzled" at my saying that "the authors of these questionable books, whatever may be their intentions, are traitors to freethought," and that I "published and sold" the Hon. Robert Dale Owen's book, and that of Dr. Knowlton. It is impossible to prevent Mr. Bradlaugh being "puzzled" where everybody else sees clearly. The facts of this matter have been explained to him several times, yet he goes on writing as though he knew nothing. A letter appeared from me in the Times of London,—a letter which has disquieted him ever since. That letter pointed out that I did not "publish" these works in the sense in which he uses the term, or the public understand it,—that of selecting, or choosing, or advertising them. The owner of the books paid for every advertisement. I was the agent only for my old friend James Watson. I received the books in question among forty other works. He being a pioneer of freethought, who had suffered imprisonment before my time, I was willing to keep his books intact while he lived. These books were tolerated in their day as an improvement upon Carille's Every Woman's Book, which brought scandal on freethought at an earlier period. He tells your readers that "no word of repudiation of these books was ever heard from me until after they were both prosecuted." I need not further notice this, because in England, where the contrary is known, it is not necessary. But as I have been a speaker in Boston, and through your courtesy made known to many readers, I perhaps ought to resent this pretty charge of cowardly, after-thought repudiation of these books; for this is what his words suggest.

In 1842, when Mr. Bradlaugh was a boy, I gave Mr. Watson to understand that these books, in my opinion, belonged to a medical publisher, and should be separate from freethought works. Mr. Watson was a man of high character. He thought these books unobjectionable. I admitted his right to his opinion, though I did not share it. When twenty years later his books came into my house, he knew and complained that I did nothing for their sale. Mr. Bradlaugh's first hostility to me arose at that time from my objecting to publish a book of his called The Bible—what is it? because of passages which in my opinion intensified the grossness of those he was commenting upon in the Scriptures.

More than twenty years before [the prosecution of the works now in question, I refused to sell or advertise the Elements of Social Science (named above) in the Reasoner, when advertisements were of consequence. I thereby made enemies able to harm me, and who did harm me. Had I been asked upon this subject, I should have said that my repudiation of these books was well known to Mr. Bradlaugh more than twenty years ago. No one in England save the very ignorant would accuse me of cowardly consideration of myself in respect of public principle. When I was a publisher in Fleet Street, I could have made much money by dabbling in other questionable books brought to me to publish, whereas I preferred to make enemies (if it must come to that) rather than associate freethought with doubtful books. Any of the old freethought publishers—Cleave, Hetherington, Watson, or myself—could have obtained release from imprisonment, at any time, by withdrawing books we had published or words we had said. Neither they nor I did anything of the kind; and, on my liberation from Gloucester Gaol in 1842, I went straight to Cheltenham, where I had spoken the indicted words, and repeated again the words for which I had been incarcerated.

For myself, I have no personal hostility to Mr. Bradlaugh; and I have given frequent proofs of my willingness to work with him on all questions which fortunately happen to be common between us. Nowhere in America, on the platform or in the press, did I mention his name or seek to diminish the impression his general ability must have made in his favor; but this does not preclude me from pointing out that his representations in your pages are as contrary to fact as to courtesy.

I am, sir, yours faithfully,

G. J. HOLYOAKE.

LONDON, Dec. 20, 1879.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

JAY GOULD reads Latin with his sons.

FRANK LESLIE, of illustrated newspaper fame, is dead.

MENLO PARK, the home of Edison, is lighted with electric lamps.

THE POET LONGFELLOW will be seventy-three years old February 27.

WILLIAM HEPWORTH DIXON, the well-known English traveller and journalist, is dead.

QUEEN VICTORIA's gift to Mrs. Nellie Sartoris was a miniature of her royal self in precious stones.

ROSA BONHEUR recently paid 8,000 francs for a lion, for the purpose of painting the portrait in a picture for next year's Paris Salon.

MISS MARGARET E. C. WHITE, of Boston, recently deceased, remembered the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in her will to the amount of $5,000.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY of the birthday of Thomas Paine will be celebrated January 29, at Paine Hall, Boston, at Chicago, and other places.

A RUSSIAN NOBLEMAN, who recently committed suicide, left these words in a note that was found on his body: "I have searched for truth, and nowhere can I find it, not even in myself; therefore I die."

PROF. KO KUN HUA has presented to the Harvard library a volume of his own poetry, entitled Verses composed in the Hall of Longevity. The volume is a small octavo, printed privately at Ningpo, in 1879, and is unaccompanied by a translation.

MISS M. A. HARDAKER, a young lady of superior education and culture, connected with the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society of Boston, gave a very thoughtful and discriminating lecture on "Lessing" before that society, Sunday, January 11.

REV. L. K. WASHBURN speaks regularly on Sundays at Lynn and Revere, Mass. In both places, there is a strong interest in his discourses and large congregations. The late fair, which his society held at Revere, yielded the handsome sum of $700, and over.

GUSTAVE DORE is engaged in illustrating Shakespeare. He has already made a number of drawings, large and small, of various scenes, and has in particular adapted some of the sketches which he made last year, during his tour in Scotland, for his illustrations to Macbeth.

SENATOR G. F. HOAR has bought the land at Princeton, Mass., on which John Hoar, an ancestor, once redeemed a captive, Mrs. Rowlandson, from the Indians. A boulder called "Redemption Rock" lies upon this land, and upon this boulder a suitable inscription has been cut.

AT COLUMBUS, OHIO, Williams, a colored representative of the legislature, was refused dinner at a restaurant to-day, on account of his color. He will bring suit under the civil rights bill. The house of representatives adopted a resolution asking an investigation by the committee, to ascertain whether the dignity of the house had been infringed upon.

A FINE COLLECTION of the original drawings of Thackeray's old schoolfellow, John Leech, are now to be seen in the library at their old school, Charter House, having been purchased by that institution.

which they were both so much attached, where Rawdick (Fawley, Jr.), Pendennis, and Clive Newcome were educated, and where Col. Newcome died.

WHEN THE PRINCESS was first introduced to the Ladies Campbell, sisters of the Marquis of Lorne, one of them asked, "Shall we call you Louise?" Her royal highness made no answer. In spite of this camper, the Duke of Argyll was very happy and proud of the connection, as he had reason. For, if some forty princes and princesses were to die in good time, he might find himself one day grandfather to a Defender of the Faith. When the Marchioness of Lorne came to Inverary Castle, the duke made his tenants a great feast, and himself called on them to give "Three cheers for the Princess, my daughter."

A STORY IS CURRENT, on the authority of Charles Landseer, that his brother, Sir Edwin, was once looking at his own pictures in the South Kensington Museum, and seeing some dust on one of them, leaped over the barrier and wiped it off with his handkerchief. Instantly the policeman on duty was upon him. "What are you a-doing of," said the force, "a-touching that there picture?" "Why," answered Sir Edwin, smiling, "I've often touched it before!" "Have you, though?" cried the indignant peeler: "then more shame for yer! You come along wi' me!" And he walked off the unresisting painter to the officers of the Museum, who, of course, recognized the culprit and condoned his offence.

PROF. MAX MUELLER must be counted on the side of the conservative men of science, as may be seen by the following quotation from his recent utterances: "I cannot follow Mr. Darwin, because I hold that this question is not to be decided in an anatomical theatre only. There is, to my mind, one difficulty which Mr. Darwin has not sufficiently appreciated, and which I certainly do not feel able to remove. There is, between the whole animal kingdom on the one side, and man, even in his lowest state, on the other, a barrier which no animal has ever crossed, and that barrier is—language. By no effort of the understanding, by no stretch of imagination, can I explain to myself how language could have grown out of anything which animals possess, even if we granted them millions of years for that purpose."

THE MEMORY of Benjamin Franklin is honored in Boston, the city of his birth, in the names of a square, a court, an avenue, four streets, a school-house, an insurance company, a foundry, a woollen company, a savings-bank, a typographical society, a lithographic company, a lodge of Odd Fellows, in the Christian and surnames of numerous citizens, in books that he printed, letters that he wrote, and a suit of clothes that he wore on a historical occasion, which are preserved. Now it is to be further honored by a Frankliniana Collection, to include everything which he wrote and was printed, everything that has been written about him, portraits, prints, medals, autographs, and other personal memorials. This collection has been begun by a gift of more than two hundred pieces made to the Public Library by Dr. Samuel A. Green.

THOMAS BAYLEY POTTER, M.P., is giving pleasant accounts in England, since his return, of his experience in this country. At the recent reception, tendered to him by his constituents and friends at Rochdale, John Bright delivered a characteristic speech, and Mr. Potter spoke in an entertaining manner upon American affairs, discussing our industries from his own standpoint; the general education of the people in this country; the honorable and useful position of American women; the material resources and food production of our country, and other topics which had engaged his attention and study. He seems to have been especially well impressed with the new Reformatory Prison for Women in this State, and to have sent his enthusiasm into his audience. He thus refers to it: "When in Boston with my kind friend Gov. Rice, I had an opportunity of visiting an establishment which he had been mainly instrumental in organizing; and this was a model prison for women. There were four hundred and fifty prisoners; and the governor is a woman,—or, perhaps, I ought to say it is governed by a woman,—the doctor is a woman, the chaplain is a woman, and there is not a male in the establishment except the poor little infants in the nursery. Mrs. Potter and I went with sadness through that institution; and, looking at some of their faces, I said to Mrs. Atkinson, who is at the head of the establishment, and a woman herself who is worth going all the way over to Boston to see (laughter), with a character and a physique fitting the position which she holds. (Cheers.) I said, looking at some of those poor women's faces: 'They are almost of a hopeless type.' 'Hopeless is not a word we permit, Mr. Potter, in this establishment.' (Hear! hear! and cheers.) 'We hope for all,' she replied. (Cheers.) As we went along, we heard about prison reform; but it seemed to me that the Angel of Mercy in the shape of woman came with her blessing on that establishment. (Hear! hear!) Those poor female prisoners are allowed to decorate their cells with pictures their friends might give them, cuttings from illustrated papers, and to grow ferns and flowers; and one poor creature said, 'Ay, they are good and kind to permit us this great favor.' (Hear! hear!) It was a touching scene to witness the kindness of the head of the establishment to each mother and child in the nursery. One of the mothers said, 'Ay, it is but the child of a State prisoner'; yet Nature showed itself on each mother's face when a kindly notice was given by the lady visitors to her child; (hear! hear!) and I came away from that establishment glad to have seen such an experiment, hopeful of its success, and confident that woman was not exceeding her mission in undertaking such a responsibility as is undertaken by Mrs. Atkinson and her colleagues in that establishment." (Cheers.)

THE DEATH OF SURGEON-GENERAL E. B. WOLCOTT.

ONE OF THE MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS OF THE NORTH-WEST PASSES AWAY AFTER AN ILLNESS OF A WEEK—A SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF DR. WOLCOTT—AN ANNOUNCEMENT THAT WILL CAUSE WIDE-SPREAD SORROW.

Dr. Erastus B. Wolcott, Surgeon-General of the State of Wisconsin, one of the most widely known men of the North-west, died at his residence on Milwaukee Street, at eleven o'clock last night, after an illness of one week. There are few men whose death would cause more general sorrow; few men have worked as faithfully and unselfishly, so long and laboriously, in one of the most noble of professions, as Dr. Wolcott. The announcement made this morning will carry pain to hundreds of households where the cheerful face of Dr. Wolcott has brought hope and his skill has brought relief from suffering.

Sketch of his Life.

Erastus B. Wolcott, M.D., was born at Benton, Yates County, New York, Oct. 18, 1804, son of Elisha and Anna Hull Wolcott, who came from Litchfield County, Ct., and were among the first settlers in that section of the country. In 1822, Dr. Wolcott commenced the study of medicine and surgery with Dr. Joshua Lee, an eminent physician and surgeon of Central New York, and received a diploma from Yates County Medical Society in 1825. He attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Western District of New York from 1830 to 1833, and took his degree in medicine and surgery at that institution. In the spring of 1835, he was examined by a board of army surgeons, and received an appointment as surgeon in the United States army, Jan. 1, 1836. He resigned in 1839, and came to Milwaukee. In 1836, he married Elizabeth J. Dousman, who died in 1860, leaving a daughter and a son. Dr. Wolcott gave his children a liberal education, the former having graduated at Milwaukee Female College and the latter at Yale College.

Dr. Wolcott was connected with some of the earliest enterprises of the State. He built the first mills at West Bend, and with others the first mill at Humboldt, near the city. He was one of the prime movers in building the first railroad in the State, from Milwaukee to the Mississippi River, and among the first in the North-western Life Insurance Company. He was appointed trustee of the Wisconsin Hospital for the Insane, the first year, and reappointed through Gov. Randall's and Gov. Lewis' administrations. He was appointed one of the regents of the State University in 1850. He was appointed surgeon of the State militia, as early as 1842, by Gov. Doty, was commissioned colonel of a regiment in 1846, and in the same year major-general of the first division of Wisconsin militia. He held through the War of the Rebellion the position of Surgeon-General of Wisconsin, with the rank of brigadier-general, which he retained to the day of his death. In 1866, Dr. Wolcott was appointed by Gov. Fairchild commissioner to represent Wisconsin at the Universal Exposition at Paris in 1877. In the same year, he was appointed by Congress manager of the National Home for Disabled Volunteers, near this city, to which position he was reappointed in 1875.

Dr. Wolcott was married, Oct. 12, 1869, to Laura J. Ross, M.D., who was among the first women who graduated in medicine and received hospital instruction in this country. Dr. Wolcott was a lineal descendant of Henry Wolcott, Esq., a landed gentleman of England, who came to America in 1630. He was the son and heir of John Wolcott, of Golden Manor. The manor house is still standing in England, is of great antiquity, and richly ornamented with carved work. Upon the walls may be seen the motto of the family coat-of-arms: Nullius addictus jurare in verba magistri (inclined to swear on the words of no master). This sentiment was in harmony with the spirit of the English gentleman of the Middle Ages and that of the Puritan of a later date, who spurned the dictation of ecclesiastical wisdom. This peculiarity of the family lost none of its force in the character of Dr. E. B. Wolcott, who derived his knowledge of the Author of all things from the study of his works.

Henry Wolcott, of the old English gentry, was the first magistrate in the Connecticut colony, and his descendants in a direct line for over one hundred and eighty years were counsellors of war, officers of the army during the Revolution, one a signer of the Declaration of Independence, representatives and senators in Congress, chief justices of the Supreme Court, and six governors of Connecticut, three bearing the name of Wolcott,—Roger, Oliver, and Oliver, junior.

Roger Wolcott, the first Governor of Connecticut, was Judge of the County Court, Deputy Governor, Chief Justice of the Superior Court, and Governor of the State. He lived to see his son Oliver governor during fourteen years, and his grandson Oliver during four years. Of his descendants bearing the name of Wolcott, twelve were graduates of Yale College, two of Harvard University, and two at other New England colleges previous to the year 1834. Those qualities which characterized the ancestors of Dr. E. B. Wolcott, whether by hereditary descent, by example, or by education, seemed to have culminated in him. His form was symmetrical, his movements graceful, and almost up to the day of his death his youthful energy seemed unimpaired. His mind was vigorous and active, embracing a wide field of observation. Always eminent in his profession, he kept a steady step in the march of medical science. Skilled as a surgeon, the knife never trembled in his hand. Unerring in his diagnosis, he waited with the patience of a nurse. His sensibilities were always keenly alive to every object of human suffering. As a son, husband, father, and friend, he discharged his duties with scrupulous fidelity. We have been told that Cervantes "smiled the chivalry of Sham away." If so, she, like Liberty, took her flight to the New World, and found worshippers in its forests. If truth, justice, honor, and mercy are her characteristics, they were all happily personated in the character of the late Dr. E. B. Wolcott.

Cause of his Death.

A week ago, at the solicitation of members of the profession at Horicon, Dr. Wolcott generously left his business to give testimony as an expert in a suit for malpractice. He was kept in the court-room till ten o'clock at night, subjected to draughts and changes of temperature, and when he went to the hotel found he had taken cold. The symptoms of pneumonia rapidly appeared, and when he was brought home his condition was hopeless. All was done for him by his warm friend Dr. Spearman and others that was possible, but to no purpose. He sank steadily, and yesterday morning all hope was surrendered. At 11 o'clock he breathed his last, surrounded by loving friends.—Milwaukee Sentinel, Jan. 6.

Communications.

TRIBUTES TO DR. WOLCOTT.

Milwaukee has lost a friend,—one who was an enthusiastic worker in every direction which meant a city's welfare. Her citizens have lost a friend,—one who was a skilled and sympathetic helper whenever and wherever suffering called for aid, an attentive gentleman, answering social calls with genial, courtly grace. THE INDEX has lost a friend,—one who has ever responded to its call for sympathy and aid. Humanity has lost a friend—a warm, unselfish, loving friend, who hastened to its every call upon his counsel and his generosity, and freely gave of his abundant gifts of wisdom and honorable devotion, as well as of professional skill, without partiality, without fear or favor.

The loss of such a friend as this, so true and so rare, cannot be lightly felt. It moves to words that, however feebly they may express our thought, must still be written. The loss is not alone to us here, in the city where he lived and died. It is a larger loss. Possibly there is no man in the United States, certainly none in the West, who will be more really missed, no man more widely and sincerely mourned, than will be Surgeon-General Erastus B. Wolcott, who died in this city, January 5, after a short illness of pneumonia, at the advanced age of seventy-six years. Notwithstanding his years, he was to all appearance as vigorous in health and intellect as ever he was in his life, as energetic and earnest, as diligent and devoted to his professional duties. He seemed likely to continue thus active for a score of years or more. Suddenly this career of earnest usefulness was cut short; and the shock to his family, to his friends, and to the community, has been as great as if a man of thirty had died. His death at even this advanced age is looked upon as untimely.

A congestion of the lungs contracted in a badly ventilated court-room in a country town proved the accident which cut off this youthful man of years in the midst of his activities. The disinterestedness which characterized his entire career led him to this court-room to aid a brother physician who had been accused of malpractice. This physician was of the opposite school of medicine to the one in which Dr. Wolcott had long labored, and to which he was endeared by his vast and varied experience. This was evidence of the largeness of his nature, which could not include bigotry or weak biases. This is but one instance among hundreds and hundreds marked by the noblest impulses possible to human nature.

One can scarcely travel a block in this now large city, which the doctor made his home and the principal field of his labors when it was but a village, without finding some one who is eager to testify to the generous aid and sympathy he has given in sickness, in disaster, in affliction, without a seeming thought or a single hint of remuneration. With a practice which would have been a fortune in some men's hands, he often was perplexed with the problem of a livelihood. He seemed to shrink from making out and presenting a bill to a patient. It was as if he felt that this would somehow detract from his genuine sympathy and real interest in the patient's case, and the earnestness with which he had performed his ministrations of healing. I heard one speak to him of this neglect of his own interests. He replied in the gentle, modulated tones we shall all ever remember: "The leopard cannot change his spots, neither can I be other than I am. I shall be a poor man as long as I live."

Yes, poor in worldly goods, but how rich in good and gracious deeds! How rich in benisons of a grateful multitude, whom he blessed by generous and skilful help in suffering, by cheering words and graceful courtesies, always the gentle, patient, hope-inspiring nurse in the sick-room as well as the wise physician and counsellor.

In surgical practice, he ranked among the first in the country, and won a national reputation. He was not only expert, certain of himself, certain of results, but was tender in the extreme, and careful to avoid giving one needless pang. Several years ago, he performed a very delicate operation (the removing of a cancerous tumor situated very near to the eye) upon one of my own family. The day when the threads were to be withdrawn from the wound was one of great dread to the patient. When it was all over, and dressed, she said with a tearful thankfulness: "The touch of this doctor's hand is velvet. It is perfectly marvellous. He did not give me the slightest pain. I could not have believed such a thing possible." His skill did not exceed his sincere sympathy, his patient care-taking.

Gratuitous services were given by him in all charitable institutions in the city; and among the profusion of floral tributes bestowed upon his remains as they lay for a few hours in a public place, that all his friends might take one last look upon the noble, kindly face, were many that came as tokens of gratitude from those he had ministered unto without money and without price.

In the National Homes for Disabled Soldiers, of which he was one of the managers since their establishment, he was beloved, almost revered, by the inmates. At the Milwaukee Home, he was expected eagerly, and very rarely missed paying his regular weekly visit, and ever hastened to their aid in any extremity of sickness or danger.

Far and near, in our homes and in distant homes, the summons to come or to go was never unheeded by him. There will be many a home where the news of his death will carry, not only the pang of loss, but the anxious thought and fear that all cannot be as well with them henceforth.

The citizens of Milwaukee desired to give all attention and honor to the beloved and respected dead, but were restrained from parade and show by Dr. Wolcott's family, who regarded his oft expressed wish that in the event of his death there should be no public display. Regarding also his aversion to religious service and observances, the usual obsequies were omitted.

"Let no stale words of church-born song
Float out upon the silent air,
To prove by implication wrong
The soul of him then lying there!
Why should such words be gibbly sung
O'er one upon whose living tongue
Such empty phrases never hung?"

Rev. G. E. Gordon, pastor of the Unitarian Church, however, conducted the services, which aimed to be in accordance with the dead man's beliefs and desires, reading appropriate extracts from various writings, both secular and religious, and giving a brief address, setting forth the noble character of the man and the estimate of his worth placed upon him by all who knew him. All the testimony is to one purport, "he was the soul of honor." Mr. Gordon said of his opposition to the religious opinions of the day: that it "laid his life open to severe criticism." "His creedless life was searched as with candles. But there is no flaw: his morality was intact, his purity unbroken, his integrity whole and sound. He was a creedless man, but his praise is now in the house of creeds. Far be it from me to say he was the better for his studied nonobservance of religious observances. But I must say, in candor, he needed them not as a guide for conduct. He was a good man; he was a pure man; he was a sweet man; he was a brave man. Creeds and sacraments cannot produce more than that. He had character: nothing can be higher. Nothing should prevent me from saying that he held opinions different from the masses of Christians, and that at the time of his mortal illness he quoted approvingly a passage that contradicts the splendid trust we feel as we stand at the grave of our dead loves. But nothing shall prevent me from declaring that this man's honest denial is more noble than the mass of human affirmations, based as they are merely on selfish wishes and material ends. And nothing can hinder me from gathering comfort from the honesty of this denial—strength to believe yet more and more firmly that his grand powers, his sturdy devotion, his noble rectitude, his tender sympathy, will find an immortality worthy of that divine nature out of which they came. At such a time as this, we come near to the beautiful truths and testimonies that have at times created forms of religion. They are pure justice, high truth-seeking, great love, highest, noblest, finest instincts of the heart and mind, the foundations of religion with all its rites and forms."

Beautiful words, but beguiling, and scarcely just to the "honest denial," after all; for they bring the endowments, the excellences of this ideal manhood back to rest upon the foundation of the religion which the man had "severely opposed." The position taken by this minister is far above the usual apologetic one in such instances, which says he was a good man, an irreproachable man, "in spite of" his infidelity, scepticism, or whatever they please to call a creedless condition. But it is not the highest ground of candor, of justice, of breadth, of thought. Lifted far above biases, will there ever come a time when character and opinions shall supplement each other, and a Christian shall credit the nobility of an infidel to his non-beliefs? Will there ever come a time when, summing up a life that stands out in shining perfection, the question of the faith in established creeds and a future existence shall be dropped out of the final words spoken at the grave's side? Are they of more moment than a clean and perfect record of threescore years and ten? Are they equal to the consideration of a life filled full to the brim of great and generous deeds, high and pure thoughts, gentle and comforting words? Shall this "in spite of it" ever be dropped from the eulogies of great and good infidels? Will the "because of it" ever dare be asserted of great and good infidels? Dr. Wolcott was an open and avowed freethinker. All men unite in calling him the noblest type of man they knew. Why shall we not say that the purity of his personal life, the healthiness of his ethical record, is the outgrowth of his anti-Christianity? Why not this, as well as to say, of the same qualities in a religious man, they were the fruits of his faith? Why, alas! but because custom has made cowards of us all; and the multitudes are cramped into the narrowness of creeds, and cannot break the fetters which bar them from the broad, blessed, life-giving, sunlight of justice?

Our great-hearted friend is dead. The full life is ended, and the beyond? If this beautiful, brave life is to extend out into immortal spheres of kindly usefulness, well. It could never be content with other than usefulness. He disdained rewards here. He could only do the same anywhere. If the life is forever gone out, well. Surely it is well to leave behind one a clean, perfect record of seventy-six years. Surely it is well enough, it seems to me, to have served as high priest for humanity, and well enough to satisfy all human desires, that for many and many a year to come Dr. Wolcott will live immortalized in grateful memories, and his name never be spoken but with reverent tenderness.

In these few words of tribute to Dr. Wolcott's memory, I have simply said the few things which have most impressed me since his death. Sketches, eulogies, tributes, of these there will be many; but his unselfishness, sympathy, generosity, and candor stamp themselves upon my thought, and of these I would speak my own word. I would speak my own word, also, as perhaps few others will publicly do, to credit his creedless life with the rich, ripe fruits of character. His fearless championship of anti-Christianity was not the bravado of ignorance or indifference: it was the deliberate expression of deep thought, sincere conviction, and earnest study. In a world of shams, sincerity is a shining light. In a world of subterfuges and policy, an uncompromising honesty irradiates humanity. Dr. Wolcott hated shams. He pondered to no public sentiment; he stood for himself, representing his own ideal of manliness. The world says it was a beautiful ideal. I say it was illuminated by the causes which creed-bound Christians will deplore. The bed-rock of his integrity was immovable and incorruptible. He stood upon it self-poised. There was for him neither authority nor atonement. He must be what he was because it was better to be so, not because it was another's decree that he must do right. Yes, I credit his creedless life with the rich, ripe fruits of character.

AMELIA W. BATE.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 7, 1880.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 8, 1880.

MY DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I mail you copies of Milwaukee papers containing notices of the death of Dr. Erasmus B. Wolcott, one of the stockholders and staunchest friends of THE INDEX.

I know of no man who was more heartily and deeply in sympathy with Liberalism as represented by THE INDEX than Dr. Wolcott.

In my humble efforts to uphold the standard of a true and pure Liberalism in our State, I have had the steady and unflinching support of this good and brave man. His wise and fatherly counsels have been invaluable to our cause. He was a moral hero of the quiet and unassuming type,—a patriot whose love of country and liberty made him jealous of every encroachment of religion upon the secular principle of government.

Fraternally yours,

R. C. SPENCER.

MR. ALCOTT ON PRAYER.

[Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith, to whom the following letter was addressed, sends it to us for publication, with the writer's consent.—ED.]

CONCORD, Dec. 30, 1879.

DEAR MADAM:—

Your open letter and poem addressed to myself in last week's INDEX were read with surprise, while the perusal revived memories of pleasant interviews with yourself in years past. And now you challenge replies to your several questions concerning the spirit and needs of prayer, silent or vocal.

May I not answer in the affirmative to each and all of your questions, and without specifying any? Have you not really answered them yourself, and affirmatively, in the mystical and pious verses inscribed to me in your letter?

The pious mystics and saints of all times have borne like testimony to the duty and delights of prayer, whether silent or spoken. And if they, dwelling in "The Presence," communing face to face with the Highest, the Holiest, have thus testified to the need of prayer, must not those less in the spirit, and distant, feel the need of his personal presence, and invoke his name for what they think they need? The human heart is fathomless; and not every devotee is wise in Plato's sense, asking only for what shall satisfy and fill its longings. It may overflow in stammering accents, believing the Father to whom it appeals will answer its pleadings according to its necessities. Prayer manifests itself according to temperament, custom, culture, the sense of duty. It may marry itself to form and times; it may love better the hush of the spirit; it may delight in its overflow. Words may be impertinent, a hindrance,—the soul prayerless in their utterances.

Thus the forms of worship vary as the conditions vary. Extremes are apparent in the Romanist and Quaker formularies of worship.

Speaking for myself, I could wish a wider liberty were allowed in devotional services, liturgical or otherwise. Let us pray when we profess to be praying. And what more than all it were most important to learn is, that spoken words, whether in private or public, are not prayers, unless the heart indite and give them life.

Thanking you for this kind remembrance, and in hope of renewing our acquaintance next summer here in Concord,

I am very truly your friend,

A. BRONSON ALCOTT.

BOOK NOTICES.

Shakespeare: A Biographic Æsthetic Study. By George H. Calvert. Lee & Shepard.

All lovers of Shakespeare (and who is there among us that does not love the good old poet?), all readers of the tongue the great master spoke, will be delighted with Mr. Calvert's study. It is new, and full of suggestive thought. You can see a poet's love of the great master-poet, an æsthetic sense that is full of intuitions in regard to the mind and matter of Shakespeare's plays. The life is retold in such a way as to be a constant surprise at its freshness and reality.

The last chapter that discusses the play of Hamlet will be noted for its happy discernment of Shakespeare's purpose in the plot. He reviews with considerable ability the opinions of others about the ghost, and advances the statement that the author did believe in the world of spirits and their active interest in this life of ours. This by some will be considered a weakness, but it is well put; and the book throughout is well expressed, and deserving of a wide circle of readers.

Wordsworth: A Study. By George H. Calvert.

The lives of great men remind us of what is best and noblest in ourselves, and there is a quickening and uplifting influence as we look over their record. Mr. Calvert has come to this study with a heart sensitive to all that is good; and, as we keep him company with the wise singer, we find ourselves in the land of enchantment. He has a happy tact of presenting the striking points of character and reading their relation with the circumstances of the hour. He has spared no pains to make his work readable and instructive, and the result is such an insight into the poet's life and character as will impress it on the mind of the reader and endear it to his affections.

W. B.

JESTINGS.

LADY: "Why did you leave your last place?"
Servant: "Well, yer see, mum, I had to pay for all my breakages; and as they come to more than my wages, yer see, mum, it was a kind of impogission that I couldn't stand."—Fun.

"I WAS AT church to-day, and enjoyed it greatly."
"Ah!" said his pious landlady. "I am glad of that. I didn't see you, though. On which side did you sit?"
"Ahem—yes—ahem!" stammered the disconcerted Jones; "I sat on the—outside."

"Yes," said the horny-fisted granger, gloomily, "last year we hadn't anything to put in our barns, and this year there's so much stuff that we can't take care of it, and a heap's bound to be spoiled. There ain't no luck for us farmers anyhow."

"I DON'T SEE how there ever came to be so many words in the world!" exclaimed a girl who was studying her spelling-lesson. "Why, sis," said her brother, "they come through folks quarrelling. Then, you know, one word always brings on another."

TALLEYRAND wrote a lord who had bored him: "Dear Lord Blank,—Will you oblige me with your company on Wednesday next at eight o'clock? I have invited a number of exceedingly clever people, and do not like to be the only fool among them."

"IS THERE any opening here for an intellectual writer?" asked a seedy, red-nosed individual of an editor. "Yes, my friend," replied the man of quills. "A considerate carpenter, foreseeing your visit, left an opening for you. Turn the knob to the right."

A "DRUMMER" for a New York house called on a merchant recently, and handed him a picture of his betrothed instead of his business card, saying he represented that establishment. The merchant examined it carefully, remarked that it was a fine establishment, and returned it to the astonished man, with a hope that he would soon be admitted into partnership. The last seen of the drummer and merchant they were talking about the outrage in Maine.—Kingston Freeman.

I HEARD A GOOD true story the other day: The wife of a wealthy and pious but very mean man, living somewhere in Roxbury, was dying. The family and friends were at the bedside, and they were talking of sending Bertie, or whatever the son's name was, to notify some relatives living at a distance. Whereupon His Meanness asked: "Wouldn't it be less expensive to telegraph?" Observing his wife's eyes rolling, he inquired: "Do you see them beckoning, Maria?" But his wife who had always been a very energetic, blunt, and outspoken woman, answered sharply: "No, I don't!" and died without further ado.

A NEGRO KNOWN to the clerks in a Southern town as Old Tom-Tom has for the last few weeks been claiming that he was over one hundred years old, and he has found many believers. He was warming his hands, when an acquaintance came along and said, "Well, uncle, I hear that you've got to be an old man?" "Yes, mass'r, I've bin aagin' right up fast. I've ober a hundred now." "Is that so? In what year were you born?" "In 1779." The man began to ask questions, and in five minutes had almost convinced the darkey that he wasn't born until the year 1800, and consequently was only seventy-nine years old. "Dat takes me back a heap; but I eneamost believe you am right," mused Tom-Tom. "I must be right,—can't be otherwise. Here's the figures right here to prove it." "Wall, I've been callin' myself a clean hundred," said the old man, as he scratched his head; "but, if I hain't more'n seventy-nine, I've gwine to git dis crook outer my back, patch up dis obercoat, an' prepar' to take a fo'th wife fore de holidays. Glad dat you met me, sah. I've feelin' lighter in de heels already."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
 dy, N.Y.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
 Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 80 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

FREE

RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Carlin, Mrs. Clara Seymour, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, E. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
 dy, N.Y.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
 Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of these several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).....	1.50
ALCOOT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Meg, Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols.....	2.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrated.....	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins".....	1.50
Under the Lilacs. Illustrated.....	1.50
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
Silver Pitchers and Independence. A Centennial Love Story.....	1.25
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Cupid and Chow-Chow, &c.....	1.00
My Girls, &c.....	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinafore, &c.....	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
Culture and Anarchy.....	3.00
Last Essays on Church and Religion.....	1.50
Mixed Essays.....	2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma".....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism; with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.....	1.75
Isaiah XL--LXVI. With the shorter Prophets allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes and Commentary by Thomas French Eton.....	1.50
New Poems.....	2.00
Bible Reading for Schools.....	.35
Higher Schools and Universities in Germany. With New Preface.....	2.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
Lombard Street.....	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.....	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition.....	1.50
Mind and Body.....	1.50
Logic. Deductive and Inductive. 1 vol. Cloth.....	2.00
Emotions and the Will.....	5.00
BARING GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages.....	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.....	.75
Eating and Drinking.....	.75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper.....	.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. Cloth, extra.....	1.50
A Book of Poems.....	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	1.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Sally Williams. A New Series of Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals.....	1.25
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
CLIFFORD (WM. C.). Seeing and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols.....	1.00
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	1.50
Childhood of Religions.....	1.25
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.20
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Idols and Ideals.....	1.50
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.20
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Idols and Ideals.....	1.50
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.20
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Idols and Ideals.....	1.50

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.00
Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	1.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	3.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Different Forms of Flowers.....	1.50
Lower Animals.....	1.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth.....	1.25
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol. Cloth.....	1.25
Effects of Cross-fertilization.....	1.75
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.....	1.75
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated.....	1.50
Daniel Deronda. 2 vols.....	3.00
Felix Holt, the Radical. Illustrated.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.00
Romola. Illustrated.....	1.50
Silmarillion. Illustrated.....	1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.....	.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.). Essays. First Series. Portrait.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of the Future.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and other Pieces.....	1.50
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols.....	6.00
The Unseen World, and other Essays.....	1.50
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity.....	1.00
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Transcendentalism in New England.....	2.50
Life of Gerrit Smith.....	2.00
Creed and Conduct.....	1.00
Cradle of the Christ.....	1.75
Rising and Setting Faith.....	1.00
Beliefs of the Unbelievers.....	.25
Sermons. Old Series. 40 numbers, each 10c. 2 vols. half calf.....	5.50
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each 10c. 2 vols. half calf.....	5.50
Stories from the Lips of a Teacher.....	1.00
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Safest Creed.....	1.00
Knowledge and Faith.....	1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	1.00
Wanderings in France. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
GREGG'S (W. R.). Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.....	2.00
GEOTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.). A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	1.50
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	2.00
Round my House.....	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River.....	2.00
Wanderings: A Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire.....	2.00
Modern Frenchmen. Five Biographies.....	2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner. R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four woodcuts.....	2.50
Engraving and Etching.....	2.50
Harry Mount. Passages in a Boy's Life on Land and Sea.....	1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living.....	1.50
Gala Days.....	1.50
Woman's Wrongs.....	1.50
Summer Rest.....	1.50
A New Anthology.....	1.50
Swindling Blocks.....	1.50
Wool-Gathering.....	1.50
Sermons to the Clergy.....	1.50
Skirmishes and Sketches.....	1.50
First Love is Best.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters.....	1.60
Vases and Vase-Like Figures.....	1.25
The Story of Boon. A Poem. Paper covers.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.25
Bits of Talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks.....	1.00
Rits of Travel at Home.....	1.00
Nancy's Silver.....	1.00
Life of George Washington.....	1.50
HIGHWINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin.....	1.50
On the Origin of Species.....	1.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
Critiques and Addresses.....	1.25
American Address.....	1.25
Physiology, an Introduction to Study of Nature.....	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.....	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.....	1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.
No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50
No. III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
No. IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
No. V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
No. VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
No. VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
No. VIII. Animal Locomotion. Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
No. IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
No. X. Science of Law. By Prof. S. Ames.....	1.75
No. XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Mayr.....	1.75
No. XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper, M.D., LL.D.....	1.75
No. XIII. The Theory of Descent, and Darwinism. By Prof. S. H. Huxley.....	1.50
No. XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Vogel.....	2.00
No. XV. Fungi. By M. O. Cooke, M.A., LL.D.....	1.50
No. XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.....	1.50
No. XVII. Science of the Atom of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons.....	1.75
No. XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel.....	2.00
No. XIX. Animal Parasites and Mesmates. By Mons. Van Beneden.....	1.50
No. XX. Fermentations. By F. Schützenberger.....	1.50
No. XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Bernstein.....	1.75
No. XXII. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.....	1.50
No. XXIII. Studies in Spectroscopy. By J. N. Lockyer.....	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
China.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	8.00
KNAPPERT (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual, Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.....	1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	3.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life. Perms of Life and Mind. Vols. I and II. Per vol.....	3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind.....	3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method.....	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
A Fable for Critics.....	.75
Under the Willows and other Poems.....	1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal.....	.75
Three Memorial Poems.....	1.25
Fireside Travels.....	1.50
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each.....	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	2.50
Autobiography.....	2.50
Memorial Volume of his Works.....	2.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
The Ship in the Desert.....	1.50
Songs of Italy.....	1.25
MIVART (ST. GEO.). On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
Man and Apes. An Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Unity and Origin. 1 vol.....	2.00
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.....	2.00
Contemporary Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes.....	1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Bousseau. 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., completing the work. Four vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
On Missions. A Lecture Delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873.....	1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India.....	2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.). A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKES (THEODORE). Discourses on Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historical Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolley Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Ayle.....	1.50
Trotty's Wedding Tour. Illustrated.....	1.50
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.....	1.50
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c., with 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, &c.....	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHERLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.D., F.R.S.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. Zoology. By W. S. J. Peck.....	.50
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Economical. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Deductive Sociology. Parts I., II., and III., each.....	4.00
IV. Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	2.50
STRAUSS (D.F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
The Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	2.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	1.50
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	3.00
Vols. II., IV., and VI., each.....	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Sauterlings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Wit, Humor, and Scepticism.....	2.00
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHIFFLES (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.5

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.

VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving

Principles of the Ox Brain
and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.

A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whip.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workingman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY—PRICE TWO PENCE.

THE SECULAR REVIEW.

EDITED BY CHARLES WATTS.

The SECULAR REVIEW is the leading organ of Secularism, and each week has special Articles on Theological, Social, Scientific, and Political Subjects. Its distinctive features are the advocacy of Constructive Secularism, and the dissemination of useful information on all questions which affect the welfare of the people. Letters are inserted in its "OPEN COLUMN" from all who are courteous in the expression of their views; while a special department is allotted for "NOTES AND QUERIES."

The Contributors to the SECULAR REVIEW comprise the principal advocates of Secularism, including its founder, G. J. Holyoake.

CHARLES WATTS, Publisher,
84 Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,

23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?
11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.
23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "Is not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. ABBOT). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 18 and 20, 1876.)
- VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING

NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kuenen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I. Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II. Kings and Prophets. Vol. III. New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 283 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE GHOSTS: Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child, etc. By Col. R. G. Ingersoll (his latest lectures). 232 pages. Price $1.50. Also, THE GODS, etc., same title. 253 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Enigmas of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions, $1.50.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete Index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half calf, $6.00. Will be ready March 30.

This edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

For the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 8,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH

A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS'

LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
 2. Max Müller.
 3. Emerson.
- For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N. Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR,

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & CO. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & CO. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 527.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JAN. 29, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

LIBERAL LEAGUE PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSSES.

REV. HENRY POWERS, the Unitarian minister at Manchester, N.H., has become the editor of a new liberal journal called the Rising Faith. Mr. Powers is an able man and has able coadjutors; and we wish them the best success.

LETTER-WRITING on any large scale is a simple impossibility for editors, at least for us. When all the nervous energy is demanded for constant brain-work of other kinds, private correspondence necessarily drags; and private correspondents will be no more generous than just, if they thoughtfully make allowance for a seeming neglect that is inevitable.

PRESIDENT ELIOT's paper on the proper tenure for teachers is so valuable that we republish it this week in full, as the leading essay. Its general principles are thoroughly in accord with those of Colonel Stickney's remarkable book entitled A True Republic, which we have already noticed as the ablest treatise on its subject within our knowledge. President Eliot has rendered the greatest services to Harvard College by his extraordinary administrative ability, and in the present paper has done much to extend to the country at large the benefit of those services. We commend it to the closest attention of all friends of thorough education.

IT IS REPORTED that the new Mormon tabernacle at Salt Lake, which has been three years in course of erection, was opened recently by a conference which continued two days. Apostle President Taylor attacked the enemies of polygamy, severely censuring the nation for opposition to the divine institution of Mormonism. Now he wanted to see whether heaven or the United States was going to prevail. For his part, he was going to stick to the Lord. He called for an expression from the audience, which embraced five thousand people, asking them to raise their right hands before God if they sympathized in his defiance of governmental interference. The enthusiasm was intense. All hands went up. Mothers lifted aloft the hands of their children. Apostle Smith followed in the same strain, exhibiting the same defiant attitude. There is considerable rivalry among the Mormon chiefs for power in the Church government, and the struggle promises to come to an open rupture.

THE LONDON Secular Review of January 10th has this kindly paragraph: "The Unitarians of New England are meditating upon a question suggested by the recent appearance of Mr. F. E. Abbot, editor of THE INDEX, upon a Unitarian platform at Providence, to which he had been invited, and where he spoke his mind with that honorable frankness for which he is so distinguished. That Mr. Abbot, who is not a Materialist, has much more in common with the Unitarians than we have, is very probable; but in his discourse at the Providence Convention, upon the 'Influence of Philosophy upon Christianity,' he expressed his disbelief in Christianity as a divine revelation. Now, however, the Unitarians are exercised upon the propriety of thus working side by side with any one who so openly repudiates Christianity. How the question at issue may ultimately be settled, we cannot even guess. Much, however, as we admire toleration and charity, we can but hope that, where fundamental differences exist, no false bridges or apparent compromises will be allowed by either party. Where there is a demarcation, the line should be visible to all. Of course, this would promote rather than frustrate toleration and kindness."

TO-DAY BEING the anniversary of Thomas Paine's birth, the following quotation from the Transcript of the 17th instant will be timely: "Ex-Minister Washburne has been making a very thorough study of the relations which Thomas Paine held to the French Revolution, and has prepared an elaborate paper on the subject, which will probably appear in the May number of Scribner's Monthly. Mr. Washburne avoids all the questions in relation to Paine which have excited so much discussion in the United States, as well as in England, for the last century, and has confined himself simply to the status which Paine occupied during the French Revolution. Mr. Washburne while at Paris had an excellent opportunity to investigate the subject of the paper in question, and has made it the subject of a very thorough examination, including all that was published in France at the time in relation to Paine. Having access to the national archives of France, he has discovered a great many papers in regard to him which have never been made public, and has, through the files of the Moniteur, traced Paine's connection with the French National Convention. He finds the record and conduct of Paine during the most frightful epochs of the Revolution to be in the highest degree creditable to his intelligence, humanity, and patriotism."

THE CHICAGO Unity of January 1 quotes the following from C. G. Howland on "Purity of Speech," and adds that it "heartily responds to the sentiment": "We talk of the press as a means of enlightenment, there is no end to the praise we bestow, and justly, on the beneficent art of printing, a cheap literature is one of our constant boasts; but, after all, when we see how beneficent inventions may be employed for scandalous purposes, and that cheap literature includes all these possibilities and actualities of things that disgust and sicken, and what an engine of corruption these movable types have become, our exultation must needs be a little modified, and we are in a position to appreciate the feeling of that member of Congress who expressed his gratitude that newspapers and books were not circulated in his district. I sympathize very heartily with Comstock in his efforts to exclude from the United States mails all the poisonous trash that comes from the press, and while he may sometimes be more zealous than wise, and may even do illegal acts, yet the evil which he is trying to suppress is so enormous that I can overlook an occasional stretch of authority, or even a small tyranny; and hence I have no tears to shed over the pains and penalties of those who have depended for a livelihood on pandering to the low instincts of men, and whose printed words break down the moralities of life and debauch the universal conscience."

ADAM IS NO LONGER to be neglected in this age of monuments. The Detroit Free Press says: "Adam is to have a cenotaph. It may seem a rather late day to recognize the sterling merits of our first father by giving him any cenotaph, as it were, but it is better late than never. If any man ever deserved a monument, it was Adam. He was a man of the strictest habits; he smoked not, neither did he chew; he attended no lodge—except that celebrated lodge in the wilderness; and he lounged around no corner grocery. The monument is to be erected at Elmira, New York; and this is how the subject became started. Rev. Thomas K. Beecher, in an unguarded moment, declared that Elmira was a Garden of Eden. This set the people thinking that they could not choose a better spot for the erection of a good-sized tombstone for Adam. Subscriptions of $25 each entitled the giver to a life membership ticket. The monument is to be of marble, and will be seventy-five feet high. Perhaps the raising of such a monument will not be so difficult as the preliminary $2,000 to complete it. The statue is to be unveiled next spring, and Mark Twain will furnish the inscription. Mark is singularly fortunate, inasmuch as his summer residence is in Elmira, and he can spend a portion of each summer vacation in weeping over the regularly certified monument to Adam; and thus mistakes which were made in this direction in the past will be blotted out by the tears he is now prepared to shed, as soon as the foundations are solid enough to admit of such an inundation in the neighborhood. Send on your subscriptions to the Adam monument fund."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....	Boston, Mass
Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....	Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....	Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....	St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH.....	Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....	Irrington, Ind.
MR. WM. J. POTTER.....	New Bedford, Mass.
MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....	Boston, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....	San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....	Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....	Boston, Mass.
RABBI B. FELSETHAL.....	Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER.....	Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....	Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. McDOWELL.....	Detroit, Mich.
MR. ISAAC M. WISE, Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.....	New York City
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....	New York
W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Editor "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.....	Toronto, Can.
REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....	Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....	Peoria, Ill.
DR. T. L. BROWN.....	Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. R. S. McDOWELL.....	Franklin, Pa.
ELDER P. W. EVANS.....	Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....	New York City
MRS. AMY POST.....	Rochester, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.....	Tenafly, N. J.
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....	Lottsburgh, Va.
JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....	Albany, N. Y.
RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....	Albany, N. Y.

Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN.....	231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....	142 Chandler St., Boston.
Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....	8 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Board of Directors.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....	W. H. HAMLEN.
F. E. ABBOT.....	C. D. B. MILLS.
D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.
Alabama.....	J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....	JOHN ABBOTT, Monticello.
California.....	J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado.....	DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
Connecticut.....	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....	JOSEPH D. GOELT, Greenville.
Florida.....	T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....	DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.....	DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
Indiana.....	N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
Iowa.....	JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kansas.....	S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
Kentucky.....	EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Louisiana.....	DR. W. H. BROWN, New Market.
Maine.....	J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
Maryland.....	E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
Massachusetts.....	KARL SCHMEMMANN, Detroit.
Michigan.....	J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Minnesota.....	R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Missouri.....	W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
Nebraska.....	V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
Nevada.....	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New Hampshire.....	FRANCIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
New Jersey.....	G. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
New York.....	J. W. THORNE, Warren.
North Carolina.....	E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
Ohio.....	SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
Oregon.....	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
Rhode Island.....	F. W. FULLER, Columbia.
South Carolina.....	DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Tennessee.....	DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
Texas.....	E. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Vermont.....	L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
Virginia.....	DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
West Virginia.....	ROBERT G. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Wisconsin.....	D. F. WILCOX, Yankton.
Dakota.....	W. E. DOLITTLE, Washington.
District of Columbia.....	W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Utah.....	NORMAN S. PORTER.
Wyoming.....

Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....	Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....	137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE.....	231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

Chartered by th National Liberal League of America.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Florence Liberal League.
SYRACUSE, N. Y.—[Officers not reported.] Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Onondaga County Liberal League.
ALBANY, N. Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.
BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
PASSAIC CITY, N. J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Passaic City Liberal League.
JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jacksonville Liberal League.
ROCHESTER, N. Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Gale. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jefferson Liberal League of Rochester.
CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon. Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.

N.B.—The above is an acknowledgment of the fact that a charter is due and will be sent as soon as possible. Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues originally chartered by the "National Liberal League" will receive charters from the "National Liberal League of America" without extra charge, if they send a certified copy of their vote to accept the following invitation:—

"Voted, That all Local Leagues that approve the formation of the National Liberal League of America are invited to dissolve their connection with the old League, and to join this League."

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y.	MOSES HAYS, Rochester, N. Y.
FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. URBIN, West Newton, land, N. Y.
Z. T. WATKINS, Syracuse, N. Y.	W. D. HUNT, Scott, N. Y.
NETTIE C. TRUEDELL, Syra-FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, cuse, N. Y.
GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MOSES W. DODGE, Albany, N. Y.
HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y.	J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N. J.
W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass.	SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
T. C. GAGE, Fayetteville, N. Y.	D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thordaike, Charles Ellis, Boston, Mass.
JOHN W. TRUEDELL, Syra-cuse, N. Y.
CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Al-bany, N. Y.	H. P. STARK, Rochester, N. Y.
ED. TUCKER, Chelsea, Mass.	JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N. Y.
JOHN NILL, Watertown, N. Y.
E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass.	M. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N. Y.
THOS. DUGAN, Albany, N. Y.	JOHN PREST, Albany, N. Y.
JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N. Y.	C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.	D. B. MORREY, Malden, Mass.

Tenure for Teachers.

A PAPER READ BEFORE THE MASSACHUSETTS TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION, BOSTON, DEC. 30, 1879.

BY PRESIDENT C. W. ELIOT, OF HARVARD COLLEGE.

Teachers should be appointed during Good Behavior after Long Periods of Probation.—The Importance of Continuous Service.

I do not propose to deal with the question whether a school committee chosen for one year can make a contract with a teacher for a period longer than his own term of service. If public opinion settles down upon the conviction that a tenure for teachers during good behavior and efficiency is expedient and desirable, some legal way of attaining what is desirable will be found or made.

Passing by, then, this temporary obstruction, we ask at once, What is the best tenure of office for teachers in the public schools? To this important question I find it impossible to give an immediate and unconditional answer. There is a prior question which claims immediate attention, and a subsequent question which must be dealt with in its place. To appoint a teacher for life who had given no proofs of fitness would be obviously absurd. A long tenure of office implies a careful selection of the official. If no intelligent method of selecting teachers is used, the shorter their tenure of office the better. An intelligent school superintendent in a Western city once told me that all his teachers came up for election three times a year, and that he wished it was oftener. It was necessary, he said, to have frequent opportunities of getting rid of teachers, because so many incompetent ones were appointed.

The reason was that the teachers were named by a patronage method, as is generally the case in the United States, the patrons being for the most part incompetent to distinguish between promising and unpromising candidates.

Before a long tenure can be claimed for teachers, it is plain that a sound system of selecting and proving them must have been established. I cannot deal with the question of tenure apart from the question of selection. The means of careful selection are two: First, examinations upon the subjects taught in the schools, and such other examinations as may best exhibit the capacities of the candidates. These examinations should include a fair range of optional subjects; for it is rather the candidate's powers of acquiring than their actual acquisitions which are to be tested, and it matters little in what particular field of knowledge those powers have been developed. Secondly, probationary service under the eyes of competent judges of teachers' work. There is no dispensing with actual service on probation, if teachers are to be chosen with reasonable care; for examination can only test knowledge and readiness, whereas the good teacher must also have conscientiousness, enthusiasm, devotion and force of character. The possession of these qualities, or the lack of them, can only be demonstrated in active teaching. There may well be three successive probationary appointments. The term of the first should be short, not exceeding a year; that of the second should be longer, but not more than three years; and that of the third and last should be five or six years. There is a great advantage in having the period of probationary appointments long enough to bring the teacher up to thirty or thirty-two years of age. By that time, men and women generally show what they are going to be. Some early buds wither; some tardy blossoms develop with exceptional vigor. Moreover, with salaried persons marriage ordinarily takes place before that age. That event generally stops a woman's teaching; while in men it often works a serious change, generally for good, but sometimes for evil. On the whole, it is safer to enter into a permanent contract with a man in whom the effect of marriage is already apparent than with one who has yet to choose his mate.

But here we encounter a difficulty, serious, but by no means insurmountable. Probationary appointments can be of no use whatever, unless competent and responsible judges watch the service rendered upon each appointment, and decide upon the expediency of retaining the teacher. Hence the prime necessity of competent superintendence and inspection. It is obvious that a shifting, unpaid, and unprofessional body, like a school committee, cannot discharge this function of superintendence and inspection. They must delegate it to professional persons of high character, good judgment, and long tenure. There is no need of argument to prove that a system of long tenure for teachers can be successfully carried out only by competent superintendents and inspectors, who themselves are reasonably secure in their positions, and who actually serve for long terms. Long probations imply long-continued observation of the candidates, and a permanent policy deliberately framed and consistently pursued.

The endeavors of the Boston school committee to organize a permanent board of supervisors deserve the hearty support of all professional teachers; for the maintenance of some such stable authority is essential to the success of all comprehensive plans for improving the condition and prospects of the public school-teacher.

Supposing now that at thirty to thirty-two years of age a teacher has given all the securities for future usefulness which thorough preliminary examination and long probation can supply, we ask, What should be the nature of the ultimate appointment? In the interest both of the profession and of the community, it should be an appointment without limitation of time. There should be no recurring election. Nevertheless, the teacher should be subject to removal for inadequate performance of duty or for misconduct, and there should be a regular provision for the retirement of superannuated teachers upon pensions or annuities. I touch here the subsequent question from which I am not able to disengage the question of tenure. Long tenures logically involve pensions or annuities. Further, there should be absolute security against reduction of salary for each individual once admitted to the permanent service. If the financial necessities of cities and towns really compel the reduction of teachers' salaries,—a well-nigh impossible supposition,—these reductions should take effect upon new appointments only, never upon the old. I know that this principle of good public administration is violated at pleasure by our national, State, and municipal governments; but I take leave to say that the practices of our governments in this respect are to the last degree barbarous, shiftless, and uneconomical. It is to be observed that this remark applies only to public administration: the servants of industrial or other private companies of uncertain income cannot be completely protected against the adverse chances of business; but government, whether national, State, or municipal, ought to be able to give its servants two rewards, which, to an appreciable extent, replace immediate money payment; namely, security of income and public consideration. To throw away or make no use of these advantages of its eminent position is outrageous extravagance on the part of government.

The dignity, independence, and freedom from solicitude of the teacher's life would be greatly enhanced by deliverance from the necessity of securing an annual reelection, and from the apprehension of reduction of pay. How great a boon is freedom from anxiety for the future! An uncertain tenure is no great hardship in early life, or so long as a man may readily turn from one pursuit to another; but when the prime of life is reached or past, and the stiffened mind no longer bends easily to new tasks, though still apt for familiar labors, an uncertain tenure gives terrible anxiety to one of prudent temperament who has given hostages to fortune.

Again, how precious would be the independence which an assured position would give!—precious to the teacher, and of great value also to the public; for I am persuaded that the public now loses much good advice through the natural caution and reserve of annually elected teachers. Thirdly, security of tenure would increase the public consideration which attaches to the teacher's office. It is a simple matter of fact that the dignity of any office not political is greatly affected by the practical length of its tenure.

Let us then imagine our representative teacher of proved capacity appointed at thirty or thirty-two years of age, during good behavior, upon an assured salary sufficient for the modest support of a family. He will lead a tranquil, independent, and honorable life, such as promotes longevity, and favors the prolongation of mental and bodily activity within familiar limits to an advanced age. Do we not here encounter a very serious objection to a system of long tenure? Are the schools to be filled with aged teachers? some one will naturally ask. Certainly not, under a complete and wise system. A regular provision for retiring old teachers on suitable annuities is a necessary supplement to a long tenure system. It would be very rash for any city or town to appoint even proved teachers without limitation of time, in the absence of any proper means of removing them from the schools when they get tired out, inefficient, or obstructive. Retiring annuities are desirable for three reasons: First, they enable an old teacher, who is disposed to rest from strenuous daily labor, to retire with honor, and enjoy a repose which all the world agrees he has fairly earned. Secondly, they enable the city or town to retire faithful teachers whose services are no longer desirable, and to do this in a considerate, just, and not unacceptable way. Thirdly, the habitual use of retiring annuities, in part voluntarily claimed, and in part involuntarily accepted, makes promotion through all the grades of a large service more rapid than it would otherwise be. This is a great object, because the prospect of slow promotion deters ambitious young persons from entering a service which otherwise would attract them. There are many systems of pension, retiring annuity, or superannuation allowance now in use in different services and different nations, none perfectly applicable to our public-school service without modification, but together affording safe guidance to a wise scheme.

It is plain that the administration of any retiring system must be entrusted to some reasonably permanent authority which commands the confidence both of the teachers and of the public. We meet here again the need of a board of disinterested and judicious inspectors permanently employed.

These, then, are the three main features of a well-organized public-school service: careful selection of teachers by examination and probation; ultimate appointment, without limitation of time; and a system of retiring annuities. These principles, taken together, either openly avowed or tacitly recognized, are the foundation of every just, economical, and efficient public administration in the world. To doubt the practicability of a system based on these three principles is out of the question, for the combined system has been long in force in several highly civilized nations.

Let me beg you not to be deterred from giving a candid consideration to the suggestions I have offered by certain alarming adjectives which are sure to be applied to them by superficial critics,—undemocratic and un-American, for example. The method of appointment which I have advocated is an unrestricted and prolonged competition before a competent tribunal, which would not be open to any undue influence, and from which no favors could be expected. This process seems to me decidedly more democratic than the prevailing American method of procuring a public place, which method consists, as we all know, first in soliciting recommendations for the place from persons who, for the most part, know little about the duties of the position, or the fitness of the applicant therefor; and, secondly, in soliciting the place itself at the hands of a patron presumably incompetent to make a judicious selection, and himself in power but for a day. Words have lost their meaning when a patronage method like this is called more democratic than an open competitive method. It cannot be held that a long tenure is in itself undemocratic; for even under regulations which prescribe annual elections the practical tenure of school-masterships in this city has generally been long; and in many other services, such as those of colleges, academies, banks, insurance companies, manufacturing corporations and railway companies, long tenures of office are practically familiar to our people, and their advantages are well understood. Neither can it be held that pensions are undemocratic. At least, that is not alleged concerning the national pensions paid to soldiers, sailors, and judges, or the municipal pensions paid to policemen and firemen. Indeed, each of the two great political parties seems to be mortally afraid that the other will get ahead of it in voting pensions.

But un-American! How shall I meet this easily made objection, which is too intangible to be rebutted by argument? The system of public administration herein advocated is un-American only in the sense that it is not at this moment in force as a whole anywhere in the United States. But let us cherish the hope that it is not un-American to accept facts and to make progress. We need only be careful to inquire, in an impartial, scientific spirit, whether the system which has been set forth is founded upon the real needs and rational desires of civilized human nature, and is conformed to the dictates of common sense and common justice. If it is, it may not be American to-day; but shall we not try to make it so to-morrow? The flatterer of the people assures them that they have nothing to learn from other nations, and that their present opinions and practices are the wisest possible. He has a far stouter faith in the intelligence and right purposes of the people who believes that they will adopt, as soon as they understand them, any administrative methods which can be shown to be more humane, just, and effective than they now employ.—Boston Daily Advertiser, Dec. 31, 1879.

"FELLOW CITIZENS," said a local candidate, "there are three topics that now agitate the State—greenbacks, taxes, and the penitentiary. I shall pass over the first two very briefly, as my sentiments are well known, and come to the penitentiary, where I shall dwell for some time."

[FOR THE INDEX.]

EXAMINER NOTES.

BY REV. EDWARD C. TOWNE.

UNDERBANK PARSONAGE, STANNINGTON, {
Near SHEFFIELD, Eng. }

The reports in THE INDEX of Dec. 4, on the work of the Free Religious Association, and the earlier reports in the Christian Register, of the Unitarian Ministers' Institute meetings at Providence, make it opportune for me to speak a word on what I regard as the comparative failure of the Free Religious Association, in that it has not established a bishopric of sympathy, charity, and freedom, with a variety of local societies under its broad and liberal care, and also an Institute of scholars and ministers to organize and carry on broad and deep study of all the pressing problems of advanced thought and free religion. It means something every way that Mr. Abbot has had from Unitarianism quite his best chance for an Institute essay, and that his plan for having the Free Religious Association undertake a distinct relation to local societies and their ministers cannot meet with official acceptance. It was not on these lines that the Association was planned, and action kept within such limits most decidedly tends to defeat the original purpose of the Association. That purpose was to take up the work of Unitarianism where an unfaithful hesitation of the conservative Unitarians had caused it to be dropped. To go on doing in a spirit of freedom the identical work which we urged Unitarians to do was the original idea. It is true that foolish virgins with a prejudice against oil in their lamps, and a great doubt about fruitful readiness to do anything in particular, were to be found in the chief seats of religious radicalism (male virgins I mean, the women were not so foolish),—brilliant men, who by going out of the ministry, or by the waning of their practical faith, had got into a position of immaculate superiority to the risks and the toils of energetic fruitfulness. The two informal conferences held at Dr. Bartol's, soon after the Syracuse denial of freedom, came to nothing, because of the foolish virgins, who were for keeping our lamps empty because lighted lamps may smoke. It was expressly against this silliness of pseudo-sagacity that three of us resolved to go forward ourselves by maturing a plan, calling a formal conference, and securing a convention, to organize and to get something really done. As soon as our plan had been carried out, and the Association established, I proposed, and was authorized to proceed with, a plan for doing just what the Unitarian Institute is now at last doing, only on lines wider than the Unitarian. Prof. Park, Dr. Bushnell, Dr. Chapin, and Samuel Johnson were to be asked to be the four chief speakers of a free conference upon religion, with Wendell Phillips as a fifth, to speak for moral reform as itself a type of religion. Each of these speakers was to make the best explanation and defence in his power of his own faith, not for dogmatic controversy, but for free confession and brotherly conference; and discussion, by minor essays or by speeches, was to be held to the same free and fair spirit, eschewing contention, and binding all to united effort to get all our lamps trimmed and burning, so that from Calvinism on the right to moral reform religion on the left, whatever the form of a man's faith, there might be the utmost possible of pure light along the whole line, and as much as possible a mutual recognition that the pure light, after all, is the divine revelation, the alone supreme and blessed thing, and that the lamps do not so essentially matter, provided only in some true way they are filled and trimmed, and burning. The plan had to be given up for that year, but not before Dr. Bushnell had agreed to take his part; and, had I been able to return to it the following year, a great conference would have been held, on a ground wider than the Unitarian, and steps would have been taken to make it "The American Free Conference," open to all bona fide religious societies and ministers; profoundly radical in the sense of thoroughly honest search for the real roots of faith and life, and profoundly conservative in the sense of respecting all real roots, and digging about them for culture, and not for destruction or injury. Drawing the first line at organized societies and settled ministers (societies, that is, organized on the plan of a settled ministry, and the ministers of such societies), the widest real case of instituted religion would be represented, and vagrant individualism, both lay and clerical, left out, except as free special admission of persons of this class might sufficiently bring in those of real, though unconnected or eccentric worth. A sober, safe, and strong brotherhood of the faithful could be made by free union of all actual representatives of regularly instituted and regularly conducted religious communion, and such a brotherhood could give generous welcome to all individuals of character, gifts, and study sufficient to represent a real unit in the progress of the time; while the herd of wayfaring fools, the intellectual and moral tramps, who hang about all open gates, would find no entrance. That Unitarianism has taken with success some free and brave steps in the direction of a Free Conference, while Free Religion has mainly taken only an extreme outside place far at one side, where the vagrant and libertine easily get chief possession, shows that the managers of the latter have lacked wisdom more than those of the former have lacked freedom.

And to my view the primary Free Religious failure has been in not undertaking relations with societies and ministers, and not engaging with all its might in planting societies and aiding ministers. There is nothing so broad and so fruitful as freedom; and for Free Religion leaders to decline all watch and care, and all organized work and instituted fellowship, out of fear for freedom, is about the weakest infidelity possible. It is absurd to construe freedom in religion as freedom regardless of the moral basis, without which neither religion nor freedom has any value; and to choose the method and laws of freedom no doubt calls for the sagacity and character of a real prophet. Quite possibly, the best efforts might at first go amiss, either religion suffering from license, or freedom suffering from oppression; but to let fear of either of these results paralyze action is to the last degree faithless and unworthy. The real greatness of the mission of Free Religion lay in this very fact, that for the first time there was a chance to solve the problem of having full freedom without license, and full faith without bondage. The majority of the Free Religious leaders and sympathizers have declined this mission, absolutely refusing to concern themselves with faith and fellowship, lest by the accidents of so doing freedom should suffer. The consequence is that freedom has suffered shockingly from license; and, as to faith and fellowship, Free Religion is the most backward, blind, and blundering of guides, the moment one wants to know to what definite purpose and with what special plans we are to be free. No such practical wreck has been made as that of the definite organization and administration of advanced liberalism, the League movement, which has been the conspicuous practical outcome of Free Religion, left to be such a wreck by the inaction of the Association. And, in the region of learning and thought, the profoundest mastery of an elevated spirit and noble general conceptions has rested on a failure no less profound and comprehensive to rightly know and rightly divide between the historical facts and current traditions of that Christianity which is the environment of Free Religion in Christendom. The lowest and least learned conception of any one of the great religions is that which accepts a religion as truly exhibited in its catholic and popular form. This form is always a pseudo-type of the genuine original. The Orthodox authorities even are commonly seeking now to go behind the corrupt catholic forms of the great faiths of the world, Hinduism, Buddhism, Islamism, and even lower types, to get at the genuine original type in each case, and let the best that they were fully and fairly appear. When this is done, it is found that a free mind and a pure heart may find at least a moral substance of doctrine in any religion, sufficient to stand on broadly and firmly, and to build out from, with due reform on lines true to ideal faith and fellowship. Yet Free Religion conspicuously points to catholic and popular corrupt types as historically genuine, and denies all chance of a standing for the free reformer within the lines of the Christian name, heedless in the most surprising way of the fact which all reputable scholarship establishes, that catholic and popular Christianity, whether Roman or Protestant, represents a corrupt Latin-African departure from apostolic Christism, and unconscious on the special ground of free study that liberty and learning are ready guides to the far greater fact that the uninstructed, Jew disciples, apostles (self-appointed and self-named such), and evangelists, who were artists of devised story rather than historians, originated a Christism intensely contrary to the pure humanitarian theism of Christ, after the precise manner in which all disciples of great originators of faith have taken the Teacher himself in place of the Teacher's object of devotion.

The simple fact is that our first freethinkers inherited the prodigious ignorance and false learning of popular orthodoxy, and went out of this, unconscious that a true learning, freely applied, would enable them to sweep all the false away, and hold the ground on which it had from the time of Peter and Paul stood, as ground belonging, not to orthodoxy, but to truth as free and pure and radical as ever went to lonely martyrdom. The entire field of new learning sends all its testimonies to support the one conclusion that Jesus was as true a Christ of humanity as any free-thought could ask; that there was never any appearance of his dabbling in miracle or so much as imagining it possible or proper to undertake the supernatural, until his pertinaciously contrary disciples painted their devised picture expressly to mend his figure to their own mind, after the manner of pious fiction universally deemed superior to any dull adherence to plain fact; and that a method adequately free and true, sagacious and learned, may readily enough take the apostolic bushel off from the simple truth of Christ, and reveal as genuine a light of conscience and sympathy and trust, of pure belief and sound knowledge, as any yet conceived by modern thought or reached by modern study. I was myself in this case of Free Religious misconception of Christ until I got free from the pseudo-learning of the popular tradition, and had accomplished extensive study both of the other religions of mankind and of the origins of Judaism and Christianity. Numbers of able and brilliant men of the older generation have refused the task of clearing the figure of Christ—in the way that they clear that of Buddha, for example—from the pious falsities of apostolic enthusiasm, and we have been expected to do any religion sympathetic justice except our own. The weakest part of this has been the way in which one radical goes off on one point, but not on another; while a second does not go off on the first point, but does on the other. Thus, of two foremost men of the first generation of Free Religionists, one cannot abide the blasphemy of common prayer, but sees no harm in calling his humanitarian theism Christianity, while the other, with exactly the same faith, cannot abide the Christian name, but deems common prayer so natural, and makes it so fitting and effective, that a fine critic could pronounce his prayers the perfection of religious utterance. It goes without saying that radicalism thus divided against itself is in a false position; and my contention is that the mistake is in not positively clearing away the false, so that both prayer and Christ could be taken in a sense of great and deep truth, and that Free Religion is a comparative failure until it can take the helm of Christianity and put every illiberal type of faith into the position of an heretical error.

FRAUDS AND PERSONALITIES.

WISE WORDS FROM AN EMINENT MEDIUM AND AUTHOR.

When the exposure of fraud and rascality is first considered, there necessarily arises a feeling of distrust and misgiving, and the foundations of Spiritualism seem yielding and giving way. We forget the countless unimpeachable witnesses, the world of evidence, the host of good and true mediums, of noble advocates, just as in an hour of storm we forget months of beautiful days of glorious suns, of sweet-breathed nights crowned with stars.

The Spiritualist, whose faith is permanently affected by exposures of deception, must have built on sand, and not on the firm rock. The demand for tests, of itself, shows a doubting mind. When once convinced, there is no longer need of continuous wonder-works. Being convinced, the exposure of tricks should not affect ground already won.

Nor should honest mediums oppose such exposures, for their own welfare demands that frauds should not be tolerated. The spurious manifestations are always ready, or manufactured to order, while the genuine are dependent on subtle conditions and cannot be predicted. Unrestrained, the fraudulent medium will surpass the genuine in wonderful manifestations. Comprehending this, quite a large class of Spiritualists think it right to let the frauds pursue their course; for, if they convince sceptics of the reality of spirit manifestations, it is just as well as if they were genuine. A second thought will show that Spiritualism cannot afford to countenance such support. Spiritualism is the greatest fact in the universe, and as such must rest on facts alone: it cannot afford to support the doctrine that the "end justifies the means." It has no need, for it has ample support on the highest ground. Again it is said that these exposures fill the Journal with personalities, and cause a great amount of contention and bad blood. This certainly is to be regretted, yet what course can be pursued by which the evil can be extirpated and the good remain, unless there be some conflict.

It is true the spiritual press may do, as it has done for years, when any abuse or fraud came to the surface,—speak of it, if at all, in a general way editorially, and let it pass on its course without the slightest check. The result has been a steady growth of fraudulent manifestations so astounding in character as to eclipse the genuine, and the latter passed almost unnoticed, while the rooms of the frauds were thronged with eager crowds asking for and receiving manifestations impossible for spirits to give.

An exposure to be of use must be overwhelming and complete, leaving no room for doubt. It must be more than an editorial item. Such exposures are not personalities. The public medium is before the world, and it is the right and duty of journalism to pronounce judgment. It should be charitable, broad, generous, but it must not shrink from a statement of the truth. If it does, when such statement vitally affects cardinal principles, it becomes recreant to its great trust. Charity, generosity, catholicity, may go so far as to clothe the truth even in a garment of words which shall shield rather than denounce sin and crime. If a thing is wrong, let us say it is wrong. If there is rascality, let us say rascality, and not extenuate with meaningless words. This broad spirit may be carried too far, until all distinctions between right and wrong, good and evil, are lost sight of, and the blackest crimes are condoned with the self-satisfying remark that "Whatever is, is right," a proposition which destroys all moral distinctions.

The cry of "personality" in this connection has just the same relevancy that it would have in the case of criminals suffering from disobedience to established laws. There are certain moral precepts that are fixed, and no sophistry can set them aside. The criminal does not want his crimes exposed, and regards it as a very unfriendly and personal affair. The exposure is the prelude and part of the punishment, and is demanded by justice.

"But," replies a good brother, "do you not hold that love is the new power by which to rule the world?" Yes; but let it be love guided and controlled by wisdom. There are elements not controlled by love. It will not affect the wrath of the tornado. It will not shield from the jaws of an enraged tiger. In the remote future, love may lead because it will not meet antagonism; but now there is so much of brute force in human nature, that it must be restrained by wisdom, at least until love can have a hearing.

Another brother admits the truth of all exposures, yet fears that the Cause will be injured; and still another regrets that the spiritual press has descended to the level of the Police Gazette.

The first need have no fears. "The Cause" will take care of itself. It always has done so, and without leaders has marched on in triumph. It demands nothing but truth, and fraud has no place in its ranks. "The Cause" is injured not by what outsiders think, but by the character of those who advocate it. If their lives are impure, despicable, and unclean, then will the Cause fall into the shadow of disgrace. If their lives be true, pure, self-sacrificing, and noble, then the Cause will be elevated. The way to give character to the Cause is to make character for ourselves. How can "the Cause" be more irredeemably disgraced than by our countenancing by silence sensuality and fraud?

To the last objection, the necessity of descending to reporting matters usually given to the Police Gazette, indeed, is to be regretted. However, the necessity exists, and to shrink from it would be a betrayal of trust. If an individual forces himself to the front and assumes leadership of the masses to higher grounds, while he is reeking with impurity and controlled by selfishness and the lowest desires, to remain silent would be criminal. When the rag-weed starts in the farmer's corn, it is not by love he extirpates it, but with a sharp hoe he cuts it up by the roots. Some corn may be damaged, but the field is saved, otherwise there would have been no corn, nothing but rag-weeds. There are times for the gentle influences of love: there are times for force,—that force well directed by wisdom.

It seems there are some who can see no distinction between deserved rebuke and personality. If a man kills another in fiendish rage, what else can it be called but murder? And yet would it be a personality to brand the name on the crime, and the doer as a murderer? These are the words to use, and none other can take their place.

It is to be regretted that Spiritualism and the circle of reformers need these sharp measures, but the fault lies not with those who expose them. It was not D. D. Home's fault that there were "Shadows," though he has been treated like a culprit in high quarters because he honestly spoke his opinions.

When a cancer is eating to vital parts, and the whole body is being corrupted, the surgeon does not hesitate at taking the knife and cautery, cutting deep and burning out the last vestige. He deeply feels for his subject, yet knows that the only safety is in thorough treatment. So when excrescences fasten on a cause and tend to bring it into disrepute and corrupt it at its vital sources, they who know of these results are justified in plainest speech.

The murderer might as well cry out against those who execute the law as "persecutors," as the fraudulent mediums who are exposed against those who unmask their rascality. Spiritualists will never persecute a true medium. They desire above all things the exercise of mediumship, and they oppose the counterfeit. The cry of persecution of mediums is a blind and a sham in defence of arrant deception, and all thinking Spiritualists clearly understand it as such.

Harmony and peace are to be desired, and above all people Spiritualists should be fraternal, kind, charitable, forbearing, gentle, true, unselfish. Life is the effect of antagonisms, and harmony may mean stagnation and death. It is idle to cry "Peace, peace," when the peace demanded is the quietude which brings effectlessness and death.

There is no cause of fear for the result. The spirit-forces behind the visible mask will drive forward to the accomplishment of their ends, and the truth will be triumphant. HUDSON TUTTLE.

BERLIN HEIGHTS, Ohio, Dec. 5, 1879.
—Religio-Philosophical Journal, Dec. 13, 1879.

EASTERN MISSIONS A FAILURE.

A residence of nearly twelve years in the far East, if it has done nothing else, has at least given me an opportunity of gauging Christian missions at their true value, which I should never have been able to do, had I remained at home. To read the journals and listen to the speeches of missionary advocates, one would imagine that the battle was almost won; that Mohammedanism and Buddhism were ready to fall prostrate before the standard of the cross. If there be any readers of the Secular Review who entertain such an erroneous idea, let them discard it at once, and know that, if Christian missionaries succeed in doing anything at all,—which, to say the least, is problematical,—it is only to fit and prepare the soil for the introduction of freethought and secularism.

A prolonged absence from England has prevented me from knowing much about the rise and progress of the secular movement. Until within the last few weeks, I had no opportunity of reading any of the numerous works which have issued from the freethought press during the last few years, and, in fact, was not even aware of the existence of this journal. But, although I am the last, I am far from being the least well-wisher of the work that is in progress. My experience of the several creeds represented in the far East, the parallel and contrast they afford to Christianity, and the absolute failure of the missionaries of the latter to effect any real or lasting impression on the minds of those whom they seek to proselytize, has gone far to prepare me to welcome and adopt the principles of secularism.

I desire, therefore, to afford the public a means of knowing the real truth about missions, for it is morally certain that the societies which solicit subscriptions on their behalf are not going to admit that they have failed; and it is equally certain that ex-missionaries—"returned empties," as a certain church paper would call them—and missionaries home on leave are not going to acknowledge that their soul-stirring eloquence has been poured out in vain on unwilling ears. No, certainly not. It is the policy of these gentlemen to maintain a wise silence concerning defeats, and to grossly exaggerate anything in the way of successes. I am well aware that the so-called religious journals would never insert anything to the disparagement of missions generally, although it might be no difficult matter to induce a church paper to publish an article against, say, Wesleyan missions, and vice versa. But to admit a general and sweeping condemnation of all missionary efforts is more than any or either of the Church or Nonconformist organs would have the courage to do. The same may be said of the party papers. The Times, Standard, Daily Telegraph,—the paper that boasts of having "the largest circulation in the world," —or Daily News, would shrink with pious horror from making room for any plain, outspoken contribution of the kind. The Secular Review, I feel certain, is not afraid of declaring the "truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," without any partiality, favor, or affection whatsoever. Through the medium of these columns, therefore, I desire to give the result of my experiences of missionary operations in one of the most distant parts of the British dominions.

I unhesitatingly declare—and I challenge contradiction on the point—that Christian missions are a most egregious failure, as well as a disgraceful waste of money. The vast sums that are annually squandered on Utopian missionary schemes, that never have and never will bring forth substantial fruit, would go far to provide many hundreds of starving families with those bare necessities of life, for the want of which they are daily dying by scores. Bibles, Testaments, tracts, and missionaries for the heathen abroad, indeed! Let Exeter Hall philanthropists be just before they are generous. John Bull only too often suffers from softening of the brain, as well as softening of the heart. Exeter-Hallites know this perfectly well, and take good care to bleed his pocket pretty freely. But let them make a proper use of their plunder,—for I can call it nothing else,—and instead of throwing it away on what heathens abroad do not want, and are never likely to ask for, spend it in the purchase of food, clothing, and shelter, of which our own poor stand most urgently in need, and for which they are daily clamoring most pitiously.

But all this is a digression: it is time I came to the point. I say, then, that Christian missions are a failure, for three especial reasons.

First, they are a failure, because they only inculcate, both to Buddhists and Mohammedans, their own religion under another name. Take the case of the Buddhists. They have a Trinity in Unity, the same as Christians. The names are different, it is true; but the doctrine is identical. The circumstances attending the birth and life of Buddha—the God incarnate of the Buddhists—are almost a repetition of those related of Christ in the four Gospels. Buddhists are by no means slow to observe this, and are inclined to treat the harangues of the missionaries more in the light of a good joke than anything else. With respect to Mohammedans, the resemblance is even more complete. The Koran is nothing more or less than a reproduction of the Old Testament; indeed, I may go further, and say that it is a new and improved edition of the same. The morality of the Koran is, if anything, superior to that of the Old Testament, and, unless I am greatly mistaken, it has a far less number of objectionable passages and vulgar stories. This being the case, it will easily be imagined by all who are not bound in the chains of superstitions, by all who prefer the light of reason to the blindness of faith, that the labors of Christian missionaries are not an unqualified success, and very far from being the triumphant march of spiritual conquest and victory that they would have us believe.

Secondly, Christian missions are a failure, because they cannot contend against the advancing tide of learning and civilization. In whatever part of the globe Englishmen may settle,—be it among the lofty hills and vast sultry plains of India; be it within the ice-bound shores of Canada or Nova Scotia; or be it in the more genial climes of Australia and New Zealand,—they always bring with them English manners and customs, and, as has often been said, set up a little England of their own. They bring with them a knowledge of the liberal arts and sciences, and, through the medium of schools and colleges, a fair sprinkling of that knowledge is speedily disseminated among the native races. In all parts of the East, such institutions are largely attended and liberally supported by them. Nowhere is this more manifest than in the Straits Settlements,—a colony in which I have passed some of the best years of my life, and in which I have been able to gain considerable experience of the so-called Eastern luxury, and of comparing and contrasting it with Western civilization. The native community of these settlements is made up of Chinese, Indians, Malays, and a few Siamese and Burmese. The Malays are the original inhabitants; but the Chinese considerably outnumber them. It is a remarkable fact that they take a peculiar delight in following in our footsteps. Wherever in the East—and in the West, too, for that matter—we raise our standard, they flock to it by hundreds and thousands; and the more we extend our influence, the more prosperous they become. But, while all natives more or less appreciate the advantages of an English education, the Chinese seem to attach especial value to it. In Singapore and Penang there are old-established schools receiving liberal grants in aid from the Colonial Government, and largely supported by private subscriptions. The course of instruction is very much on a par with that of Board schools at home; but with this difference, that it is purely secular, no attempt being made to introduce the Bible for general use, or to cram religion down the throats of the scholars. I say general use, because, by special arrangements, some European pupils are instructed in the rudiments of theology. The Chinese are the best patrons of these schools. Many of them, being large capitalists, can well afford to bestow handsome donations on them, and are by no means backward in doing so. Their children form a very large proportion of the scholars, in some instances not much less than eighty per cent. of the whole. What, then, is the effect of bestowing a liberal education on them? Does it pave the way for the introduction of Christianity, by causing them to doubt the truth of the religion of their parents? By no means. No doubt some religious enthusiasts at home imagine a very pretty picture of Chinese or Indian children learning the doctrines of Christianity from the schoolmaster, and, in the innocence of their young hearts, trying to turn their fathers and mothers from the error of their ways. If such be their ideas, the sooner they undeceive themselves the better. As far as my experience goes,—and I have had good opportunities of judging,—the chief effect education has on the minds of natives of the East is to make them doubt the truth of all religions, and to regard them as so many childish superstitions that may safely be consigned to the limbo of a bygone age. Missionaries are apt to forget, or rather to lose sight of the fact, that where they go the schoolmaster generally follows them, and proves to be a very formidable opponent in their way. Ghosts were anciently believed to walk by night and vanish at daybreak. So is it now in the East. Advancing civilization kindles the light of science; the night of ignorance is departing; the morning of reason and intellect breaks; and the shadows of superstition flee away.

Thirdly, missions are a failure because Christians do not practise what they preach. It is utterly useless for them to tell Buddhists and Mohammedans that Christianity is a holier and purer religion than theirs, and then, in the face of such an assertion, show by their lives and actions that it is nothing of the kind. Natives of the East are not such fools as missionaries are inclined to believe them. They judge of a thing by its effects. Their religion does exercise some sort of spell over them so far as to make them obedient to its precepts. Christianity manifestly has no influence whatever over the majority of its professors, and until it has missionary operations are but labor in vain, and a scandalous waste of money that might be applied to more practical purposes.

In saying this, I desire in no way to depreciate or disparage the missionaries themselves. Most, if not all, of them, are thoroughly earnest and sincere in their intentions, and do not hesitate to sacrifice their very lives to the cause they have at heart. But then they are only pursuing a phantom, a will-o'-the-wisp, that sooner or later will land them into a slough of failure and disappointment.

To take the matter in a common-sense point of view, apart from the truth or falsehood of Christianity, how can we possibly expect heathen nations to adopt a religion that has not the slightest effect on our lives? Christianity lays down a certain code of morality as well as a definite system of belief. Buddhism and Mohammedanism do the same, with a great deal more success than does Christianity. Their votaries do, in a great measure, act up to what they are taught; but Christians show by their lives that they do not themselves believe the creed they are so anxious for Eastern nations to embrace. What has been the effect of the residence of Europeans among them? Civilization and the arts and sciences may have advanced, and have had a humanizing effect; but what about morality? Have Christians shown themselves to be more moral, more temperate, more honest, or more honorable in their dealings than those whom they regard as heathens? No, they have not; for where they go, there they bring the "fire-water" (brandy) with them, and teach the natives how to get drunk. Where they go, prostitution, with all its attendant evils, speedily follows, and the Colonial Government have to keep it in check by passing a Contagious Diseases' Act. Where they go, they initiate the natives into the mysteries of trade. They show them—by example, which is always better than precept—how to cheat, to lie, to make a bargain, and that honesty is not the best policy. Where they go, they do all this, and far more than this; and then, in the face of it, expect the heathen to embrace Christianity on the ground of its being a pure and holy religion! Depend upon it that secularism has no better or more eloquent missionaries in the field than these so-called Christians.

This, then, is the result of my experience in the far East. I can vouch for the truth of all that I have asserted, and venture to hope that, to some extent, I have proved to the satisfaction of the readers of the Secular Review that Christian missions are a ridiculous farce as well as a most ignominious failure.—W. Vaudrey, in the London Secular Review, Dec. 6.

FOREIGN.

A CLUB WAS OPENED last week for the promotion of the study of Rabelais and the formation of a Rabelaisian library. Among the members, we find the names of Henry Irving, Edmond About, Bret Harte, and several well-known English and American writers. It is called the Rabelais Club, and it is proposed to form affiliated clubs in France and in the United States.

MME. HOLKOWSKY, of St. Petersburg, is engaged in founding an association to build workshops for embroidery by machinery, such as exist in Switzerland. She is now travelling in foreign countries to give a close study to this industry, and to order materials and engage workmen to come and teach the art in Russia, which enterprise will be conducted on a grand scale.

NONCONFORMITY in London is increasing far more rapidly than Catholicism. Fifteen years ago in the metropolis there were sittings for but thirty-nine thousand Nonconformists, now there are one thousand and twenty-two. They are now building thirty chapels, with sittings for one thousand each, and have money in hand for twenty more, each with the same number of sittings.

THE HOSTILE FEELING which has been aroused against the Jews in Germany has even its ridiculous side. At Mannheim, a hatter has publicly announced that he will no longer serve Jewish customers. It is somewhat curious that Herr Marr, one of the principal instigators against the Jews, was twice married to Jewesses. A German contemporary remarks thereon, Hinc ille lacrimæ.

LEO XIII., not content with laboring to improve the condition of the papacy in Europe, is now studying to enlarge its sphere of action in America. To this end, all the archbishops, bishops, and priests in America have been invited to gather information and transmit it to Rome. These statistics will form the basis of a formal project for extending the influence of the Papal Church there.—Roman Letter.

EASTERN ROUMELIA.—The Daily News correspondent of Philippopolis, describing a sitting of the Provincial Assembly, says: "During half an hour's recess, it was a curious sight to see the Bulgarian Archbishop, the Armenian Bishop, the Jewish Rabbi, and the Turkish Mufti all sitting at the same table, apparently on the most familiar terms. Indeed, I saw the Rabbi,—an exceedingly fine-looking man, by the way—make cigarettes, and then present them to his ecclesiastical colleagues, all of whom smilingly accepted them."

A LADY RESIDING at Hampstead has been charged by the Vicar with having unlawfully disturbed, vexed, troubled, and disquieted the clergymen celebrating Divine Service at the parish church of St. John, Hampstead, by singing too loud and out of time. One of the curates personally remonstrated with her some months ago, but she said she only wanted to "worship in spirit and in truth"; whereon, he told her she need not do it so loudly. The Bench adjourned the summons for a month, to see if the annoyance ceased.

THE Boston Guardian contains a report of a lecture recently delivered at Wainfleet by a Christian minister on "Christianity and Common-Sense." As examples of how much the latter is disregarded by lecturers on Christian evidences, we notice that the Rosetta and Moabite stones were referred to as proofs of the general truth of the Bible; that it was affirmed that geology and the book of Genesis are in accord; and that, in short, philology and every branch of learning go to corroborate the claims made on behalf of the Christian religion. This address was concluded with a "wonderful peroration, proving most conclusively that we show our highest common-sense when we accept the Bible as God's book and his [God's] Son as our Savior." After this revelation, we marvel that there are any unbelievers to be found in Lincolnshire.

IT IS REPORTED that crimes of violence are greatly on the increase in Italy. In the Island of Sardinia, a village near Cagliari has been completely sacked by an armed band of desperadoes; in Sicily, life is taken on the smallest provocation; and gun, pistol, and dagger appear to be in common daily use everywhere throughout the Peninsula. So many sentinels have lately been attacked that the government has been induced to institute an inquiry into the matter, and it is now stated that these murderous attempts have been instigated by an International Committee which sits in London. There is probably no foundation for this statement. Unfortunately, the present evil condition of the people of Italy is but too likely to end in disturbances and bloodshed. The new year brings with it no prospect of substantial improvement for the suffering workers of many European lands.—Secular Review.

THE NEW ORGAN, started at Rome under the protection and at the instigation of Pope Leo XIII., is called the Aurora. The leader forcibly sets forth its programme, and raison d'être. It proposes to defend the liberty of the Holy See, to combat error, to respect persons, and to maintain justice and right. Its second article answers a Russian gentleman's exhortation to the Pope, advising him to give up Rome to the secular power, and, accepting Sardinia in exchange, to crown King Humbert Emperor of Italy. The Aurora demonstrates that Providence has destined Rome, not Cagliari, as the seat of Christ's Vicar. "Italian traditions from Dante to Foscolo," it says, "uphold the principle of the Pope's residence as sovereign at Rome." The newspaper also accuses several Senators and Deputies of Freemasonry, and presents an important extract from Prince Metternich's newly published memoirs.

THE NATIVE CHRISTIANS, converts of the Church of England in Ceylon, do not take kindly to ritualism. Lately a new bishop from England has been set up over them, who has the High-Church mania; and he has begun revolutionizing the simple services heretofore characterizing the mission churches of the island. The natives, appealing to the Archbishop of Canterbury for the recall of the obnoxious bishop, say: "We beg to remind your grace that we are inhabitants of a country still to a great extent heathen; that many of us were brought up as worshippers of idols; and that, therefore, the placing in churches of things which appear to be intended as objects of material worship is more offensive to us than it might be, did we not see those around us bowing down to wood and stone. We would also inform your grace that in heathen worship flowers and lights take a prominent place, and that their intimate connection with devil worship renders them, in our view, a most undesirable adjunct in the service of the church."

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

In the North American Review for February, the first article is by Cardinal Manning, and treats of the relations of the Roman Catholic Church to modern society. He does not undertake to discuss the broad question of the relations of the Church to the State in general,—whether the one is subordinate to the other,—but simply essays to determine "what can be and what ought to be the relations between the Church in the nineteenth century and the political society of the world in the nineteenth century."

Cardinal Manning is perhaps the most uncompromising champion of Papal prerogative in the whole English-speaking world, and this able exposition of the principles actuating the politico-ecclesiastical practice of Rome will be read with profit both by her friends and by her opponents. Ex-Senator Howe contributes a pungent article, entitled "The Third Term." He turns to ridicule the fears that have been expressed by sundry organs of popular opinion, lest by electing General Grant to a third term of office our republican institutions should be overturned, and "the empire" established. The article is essentially an effort to show that in the "Springer Resolution," adopted by the House of Representatives at Washington in 1875, which denounced as dangerous to our free institutions any departure from the precedent set by Washington when he declined a third term in presidency, are comprised "a grave indictment of the Federal Constitution, a gross libel upon its framers, a base counterfeit of our political history, and a wanton insult to our common sense." Rear-Admiral Daniel Ammen makes a very effective reply to M. de Lesseppe's article on the American Inter-oceanic Canal. The advantages of a canal with locks over a canal à niveau are pointed out, and the French engineer's objections to a locked canal shown to be futile. George Augustus Sala contributes an entertaining article, entitled "Now and Then in America," "now" being this present year of grace, and "then" 1863, the third year of our Civil war. "The Emancipation Proclamation" is by James C. Welling. The book notices of this number of the Review are from the pen of M. W. Hazeltine. The Review is for sale by booksellers and newdealers generally.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

TRANSLATIONS FROM SOPHOCLES.

I.

ŒDIPUS AT COLONOS, 1225-1237.

Birth into mortal life is not a boon,
As sad experience with its logic shows;
Most happy he this inn who leaving soon
Back to his antenatal country goes.

Folly to thoughtless youth will ever cling;
Envy and struggle middle life await,
Peril and death, where battle-trumpets ring;
While darkest lowers on age the frown of fate,—

In loathed, unsocial impotence it dwells;
Bursts on its head calamity's wild spray,
As on a surf-smit strand the ocean swells,
While raves the north wind through the wintry day.

II.

PHILOCTETES, 445-450.

Evil survives—the gods protect it ever;
Villain and knave they respire from the tomb;
To save the gentle, just, they ne'er endeavor;
But such to death are readiest to doom.

III.

THE TRACHINIAN WOMEN, 144-147.

For youth disports in pastures of its own,
No anxious night-thought e'er its breast alarms,
Its easeful hours are fraught with joy alone,
Nor shower, nor gale, nor heat of heaven it harms.

IV.

ŒDIPUS AT COLONOS, 565-568.

Myself in land of strangers once did dwell,
Therefore the exile's heavy heart I know;
Crave what thou wilt, I shall not thee repel,
But lighten, if I may, thy load of woe.

Ill-fated once, I succor the distressed,—
I know I am a man, the thrall of sorrow:
Wretch t'rough thou art, by matchless ills oppress,
No more for me than thee will dawn the morrow.

B. W. BALL.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JAN. 24.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

Dr. C. W. Connon, $1; J. E. Sutton, $2; Dr. L. F. C. Garvin, $15; W. C. Gannett, $3; S. L. Hill, $3; Mrs. C. A. Tucker, $3; John Prest, $3.20; Thos. H. Knowles, $3.20; R. F. Briggs, $3.20; I. Benham, $3.20; Geo. A. Bourne, $3.20; Emanuel Eising, $3.20; D. B. Humphrey, $3.20; Moore's Subscription Agency, $2.20; George Mainar, $6.40; Prof. W. F. Allen, $3.20; Dr. C. H. Horsch, $3.20; A. N. Adams, $3.20; Mrs. J. C. Mills, $3.20; Prof. F. E. Nipher, $3.20; T. J. Taft, $3.20; Judge S. M. Green, $3.20; Jno. H. Lull, $3.20; Robert Moore, $3.20; M. L. Weems, $2; Job Angell, $1; O. L. Spaulding, $1; Miss A. R. Brown, $1; Geo. W. Park, $3.20; J. S. Johnson, $3.50; Dr. H. Nye, $2; Hon. S. Campbell, $6.40; Jos. S. Hill, $10; John C. Aubach, 10 cents; Mrs. S. R. Morgan, $6.40; B. Greene, $5; L. P. Babb, M.D., $3; D. B. Dunning, $3; Jane E. Curtis, $3.20; J. H. Clark, $3.20; Mrs. Lucy H. Balch, $3.20; D. G. Francis, $3.20; Isaiah West, $3.20; C. M. Cuyler, $9.40; American News Co., $8.56; E. R. Brown, $3.20; M. M. Waterman, $3.20; John Hill, $3.20; J. W. Pike, $3.20; Jos. Martin, $3.20; Dr. G. F. Matthes, $3.20; Mrs. B. Cummings, $3.20; E. S. Aldrich, $3.20; J. O. Brien, $3.20; J. H. Elliot, $3.20; M. A. Wilhelms, $5.34; W. E. Eaton, $3.20; G. W. Robinson, $3.00; Mrs. E. F. Newhall, $2.25; Wm. G. Snow, $3.20; Mrs. Amos P. Tapley, $3.20; Capt. P. S. Crowell, $5.00; A. A. Clarke, $1.00; Prof. P. H. Philbrick, $3.00.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, JAN. 29, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. Toledo Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELLEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
Dr. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
Miss A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENSFELDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
Mrs. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N. Y.	5.00
A. FOLSON, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. PRESNO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York	5.00
Gen. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRS, New York, N. Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N. Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
Dr. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
Dr. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
Dr. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N. Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D. C.	5.00
GEO. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N. Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
Mrs. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BUENS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
Miss H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N. Y.	1.00
Mrs. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HON. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
O. M. DENNISON, New York, N. Y.	1.00
N. LEVINSON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00

ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N. Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N. Y.	1.00
Mrs. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
Mrs. FRANCIS DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
Prof. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
Dr. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
Mrs. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R. I.	1.00
Mrs. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R. I.	2.00
Mrs. CAROLINE E. SERBELL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Braintree, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. RISK, Winthrop, Iowa.	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N. Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D. C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N. Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N. Y.	5.00
Mrs. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N. Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
Miss EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " " "	1.00
Mr. GANS, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Maple Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	5.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
Miss M. GODDARD, Boston.	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa.	1.00
F. B. MERCER, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
Dr. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston.	5.00
Mrs. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
Miss M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
Mrs. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio.	10.00
Miss M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
Mrs. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHN V. GRIEBEL, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
JOHANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRALEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN	200.00
Mrs. A. B. PERCIVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
Capt. P. S. CROWELL, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
Miss MARIANNE CHRISTERN, New York	1.00
Mrs. CHRISTERN, " " "	1.00
Mr. F. W. CHRISTERN, " " "	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " " "	1.00
Mrs. MARY F. DAVIS, " " "	1.00
M. S. FECHHEIMER, " " "	10.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER, " " "	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Tewksbury, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. HAYNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIE S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
R. B. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
C. W. WENDTE, Cincinnati, Ohio.	1.00
Mrs. CAROLINE A. TUCKER, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
HANNAH E. STEVENSON, Boston, Mass.	10.00
AVERY W. HARBAGUE, Toledo, Iowa.	2.00
HON. FRANCIS SPRINGER, Columbus City, Iowa.	5.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N. J.	1.00
E. D. BURLIGH, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
JAMES MCGRATH, Quincy, Mass.	1.00
Rev. J. C. LEARNED, St. Louis, Mo.	2.00
W. C. FISK, Toledo, O.	2.00
JOHN CHAPPELLSMITH, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
MARGARET " " "	1.00
Mrs. HINCKLEY, " " "	1.00
THOS. MUMFORD, Sen., " " "	1.00
J. S. JOHNSON, Almont, Mich.	5.00
HENRY PRATT, New York City	2.00
Rev. JUDSON FISHER, Alton, Ill.	1.00
LOUIS PRANG, Roxbury, Mass.	15.00
Prof. F. E. NIPHER, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
Mrs. J. S. EDGERLY, East Somerville, Mass.	2.00
Mrs. H. HERMAN, New York City	5.00
M. FRANK, " " "	2.00
M. COHN, " " "	1.00
S. GUTTERMAN, " " "	1.00
G. ENGELSMAN, " " "	1.00
ABRAHAM HERMAN, New York City	5.00
A. BLUMENTHAL, " " "	5.00
GUS. KAUFMAN, " " "	5.00
HENRY FRIEDMAN, " " "	5.00
Mrs. LUCRETIA MOTT, Philadelphia	10.00
Dr. G. F. MATTHEWS, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
Mrs. KATE GANNETT WELLS, Boston	5.00
JULIA A. IRESON, Lynn, Mass.	10.00
ISABEL IRESON, " " "	10.00
EMMA D. IRESON, " " "	10.00
KATE C. IRESON, " " "	10.00
JAMES DILLAWAY, Somerville, Mass.	2.00
Total	$1,313.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

CARDINAL MANNING'S PLEA FOR ROME.

In the February number of the North American Review, Cardinal Manning publishes a very notable article on "The Catholic Church and Modern Society." His leading definitions are frank, concise, and important, as follows:—

"By society I mean the state of man, or of human life, in the natural order apart from faith. It has three degrees of formation or completeness, namely—(1) The domestic life; (2) The civil life; (3) The political life of a people or nation. Human society comprehends all these three stages or forms of life."

"The Catholic Church is the society of man in the supernatural order."

Meaning by "supernatural order" the order founded upon faith in God, as officially and authoritatively represented by the Church with the infallible Pope at its head, Cardinal Manning thus explains the relation which ought to subsist between the Church and society:—

"As natural society develops man in the natural order, so the Church perfects man both in the natural and in the supernatural order."

"But the Church not only perfects man or individuals, both in nature and grace, but it perfects the natural society of man also, in all its relations of private and public life."

"The Church elevates, preserves, and perfects the domestic and public life of natural society. In Athens and in Rome, the two culminating points of natural civilization, society had almost died out by the gangrene which had eaten away the domestic and moral life of men."

"There is therefore a divine obligation binding the Church to enter into the most intimate relations with the natural society or commonwealth of men, or, in other words, with peoples, states, and civil powers."

"And this is the cause why the Church has in every age striven to direct not the life of individual men only, but the collective life of nations in their organized forms of republics, monarchies, and empires."

Such is the ideal relation which, the Cardinal would persuade us, exists between the natural and supernatural orders—the natural coinciding with the supernatural as far as it goes, and the supernatural only perfecting, rounding out, and completing the natural. But the astute prelate is not sufficiently astute to escape glaring and destructive contradiction of the premises of his own Church, and even of his own positions in this very article. This will appear conclusively as follows:—

1. The "natural society" which was compatible and consistent with the "supernatural order" ceased to exist when Adam and Eve bade a sorrowful farewell to Paradise, and went out to live in a state of "nature" which was thenceforth cursed of God. From that hour human nature itself (by the theory of the Church) was inherently depraved and ruined; and the entire human life which subsequently grew out of it, whether individual, domestic, civil or political, was necessarily blighted at the very root by this total and irremediable depravity. There is, therefore, no "natural society" in existence, according to the Cardinal's own recognized standard of faith, which can possibly be "elevated, preserved, or perfected" by the Church. Her "supernatural order" must be wholly a new and Divine creation, not perfecting, but abolishing, a "natural order" which has become utterly self-corrupted and accursed by God.

2. This severely logical consequence of his own argument is admitted with charming naïveté and most amusing unconsciousness of self-contradiction by the Cardinal himself. He does not really tolerate any "natural order" of society at all! Having admitted above that "In Athens and Rome, the two culminating points of natural civilization, society had almost died out," he goes on immediately to add:—

"So long as the world was heathen, [the Church] could only convert individuals and sanctify households. The State was at war with the Church; there was a conflict of laws, and an irreconcilable conflict of aims and actions. No coöperation could exist between them."

Very well: the "world" has again become "heathen," in the Cardinal's own sense of the word, as he himself shows. After declaring that the Church succeeded in establishing its "supernatural order" everywhere during the Middle Ages, he maintains that "modern society" has returned to the same stubborn antagonism towards that "order" which characterized the "heathen world." We quote in full his definition of "modern society":—

"Modern society is the old society of the Christian world mutilated by the character forced upon it by the last three hundred years:

"First, by the so-called Reformation which, where-soever it prevailed, destroyed the Catholic unity, and extinguished the Catholic mind of the Christian society."

"Secondly, by the principles of 1789, which were not a mere local formula of French opinion, but a dogmatic theory of revolution, promulgated by its pretentious authors for all nations. It has now, in fact, directly and indirectly, pervaded the whole political society of modern Europe.

"Thirdly, by the recent international settlement or law which has admitted the kingdom of Italy with Rome as capital, and therefore with the usurpation of the rights and sovereignty of the Pontiffs, into the Commonwealth of European states, and, so far as any jus gentium now survives, into the diplomacy of Europe.

"Modern society, therefore, is not the natural society of the world before Christianity, nor is it the society of Christendom when the two societies were in amity and coincidence of law and of intention, but it is the political society of the natural order, fallen from the unity of faith, communion and obedience to the divine voice of the Church, revolutionary in its political creed and practice, and either in open usurpation, or in culpable connivance at the usurpation, of the sacred rights and sovereignty of the Vicar of Christ."

Nothing could be clearer than that Cardinal Manning (and in this he speaks for his Church) condemns every conceivable state of society except that in which all "human life," whether individual, domestic, civil or political, is in absolute and total submission to the Church of Rome. Such a social state as this, however, would constitute that "supernatural order" which it is the aim of the Church to create. But it would be the complete annihilation of all "natural order," as a coördinate, independent fact. The State and the Church can be friends only when "the Church penetrates all the legislative and executive actions" of the State; that is, when all legislators and executive officers are obedient tools and servitors of the Pope's will. It is perfectly useless for the Cardinal to talk of "the Church being bound to conserve, to consecrate, and to coöperate with the natural society of man"; for he reckons every age whose "natural society" has not been totally extinguished in the "supernatural order" as in flagrant rebellion against the latter. It is a piece of unparalleled effrontery for him, on the one hand, to denounce human nature itself as corrupt and accursed, and yet, on the other, to pretend that this accursed root could possibly produce a "natural society" with which the Church might "coöperate." "Natural society" is nothing but that "modern society" which he impeaches and condemns; there is no other, and there can be no other. The secular principle and spirit, acting "apart from faith," have produced it, and cannot produce anything else. Only by creeping back into the broken eggshell of Mediævalism, with "Saint" Thomas Aquinas as reinstated incubator, can the world ever recur to the condition in which "natural society" submitted to the "supernatural order." That age has departed, never to return. The Cardinal cannot war against "modern society" and conserve "natural society" at the same time. The two are identical. He must and does war upon both; and it is all sophistry to pretend to distinguish between them. The Vatican Council was Rome's declaration of war against the "modern" world.

Cardinal Manning and his hierarchical friends have the power to create no small disturbance and uproar and bitter, perhaps bloody, strife. The germinative principle of "natural" or "modern" society (for, we repeat, these two are the same) is the truth that all political power derives its origin from the people, and that all political power not so derived, whether claiming to come from "God" or not, is tyranny. This fundamental principle of natural society, in the true meaning of that phrase, is thus emphatically rejected by our Cardinal, as spokesman for his Church:—

"The theory of authority, as created by a delegation from the people, is therefore false. It is a negation of the truth, and an inversion of the intellectual and moral order of mankind. The people or society of men may designate the person, or the family, or the group of persons, who shall bear authority; but they cannot create it, nor can they, when it is once impersonated, revoke it at their mere will."

Could anything be more deliciously illogical, more sweetly "childlike and bland," than this closing sentence? The people have power to appoint their rulers, but not to remove them! They have no authority to confer, but, when they have conferred it, they cannot recall it!!! Really, the Cardinal ought to be more cautious when he addresses an American audience, for there is scarcely a boy of twelve in this dreadfully "modern" republic who would not laugh at such logic. However, it serves very well to show what sort of "supernatural order" the Cardinal yearns to establish all over the earth, and to render it clear to the dullest that, whatever blessings he might bestow, he would tear up popular government by the roots. And the "supernatural order" he would restore would be identical with that of the Middle Ages, when, as he describes it (with an evident hankering to bring back those good old times):—

"The civil and ecclesiastical discipline was so coincident and concurrent that a heretic was 'vitan-dus'—to be avoided by all citizens as by all Christians. He not only forfeited his civil rights, but was put beyond the pale and commerce of human society. He was like the leper in Israel, whom no man could touch without becoming legally unclean. No man could give to the heretic fire or water."

"No man could give to the heretic fire or water"! Why, good Catholics of the "supernatural order" used to give to the heretic, by the express order of Popes and Cardinals and Bishops, fire enough to burn him to ashes, or water enough to drown him. The Spanish Inquisition and the Papal Inquisition are not yet forgotten; they still light up with lurid flames the page of history, and warn us all what to expect, if Cardinal Manning and his brethren ever succeed in establishing their "supernatural order" on these western shores, and begin once more to refuse "to the heretic fire or water"—as they used to refuse it!

IS LIBERALISM A FAILURE?

To all those who have taken an earnest, active interest in what they have thought to be liberalism, there come at this present crisis letters from all quarters from those in sympathy with them, breathing despondency, filled with moans of wounded pride and disenchanted love over what they fear is the failure of liberalism. Let me take a few out of many instances from my own limited correspondence as a sample of what is being thought and felt by thousands of true-hearted, pure-living freethinkers all over the country.

"I am too much disgusted with liberalism," writes one, "to talk about it temperately. I consider organized liberalism a miserable failure. Any liberalism worthy of the name is yet a thing of the future."

Another says: "I feel pained and disgusted week after week with reading the lies, slanders, ridicule, and narrow conceptions with which our papers are filled. I have no reference to THE INDEX and Religio-Philosophical Journal, both of which are doing valiant service, each in its own way, for purity in liberalism. I despair of any improvement in our time, to any great extent. By evolution, other generations will be wiser and cleaner, I know; but now the outlook is not encouraging."

Another writes: "I am disgusted all through with things liberal, and wish the lightning would strike me into whatever is beyond this vale of hypocrisy, cowardice, and lies. What can be done? To me all is dark and dreary."

One whose unblemished life has been devoted to all progressive reform, and whose opinion carries weight wherever he is known, writes in a serio-comic vein: "Yes, the line is being drawn between liberalism and licentiousness, but how many will be found on the right side of that line? Time will show; and let us take time. I think, if possible, that the best thing to do is for the 'sheep' to go into retreat, while the 'goats' are rampant; to pull down our signs, withdraw our names, and—do nothing. What if we should die, being members of the Liberal League, and go to judgment? If asked if we were members of that body, what could we say? If we owned it, we should be treated as free-lovers, communists, and no better than tramps."

Now, although I have in general a great respect for the views and opinions of these correspondents, and have myself sometimes been ready to echo their wail, yet, on thinking it over, I see no reason to believe that liberalism, real liberalism, is in any way a failure. That brings us to the question, What is liberalism? There is no use in consulting the dictionary for the meaning of this, as other words: it is at best a make-shift name which we have been forced to accept in lieu of a more comprehensive and definite word, and may convey different meanings to different minds; but I think it generally conveys the idea of freedom to accept the results of experience and scientific investigation, untrammelled by any church dogmas and unbiassed by educational prejudices. Liberalism has come to mean liberty and progress,—progress in science, progress in morality, progress in all ways and means to make the world happier and better, because wiser; and liberty in all things and for all persons in accordance with Herbert Spencer's definition,—"Liberty of action being the first essential to exercise of faculties, and therefore the first essential to happiness, and the liberty of each limited by the like liberty in all being the form which the first essential assumes when applied to many instead of one, it follows that the liberty of each, limited by the like liberty of all, is the rule in conformity with which society must be organized."

Although a lawless faction, composed mostly of new-comers attracted by the word "liberalism," which they have interpreted to mean license, has noisily proclaimed itself as the exponent and mouth-piece of all liberalism, and by its action brought disgrace and shame on the name, this need be no reason why those who have made real sacrifices for, and have done real work in, the cause of freethought, hoping to make it a lever by which to raise the moral world to a higher plane of thinking and doing, should hang their heads in sorrow and shame, and think that liberalism is dead and buried too deep for resurrection. Even while they cry, "They have taken away our Lord, and we know not where they have laid him!" if they would but use their eyes discerningly, they would see that liberalism still lives and labors as is its wont cheerfully and untiringly. Because a little crowd of blatant men and women declare they are liberalism incarnate, and hold up sham heroes and martyrs for us to fall down before and worship, has the world stopped moving to listen to their din? Does scientific investigation stop to take note of them? Does not the moral force of the world move along in its strong, sure current, in spite of them? They are not liberalism, nor of kin to anything so grand, so lofty, so strong. True liberalism has become a mighty force in the world; it saturates our literature, it is leavening and broadening all creeds, it finds its sturdiest defenders and propagators among the practical scientists; it is sifting and reorganizing all philosophy, and its influence is felt in a thousand ways undreamed of by that little band whose sole idea of its scope and purpose is that it is limited to the work of making libertinism free and respectable. It is a hopeless task they have undertaken in this age of the world and of true liberalism; and, if they could hush for a brief moment their own noisy clamor into the silence compatible with thought, they could not fail to perceive this themselves.

For ourselves, let us not be dismayed. Liberalism is far from being a failure, whatever libertinism may be. The latter has undone some of the hard work of true liberalism, and we need to use now all our exertions to repair the damage done. The present is no time for idling. We must remember the oft-quoted words of Bryant:—

"But thou,
Who minglest in the harder strife
For truth which men receive not now,
Thy warfare only ends with life."

S. A. U.

THE NEW ENTERPRISE OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

The circular recently issued by the Executive Committee of the Free Religious Association, setting forth certain proposed measures of increased activity, must be now pretty well spread before the liberal public. The responses already received show a good deal of interest in the enterprise, though it is too early to say whether or not the financial return is to be sufficient to warrant the undertaking. It is certainly thus far encouraging. But the committee have thought it best to help on the attempt by the appointment of a special agent, who shall devote himself for the present to securing new members of the Association and obtaining contributions for its objects. For this purpose they have engaged the services of Mr. David H. Clark, who, during the last summer, in Mr. Abbot's absence, was the acting editor of THE INDEX, and previously had been resident speaker for the Free Congregational Society in Florence, Mass. Mr. Clark has already entered upon his mission in New York. This was by the advice of Prof. Adler, the President of the Association, who holds the opinion that the membership of the Association especially (including patron members) may be very largely increased by a personal canvass among the liberal thinkers of that city. There are many persons, he thinks, who will not get the circular (or, getting it, will not take the time to read it), who yet will very gladly join the Association, and do their part toward sustaining it, if they were to be made clearly acquainted with its existence and objects. To seek out such persons, under the suggestions of President Adler and other friends of the Association in New York, will be Mr. Clark's office. If the result shall prove the wisdom of the agency, after his work is completed in New York and vicinity, Mr. Clark may go to Philadelphia and some other cities on like service.

Meantime, it may be well to recall attention to the chief points of the proposed plan for enlarged operations, though the circular was printed entire in THE INDEX of Dec. 4. Succinctly stated, the one point making an appeal for funds necessary is the extension of the work of the office and the appointment of a general agent to have charge of it, under the supervision, of course, of the Executive Committee. The duties of the general agent, besides doing the work now done at the office in the sale and distribution of the Association's publications, will be to "enter into correspondence with friends of the Association; gather and preserve such statistics and other information as may be of use in our work; make arrangements for lecturers, as specified in the subsequent section; and furnish, as occasion may offer, information and suggestion to persons anywhere desiring to form local societies on the general basis of this [the Free Religious] Association." And one branch of the office-work, which may in time become a very important department, is thus defined in the subsequent section above referred to: "The use of the Central Office as a Lecture Bureau agency in the interest of the free religious movement, through which local associations may secure speakers and liberal views, may be more widely spread; and to this end lecturers carefully selected by the unanimous action of the Executive Committee (the only tests being irreproachable moral reputation and intellectual fitness) will be invited to go to places where the general agent may find for them a hearing."

As regards the question of local free religious organization there need be no secret that there has been some difference of opinion among those believing in a more vigorous activity; and some persons, it may be, who were interested in the initial steps taken toward this new enterprise at the last annual meeting of the Association, will be disappointed that the measures proposed by the committee contemplate so little in this direction. But it seems to the present writer that the plan as devised leaves this matter where the principles of the Free Religious Association require that it should be left. That increase of local organization may come as one of the indirect results of the proposed plan, if it shall go into operation, is altogether probable. And wherever there is a normal, healthy demand for such organization, where the conditions are mentally and morally ripe for it, it is certainly desirable. But the local conditions, even when ready, may not always require the same kind of organization; and, by the contemplated plan of action, the responsibility for initiating and maintaining local societies is left wholly in the hands of their local friends,—the Free Religious Association only proffering its office as a central bureau of exchange, where local liberal communities may become acquainted with each other's doings, and persons desiring to organize for more active work may find that knowledge which is the fruit of other's experience in a similar path.

W. J. P.

LETTER FROM MR. WATERS.

The following very kind letter from the author of Through Rome On is published with pleasure:—

MY DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I feel that I shall be expressing the sentiment of many readers, if I thank you for the publication of your address on the "Influence of Philosophy upon Christianity." Such things do more, in my opinion, at least, to speed the coming of the era when the new Orthodox shall reign in place of the mythological one from which we are emerging, than all the Liberal Leagues that ever were formed, or than any holding up of the old faith to ridicule that ever tickled the ears of a popular audience. The philosophic unsoundness of all dogmatic Protestantism is a great staring fact in the history of the human mind, and yet one which has been comparatively little recognized till very lately; while the regular development of a Catholic Orthodoxy from the worm of a captured and tortured philosophy is an equally striking and profoundly significant fact, and, as a moving power at the present day under our eyes in this country, is confirmatory of what I have said in the last text-lines on page forty-four of Through Rome On.

You have shown that Christianity, in its character of a system of thought, had to philosophize in the elaboration of its own ideas. As you say, "There was no help for it." Of course, philosophy had to be kept under watch and ward to serve Christianity's ends. The Church baptized it, and dictates its starting-point and limits. As a consequence of this tampering, Christian Orthodoxy grew up to be philosophical indeed, and yet philosophically unsound. To quote your words again: "Philosophy ceases to be philosophy as such, and becomes theology, the moment it accepts the contents of revelation as a fixed point of departure in its speculations." Protestantism brought the philosophized theology with it into the outer air, and disintegration quickly began; while the fatal wooden horse remained within the Roman Troy to insure the destruction of that at last. Rationalizing is now the order of the day, and neither Catholics nor Protestants are able to escape the necessity of involving theology itself in the process. Father Scully and the prelates deserve our thanks for bringing on the issue so fast. The Neo-Christian movement is, as you have described it, "fundamentally and sweepingly anti-Christian." Light is shining through the Church of England and the Kirk of Scotland in their own despite. The "Battle of Armageddon" must be fought. The Christian army will go forth to its last crusade as bravely as it went to its first. Rome and Reason are the great protagonists. The sovereign pontiff sounds the tocsin, throws open the arsenal of the scholastic philosophy, and calls St. Thomas to the front. The Angelical Doctor will answer the appeal, will head the host, and will be mounted on the bridled and saddled Stagyrite's back. God save the right!

Will the ministers invite you to address them any more? I hope they may; but anyhow I shall always feel a special thankfulness to Providence (R.I.) for what we have had.

Wishing you and THE INDEX a happy new year, and redoubled success in your warfare for truth and cleanness, and the good name of the liberal cause,

I am, heartily yours, N. R. WATERS.

BALTIMORE, January, 1880.

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

SUGGESTED BY MR. ABBOT'S ESSAY ON "PHILOSOPHY AND CHRISTIANITY."

Margaret, in Mr. Judd's admirable romance, says, "I like a good name for a thing: it is like a cover to keep the potatoes hot." Mr. Abbot's prefix of "Neo" to Christianity seems to me a very good name for a very good thing, if we must retain the name Christianity for it; but the great difficulty of that name has always been that it affirmed a doctrine on which all the disciples of Jesus of Nazareth were not agreed. That it very early became the doctrine of his followers and of the organized church, I suppose is indisputable; but there is a great deal in the record as we have it, which makes it very doubtful whether Jesus considered himself to be the Messiah of Hebrew prophecy, and there is much to suggest that we have in the Gospels rather a record of his later disciples' views than his own, except in some of those inspired utterances which bear the stamp of individual character. This justifies the liberal Christians in their view that they really hold the truths of religion as Jesus of Nazareth held them; and I cannot feel that it is inconsistent with the history of religious development that, after a long period of observation from corrupt institutions and erroneous doctrines, the simple truths of universal religion should again come to the front, and find their most effective expression in the primitive words of the founder of the church. Is not this rather the general course of history? Does not a great genius in religion seize upon eternal truths, and give them an expression which is capable of evolution in many directions, but which always contains the root of the whole matter in it? Does not Keshub Chunder Sen go back to the early sacred books of India for inspiration for his new movement in the interests of Theism? And was not Theodore Parker justified in finding "love to God" and "love to man" the essence of religion as taught by Jesus (although I think he was wrong in calling that religion Christianity, because Christianity in its very name assumes the doctrine of the peculiar sanctity of a person)?

Christianity, as a well-defined system, limited and peculiar, having a sharp quarrel with all other old and new forms of faith, is something clear and easy to be understood. The Church Militant knows under what flag it fights; and, in its statement that only in the cross of Christ is there salvation, it makes a distinct proposition to be accepted or denied.

But do we not need another word for that spirit of religious faith and love and allegiance to truth which is to be found in every form of faith? The so-called liberal Christian has shown that he can fully meet in spiritual fellowship with the enlightened Hindu, the Buddhist, and the progressive Jew? Why should we not go further back than the Christian Church, and find some name for that which they all hold in common? With no intention of giving offence, the word Christian is often used as synonymous with humane, upright, unselfish, loving; and one accustomed to its use cannot understand how harshly it grates upon the ears of those who cannot help associating the word with a church which has tyrannized over and crushed their best hopes and aspirations.

The meeting at Providence which invited Mr. Abbot and welcomed the Rabbi showed that its spirit was larger and freer than that of any distinctive and separate church: why can it not bear a name which would be as large as its heart?

This subject seems to me important, because many feel thrown out of relation to the religious world, by their impossibility of accepting the limitations of a name which does not express to them a universal truth.

E. D. C.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

SENATOR LAMAR is improving.

BERTHOLD AUERBACH is about to publish a new story in Germany.

PARNELL draws large audiences. He also draws a good deal of money, and has withal a slight drawl in his speech.

PROFESSOR R. A. PROCTOR, who is now forty-three years old, displayed a strong interest in astronomy even in his boyhood.

MR. E. C. STEDMAN, who has fame in Wall Street, as well as in the literary world, is pronounced by the London Academy "the most distinguished poet born in the United States since 1820."

THE CATHOLIC priest in Morris, Indiana, who severely whipped three boys of his parish for acting as pall-bearers at the funeral of a Protestant boy friend, has been fined to the amount of $300.

COL. HOMER B. SPRAGUE, principal of the Girls' High School of Boston, has a lecture on "When I was in Jail, or the Bright Side of Life in Confederate Military Prisons," which he delivers with fine effect.

REV. JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE is delivering a popular and very interesting series of twelve lectures upon "Great Characters and Periods of Religious History," at the Lowell Institute. The lectures are illustrated by the use of the stereopticon.

BISHOP McNAMARA, of the Independent Catholic Church, baptized at Cambridge, Mass., during his recent visit to Boston and vicinity, the child whom Father Scully had refused to baptize unless he were paid five dollars for performing the rite.

THE REV. G. F. WRIGHT endeavors to point out in the Bibliotheca sacra arguments between Darwinism and Calvinism. The author of this article writes well, but we suspect there are many competent critics who will think he comes to wrong conclusions.

ROBERT F. WALLCUT, the venerable friend and collaborer of Mr. Garrison, is taking orders for Oliver Johnson's Garrison and his Times, which has just been published. Copies of the book may be ordered of Mr. Wallcut by addressing him at No. 103, West Springfield Street, Boston.

PROF. ADLER's theme last Sunday, says the Hebrew Leader, was "The Modern Persecution of the Jews," and the lecture was one of the most interesting and eloquent delivered this season. Prof. Adler discussed at some length, and with great ability, the revival of prejudice against our race in Germany. The discourse will shortly be published in pamphlet form.

MRS. ANN E. GARRISON, of South Bay City, Mich., it is stated by the Woman's Journal, has obtained a verdict of $1,000 against a saloon-keeper of that place who sold her husband liquor. She sued for $10,000 damages, alleging that before her husband commenced drinking he was worth $15,000 and had an annual income of $5,000; but drink took it all away, and made him a drunken, shiftless creature, and unable to attend to business. He is now in California.

C. D. B. MILLS is appreciatively noticed in Unity, as "lecturing before Unity Club, Indianapolis, and giving conversational lectures in private parlors, for both of which we hope many places in the West are making preparation. Mr. Mills is making his annual tour through the West. Where thorough independence of thought and radical inquiry join with ripe culture and tender reverence, as they do in him, a benediction always goes with them."

REV. W. J. POTTER gave a very interesting discourse before the Twenty-Eighth Congregational Society of Boston, Sunday, Jan. 18, upon "The Religion of Humanity." It was a remarkably complete, vigorous, and clear definition of the phrase in its most comprehensive and philosophic significance. We hope that he may deliver it in many places, and that it may be eventually put into a pamphlet for general circulation. Nothing could be better for missionary purpose in connection with the Free Religious movement.

REV. J. W. CHADWICK's new book, The Faith of Reason, receives very high commendations, from sources which should be grateful to its author. It bears evidence that his literary work keeps pace with his growing reputation. Mr. Chadwick possesses an intellectual individuality which imparts a charming interest to all he writes. Though still a young man, through his insight, freshness of view, sympathy with advanced current thought, sparkling and vivacious style and fine aesthetic sense, he already takes a leading position among the liberal preachers of the country. A more extended notice of The Faith of Reason, which has been unavoidably deferred, and not from the want of a due appreciation of its merits, will appear in a subsequent issue of THE INDEX.

Communications.

FROM ONE WHO SEES.

ALTON, Ill., Jan. 19, 1880.

MR. ABBOT:

Dear Sir,—I have to-day sent my name and dollar to Mr. Hyde, as an expression of my interest in the object of the Free Religious Association. I regret my inability to make it twenty-five instead of one, and allow myself the privilege of expressing to you personally my appreciation of the course you have pursued in relation to the matter which has unfortunately required so much attention in the columns of THE INDEX of late. Your generosity and magnanimity toward Joseph Cook, in publishing what you did last week, I was almost inclined to censure; but on rereading him, and then reading carefully your editorial on the subject, I am satisfied you have done the best thing. Only I would have emphasized the feeling, which I am sure you must entertain, that a minority on the side of morality is stronger than any such majority as he exposes can possibly be. I have always had fears and suspicions in regard to organization, and do not regard the organizations which have loosely sprung up under the name of "Liberal Leagues" as really having much strength or influence. I should be sad to think they fairly represent the substantial, effective liberalism of the West even. Still there is much justice in your demand for greater consistency on the part of some of the prominent actors and advocates in the liberal movement. I do earnestly hope that such men as Col. Ingersoll will be called out and moved to put themselves on the right side, the side of morality, in this matter: the people of the West think too well of him to have him stand in such a position as Mr. Cook shows him to occupy. I can't help thinking he has made a mistake which he will be willing to correct. Whether Mr. Cook cares much to correct his misrepresentations of Ingersoll (for I understand the latter has publicly denied what Cook says of him in paragraph seven of his "zigzag thunderbolt") remains to be seen. Let Ingersoll define his position clearly and unequivocally, I say: it is my impression that he will set himself right. If not, woe to the multitude of his admirers, unless they begin shortly to qualify their admiration!

I am not sure but it is best to let organization alone for the present, and discuss these great questions awhile longer, simply on their merits.

I have been a subscriber to THE INDEX from its beginning. I have the ten volumes bound, and on the shelves of my library. Saying nothing about the special "infidelity" or anti-Christianity of which it is the organ, I find much to refer to in it, which is of great and permanent value. There are scarcely any other ten books in my library, and my collection is a fair one, which are more useful to me. In its estimate of Christianity, it is too ultra for my following; for I am somewhat such a Christian as Mr. Towne approves in his last week's article. Nevertheless, I like THE INDEX, and especially just now with its practically new motto, as signified in your last editorial, "Liberty and Morality."

Yours truly, J. FISHER.

NEO-MATERIALISM:

OR, "THE FACT OF THE MATTER."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

It is but a poor return for the delight and instruction you have given me in your admirable essay on Philosophy and Christianity, to trouble you now with some of my own crude notions upon the former; nevertheless, I venture to impose so far upon your kind indulgence.

You rightly say that it is "the essential object of philosophy to introduce UNITY into our thoughts of the universe, and to make an orderly intellectual system corresponding to and explaining the complex world of inner and outer reality." In my poor judgment, the system about to be referred to, and for which I beg to propose the name of NEO-MATERIALISM, may, in the present stage of knowledge and discussion, claim to have formulated the one proposition in which philosophy ought probably to be embodied. "The one proposition," I have said, and with intention; for, though in practice philosophers talk about the "unification" of knowledge, without ever even attempting actually to sum up the totality of facts in one all-comprehensive Fact, the expression of which should constitute philosophy, yet I for one cannot see how we are "to introduce unity into our thoughts of the universe," otherwise than by attaining to some one thought in which those thoughts should find their common and sufficient synthesis. I propose to deal briefly with the "one thought" of Neo-Materialism.

One or two preliminary observations may be made. In the first place, the thought in question, if it is to merge, include, or sum up—in a word, to unify—our thoughts of the universe, must itself embody or express a fact, of which fact all the facts embodied in "our thoughts of the universe" are but particular instances or aspects. Again, the thought in question must of course be a highly abstract thought: in point of fact, it must be the abstract of all Predicates joined to the abstract of all Subjects to form the abstract of all Propositions. Lastly,—and this is an obvious implication of the two facts just noticed,—the universal fact in question ought not to be a very surprising or unexpected one, but rather one which, as being constantly and everywhere instanced or exemplified in human experience, has become correspondingly well and generally known among men. In my opinion, the truth in which knowledge is unified is perfectly well known, is a truism, instead of being the astonishing transcendentalism for which people seem to be looking: our trouble is not so much that we have not philosophy, as that we have not science, history, and—wisdom, the child of history and science. Men are philosophers without knowing it, as M. Jourdan talked "prose": they entertain the angel unawares, and peer about in eager search of him; not unfrequently, indeed, mistaking their neglected (because familiar) guest's own shadow for reality, and even for that reality which they would find: they assume, and then ignore, the very fact they seek; much as that dear old purblind grandmother whom we all know calmly looks for her spectacles through them, to the paroxysmal delight of all the youngsters. Shall we, like so many Mantelinis, see aught in the "demnition total," which is not in the constituent items?

In respect of the proposition claiming such high distinction, three questions naturally suggest themselves; namely, is it true? is it really all inclusive? what does it include? And it will be found that to answer these three questions fully and correctly would be to formulate the whole body of possible knowledge. This of course not even the "infallible" and amusing old gentleman at the Vatican pretends to do. But to our proposition:—

Matter Exists.

Ecce Filosofal there it is, in a nutshell. A commonplace, unquestionably, and none of the freshest at that. But what would you have? The common element of all phenomena must be a commonplace of experience. The "demnition total" cannot be different in kind from the separate items which merge in it. Verily, THE OCEAN is water!

"In the Name of the Prophet—figs!" cries the fruit-peddler of Constantinople. Is my anti-climax equally absurd? It may be; but suppose that this poor old "truism" were in fact to prove "true" and "all-inclusive," expressing the one fact of which all other facts are "instances." Why, then, clearly the proposition is very Truth, very Philosophy; for man's daily eye but the old, wrinkled, prosy Mentor, though when his soul awakes he knows the glorious goddess—now Themis, now Clio, now Minerva!

At another time I may again ask your indulgence, for I should like to take a bird's-eye-view of the present condition of thought upon these same three questions:—

1. Is it true that "Matter Exists"?
2. Is there any fact which is not simply an instance, or incident, of the existence of matter?
3. What are the more concrete phases of the fact here viewed in its most abstract phase?

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES FREDERIC ADAMS.

70 WILLIAM ST., NEW YORK.

THE MYSTERY OF THE UNIVERSE.

Any attempt to explain the origin of things must appear absurd when thought is once concentrated on it. The creation theory is repugnant to reason, it is true, but not more so than the Materialists' philosophy of undirected evolution. Materialism is strongest in its negative attitude. It makes the idea of creation absurd, because the human mind is incapable of conceiving any rational cause of the universe. But the moment Materialism leaves its negative position and becomes affirmative, it then loses its vantage-ground, and is no stronger than its fallen adversary. Affirmative Materialism is just as unreasonable as any other attempt to explain the mystery of the universe. Materialists can easily show the absurdity of the creation theory, but that is all they can do. As soon as they advance to any constructive theory, they are just as helpless as their opponents. Then the mind realizes the hopelessness of their attempt, and their endeavors seem futile and presumptuous.

The universe is a mystery before which the mind of man shrinks in conscious weakness, and any theory of its eternal secrets will seem childish and vain. Who has not felt the utter absurdity of the theory of creation as taught by the Orthodox system of faith? Who again has not turned from every other attempt to explain the mystery of things with unutterable dissatisfaction? The secrets of nature are beyond man's comprehension, and all theories about the unknowable are alike unreasonable. View the question as we may, no solution is possible; and the puny mind of man need not grapple with the ancient Sphinx who guards the mystery of the universe.

H. CLAY NEVILLE.

HOPEFUL.

It is indeed a good sign when Mr. Kelsey learns that "the study of Fourier's works cannot fail to be of benefit to all persons interested in sociological inquiries." Should he study them more deeply, he will discover that Fourier does not propose to leave the passions in "unrestrained freedom," but that he believes in freedom through order, to be attained by obedience to the natural law within us, and not by the restraint of outward force expressed in statutes.

Fourier fortunately was free from that perverse pessimism which prevents Mr. Kelsey from seeing all sides of the truth, and he had faith in the power of man, through the use of his reason, to reconcile and harmonize those apparently conflicting elements whose interplay constitutes life. No man believes more strongly than he in the principle of devotion to humanity, for which he provides in his analysis under the head of unitism, or the religions, reconciling passion.

He gave several important formulas, of which "Attractions are Proportional to Destinies" was only one; and, though it embodies a very valuable and universally recognized truth, he did not put it forward as the whole of truth. He thought that there is in the human soul an attraction toward altruism as well as toward egoism.

He saw that the "demonstrated facts of history" show a steady progress toward a condition of self-government and away from artificial restraints. Seeing the immense progress the race has made, he foresaw not only that it would still further progress, but how it would do so; and he predicted the present state of affairs with almost literal accuracy. Doubtless he made some mistakes, being only a man; but he certainly was an integralist, and I believe he will, when better known, be regarded as having an intellect fully as comprehensive as that of Auguste Comte or any other sociologist. If he lacked some of the special training of Comte, he has clearly shown us the only method by which we can discover the laws of our social environment.

His idea of a society inspired by universal love, attaining through order, guided by reason, happiness, and harmony, is not narrow or absurd, though it is still in the future and difficult of attainment.

With regard to the attempts at practical realization in this country, I can speak from experience and observation, and affirm decidedly that not one of them had the conditions which Fourier considered essential to success, and that those which I know best succeeded just so far as they conformed to his ideas, and failed in so far as they did not. Godin's Familistère in France is certainly a pronounced success, and the suggestion of it came from a knowledge of Fourier.

F. S. C.

THE SUMMIT OF SUPERSTITION.

"Truth," says Emerson, "is the summit of being." He seems to think there is yet considerable ground to be traversed before we reach this summit. But the summit of superstition was reached long since, when man believed that an infinite, supreme God died, was buried, came to life again and ascended to glory on high, as though there were none anywhere else. He would better have stayed down below, for, if anybody was needed about that time in Judea, he was just the one. The bare fact of a man rising from the dead, after his death and burial had been witnessed, would carry consternation and dismay even to those who merely caught the rumor. But the risen God seems to have only appeared to the few, and those few so very ignorant as not to understand very simple truth, when taught by the same God living in the flesh.

How easy a matter it would have been to have converted all Jerusalem, all Judea, under the strength of this one fact alone! Not only all Judea, but all Rome as well, had it been a fact, would have bowed to it. Instead of this, we have, as the offered basis of belief, only a mass of fiction; and, realizing this, we cannot dishonor our own souls by giving it the slightest credence.

C. W. N.

JESTINGS.

AN OLD FARMER, whose zeal at grace was hardly sufficient to repress his appetite, used to end his prayer in the following unpunctuated manner: "And bless us all for Christ's sake Joe pass the potatoes!"

TWO HIBERNIANS were passing a stable which had a rooster on it for a weather-vane, when one addressed the other thus: "Pat, what's the reason they didn't put a hin up there, instid of a rooster?" "An' sure," replied Pat, "that's aisy enough. Don't ye see it would be inconvenient to go for eggs?"

A SCHOOL COMMITTEE in Michigan brought charges against one of the teachers, the specifications of which were as follows: "1. Immorality; 2. Parshallity; 3. Keeping disorderly school; 4. Crying unlafe weepings." The man who wrote the charge intends to keep the "school" himself, next session.

A CONTEMPORARY asks: "How shall women carry their purses to frustrate thieves?" Why, carry them empty. Nothing frustrates a thief more than to snatch a woman's purse, after following her half a mile, and then find that it contains nothing but a recipe for spiced peaches, and a faded photograph of her grandmother.

A LAD, WHO WAS at play with the son of a next-door neighbor, asked his companion: "Is not your father a fool?" "No! Who said that of my father?" was the reply. "Nobody, as I knows of," responded the knowing urchin; "but mother told me t'other day that I was next door to a fool, and I didn't know whether she meant your father or Nat Smith's."

A VENERABLE clergyman said that he once attended a meeting in which a man arose and said he intended to speak; that hitherto he had been prevented from speaking in public by his wife, but, she being dead, he should speak with freedom. "He did so," added the clergyman, "and it was not long before every one in the large audience mourned over the death of his wife."

MEETING A NEWSBOY whose face was scarred with scratches and looked like a map of some railroad centre, a Register reporter asked the youngster what was the matter. "Feller spoke disrespectedful of my sister; said he'd bet she was cross-eyed, and I sailed in." "Is your sister cross-eyed?" asked the reporter. "Hain't got no sister," was the reply. "It was the principle of the thing what I got licked him for."

A GENTLEMAN not extremely given to piety was dismayed by being asked to say grace at a strange table. To refuse and explain would be embarrassing; to comply would be equally so; but he chose the latter, and started off briskly enough with, "Oh, Lord, bless this table!"—just here, being unused to the business, he nearly broke down, but by a gigantic effort pulled through with, "World without end, yours, respectfully, Amen."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

To THE INDEX ASSN., Toledo, O.:
 Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
 Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
 fly, N.J.

J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
 Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 80 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and a brief address on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinkley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
 fly, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
 Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of these several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS, SENT BY MAIL AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).....	1.50
ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Meg, Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols.....	3.50
Historical Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrations.....	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins".....	1.50
Under the Locks. Illustrated.....	1.50
Work: A Story of Experience.....	1.75
Silver Pitchers and Independence. A Centennial Love Story.....	1.25
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Cupid and Chowchow, &c.....	1.00
Girls, &c.....	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinafore, &c.....	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
Culture and Anarchy.....	3.00
Last Essays on Church and Religion.....	1.50
Mixed Essays.....	2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma".....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism: with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.....	1.75
Isaiah XL-LXVI. With the shorter Prophecies allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes.....	1.50
New Poems.....	2.00
Book Reading for Schools.....	.35
Higher Schools and Universities in Germany. With New Preface.....	2.00
BAEON'S Essays.....	1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
Lombard Street.....	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.....	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	1.50
Mind and Body.....	1.50
Logic. Deductive and Inductive.....	2.00
Emotions and the Will.....	2.00
BARING-GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages.....	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.....	.75
Eating and Drinking.....	.75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper.....	.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volumes sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. Cloth, extra.....	1.50
A Book of Poems.....	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	1.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals.....	1.25
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
CLIFFORD (WM. K.). Seeing and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols.....	7.00
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	1.50
Childhood of Religions.....	1.25
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.20
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Ideal and Idealism.....	1.50
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces. A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyall, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.80
Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	3.00
Journal of Researches.....	3.00
Different forms of Flowers.....	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth.....	2.00
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol. Cloth.....	1.25
Orchids.....	1.75
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization.....	2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.....	1.75
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated.....	1.50
Deronda. 2 vols.....	3.50
Felix Holt, the Radical.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.50
Romola. Illustrated.....	1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner. Illustrated.....	1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.....	.50
EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Series. Portraits.....	1.50
Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portraits.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. ("George Eliot's" translation.).....	3.00
RISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Poetive Philosophy. 2 vols. The Unseen World, and other Essays.....	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Transcendentalism in New England.....	2.50
Life of George Smith.....	2.00
Creed and Conduct.....	1.00
Cradle of the Christ.....	1.75
Rising and Setting Faith.....	1.00
Visions of the Future.....	1.00
Beliefs of the Unbelievers.....	.25
Sketches of Old Sermons.....	1.50
10c. 2 vols. half calf.....	5.50
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each.....	.10
Stories from the Lips of a Teacher.....	1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs.....	1.00
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Creed and Conduct.....	1.00
Knowledge and Faith.....	1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	1.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portraits of Goethe and Schiller.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
GREGG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	2.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.....	2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portraits.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Thoughts about Art.....	1.50
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	2.00
Round my House.....	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River. The two last one vol.....	2.00
Waverley Home; Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire.....	2.00
Modern Frenchmen. Five Biographies.....	2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner. R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts.....	2.50
Hobbin and Ercher.....	5.00
Harry Blount. Passages in a Boy's Life on Land and Sea.....	1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living.....	1.50
Gala Days.....	1.50
Woman's Wrongs.....	1.50
Summer Rest.....	1.50
A New Atmosphere.....	1.50
Selling Plums.....	1.50
Wood-Gathering.....	1.50
Sermons to the Clergy.....	1.50
Skirmishes and Sketches.....	1.50
First Love is Best.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters.....	1.60
Verbal. Enlarged Edition.....	.35
The Story of Boon. A Poem. Paper covers.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.00
Bits of talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks.....	1.00
Bits of Travel at Home.....	1.00
Nona's Silver Mine. A Story of Colorado Life. Illustrated.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.75
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.50
Clubs and Societies.....	1.50
American Addresses.....	1.25
Physiology, an Introduction to Study of Nature.....	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.....	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.....	1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50
III. Food. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Constitution of Matter. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerodynamics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
X. Science of Law. By Prof. S. Amos.....	1.75
XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Marey.....	1.75
XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper, M.D., LL.D.....	1.75
XIII. The Theory of Descent, and Darwinism. By Prof. Oscar Schmidt.....	1.50
XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Vogel.....	2.00
XV. Food. By Dr. Edward Smith, LL.D.....	1.50
XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.....	1.50
XVII. Money and Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons.....	1.75
XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel.....	2.00
XIX. Animal Parasites and Mesomites. By Mons. Van Beneden.....	1.50
XX. On Fermentations. By P. Schützenberger.....	1.50
XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Bernstein.....	1.75
XXII. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.....	1.50
XXIII. Studies in Spectrum Analysis. By J. N. Lockyer.....	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
China.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	8.00
KNAPPET (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.....	1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	3.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. Problems of Life and Mind. Vols. I. and II. Per vol.....	3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind.....	3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method.....	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	1.50
My Study Windows.....	2.00
A Fable for Critics.....	.75
Under the Willows and other Poems.....	1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal.....	.75
Three Memorial Poems.....	1.00
Fireside Travels.....	1.50
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each.....	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Politics, Economy. New and revised edition.....	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	2.50
Autobiography.....	2.50
Memorial Volume of his Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
The Ship in the Desert.....	1.50
Songs of Italy.....	1.25
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
Man and Apes. An Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol.....	1.25
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.....	2.00
Contemporary Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes.....	1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography, and Antiquities. Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., etc., completing the work. Four vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
On Missions. A Lecture Delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873.....	1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India.....	2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Religion, Doctrine, and Practice.....	1.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Christmas Celebrations. A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolley Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged in.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Ayle.....	1.50
Trotty's Wedding Tour. Illustrated.....	1.50
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.....	1.50
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds established under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy & a Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c., &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, &c.....	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHLLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.A., M.D., F.R.S.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. Logic. By W. S. Jevons.....	.50
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.....	2.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology 2 vols.....	5.00
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	2.00
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	2.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	1.50
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.80
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Sauterlings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.....	2.00
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and the Individual.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	1.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldwater's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Pantries. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTEY'S (JOHN G.) Poems.....	2.00
Child Life.....	.00

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.
VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving

Principles of the Ox Brain
and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.
A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workingman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

MR. CHADWICK'S NEW BOOK,

THE FAITH OF REASON.

"Of all preachers occupying regular pulpits as distinguished from lecture platforms, he seems to have completely emancipated himself from pulpit conventions. His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence. . . . When we consider their quality, we marvel, for what sermons of the day can compare with these in richness, force, and beauty?"—Rev. Dr. F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,
23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?

11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 80 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. ABBOT). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING

NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kuenen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I. Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II. Kings and Prophets. Vol. III. New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE FAITH OF REASON. A Series of Discourses on the leading topics of Religion. By John W. Chadwick, author of The Bible of To-day. Pages 254. Price $1.00.

"His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit-teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence."—Rev. Dr. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 283 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Hurley Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Enigmas of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

Supernatural Religion. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half calf, $6.00.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May. Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston

A CHEAP OFFER

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 9,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27th YEAR. A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS' LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
 2. Max Müller.
 3. Emerson.
- For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N. Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR,

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest Inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all Inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & Co. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D. C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 528.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEB. 5, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

LIBERAL LEAGUE PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N. Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSSES.

JOHN LOCKE wrote: "To love truth for truth's sake is the principal part of human perfection, and the seed-plot of all other virtues."

PROFESSOR JEVONS well says (Principles of Science, page 513): "Vagueness and incapability of precise proof or disproof often enable a false theory to live; but, with those who love truth, vagueness should excite suspicion." This is just as true in religion as in anything else.

MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD received the well-deserved honor of a banquet at Milwaukee, January 16, from about forty leading liberals of that city. The free-love ring are trying to break him down, as they would gladly break down every one who refuses to be their slave; but in this, as in other cases, their hostility is the best certificate of character. The only thing to dread is their praise. They cannot injure, either seriously or permanently, a man like Mr. Underwood.

ALBERT A. CHENEY, of Brattleboro, wrote as follows to the Vermont Phoenix on January 7: "Kindly allow me to call the attention of your readers to the availability of God's promises. In the spring of 1878, a severe attack of inflammation of the bowels, preceded by gradually failing health, left me with nervous prostration and dyspepsia from which I did not recover sufficiently to engage in any occupation of mind or body. At a visit to Dr. Charles Cullis, founder of the Consumptives' Home in Boston, on Sept. 13, 1879, he offered for me the prayer of faith, claiming the promise in James v., 14, 15. The prayer was answered, and since then my health has been perfect."

THE NEW YORK Sun remarks: "Why should the ex tempore prayers of Congressional chaplains be reported in the Congressional Record? Theoretically, they are addressed to God, and not to the public: the publication of them is wholly outside of the legitimate uses and functions of the Record. As a rule, they are very far from being models of prayer, often erring as deplorably against the canons of good taste as against the accepted laws of English grammar. Moreover, they generally contain words and phrases offensive to the religious susceptibilities of many American citizens, who pay their full share of the taxes, and who are the equals in all respects, under the Constitution, of their Christian neighbors."

THE Home Journal has this just reference to George Jacob Holyoake: "Mr. Holyoake is a man of the people, who has spent his life in work for the people,—work of many kinds, useful, intelligent, but, for the most part, unrewarded, and to some extent unrecognized. If we care to know something about the present social and industrial condition of what are called the masses, Mr. Holyoake can tell us. On some topics he is, perhaps, better informed than any living Englishman, and whatever he tells us may be taken as the statement of a man who is as sincere and accurate as he is disinterested. He is not without a share of humor; but he is a man terribly in earnest, all the same, and given to finding out things for himself. If he writes a book on America, it will be a book of uncompromising truthfulness."

THE NEW YORK Herald has this encouraging paragraph: "If there is a bright side to the recent gloomy pictures of embezzlement and misappropriation of funds, it is to be found in the absence of such scandals from the administration of the federal government. The government, besides collecting and disbursing an annual revenue of between two hundred and fifty and three hundred million dollars, has made gigantic transactions in loans, and during the last three years there has not been a conspicuous case of defalcation or embezzlement by any federal officer. At a time when we have so many painful and startling disclosures of private demoralization, we should not fail to recognize the remarkable integrity which prevails in the administration of the national government. We have never had an administration which deserved higher praise in this respect than that of President Hayes, and all honest men should feel a sincere pleasure in paying it this just tribute."

A CHICAGO despatch of January 16 said: "The directors of the Catholic Colonization Association of the United States have been in session at the Grand Pacific Hotel for the past three days, and just closed their labors. The three Western bishops who are most actively identified with the work—namely, Bishop Spalding of Peoria, Ireland of St. Paul, and O'Connor of Omaha—were in attendance. Bishop Spalding presided, and W. J. Onahan acted as Secretary. The board decided to call in the subscriptions to the capital stock, which is more than fully taken. Land for a colony in Greeley County, Nebraska, twenty-five thousand acres, has been purchased, and will be open to emigrants and colonists by the 15th of February. Contracts were made to-day for the necessary houses, which will be shipped from here. These include a church, a house for emigrants, etc. Town sites were determined on, and named respectively "O'Connor" and "Spalding" in compliment of the two bishops. The colony of the association in Nobles County, Minn., established originally under the auspices of Bishop Ireland, was reported a complete success. Nearly three-fourths of the land is already sold to parties chiefly from Boston and vicinity. The project of a paper to be published in the interests of colonization was proposed by Rev. Father Byrne, of Newark, N. J. That subject was referred to the three bishops and Father Byrne. The board adjourned, subject to call of the President."

M. RENAN, in his inaugural address before the French Academy, said of the beneficial influence of science: "Who does not see that Galileo, Descartes, Newton, Lavoisier, Laplace, have changed the foundation of human thought in modifying totally the idea of the universe and its laws; in substituting for the infantile imaginings of non-scientific ages the notion of an eternal order, in which caprice and particular will have no thought? Have they diminished the universe, as some think? For my part, I think the contrary. The skies as we see them are far superior to that solid vault spangled with shining dots and upborne some leagues above us by pillars which contented the simpler ages. I do not much regret the little spirits that were wont to guide the planets in their orbits: gravitation does the work much better; and if, at times, I have a sad remembrance of the nine angelic choirs wheeling round the orbs of the seven planets, and of the crystal sea that lies at the feet of the Eternal, I console myself with the thought that the infinite into which we look is really infinite, and a thousand times more sublime to eyes of true contemplation than all the azure circles of Angelico of Fiesole. M. Thiers rarely allowed a fine night to pass without gazing upon that boundless sea. 'It is my mass,' he said. How far do the chemist's profound views upon the atom surpass the vague notion of matter on which the scholastic philosophy was fed!... And as to nobleness of character, how can one accuse science of striking at it, when he sees the minds that science forms, the unselfishness, the absolute devotion to life work, that she inspires and sustains? With the saints, the heroes, the great men of all ages, we may fearlessly compare our men of scientific minds, given solely to the research of truth, indifferent to fortune, often proud of their poverty, smiling at the honors that are offered, as careless of flattery as of obloquy, sure of the worth of that they are doing, and happy because they possess truth. Great, I grant, are the joys which a firm belief in things divine confers, but these the inward happiness of the wise equals; for he feels that he toils at an eternal work, and belongs to the company of those of whom it is said, 'Their works do follow them.'"

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N.Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Birmingham, Ind.
MR. W. M. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass.
MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....Boston, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass.
HARRIET A. MILLS.....Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich.
HARRIET A. MILLS, Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York.
W. J. B. HARGRAVE, Editor of "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.
REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill.
DR. L. L. BROWN.....Birmingham, Ind.
HON. E. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa.
ELDER F. W. EVANS.....Mount Lebanon, N.Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City.
MRS. ANY POST.....Rochester, N.Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH CODY STANTON.....Tenafly, N.Y.
MRS. VALLIE HOLLEY.....Lottsburgh, Va.
JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N.Y.
HARRIET MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N.Y.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

F. A. J. WILCOX.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....W. H. HAMLEN.
F. E. ABBOT.....O. D. B. MILLS.
D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....JOHN A. HARRIS, Monticello.
California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOSLT, Greenville.
Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
Iowa.....J. C. MICHENER, Adair.
Kansas.....JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Maine.....DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
Michigan.....KARL SCHMEMMANN, Detroit.
Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
Nevada.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New Jersey.....FRANCOIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
New York.....C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
Oregon.....SAMUEL COIT, Humboldt Basin.
Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
Vermont.....R. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
West Virginia.....M. M. DENN, Weston.
Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Wyoming.....D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.

D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

Chartered by the National Liberal League of America.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Florence Liberal League.
SYRACUSE, N.Y.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Onondaga County Liberal League.
ALBANY, N.Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.
BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
PASSAIC CITY, N.J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Passaic City Liberal League.
JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jacksonville Liberal League.
ROCHESTER, N.Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Cale.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Jefferson Liberal League of Rochester.
CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.

N.B.—The above is an acknowledgment of the fact that a charter is due and will be sent as soon as possible. Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues originally chartered by the "National Liberal League" will receive charters from the "National Liberal League of America" without extra charge, if they send a certified copy of their vote to accept the following invitation:—

"Voted, That all Local Leagues that approve the formation of the National Liberal League of America are invited to dissolve their connection with the old League, and to join this League."

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y. MOSSES HAYS, Rochester, N.Y.
FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. E. UEBINO, West Newton, Ind., N.Y.
Z. T. WATKINS, Syracuse, N.Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N.Y.
NETTIE C. TRUEBDELL, Syra-FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, Mass.
GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MOSSES W. DODGE, Albany, N.Y.
Waukegan, Ill. J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N.Y.
HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, Mass.
W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
T. O. GAGE, Fayetteville, N.Y. D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, CHARLES ELLIS, Boston, Mass.
JOHN W. TRUEBDELL, Syra-cuse, N.Y.
C. HERRICK C. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y. H. STARK, Rochester, N.Y.
JOHN NURK, Chelsea, Mass. JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N.Y.
JOHN LILL, Watertown, N.Y. J. B. BASSETT, Boston, Mass.
E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass. W. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N.Y.
THOS. D. GAN, Albany, N.Y. JOHN PREST, Albany, N.Y.
JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N.Y. C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
MRS. D. B. MORRY, Malden, Mass.

The Preacher.*

BY RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

In the history of opinion, the pinch of falsehood shows itself first, not in argument and formal protest, but in insincerity, indifference, and abandonment of the Church or the scientific or political or economic institution for other better or worse forms.

The venerable and beautiful traditions in which we were educated are losing their hold on human belief, day by day; a restlessness and dissatisfaction in the religious world marks that we are in a moment of transition; as when the Roman Church broke into Protestant and Catholic; or, earlier, when Paganism broke into Christians and Pagans. The old forms rattle, and the new delay to appear; material and industrial activity have materialized the age; and the mind, haughty with its sciences, disdains the religious forms as childish.

In consequence of this revolution in opinion, it appears, for the time, as the misfortune of this period that the cultivated mind has not the happiness and dignity of the religious sentiment.

We are born too late for the old, and too early for the new, faith. I see in those classes and those persons in whom I am accustomed to look for tendency and progress, for what is most positive and most rich in human nature, and who contain the activity of to-day and the assurance of to-morrow,—I see in them character, but scepticism; a clear enough perception of the inadequacy of the popular religious statement to the wants of their heart and intellect, and explicit declarations of this fact. They have insight and truthfulness; they will not mask their convictions; they hate cant; but more than this I do not readily find. The gracious motions of the soul—piety, adoration—I do not find. Scorn of hypocrisy, pride of personal character, elegance of taste and of manners and pursuit, a boundless ambition of the intellect, willingness to sacrifice personal interests for the integrity of the character,—all these they have; but that religious submission and abandonment which give man a new element and being, and make him sublime,—it is not in churches, it is not in houses. I see movement, I hear aspirations, but I see not how the great God prepares to satisfy the heart in the new order of things.

No Church, no State emerges; and when we have extricated ourselves from all the embarrassments of the social problem, the oracle does not yet emit any light on the mode of individual life. A thousand negatives it utters, clear and strong on all sides; but the sacred affirmative it hides in the deepest abyss.

We do not see that heroic resolutions will save men from those tides which a most fatal moon heaps and levels in the moral, emotive, and intellectual nature. It is certain that many dark hours, many imbecilities, periods of inactivity, solstices when we make no progress, but stand still—will occur. In those hours, we can find comfort in reverence of the highest power, and only in that. We never do quite nothing, or never need. It looks as if there were much doubt, much waiting, to be endured by the best. Perhaps there must be austere elections and determinations before any clear vision.

No age and no person is destitute of the sentiment; but in actual history its illustrious exhibitions are interrupted and periodical,—the ages of belief, of heroic action, of intellectual activity, of men cast in a higher mould.

But the sentiment that pervades a nation, the nation must react upon. It is resisted and corrupted by that obstinate tendency to personify and bring under the eyesight what should be the contemplation of Reason alone. The Understanding will write out the vision in a Confession of Faith. Art will embody this vanishing Spirit in temples, pictures, sculptures and hymns. The senses instantly transfer the reverence from the vanishing Spirit to this steadfast form. Ignorance and passion alloy and degrade. In proportion to a man's want of goodness, it seems to him another and not himself; that is to say, the Deity becomes more objective, until finally flat idolatry prevails.

Of course the virtuous sentiment appears arrayed against the nominal religion, and the true men are hunted as unbelievers, and burned. Then the good sense of the people wakes up so far as to take tacit part with them, to cast off reverence for the Church; and there follows an age of unbelief.

This analysis was inevitable and useful. But the sober eye finds something ghastly in this empiricism. At first, delighted with the triumph of the intellect, the surprise of the results and the sense of power, we are like hunters on the scent and soldiers who rush to battle: but when the game is run down, when the enemy lies cold in his blood at our feet, we are alarmed at our solitude; we would gladly recall the life that so offended us; the face seems no longer that of an enemy.

I say the effect is withering; for, this examination resulting in the constant detection of errors, the flattered understanding assumes to judge all things, and to anticipate the same victories. In the activity of the understanding, the sentiments sleep. The understanding presumes in things above its sphere, and, because it has exposed errors in a church, concludes that a church is an error; because it has found absurdities to which the sentiment of veneration is attached, sneers at veneration; so that analysis has run to seed in unbelief. There is no faith left. We laugh and hiss, pleased with our power in making heaven and earth a howling wilderness.

Unlovely, nay, frightful, is the solitude of the soul which is without God in the world. To wander all day in the sunlight among the tribes of animals, unrelated to anything better; to behold the horse, cow, and bird, and to foresee an equal and speedy end to him and them; no, the bird, as it hurried by with its bold and perfect flight, would disclaim his sympathy, and declare him an outcast. To see men pursuing in faith their varied action, warm-hearted, providing for their children, loving their friends, performing their promises,—what are they to this chill, houseless, fatherless, aimless Cain, the man who hears only the sound of his own footsteps in God's resplendent creation? To him, it is no creation; to him, these fair creatures are hapless spectres: he knows not what to make of it. To him, heaven and earth have lost their beauty. How gloomy is the day, and upon yonder shining pond, what melancholy light! I cannot keep the sun in heaven, if you take away the purpose that animates him. The ball, indeed, is there, but his power to cheer, to illuminate the heart as well as the atmosphere, is gone forever. It is a lamp-wick for meanest uses. The words, great, venerable, have lost their meaning; every thought loses all its depth, and has become mere surface.

But religion has an object. It does not grow thin or robust with the health of the votary. The object of adoration remains forever unhurt and identical. We are in transition, from the worship of the fathers which enshrined the law in a private and personal history to a worship which recognizes the true eternity of the law, its presence to you and me, its equal energy in what is called brute nature as in what is called sacred history. The next age will behold God in the ethical laws—as mankind begins to see them in this age, self equal, self-executing, instantaneous, and self-affirmed, needing no voucher, no prophet, and no miracle besides their own irresistibility—and will regard natural history, private fortunes and politics, not for themselves as we have done, but as illustrations of those laws, of that beatitude and love. Nature is too thin a screen; the glory of the One breaks in everywhere.

Every movement of religious opinion is of profound importance to politics and social life; and this of to-day has the best omens as being of the most expansive humanity, since it seeks to find in every nation and creed the imperishable doctrines.

I find myself always struck and stimulated by a good anecdote, any trait of heroism, of faithful service. I do not find that the age or country makes the least difference; no, nor the language the actors spoke, nor the religion which they professed, whether Arab in the desert, or Frenchmen in the Academy. I see that sensible men and conscientious men all over the world were of one religion,—the religion of well-doing and daring, men of sturdy truth, men of integrity and feeling for others. My inference is, that there is a statement of religion possible which makes all scepticism absurd.

The health and welfare of man consist in ascent

*Originally written as a parlor-lecture to some Divinity students, in 1867; afterwards enlarged from earlier writings, and read in its present form at the Divinity Chapel, Cambridge, May 5, 1879.

from surfaces to solids; from occupation with details to knowledge of the design; from self-activity of talents, which lose their way by the lust of display, to the controlling and reinforcing of talents by the emanation of character.

All that we call religion, all that saints and churches and Bibles from the beginning of the world have aimed at, is to suppress this impertinent surface-action, and animate man to central and entire action. The human race are afflicted with a St. Vitus' dance; their fingers and toes, their members, their senses, their talents, are superfluously active, while the torpid heart gives no oracle. When that wakes, it will revolutionize the world. Let that speak, and all these rebels will fly to their loyalty. Now every man defeats his own action,—professes this, but practises the reverse; with one hand rows, and with the other backs water. A man acts not from one motive, but from many shifting fears and short motives; it is as if he were ten or twenty less men than himself, acting at discord with one another, so that the result of most lives is zero. But when he shall act from one motive, and all his faculties play true, it is clear mathematically, is it not, that this will tell in the result, as if twenty men had coöperated,—will give new senses, new wisdom of its own kind; that is, not more facts, nor new combinations, but divination, or direct intuition of the state of men and things?

The lessons of the moral sentiment are, once for all, an emancipation from that anxiety which takes the joy out of all life. It teaches a great peace. It comes itself from the highest place. It is that, which being in all sound natures, and strongest in the best and most gifted men, we know to be implanted by the Creator of men. It is a commandment at every moment and in every condition of life to do the duty of that moment and to abstain from doing the wrong. And it is so near and inward and constitutional to each, that no commandment can compare with it in authority. All wise men regard it as the voice of the Creator himself.

I know there are those to whom the question of what shall be believed is the more interesting because they are to proclaim and teach what they believe.

All positive rules, ceremonial, ecclesiastical, distinctions of race or of person, are perishable; only those distinctions hold which are in the nature of things not matters of positive ordinance. As the earth we stand upon is not imperishable, but is chemically resolvable into gases and nebulae, so is the universe an infinite series of planes, each of which is a false bottom; and, when we think our feet are planted now at last on adamant, the slide is drawn out from under us.

We must reconcile ourselves to the new order of things. But is it a calamity? The poet Wordsworth greeted even the steam-engine and railroads; and when they came into his poetic Westmoreland, bisecting every delightful valley, deforming every consecrated grove, yet manned himself to say:—

"In spite of all that Beauty may disown
In your harsh features, Nature doth embrace
Her lawful offspring in man's art, and Time,
Pleased with your triumphs o'er his brother Space,
Accepts from your bold hands the proffered crown
Of hope, and smiles on you with cheer sublime."

And we can keep our religion, despite of the violent railroads of generalization, whether French or German, that block and intersect our old parish highways.

In matters of religion, men eagerly fasten their eyes on the differences between their creed and yours, whilst the charm of the study is in finding the agreements and identities in all the religions of men.

What is essential to the theologian is, that whilst he is select in his opinions, severe in his search for truth, he shall be broad in his sympathies,—not to allow himself to be excluded from any church. He is to claim for his own whatever eloquence of St. Chrysostom or St. Jerome or St. Bernard, he has felt. So not less of Bishop Taylor or George Herbert or Henry Scougal. He sees that what is most effective in the writer is what is dear to his, the reader's, mind.

Be not betrayed into undervaluing the churches which annoy you by their bigoted claims. They too were real churches. They answered to their times the same need as your rejection of them does to ours. The Catholic Church has been immensely rich in men and influences. Augustine, à Kempis, Fénelon, breathe the very spirit which now fires you. So with Cudworth, More, Bunyan. I agree with them more than I disagree. I agree with their heart and motive; my discontent is with their limitations and surface and language. Their statement is grown as fabulous as Dante's Inferno. Their purpose is as real as Dante's sentiment and hatred of vice. Always put the best interpretation on a tenet. Why not on Christianity, wholesome, sweet, and poetic? It is the record of a pure and holy soul, humble, absolutely disinterested, a truth-speaker, and bent on serving, teaching, and uplifting men. Christianity taught the capacity, the element, to love the All-perfect without a stingy bargain for personal happiness. It taught that to love him was happiness,—to love him in other's virtues.

An era in human history is the life of Jesus; and the immense influence for good leaves all the perversion and superstition almost harmless. Mankind have been subdued to the acceptance of his doctrine, and cannot spare the benefit of so pure a servant of truth and love. Of course a hero so attractive to the hearts of millions drew the hypocrite and the ambitious into his train, and they used his name to falsify his history and undo his work.

I fear that what is called religion, but is perhaps pew-holding, not obeys, but conceals the moral sentiment. I put it to this simple test: Is a rich rogue made to feel his roguery among divines or literary men? No? Then 'tis rogue again under the cassock. What sort of respect can these preachers or newspapers inspire by their weekly praises of texts and saints, when we know that they would say just the same things if Beelzebub had written the chapter, provided it stood where it does in the public opinion?

Anything but unbelief, anything but losing hold of the moral intuitions, as betrayed in the clinging to a form of devotion or a theological dogma, as if it was the liturgy, or the chapel, that was sacred, and not justice and humility, and the loving heart and serving hand.

But besides the passion and interest which pervert is the shallowness which impoverishes. The opinions of men lose all worth to him who perceives that they are accurately predictable from the ground of their sect. Nothing is more rare, in any man, than an act of his own.

The clergy are as like as peas. I cannot tell them apart. It was said: They have bronchitis because they read from their papers sermons with a near voice, and then, looking at the congregation, they try to speak with their far voice, and the shock is noxious. I think they do this, or the converse of this, with their thought. They look into Plato, or into the mind, and then try to make parish mince-meat of the amplitudes and eternities, and the shock is noxious. It is the old story again: once we had wooden chalices and golden priests, now we have golden chalices and wooden priests.

The clergy are always in danger of becoming wards and pensioners of the so-called producing classes. Their first duty is self-possession founded on knowledge.

The man of practice or worldly force requires of the preacher a talent, a force, like his own; the same as his own, but wholly applied to the priest's things. He does not forgive an application in the preacher to the merchant's things. He wishes him to be such a one as he himself should have been, had he been priest. He is sincere and ardent in his vocation, and plunged in it. Let priest or poet be as good in theirs. Nobody forgives any over-estimate in you of them,—any over-estimate of what they do or have.

The simple fact that the pulpit exists, that all over this country the people are waiting to hear a sermon on Sunday, assures that opportunity which is inestimable to young men, students of theology, for those large liberties. The existence of the Sunday, and the pulpit, waiting for a weekly sermon, give him the very conditions, the πῶς σὺ he wants. That must be filled, and he is armed to fill it. Let him value his talent as a door into Nature. Let him see his performances only as limitations. Then, over all, let him value the sensibility that receives, that loves, that dares, that affirms.

There are always plenty of young, ignorant people,—though some of them are seven, and some of them seventy years old,—wanting peremptorily instruction; but, in the usual averages of parishes, only one person that is qualified to give it. It is only that person who concerns me,—him only that I see. The others are very amiable and promising, but they are only neuters in the hive,—every one a possible royal bee, but not now significant. It does not signify what they say or think to-day; 'tis the cry and the babble of the nursery,—and their only virtue, docility. Buckminster, Channing, Dr. Lowell, Edward Taylor, Parker, Bushnell, Chapin,—it is they who have been necessary, and the opinions of the floating crowd of no importance whatever.

I do not love sensation-preaching,—the personalities for spite, the hurrah for our side, the review of our appearances and what others say of us! That you may read in the gazette. We come to church properly for self-examination, for approach to principles to see how it stands with us, with the deep and dear facts of right and love. At the same time, it is impossible to pay no regard to the day's events, to the public opinion of the times, to the stirring shouts of parties, to the calamities and prosperities of our town and country; to war and peace, new events, great personages, to good harvests, new resources, to bankruptcies, famines and desolations. We are not stocks or stones, we are not thinking machines, but allied to men around us, as really, though not quite so visibly, as the Siamese brothers. And it were inhuman to affect ignorance or indifference on Sundays to what makes our blood beat and our countenance dejected Saturday or Monday.

No, these are fair tests to try our doctrines by, and see if they are worth anything in life. The value of a principle is the number of things it will explain; and there is no good theory of disease which does not at once suggest a cure.

Man proposes, but God disposes. We shall not very long have any part or lot in this earth in whose affairs we so hotly mix, and where we feel and speak so energetically of our country and our cause. It is a comfort to reflect that the gigantic evils which seem to us so mischievous and so incurable will at last end themselves, and rid the world of their presence, as all crime sooner or later must.

But be that event for us soon or late, we are not excused from playing our short part in the best manner we can, no matter how insignificant our aid may be. Our children will be here, if we are not; and their children's history will be colored by our action. But if we have no children, or if the events in which we have taken our part shall not see their solution until a distant future, there is yet a deeper fact; that as much justice as we can see and practise is useful to men and imperative, whether we can see it to be useful or not.

The essential ground of a new book or a new sermon is a new spirit. The author has a new thought, sees the sweep of a more comprehensive tendency than others are aware of; falters never, but takes the victorious tone. For power is not so much shown in talent, but in tone. And if I had to counsel a young preacher, I should say: When there is any difference felt between the foot-board of the pulpit and the floor of the parlor, you have not yet said that which you should say.

Inspiration will have advance, affirmation, the forward foot, the ascending state; it will be an opener of doors: it will invent its own methods: the new wine will make the bottles new. Spirit is motive and ascending. Only let there be a deep observer, and he will make light of new shop and new circumstance that afflict you; new shop, or old cathedral, it is all one to him. He will find the circumstance not altered, as deep a cloud of mystery on the cause, as dazzling a glory on the invincible law. Given the insight, and he will find as many beauties and heroes and strokes of genius close by him as Dante or Shakspeare beheld. A vivid thought brings the power to paint it; and in proportion to the depth of its source is the force of its projection. We are happy and enriched; we go away invigorated, assisted each in our own work, however different, and shall not forget to come again for new impulses.

The supposed embarrassments to young clergymen exist only to feeble wills. They need not consider them. The differences of opinion, the strength of old sects or timorous literalists, since it is not armed with prisons or fagots, as in ruder times or countries, is not worth considering, except as furnishing a needed stimulus. That gray deacon or respectable matron with Calvinistic antecedents, you can readily see, could not have presented any obstacle to the march of St. Bernard or of George Fox, of Luther or of Theodore Parker.

And though I observe the deafness to counsel among men, yet the power of sympathy is always great; and affirmative discourse, presuming assent, will often obtain it, when argument would fail. Such, too, is the active power of good temperament. Great sweetness of temper neutralizes such vast amounts of acid! As for position, the position is always the same,—insulting the timid, and not taken by storm, but flanked, I may say, by the resolute, simply by minding their own affair. Speak the affirmative; emphasize your choice by utter ignoring of all that you reject, seeing that opinions are temporary, but convictions uniform and eternal,—seeing that a sentiment never loses its pathos or its persuasion, but is youthful after a thousand years.

The inevitable course of remark for us, when we meet each other for meditation on life and duty, is not so much the enjoining of this or that cure or burning out of our errors of practice as simply the celebration of the power and beneficence amidst which and by which we live, not critical, but affirmative.

All civil mankind have agreed in leaving one day for contemplation against six for practice. I hope that day will keep its honor and its use. A wise man advises that we should see to it that we read and speak two or three reasonable words, every day, amid the crowd of affairs and the noise of trifles. I should say boldly that we should astonish every day by a beam out of eternity; retire a moment to the grand secret we carry in our bosom of inspiration from heaven. But certainly on this seventh let us be the children of liberty, of reason, of hope; refresh the sentiments; think as spirits think, who belong to the universe, whilst our feet walk in the streets of a little town, and our hands work in a small knot of affairs. We shall find one result, I am sure,—a certain originality and a certain haughty liberty proceeding out of our retirement and self-communion, which streets can never give, infinitely removed from all vaporing and bravado, and which yet is more than a match for any physical resistance.

It is true that which they say of our New England oestrum, which will never let us stand or sit, but drives us like mad through the world. The calmest and most protected life cannot save us. We want some intercalated days, to bethink us, and to derive order to our life from the heart. That should be the use of the Sabbath,—to check this headlong racing, and put us in possession of ourselves once more, for love or for shame.

The Sabbath changes its forms from age to age, but the substantial benefit endures. We no longer recite the old creeds of Athanasius or Arius, of Calvin or Hopkins. The forms are flexible, but the uses not less real. The old heart remains as ever with its old human duties. The old intellect still lives, to pierce the shows to the core. Truth is simple, and will not be antique; is ever present, and insists on being of this age and of this moment. Here is thought, and love and truth and duty, new as on the first day of Adam and of angels.

"There are two pairs of eyes in man; and it is requisite that the pair which are beneath should be closed when the pair that are above them perceive; and that when the pair above are closed, those which are beneath are opened." The lower eyes see only surfaces and effects, the upper eyes behold causes and the connection of things. And when we go alone, or come into the house of thought and worship, we come with purpose to be disabused of appearances, to see realities, the great lines of our destiny, to see that life has no caprice or fortune, is no hopping quib, but a growth after immutable laws under beneficent influences the most immense. The Church is open to great and small in all nations; and how rare and lofty, how unattainable, are the aims it labors to set before men! We come to educate, come to isolate, to be abstractionists; in fine, to open the upper eyes to the deep mystery of cause and effect, to know that though ministers of justice and power fail, Justice and Power fail never. The open secret of the world is the art of subliming a private soul with inspirations from the great and public and divine Soul from which we live.—Unitarian Review for January, 1880.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

EXAMINER NOTES.

BY REV. EDWARD C. TOWNE.

UNDERBANK PARSONAGE, STANNINGTON, }
Near SHEFFIELD, Eng. }

The Messianic Idea.

The references made to this subject in current discussion of Christ and Christianity commit the natural but very great mistake of assuming, as an indisputable truth, the common Orthodox tradition as to what the Jews thought and what Christ claimed. The significant facts I believe to have been: 1. That the Jews did not to any great extent cherish the notion of a personal Messiah; 2. That by Christ no claim whatever was made beyond that of a simple Teacher; 3. That the disciples of Christ, in a spirit and sense contrary to his own, tried to make him pose as a Messiah, and to make out after his death that he had done this; and 4. That the fourfold story of our Gospels, with that of Paul, is their picture, very much of it devised and unhistorical, in which they flagrantly disobeyed their Teacher and put his simple and pure gospel of trust in God and love to man under the bushel of their own notion,—a notion which was Jewish only in the peculiar, narrow, and inferior sense of a fanaticism, or rather enthusiasm, not shared by the Jews at large.

In Prof. James Drummond's The Jewish Messiah is given "A Critical History of the Messianic Idea among the Jews." Prof. Drummond attempts first to notice briefly "the picture of the ideal future exhibited by the successive prophets." Joel, Amos, and Hosea "agree in the total absence of a Messiah, or personal mediator, in the inauguration of the ideal blessedness," although "the main features of the Messianic expectation, as it existed in later times, are sketched with sufficient distinctness." Prof. Drummond says: "Turning in penitence to God is the condition on which a more blessed future is promised"; and "no personal mediator is introduced." In another group of prophets, Isaiah [the chapters i.-xxxix.], the elder Zechariah [chapters ix.-xi.], and Micah, "the person of the ideal king is distinctly introduced and portrayed," says Prof. Drummond, and these prophets "extend the anticipated blessedness beyond the limits of their own people"; but, as for what this means, Prof. Drummond gives as his opinion that "a sound interpretation does not carry us higher than an ideal man, whom the spirit of God has furnished with amplest gifts for the fulfilment of his office." Coming next to the time of Josiah, we find, says Prof. Drummond, that Zephaniah "makes no mention of a Messiah, for God is 'the king of Israel,'" and that Jeremiah "evidently looks, not for a single Messianic ruler, but for a perpetual succession of kings upon the throne of David." During the captivity, Obadiah "expects for his own people a resurrection of the dead," to meet the Good Time of deliverance when "the kingdom shall be the Lord's"; but, says Prof. Drummond of Obadiah's vision, "there is throughout no trace of a Messiah." Ezekiel, within the captivity period, "closely resembles Jeremiah, but adds some features of his own." Thus "he expects his people to rise up out of their graves, and be restored to their own land," while they shall be "under one king, David," and there is "no word of hope for other nations." As to "the later Isaiah," just at the end of the captivity, Prof. Drummond says:—

"No Son of David appears as the leader of a brighter lot; and it is more than doubtful whether any Messiah is alluded to. Cyrus, indeed, is spoken of as the Lord's 'Anointed' [Messiah]. The name 'Messiah,' or Anointed, however, is nowhere else used in the Prophets to designate the ideal mediator; and it seems clear that the prophet regards him only as an unconscious instrument in the hands of God, and at best as preparing the way for the Messianic period. The 'servant of the Lord' spoken of so often is probably a collective name for those who remained faithful among the Israelites; and though these chapters contain passages of wonderful spiritual depth, and capable therefore of a very exalted application, they have no certain reference to an expected Messiah."

Finally, Haggai and Zechariah "are content to follow the lines marked out by earlier writers, simply adapting their ideals to the special circumstances of their own time." Zechariah's reference, in the manner of Jeremiah, to "a servant of the Lord-named the Branch, who shall build the Temple, and bear the glory and sit and rule upon his throne," evidently means, says Prof. Drummond, Zerubbabel; and the prophet's conception was strictly though broadly Jewish, for he said: "Many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day, and shall be my people. . . . Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord." So of Malachi's ideas Prof. Drummond says:—

"His indignation was aroused by the corruptions of the priesthood; and he accordingly announces a 'great and dreadful day of the Lord,' in which the wicked shall be burned up as stubble, but to those who fear the Lord's name 'the sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings.' But, instead of the royal mediator of the older prophets, 'the messenger of the covenant' shall be sent to prepare the way before Yahoch himself, and he shall suddenly come to his temple, and purify the sons of Levi. This messenger is named after the great destroyer of idolatrous priests, Elijah the Prophet. But the Prophet's ideal extends only to the observance of the law of Moses, and the restoration of the ceremonial which prevailed 'in the days of old.'"

Prof. Drummond passes from the prophets of the earlier time to the three apocryphal works which reach from that time forward to the time of the Maccabees, and the ideas which he finds he thus states:—

"The wisdom of the Son of Sirach," in common with the rest of the Apocrypha, makes no allusion to a personal Messiah, though hopes known as Messianic appear in different parts of the book. . . . The expression of Messianic hopes in Tobit is not quite so indefinite. . . . 'The house of God shall be built gloriously' in Jerusalem 'as the prophets spake concerning it,' and the city itself shall be built of precious stones, and 'all its streets shall cry hallelujah.' And 'many nations shall come from far to the name of the Lord God'. . . . This hope of universal blessedness changes in Baruch into longing for vengeance on the enemies of Zion. . . . An argument from silence is always more or less doubtful; but we can hardly help inferring from their total silence on the subject that the authors of these works had no belief in the coming of a Messiah. It cannot be said that their subjects did not lead them to speak of this belief. . . . It is inconceivable that they should omit the central figure, through whose agency every blessing was to come, if such a personality really entered into their belief. . . . From the little, and in part doubtful, evidence that remains to us, it would seem that in the period between the captivity and the rise of the Maccabees the Messianic hope resolved itself into vague anticipations of a glorious and happy future, in which the presence of God would be more manifest, but of which a Messiah would form no essential feature."

If now we go on with Prof. Drummond in his view of the elements of the Messianic idea during the period which begins with Antiochus Epiphanes, we find a crowd of errors of enthusiasm, and yet no certain looking for a personal Messiah except in quarters far outside the main and more sober current of faith. These twelve errors may be noted: That world history must be divided into a transitory period and an eternal period with a day of judgment between them; that the many belong to the first with its doom, and to the second with its joys belong only a few; that this eternal blessed future of the few is to be passed forever on a renovated earth; that God has himself prearranged and decreed everything; that in the earlier age penitence and good works have their place, and in the later rewards and happiness; that the time of the change may be found out by arts of interpretation of ancient Scripture; that when God appears it will be to glorify Israel and take vengeance on the Gentiles; that the age before the change will extend to six thousand years from the creation; that for their sins the nations will perish; that a king for the age of eternal redemption on earth will be sent down from above; that the course of nature will suffer great changes in the regeneration of all things; and that wickedness will have vastly accumulated on earth before the day of the Lord shall come. But into the picture of these enthusiasms comes now and then a gleam of clear truth, as when one declares that after all everything depends on penitence and good works. The real sense in fact under all this vain tattle of pseudo-prophetism is the faith that by the stress and storm of good against evil, right against wrong, and truth against falseness, there must come at last suppression of successful iniquity and established error, and victorious advance of righteousness and truth. In regard to the authorities for later Jewish opinion, from the Book of Daniel onward, Prof. Drummond says: "While our authorities concur in the recognition of a future ideal kingdom, it is, to say the least, extremely doubtful whether they all recognize a Messiah as standing at its head." The one "like a son of man"—not "the son of man," as in our incorrect version, is taken by Prof. Drummond to mean the ideal Israel. Daniel, he says, in the case of the people contrasted with the four heathen monarchies, "says not a word about a king," but plainly suggests "a pure theocracy in which the Ancient of days would himself come and dwell as sole king," as in fact "the dominion is assigned to 'the saints of the Most High,' without the faintest allusion to a Messiah," compelling us to believe "that the 'son of man' and 'the saints of the Most High' are identical." And not only is there here this "total failure to notice the Messiah throughout a long interpretation of the dream" of the prophet, but, where "we find a mediator actually named, this is not the Messiah, but the archangel Michael." Of the whole picture, Prof. Drummond says:—

"It is surely incredible that, if the writer believed in a supernatural Messiah, he could be content to accord to him only an obscure description, occupying a couple of verses, and then at the close of his book not only omit to say a word about him, but introduce Michael by name as the heavenly mediator to whom the Israelites were to look for deliverance."

Prof. Drummond further says of this picture:—"The people are Daniel's people, and Michael is their heavenly prince. How anything could be more unlike the Messiah it is difficult to conceive; and indeed the total absence of Messianic promise throughout this elaborate description of 'what shall befall thy people in the latter days' seems to me to be conclusive evidence that, if the writer believed in a Messiah at all, he regarded him as so subordinate to the general glory of Israel that it was not worth while to introduce him on the scene; and it is most probable that the Messianic idea had lost all hold on the mind of the people, and had not yet reshaped itself from the pictures in the ancient prophecies."

This conclusion is not disturbed by what the writer of Daniel says of "an anointed one," who "will be cut off." The passage affords no proof that the writer, in looking forward to an ideal kingdom, put a Messiah at the head of that kingdom. The prophecy on which he ventures has in view the time of Antiochus Epiphanes.

"There is not only no mention of the Messiah, but the great consummation of the world's history is connected with Antiochus, and the last solemn prophecy in the whole book relates to the suspension of the daily sacrifice in his time. How could the ultimate limit of the author's view be more clearly indicated? Again, how are we to believe that the author could dwell at such great length and with such reiteration on the brief episode of Antiochus, and yet confine himself to the most meagre and obscure allusions to the Messiah? There is something utterly grotesque in the supposition that a man should be miraculously commissioned hundreds of years before to predict such ample details about an ephemeral tyrant, and to tell about the world's great Redeemer that he should come in a certain year, and that he should be cut off, that he should confirm the covenant for one week, and cause sacrifice to cease, and not another word about a life so rich in everlasting results."

That Christ himself cited Daniel is easier to say than to prove, there being every reason to doubt the report which makes him to have done so. Hence, Prof. Drummond reaches finally "the general conclusion that the Book of Daniel, though it portrays an ideal kingdom, fails to place its sovereignty in the hands of a Messiah."

Some other writings add a little more light on the subject. Prof. Drummond cites them as follows:—

"In the Book of Wisdom there is one passage to which a Messianic interpretation has been given. It is that in which the treatment of the righteous man by the wicked is described. . . . But it is quite evident that in the original connection the righteous man is simply the representative of a class, and that no particular individual is alluded to. . . . In the first Book of Maccabees, we similarly fail to discover the Messiah. . . . Equally silent about the Messiah is the second Book of Maccabees. . . . The Messianic idea was not altogether unknown to the Maccabean period; but it is certainly remarkable that it should appear only in a couple of dreamy or poetic books, the Book of Enoch and the Sibylline Oracles, while it is conspicuously absent not only from historic and didactic works; but from the great prophetic utterance of the age [Daniel]. We must conclude that it was just beginning to shape itself dimly in enthusiastic minds, and had not yet been accepted as a popular faith. The speedy triumph of the Maccabees satisfied for a time the aspirations of the people; and a longer period of suffering and disappointment was needed to develop the hope of a Messiah into a passion among the masses of the nation, and into a doctrine in the schools of the learned. . . . The 'Assumption of Moses' is another book where we look in vain for the belief in a Messiah. . . . We may with much probability conclude that the author was not one of those who accepted the Messianic belief. The 'Book of Jubilees' is equally destitute of all traces of the Messiah."

Referring to two passages in which Philo has been supposed to make a Messianic reference, Prof. Drummond says of one: "It seems to me that the true effect of this passage is to induce a doubt whether Philo believed in a Messiah at all"; and of the other: "Throughout the whole passage there is not, in Philo's own words, a single allusion to the Messiah; and I must regard it therefore as the most probable conclusion that, while Philo shared in the ideal hopes of his race, he did not expect these hopes to be concentrated and fulfilled in any supreme personality. Even among the later teachers, the belief in the Messiah encountered some opposition."

This review of the whole evidence brings Prof. Drummond to say:—

"The above evidence, when fairly construed, seems sufficient to prove that the belief in a Messiah was far from being universally entertained among the Jews, especially before the time of Christ." Nor can we say that it was rejected only by some particular party; for we have failed to discover it in apocalyptic, haggadic, didactic, historical, and philosophical works, and have found it disputed even in the schools of the Rabbis.

And when Prof. Drummond turns to "those books in which belief in a Messiah receives a more or less complete recognition," neither the books nor their ideas are of the slightest authority. The Sibylline Oracles, the Book of Enoch, the apocryphal Psalms of Solomon, the Fourth Ezra, and some Rabbinical writings, are the source of these visionary conceptions for which no sane man would have had an ear, had not ignorant enthusiasm tried to make a Messiah in a similar sense of Christ. But, even after reviewing the lowest ideas advanced on the subject, Prof. Drummond can make these declarations: "that at all events, in the purely Jewish literature, there is no satisfactory evidence that 'the kingdom of God' or 'the kingdom of heaven' was ever used by the Jews as synonymous with the kingdom of the Messiah"; that, "although the Jews were not without the general notion that the afflictions of the pious atoned for the sins of the community, they had no expectation of an atoning and suffering Messiah"; that the Messiah "is not represented as possessed of a superhuman nature, but simply as a king endowed with high spiritual gifts"; and that "the Messiah is nowhere represented as the agent through whom the judgment is to be administered; but on this awful occasion, it was conceived, God himself would sit upon the throne of judgment, and pronounce the verdict against which none might appeal."

ROWLAND HILL.—Once at Wootton, Rowland Hill was preaching in the afternoon, the only time when it seemed possible to be drowsy under him. He saw some sleeping, and paused, saying: "I have heard that the miller can sleep while the mill is going, but, if it stops, it awakens him. I'll try this method." And so he sat down, and soon all were thoroughly awake.

FOREIGN.

A LARGE NUMBER of farmers and mechanics recently left England for Texas.

THE SUM of £3,000 has been subscribed towards the endowment of a Professorship of Chinese at the Oxford University.

MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED families are deprived of the means of subsistence by the failure of the Ditta Rogerini cotton mills at Legnano.

IT IS SAID that the chiefs of the Don Cossacks have requested the Supreme Government to expel all the Jews from that country during the next two years.

SEVENTEEN PERSONS were lately tried for burning a "witch" at Nijni Novgorod. All were acquitted except three, and these were sentenced to Church penances.

THE EMPRESS OF RUSSIA and the Queen of Italy both suffer from a want of blood, the Empress from being cooped up in hot winter rooms, and the Queen from the shock which came when she saw the attempt to assassinate Humbert.

CLOSE TO ABERGELDIE, the Prince of Wales' Scotch seat, is what is known as the Cradle Bridge, over the Dee, which at that point is too rapid for ferryboats. A person is seated in a sort of a cradle attached to a pole, and swung across. The Prince of Wales and even the Princess cross in the cradle, and save many miles.

THE COUNCIL of the Incorporated Law Society have refused to accept the lady candidate for examination. Another lady who applied to be admitted to the Preliminary Examination at one of the Inns of Court has met with an emphatic refusal. How long will their fathers, brothers, and husbands refuse to women a fair and equal start in the great race of life?

MADRID IS IN a disturbed condition, the people being much excited against the Government. Some thirty persons were lately arrested for raising seditious cries. At a subsequent outbreak, some shots were fired on account of the refusal of the Government to permit the funeral procession of the Republican General Laguneros to pass through the city. It is said that several well-known Republicans have been arrested in their houses.

A CURIOUS CASE came on Saturday before the Woolwich police-court. A young man of nineteen had taken his infant of seven months old to the workhouse and asked to have it admitted. His wife had died in her confinement, and since then he had paid a woman 6s. a week for taking care of the child. He was thrown out of work by the frost, and could no longer pay the nurse, so he took the little one to the workhouse. He was there told that he must himself remain in the workhouse, if the child were admitted; but he sensibly urged that that would not improve matters, as he then could not look for work. His brother offered to pay the child's expenses, but the guardians declined, unless the father would constitute himself a pauper. Sapient Bumbledom!

WE SHOULD ADVISE all who feel inclined to ill-use their wives to emigrate in a body to Russia. A wife of a well-to-do peasant brought a complaint against her husband before one of the District Courts of the Government of Volhynia, Russia. She charged him with beating and torturing her, and with keeping her in the cold without food until she nearly died of starvation. He bound her naked to a post in the street, and requested the passers-by to strike her, and did it himself each time they refused to do so. He fastened her down to the ground, and in such a position heaped stones and heavy weights upon her body until one of her arms was broken. The man was declared "Not guilty," for the Court said: "It cannot be permitted to a wife to ignore the authority of her husband." And on this ground it was urged that a husband had a perfect right to beat his wife, if he so chose.

THE RUSSIAN CHURCH is, it appears, making many converts in Japan. According to the Moscow correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, the great influence which is now exercised in that country by the Russian mission is chiefly attributable to the universal respect with which its chief, Father Nicholas, is regarded in all parts of the country, even in distant regions where no European has hitherto set foot. Father Nicholas is thoroughly conversant with both the Japanese and Chinese languages, and he is supplied with ample funds by the Russian Government. The American bishops meet with much sympathy among the higher classes, but their influence is far inferior to that of the Russian missionaries in the country generally. As for the Roman Catholics, they are decidedly unpopular. The other day the people broke the windows in the house of one of their missionaries, who had interfered with too much zeal in the family affairs of a Japanese.—Pall Mall Gazette.

SAID REV. CANON FARRAR, at the annual meeting of the Froebel Society, with reference to the Jews: "Neither the Greeks nor Romans made the first step toward educating little children,—very often a Roman father not even seeing his child until its sixth or seventh year: there was only one race which thoroughly appreciated the immense value of education to little ones, and this was the Jewish." To illustrate this, he quoted, from the Talmud, the narrative of the Drought, when the most pious prayed for rain, while on the prayer of an humble individual rain immediately fell from heaven. Upon being questioned as to "who he was," that his supplication was answered, he replied, "I am a teacher of little children." Canon Farrar closed his remarks by adding the Hebrew proverb: "That a town without a school is doomed to perish," and the memorable words of Archer: "That lessons to little children are like ink upon fair paper, whereas lessons to grown-up children are like ink upon blotted paper."

IT IS NOT EVERY man who can boast of having been gold-medallist of his year at Charterhouse; of obtaining a scholarship at Trinity College, Oxford; of graduating with honors at that University; of being three years an officer in the Indian Army; of becoming a Roman Catholic, and being for upwards of ten years a Jesuit priest and missionary; of afterwards renouncing the faith to which he had 'verted, as well as the order and the priesthood which he had joined, becoming a follower of John Stuart Mill, taking unto himself a wife, being nominated to the consular service, and rising in the same to the very highest posts. Such, however, has been the career of Mr. William Gifford Palgrave, who was named in the Gazette of Friday last as being promoted from the consular generalship in Bulgaria to that of Siam. Mr. Palgrave was forty years of age before he joined the consular service, but he has shown himself to be one of the most able public servants ever employed, as he is, perhaps, the best Arabic scholar in Europe.—London Truth.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Carlisle Patriot gives this doleful account of religious affairs in that distant region: "The general spread of infidelity among us is really alarming. There is a society in Dunedin called the Freethought Association, the chief promoters of which are some half-dozen of the wealthiest of our citizens. Its object (judging from the printed reports of its paid lecturers, both male and female) is to uproot our common Christianity, denying the divinity of our Savior, and rejecting the Bible as a myth, and a book full of contradictions. That these men are wise in their generation is evident from the fact that they have persuaded the Government to prohibit the Bible or any Catechism to be read or taught in our schools, so that the majority of the rising generation will grow up in ignorance of the great work achieved for them by Christ, as well as having no moral guide through life, and no hope hereafter,—in fact, perfect heathens. I am sorry to add that these principles are gradually insinuating themselves into our own Church."

THE GOVERNMENT of England has just made an important change in its policy in respect to the condition of Ireland. They have resolved to grant loans for the construction of drainage works in the distressed districts, which are now on the schedule annexed to the circular of the board of works or which may be scheduled from time to time. These loans are to be made upon more liberal terms than heretofore proposed; namely, to be repayable in thirty-five years, or perhaps a longer time. The number of years before repayment shall begin is to be extended, and the Government is to bear the preliminary expenses of such works themselves. They will also offer increased inducements to boards of guardians for the execution of sanitary works. If these measures be found inadequate to meet the exigency, the Government will apply to Parliament to sanction the appropriation of £2,500,000 out of the church surplus for the prosecution of relief works, to be carried on by the board of works, and to authorize the formation of baronial sessions to determine the nature of such works.

Le Voltaire HAS AN article in reference to the proposed International Freethought Conference, in which, after quoting the article which we inserted on this subject a fortnight since, the editor of Le Voltaire continues: "We believe that in no country of the world are Freethinkers so numerous as in France, but, in consequence of our oppressive laws against the right of meeting and association, in no country are they less united. Nevertheless there is, we may say, scarcely a commune in France in which there are not several Freethinkers on the list of its municipal council. Why should not these Freethinkers group themselves together by canton or arrondissement and department to bear the travelling expenses of a delegate charged to represent them at the approaching congress? It must not be said that, because up to now the right of meeting and association has been refused to us, France, which par excellence is the country of Freethought, should go unrepresented at this important congress." We thank the conductors of Le Voltaire for their support to our proposed conference, and we agree with them that it would be a matter for deep regret if the land of Voltaire, Condorcet, and Volney remained unrepresented in a gathering of European Freethinkers.—National Reformer.

THE FOLLOWING suggestion is made in the Secular Review in regard to a "Central Freethought Library for London": "Sir,—Seeing the daily increasing number of adherents to freethought principles, it has occurred to me that a freethought library in the city of London would not only be a great boon to those who have not the means of purchasing the many costly and valuable works relating to freethought in all its aspects, but would do much to help forward the objects we have in view, and promote friendly feeling and intercourse among us; this latter being wanting somewhat. Of course, I am well aware that, in the first place, a rather large outlay would be required; but this could be easily met by voluntary contributions, and I fully believe that more than enough would be found forthcoming if freethinkers were appealed to through your valuable paper. Besides a reading-room, there should be a 'social' room, where members could chat freely on anything they might think fit, and thereby generally promote good fellowship among each other. If you approve of the idea, and will undertake to receive subscriptions, I shall have great pleasure in at once forwarding you a post-office order for 10s. as a first subscription, and should the thing be taken up in earnest by your readers and others, I shall be pleased to hand you a further sum, as my means will allow. Yours truly

"PROGRESS."

Poetry.

THE SORROW OF BUDDHA.

The King said, "Come,
Sweet son! and I see the pleasure of the spring,
And how the fruitful earth is wooed to yield
Its riches to the reaper; how my realm—
Which shall be thine when the pile flames for me—
Feeds all its mouths and keeps the King's chest filled.
Fair is the season with new leaves, bright blooms,
Green grass, and cries of plough-time." So they rode Into a land of wells and gardens, where,
All up and down the rich red loam, the steers
Strained their strong shoulders in the creaking yoke
Dragging the ploughs; the fat soil rose and rolled
In smooth, dark waves back from the plough; who drove Planted both feet upon the leaping share
To make the furrow deep; among the palms
The tinkle of the rippling water rang,
And where it ran the glad earth 'broidered it
With balsams and the spears of lemon-grass.
Elsewhere were sowers who went forth to sow;
And all the jungle laughed with nesting songs,
And all the thickets rustled with small life
Of lizard, bee, beetle, and creeping things
Pleased at the spring-time. In the mango-sprays
The sun birds flashed; alone at his green forge
Toiled the loud coppersmith; bee-eaters hawked
Chasing the purple butterflies; beneath,
Striped squirrels raced, the mynas perked and picked,
The nine brown sisters chattered in the thorn,
The pied fish-tiger hung above the pool,
The egrets stalked among the buffaloes,
The kites sailed circles in the golden air;
About the painted temple peacocks flew,
The blue doves cooed from every wall, far off
The village drums beat for some marriage feast;
All things spoke peace and plenty, and the Prince
Saw and rejoiced. But, looking deep, he saw
The thorns which grew upon this rose of life;
How the swart peasant sweated for his wage,
Toiling for leave to live; and how he urged
The great-eyed oxen through the flaming hours,
Goaded their velvet flanks: then marked he, too,
How lizard fed on ant, and snake on him,
And kite on both; and how the fish-hawk robbed
The fish-tiger of that which it had seized;
The shrike chasing the bulbul, which did chase
The jewelled butterflies; till everywhere
Each slew a slayer and in turn was slain,
Life living upon death. So the fair show
Veiled one vast, savage, grim conspiracy
Of mutual murder, from the worm to man,
Who himself kills his fellow; seeing which
The hungry ploughman and his laboring kine,
Their dewlaps blistered with the bitter yoke,
The rage to live which makes all living strife—
The Prince Siddhartha sighed, "Is this," he said,
"That happy earth they brought me forth to see?
How salt with sweat the peasant's bread! how hard
The oxen's service! in the brake how fierce
The war of weak and strong! I th' air what plots!
No refuge e'en in water. Go aside
A space, and let me muse on what ye show."
So saying, the good Lord Buddha seated him
Under a jamba-tree, with ankles crossed—
As holy statues sit—and first began
To meditate this deep disease of life,
What its far source and whence its remedy.
So vast a pity filled him, such wide love
For living things, such passion to heal pain,
That by their stress his princely spirit passed
To ecstasy, and, purged from mortal taint
Of sense and self, the boy attained thereat
Dhyana, first step of "the path."

—From Arnold's "Light of Asia."

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JAN. 30.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

Mrs. C. H. Chase, $3.20; Charles Ellis, $14.47; Hon. Joshua Hill, $3.20; L. T. Ives, $3.20; Dr. H. Baethg, $3.20; Rev. J. S. Thomson, $3.20; T. C. Randolph, $3; Rev. A. J. Belknap, $1; Dr. A. A. Bell, $3; William Campbell, $4; Mrs. M. M. Ballou, $3.20; James Shaw, $3.60; W. H. Spencer, $3.20; R. M. Branch, $3.20; Alex. Cochran, $3.20; Samuel Brooks, $3; A. P. Ware, $3.20; Dr. M. Lilienthal, $10; Lucretia Mott, $5; J. A. Chantler, $1; Mrs. E. D. Lucas, $1.60; I. Kent, $1.50; Miss A. Hall, $3.20; S. B. Weston, $1.60; Huldah P. Robinson, $3.20; F. J. Humphrey, $3.20; Mrs. Dr. James Hogeboom, $3.55; Sophia B. Carter, $3.25; B. F. Kershaw, $3; E. C. Thomas, $3; W. H. Sherman, $3.20; Thos. F. Phillips, $3.20; S. W. Allen, $3.20; A. W. Harbaugh, $3.20; T. M. Hart, $3.20; F. O. Dorr, $3.20; E. G. Macgill, $3.20; H. C. Neville, $3.50; J. M. Douglas, $3; F. Plimpton, $6; Dr. F. Goodyear, $4.20; Mrs. A. S. White, $3.67; M. Michaels, $3.20; Miss L. B. Atwill, $3.20; Fred'k Loeser, $3.20; E. W. Keeler, 25 cents; Mrs. F. B. Sibley, 20 cents; Dr. A. S. Von Mayr, $3.20; Dr. M. Sanfield, $3; William Howland, $3.50; Dr. H. K. Oliver, $4.65; Mrs. J. S. Elderly, $3.20; Leonard Chandler, $3.20; E. T. Stuart, $3.20; New England News Co., $6.40; Lee & Shepard, 72 cents; John L. Whiting, $3.20; B. F. Underwood, $16; James Williams, $3.90; John Shackleton, $3.25; Mrs. S. S. Pierce, $1; John H. Titcomb, $3.20; E. C. Hart, $3.20; Mary N. Adams, $3.20.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEB. 5, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ARBOTT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, RENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENSFELDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N.Y.	5.00
A. FOLSON, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. PRESNO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York, N.Y.	5.00
GEN. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCOIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRS, New York, N.Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N.Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHSCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BARCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N.Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D.C.	5.00
GEO. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N.Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASE, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HON. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N.Y.	1.00
N. LEWINSON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N.Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MRS. FRANCOIS DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
PROF. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
DR. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00
MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERBILLO, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Bradentown, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. HISK, Winthrop, Iowa.	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N.Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D.C.	5.00

L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N.Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa.	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N.Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N.Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " " "	1.00
MR. GANS, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Maple Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	5.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford.	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston.	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa.	1.00
F. B. MERCER, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio.	1.00
DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston.	5.00
MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio.	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
MRS. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHN V. GRIEBEL, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
JOHANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRALEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN, " " "	200.00
MRS. A. B. PERCIVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
CAPT. P. S. CROWLEY, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
MISS MARIANNE CHRISTERN, New York.	1.00
MRS. CHRISTERN, " " "	1.00
MR. F. W. CHRISTERN, " " "	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " " "	1.00
MRS. MARY F. DAVIS, " " "	1.00
M. S. FROHNER, " " "	10.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER, " " "	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Tewksbury, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. HAYNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIE S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
R. B. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
C. W. WENDE, Cincinnati, Ohio.	1.00
MRS. CAROLINE A. TUCKER, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
HANNAH E. STEVENSON, Boston, Mass.	10.00
AVERY W. HARBAGH, Toledo, Iowa.	2.00
HON. FRANCIS SPRINGER, Columbus City, Iowa.	5.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
E. D. BURLEIGH, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
JAMES MCGRATH, Quincy, Mass.	1.00
REV. J. C. LEARNED, St. Louis, Mo.	2.00
W. C. FISK, Toledo, O.	2.00
JOHN CHAPPELLSMITH, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
MARGARET, " " "	1.00
MRS. HINCKLEY, " " "	1.00
THOS. MUMFORD, Sen., " " "	1.00
J. S. JOHNSON, Almont, Mich.	5.00
HENRY PRATT, New York City.	2.00
REV. JUDSON FISHER, Alton, Ill.	1.00
LOUIS PRANG, Roxbury, Mass.	15.00
PROF. F. E. NIPHER, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
MRS. J. S. EDGERLY, East Somerville, Mass.	2.00
MRS. H. HERMAN, New York City.	5.00
M. FRANK, " " "	2.00
M. COHN, " " "	1.00
S. GUETERMAN, " " "	1.00
G. ENGELSMAN, " " "	1.00
ABRAHAM HERMAN, New York City.	5.00
A. BLUMENTHAL, " " "	5.00
GUS. KAUFMAN, " " "	5.00
HENRY FRIEDMAN, " " "	5.00
MRS. LUCRETIA MOTT, Philadelphia.	10.00
DR. G. F. MATTHES, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
MRS. KATE GANNETT WELLS, Boston.	5.00
JULIA A. IRESON, Lynn, Mass.	10.00
ISABEL IRESON, " " "	10.00
EMMA D. IRESON, " " "	10.00
KATE C. IRESON, " " "	10.00
JAMES DILLAWAY, Somerville, Mass.	2.00
REV. M. J. SAVAGE, Boston.	5.00
MRS. S. S. AUSTIN, Cambridge, Mass.	2.00
F. T. STUART, Boston.	1.00
MISS L. B. ATWILL, Boston.	1.00
NANCY W. COVELL, South Framingham.	1.00
HULDAH P. ROBINSON, Allston.	1.00
MICHAEL NEALE, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
CHARLES COLLINS, Dayton, Ohio.	1.00
ADOLPH WURZBUYER, New York.	2.00
A. S. BAMBERGER, " " "	2.00
CHAS. L. STIX, " " "	5.00
H. MOSENTHAL, " " "	1.00
A. A. LEVY, " " "	1.00
ERNEST EHEMAN, " " "	1.00
CHAS. F. ADAMS, " " "	5.00
CHAS. C. LANE, " " "	3.00
ALFRED WOLF, " " "	1.00
ANGELO HELLMAN, " " "	1.00
HERMAN RAUBOMEN, " " "	5.00
PHILLIP NETTRE, " " "	5.00
WILLIAM STONE, " " "	3.00
L. N. ASIEL, " " "	1.00
C. A. CURTIS, " " "	1.00

MR. & MRS. T. A. KOHN, New York.	2.00
A. SELIG, " " "	2.00
A. LICHTENSTEIN, " " "	1.00
S. BURNHEIMER, " " "	2.00
FELIX HERSFELD, " " "	5.00
M. WALLER, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL SHELTHAO, " " "	5.00
ALBERTINA VON ARNIM, " " "	2.00
C. I. PRATT, " " "	2.00
G. H. PUTNAM, " " "	1.00
WILLIAM FRANKFURTH, " " "	5.00
OTTO W. FATTEVER, " " "	5.00
MRS. E. B. FOOTE, " " "	1.00
EMIL COLMIL, " " "	5.00
MAX NATHAN, " " "	5.00

Total.....$1,411.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

HOW SHALL THE HEART BE SATISFIED?

No reader of THE INDEX will fail to peruse Mr. Emerson's latest essay, "The Preacher," which we borrow this week from the Unitarian Review. It was our rare good fortune to hear him read it last May at the little Divinity Chapel, crowded to its utmost capacity. Behind the spoken word stood the MAN—the majesty of a character which lent a golden weight and lustre to every sentence—the purity and beauty of a spirit which made Charles Sumner, on his death-bed, call Emerson "the whitest soul of all," while the listening world said amen. It is only such a soul as this that can speak with power. Fortunate is the century which has such spokesmen—doubly fortunate if it be not unconscious of their priceless.

We purpose no discussion of Emerson's theme.

But we quote here these significant words:—

"In consequence of this revolution in opinion, it appears, for the time, as the misfortune of the period that the cultivated mind has not the happiness and dignity of the religious sentiment. We are born too late for the old, and too early for the new, faith. I see in those classes and those persons in whom I am accustomed to look for tendency and progress, for what is most positive and most rich in human nature, and who contain the activity of to-day and the assurance of to-morrow,—I see in them character, but scepticism; a clear enough perception of the inadequacy of the popular religious statement to the wants of their heart and intellect, and explicit declarations of this fact. They have insight and truthfulness; they will not mask their convictions; they hate cant; but more than this I do not readily find. The gracious motions of the soul—piety, adoration,—I do not find. Scorn of hypocrisy, pride of personal character, elegance of taste and of manners and pursuit, a boundless ambition of the intellect, willingness to sacrifice personal interests for the integrity of the character,—all these they have; but that religious submission and abandonment which give man a new element and being, and make him sublime,—it is not in churches, it is not in houses. I see movement, I hear aspirations, but I see not how the great God prepares to satisfy the heart in the new order of things."

That is the dignified, yet wailing cry of Transcendentalism, appalled at the self-assertion of the scientific intellect (or "understanding," as Emerson calls it), and at its inflexible rejection of "intuition" or "reason." "I see not," he says, "how the great God prepares to satisfy the heart in the new order of things."

Not flippantly, but with deepest reverence, be it said: "I do see how the great God prepares to satisfy the heart in the new order of things."

First of all, the crushing burden of contempt which Christianity and Christian Transcendentalism have for weary centuries laid upon the "understanding," in order to make room for "faith" and the intuitive "reason," will be lifted off forever; and the scientific intellect, with its "boundless ambition" to discover the truth of Nature, will receive the homage of all mankind as the only possible discoverer of that truth—a homage not unmingled with penitent tears that they have so long crucified their unrecognized Savior.

Next, the scientific intellect will pursue its restless way, climbing slowly but surely up from the elemental atoms and forces of the physical universe to the elemental atoms and forces of the spiritual universe, disregarding equally the haughty dogmatism of the Church and the cowardly agnosticism of the unchurched, and establishing at last beyond dispute the SPIRITUAL UNITY OF THE UNIVERSE, not on the treacherous quicksand of revelation, but on the solid rock of reality.

Lastly, the "heart" will twine its delicate and lovely tendrils once more, as it has always done, about the truth made plain; and future generations will smile with pity at the idle fears of our own.

That is the way (hidden from all but those who have boundless faith in the power of thought to answer all questions that thought can put) in which "the great God prepares to satisfy the heart in the new order of things."

AMERICAN HEROES ABROAD.

The following intensely interesting narrative from the Portuguese journal O Fayaleure, published at Horta, Fayal, December 7, 1879, and translated in the Boston Daily Advertiser of January 13, 1880, we are irresistibly impelled to share with our readers:—

The Storm at Fayal—Gallant and Heroic Conduct.

The night of the 30th November, 1879, will remain forever impressed on the memory of the inhabitants of this city. The wind, from S.S.E., unchained its fury and hurled the waves of the sea with violence against the walls. Thus the night entered. In the port were anchored two Italian barques, one Norwegian, the French barque "Jaques Cœur" and the English barque "Northern Queen." The little steamer "Fayal" plunged extraordinarily at her moorings. That morning the "Northern Queen" had anchored to obtain provisions, and also the "Jaques Cœur," which had arrived from Havre after eleven days' passage, to get the cargo of the condemned French barque "Mansait."

With nightfall, the tempest redoubled its fury. The roar of the sea and the howling of the wind were terrible. Naturally, fears for the fate of the vessels at anchor began to be entertained, and these fears proved to be sadly well-founded. The steamer "Fayal" was the first that the wind and sea dashed against the coast. She went to pieces in front of the Monturo, and her fragments were spread upon the waves. At 1 A.M., the barque "Jaques Cœur" dragged her anchors, struck bottom, and began to break up. Unhappily, held by her chains, she remained at a long distance from the beach. Here began the great scene of horror which that night witnessed. The ship's company, which were on board and without hope of being saved, numbered thirteen. The sea would have devoured all, had it not been for the efforts which were made on shore to rescue them.

The whole city resounds with the names of Messrs. Samuel Dabney and his son, Herbert Dabney. It was they, above all, who, at the risk of their own lives, plunged into the sea with ropes attached to them, and saved five persons, among them the captain, Mr. Fournier. It was not only the savage force of the surf and the distance of the wreck from the shore that rendered the work of rescue difficult, but also the great quantity of wreckage with which the water was filled. The peril was so great that at one time grave fear was entertained for Mr. Samuel Dabney, who, together with a shipwrecked sailor whom he had seized, was completely hemmed in by fragments of wreck. Other individuals are spoken of, who likewise lent important aid. We hear the names of Messrs. Domingos de Silos, Mausel Marianno, Cardoso, Fernando Oliveira, João Morison, and Campos.

Without offering the least disparagement of these, however,—for they did all they were able to do, and honor be to them,—truth demands that the self-forgetfulness and heroism of those two generous men, Samuel and Herbert Dabney, who did not hesitate an instant to risk their lives to save those of their fellow-beings, should be proclaimed in the loudest manner.

Mr. Samuel Wyllys Dabney is the American consul at Fayal, as before him was his father also, whose name is still beloved and revered in the island as that of its greatest benefactor; and Mr. Herbert Dabney is the present consul's son. We are proud to state these facts—proud to claim for our native land the generosity, self-sacrifice, and splendid heroism which have called forth such admiration and applause from the grateful Azores. The glory of their action in rescuing from death five of their fellow-beings, at the imminent risk of their own lives, redounds, it is true, to our common humanity, and adds largely to that general wealth of great moral examples which is the most precious inheritance of succeeding generations; but it is only just that special acknowledgment of it should come from those whom the Dabneys all love to consider still their "countrymen." Yes; their exulting country honors herself by claiming them in return as her own children. Heartfelt admiration of their generous gallantry, not unmingled with a still warmer feeling, constrains us to add one little laurel-leaf to the wreath they have so splendidly won.

In publishing in these columns, on our return from Fayal last September, an account of that charming island, we refrained, not without great difficulty, from all mention of the kindness and hospitality we had privately received from this whole-souled family and its relatives. It is a violation of the sanctities of domestic life, when travellers make no scruple of dragging the names of private individuals unnecessarily before the public; and we shrank from the intrusiveness and even impertinence of a public acknowledgment of private obligations. But now that the seal of privacy has been broken by a heroism so conspicuous that it becomes the public property of a whole community, and indeed of all mankind, we venture to seize this opportunity of relieving our own sense of gratitude for numerous acts of kind and thoughtful attention received last summer. They will never be forgotten. While men are loud in praise of the dazzling self-sacrifice which made father and son risk not only themselves, but also (what in this case was more) each other, in a daring and successful attempt to save the lives of foreigners and utter strangers simply because they were men, let it be understood that the public heroism grew out of private unselfishness, and failed not in the great emergency because its cause was rooted deep in the unobscured virtues of common life. Character is one, after all. The truest gentleman is ever the truest hero in the stress of sudden peril; and this law was never more nobly exemplified than in this instance. More than the general public can we admire this splendid action, because we know of what delicate consideration for the happiness of others, of what refined and beautiful and habitual self-sacrifice in private life, it is the natural product and fruit. And we are more than ever filled with veneration for the moral possibilities of human nature, when we perceive how its loveliest and its sublimest traits are thus indissolubly linked together.

LETTER FROM MR. HOLYOAKE.

[The following letter was addressed to Mr. Horace Seaver, but sent to us also, in the writer's words, "for insertion at your [our] pleasure."—ED.]

It is first in my mind to say with what curious interest I look back upon the nights when I spoke in Paine Hall, and with what pleasure I recall the eloquent speeches you made and the hours spent in your editorial room. Also express to Mr. Mendum that I remember all his speech at Chataqua Lake, and regret that I was never able to accept his invitation to visit him at his home. Of the letter you publish from Mr. Bradlaugh on Nov. 12, addressed to Mr. Abbot, and referring to me, it only concerns me to say respecting Mr. Abbot that I hope that gentleman will not suppose that every Englishman whom he has treated with friendship will write to him in the terms there used, because he has exercised his right of independent judgment upon a question of public policy different from that adopted by Mr. Bradlaugh. Mr. Abbot has extended to me many acts of generous friendship. On some questions he differs from me. I honor him the more for his independence of opinion. If servile coincidence or servile silence is to be the penalty of the offer of friendship, a man had better beware of friendship.

As respects Mr. Bradlaugh's attempt to pin Knowlton on the backs of the Secularists of England, I always answered that he had as much right to his opinion as I had to mine, and that he might hang a string of Knowltons round his neck, if such was his taste. All I asked was that I and other members of the Secular party should be left free to follow their taste in declining that decoration.

Mr. Bradlaugh sends to your readers a wall across the Atlantic, because I wrote a letter to the Times during his trial. I had told him that, if he represented me to the jury as a partisan of the book he espoused, I would set myself right with the public. He did so, and I kept my word. Your readers will like to see this letter to the London Times and Daily News. This was it:—

My name having been mentioned on Monday last, at the trial at the Queen's Bench, as having formerly published the book now indicted, permit me to say I was never the publisher in the sense of issuing the book by my own selection and choice. It was sold at my house in Fleet Street only as "agents" for my old friend James Watson, who bought it with thirty or forty other pamphlets which he printed, not I. This particular work was an old war book imported by him from America. As my friend Mr. Watson had suffered imprisonment for the liberty of the press in the "evil days" now gone, I thought it a point of honor not to refuse to keep on sale his works while he lived. The pamphlet now in question was a great improvement in taste upon many which the controversies of his time produced, but he always knew that I disliked it among freethought works; and very few were asked for at my house. When the late Bristol trial showed it was being put to base uses, I advised the last publisher, Mr. Watts, to withdraw it from sale, since what any one might find good in it can be, and ought to be, better written, and its advice should bear a responsible English medical name, and the book be issued by a medical publisher. There is no danger now to the liberty of the press in England: the only question is its use, and therefore we are all the more bound to show honor and wisdom in its employment. But I desire to say this without any reflection upon others, who are as much entitled to their opinion as I to mine, and, differing from me, have a right to challenge a verdict upon their contention.

G. J. HOLYOAKE.

However, it is not for me to complain that Mr. Bradlaugh tells you that my letter in defence of myself "secured his conviction." The assertion must be untrue; but it amounts to this,—that neither public opinion, nor the evidence of the book, nor the speech on the part of the Crown by the Attorney-General, nor the charge of the judge, nor the common sense of the jury, had any adverse weight: it was my letter alone that "secured" his conviction. He is not often so complimentary. The readiest answer I can give to the letter you have published is to ask you to insert the answer I have given in England in a letter to Mr. Bradlaugh, which has appeared in his own paper in June, 1877: the facts therefore are known to him.

G. J. HOLYOAKE.

The letter enclosed by Mr. Holyoake is as follows:—

Dear Sir,—In the remarks which you and Mrs. Besant make upon mein the Reformer of June 23, you must certainly speak in forgetfulness and misinformation. In various ways, I had given you to understand that my name should not be introduced, without explanation, as a publisher of the pamphlet you have taken up, as I had always thought it an undesirable book to have among freethought publications. After this, Mrs. Besant published that "I had printed it." I explained to her this was not the case. She never made the correction. The book was never my property. Mr. Watson printed on every copy that it was not published by me, but "for James Watson"; and he paid for all advertisements. On May 20, you say, "A correspondent draws attention to the favorable description then given of this book in the Publisher's Preface in 1854"; and my name is given as the publisher. Yet you must be well aware no line of mine ever appeared in the book. The Solicitor-General, you now state, mentioned the Reasoner at the hearing before the magistrate. I was not aware from the newspapers that he had mentioned my name. Had I seen it, I should not have thought it necessary to write to him, believing I might trust to your courtesy to prevent, at the proper time, any erroneous reference to me.

You have several times published that I was content to make profit by selling this book, and did not dissent from it then. Both statements are untrue. The sale of this book at Fleet Street, from 1854 to 1860, together with the more careful book of R. D. Owen, did not produce £6 of profit each. As I paid Mr. Watson £350, and as the sale of the small series of his books was all the advantage that accrued to me, the "profit" I made does not deserve the conspicuousness you give it. This accusation of profit is as groundless as it is unhandsome. Money might have been made by the sale of books such as you have taken in hand. Many were offered me when I was a publisher, but I refused alike to publish or sell them, or call attention to them; as is not known now for the first time. You sent me a shilling subpoena (giving the idea of a very cheap trial), to ask me, you say, whether the printing was not done in my house from Mr. Watson's plates. I should at once have answered that a question more devoid of truth was never invented. No person, unless utterly ignorant of Mr. Watson's way of doing business, could imagine it. You state last week that the book indicted "passed from Mr. Holyoake's hands to Mr. Watts"; whereas sixteen years elapsed between its being at my house and its passing to Mr. Watts, during which time I never saw the book.

You say I "sold the book when there was no danger," meaning that my objection to this book is not honest: the fear of danger explains it. Is this so? The danger I have been accustomed to encounter has been real. These are dainty days of martyrdom compared with those I have lived in. Scarcely a hundred shillings could be collected after sentence: now £2,000 of gifts and gain strew the path to court. There was privation, which brought death into my household, during my imprisonment. Nor have I ever since declined similar risks when useful. We had no tender jailers, or courteous judges, or complimentary juries. While, if you and your co-defendant are locked two hours in daytime in a magistrates' court, amid a shower of official civilities, we are all invited to weep in the National Reformer, and readers exhaust their pocket-handkerchiefs in wiping their eyes. We did not print apologetic prefaces with what we defended; we did not omit damaging particulars; we employed no one to put buffers or bolsters about indictable matter, enabling it to fall gently on the jury; we did not move to quash the trial or get up appeals to Courts of Error. We made a clean fight. Watson or Hetherington did not make pathetic declarations that some one had done them "grievous and irrepressible wrong" by simply writing in mere self-defence to the Times, and saying they had "never published the book by their own choice and selection." They did not squeal in this ignominious way. Nor did they insult those who were considerate to them, and, making friendliness impossible, complain that they do not help them. You should not compel these comparisons, by charging me with the baseness of acting from motives of fear and profit.

Do you not know that the reason why the Knowlton book was tolerated in its earlier years was because it superseded a coarser production,—Carile's Every Woman's Book, which brought so much mischief to the freethought party in his day? You cannot make it an offence that I repudiated a similar implication. Is it competent for you to approve the book, and not competent for me to disapprove it? Numerous persons who made sacrifices for the honor and repute of freethought before you knew it are opposed to this book. Am I, who counselled the party before you were known, to keep secular thought above suspicion, to stand silent when you—from what motive I know not—sought to pledge my concurrence with the book? I suppose I misunderstand you; for, if you really mean this by your complaint that I defended myself, I should say, to use an expression of Guizot, this would be conduct to be despised only that "it cannot rise to the level of my contempt."

I suppose the Lord Chief-Justice must have thought my letter to the Times and Daily News fair and necessary to my own vindication, since he refused to allow you to resent it. In it, as all along, while this indictment has been on hand, I have treated you with scrupulous forbearance and consideration. I permitted much misrepresentation rather than seem to prejudice your case. What independent support which did not confound Secularism with this Knowlton book, I encouraged. Discriminating support is all that can be given where freethought exists. To ask absolute coincidence is to appeal to the ignorant, the servile, or the timid, and it is more honorable to have abuse for refusing this assent, than receive credit for according a weak and degrading acquiescence.

Yours faithfully,

G. J. HOLYOAKE.

July 4, 1877.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD is lecturing in Missouri with his usual success. He will be in Boston for a few days about the middle of February.

REV. LEONARD BACON has shown considerable wrath toward a Connecticut newspaper, because it lately printed a very intemperate speech of his on temperance.

MR. HENRY W. ROBINSON, a member of the last graduating class of the Cambridge Divinity School, who has been in close fellowship with Prof. Adler for some months, as an assistant and a student of his work in New York, sailed last Saturday from that city for Germany, where he will spend two years in preparation for future labor in the interest of Free Religion in this country.

IT IS ONE OF THE STRANGE peculiarities of our American life that disreputable disclosures of conduct are often quite as likely to advance a person to wealth and worship as the opposite. As an illustration in point, it is announced that the society of Dr. Lorimer of Chicago, who was recently convicted of manifest plagiarism, offers to raise his salary from five to six thousand dollars.

REV. MR. COWLEY and his devoted wife are a couple of rare specimens of mock philanthropists. They were at the head of a professed charitable institution in New York, which bore the assuring and benignant name of "The Shepherd's Fold," with the pretence of caring for and educating little children. Recent disclosures in regard to its interior arrangements show a state of things of the worst description.

A FEW DAYS AGO Mr. Frederick Douglass, although opposed to the negro exodus from North Carolina, wrote for aid for the starving refugees to Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson, who, it will be remembered, presented the painting of the "Signing of the Emancipation Proclamation" to the nation. A day or two later Mr. Douglass received a letter enclosing a check for $250. Mrs. Thompson asks Mr. Douglass to use this money at his own discretion, and adds that "a little forethought and foresight and a little judicious management will often do more than money."

REV. J. G. ROGERS, one of the leading English Congregationalists of England, recently delivered a grand address in Memorial Hall, London, on "Some Perils of the Age." One of the facts on which he dwelt was the modern "worship of intellect" and the false liberalism which has sprung out of it. On its best side, he said, this was a reaction from the bigotry, exclusiveness, and narrowness, which in a former day induced a bigoted Dissenter, pointing to an Episcopal Church, to tell his son, "There, my boy, is where the bad people go to," and which induced a bigoted Episcopalian to declare, "I never pass a Dissenting chapel, but I turn my head and spit at it, and say, 'Get thee behind me, Satan.'" But it was a sham liberalism, which, because of another's bigotry, allowed one to become the victim of another offsetting antipathy, as obtuse and obstinate as the first.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK, notwithstanding the worst that is said of him by his enemies, appears to render some very useful service. According to a New York paper, a few days ago he succeeded in forcing the recently extinguished swindling "put and call" firm of Lawrence & Co. to make restitution in seven cases, the aggregate sum recovered being $845. One case was that of the widow of a soldier killed during the war, who, having been confined to her bed for a long time by illness, sent on $200—all she possessed in the world—in the hope of increasing it sufficiently to enable her to pay her doctor's bills. She gets it all back. Another man who had by the accumulation of years saved $1,000, with which he intended to start in business, was swindled out of the entire amount. Mr. Comstock recovered $500 for him. Two others received back $50 each, one $20, one $15, and one $10,—all poor people who could not afford the loss.

PROF. MARIA MITCHELL, of Vassar College, recently read a paper before the Cambridge Woman's Union on "The Collegiate Education of Girls." She says the girl who goes to college is self-reliant, loves study, has discipline, is of the best material, but is often not well fitted. She bewails the fact that so much time must be given to the languages in the preparation for college. It crowds all other studies into so short a space. To be liberally educated now, one must know the sciences as well. She thinks much pecuniary aid given to the student is unwise; poverty is sometimes salvation. Our colleges will be better when we have for professors the best men,—those who are fitted by long years of study in specialties. They will also be better when the trustees of colleges are sufficiently interested to know that they are trustees. It is a singular fact that the girls' colleges are mainly filled by girls from the country towns,—scarcely any from the large cities. The Harvard annex is a great movement, but there is not one girl from Boston or New York who avails herself of the privilege.

MR. FREDERICK B. PERKINS, an occasional contributor to THE INDEX, and a gentleman of genial character and varied and extensive literary acquirements, gave a recent talk to the members of the Mercantile Library Association upon "Wit and Humor." Wit was defined to be a something that deals with ideas, and there may be humor in it, but humor is something that may be painted in a picture or played in the theatre. Wit is bright thoughts tersely expressed, and sharp answers are sometimes witty; but wit is not always laughable, and certainly not where it is sarcastic. Epigrams are sometimes witty, and often satirical. The speaker illustrated his definitions with pertinent anecdotes that compelled laughter. Satire, he continued, is a kind of wit that makes fun of a person so as not to hurt him. Funny men would never succeed in politics, said Mr. Perkins; and the lives of several men who had failed in that branch of public life, because of being endowed with considerable mirthfulness, were briefly touched on. The speaker told of ancient wit, and gave several specimens of it, and said among barbarians wit has always been rough and vulgar, but as civilization advances it becomes more pure and refined. The speaker drew the line between true wit and absurdity, and ended his interesting talk by reciting a very amusing story.

REFORMATORY.

THE AMERICAN SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION, which recently held its annual meeting in Boston, although not more than a dozen years in existence, has already acquired a distinguished reputation. It is devoted to the consideration and discussion, by persons of competent and trained intelligence, of all subjects within the broad range of social improvement and general reform in this country. The addresses and papers at its sessions, as a general rule, are by those who have given much research or attention to the special lines of thought presented. The meeting above referred to does not appear to have fallen behind the usual character of preceding meetings in these respects.

In the absence of the president, Dr. D. C. Gilman, of Baltimore, Professor Francis Wayland, of Yale College, occupied the chair. The secretary, Mr. F. B. Sanborn, in his report paid a fitting tribute to Mrs. Mary Elliot Parkman and E. C. Wines, D.D., LL.D., two prominent members of the Association who had died during the year. To Mrs. Parkman was attributed the establishment of the school for nurses, now in successful operation at the old Massachusetts Hospital, from which a similar school at the City Hospital has sprung. The appointment of women on boards of public institutions also met with a warm advocate in Mrs. Parkman. Dr. Wines was eulogized for having effected a great work in respect to prison reform, and in securing the holding of conventions in its behalf in the principal cities of this country and Europe. A posthumous work of great value and laborious research, by Dr. Wines, entitled The State of Prisons and Child-saving Institutions of the Civilized World, is about to be published.

The report of Mr. T. C. Amory on "Industrial Education" maintained the importance of this kind of training, as shown in the fact that so large a proportion of the artisans of this section of the country are not natives of the country, but of foreign birth. The indisposition of those engaged in mechanical business to take apprentices was noted. The position of the city authorities of Boston as to industrial education was regarded as encouraging. It was stated that two funds, amounting to $500,000, would probably be available in connection with the project of the city, which contemplates an appropriation of $15,000 for a beginning. Professor Whitaker, of the Institute of Technology, made an interesting statement of what had already been done in this country relative to such schools, from which it appeared that the movement for such schools is very general.

The report on education, by Mrs. Emily Talbot, showed that new and improved methods of public instruction had been adopted in all the Middle States but Delaware, and all the Western States except Ohio and Missouri; while New England still follows, in many respects, the primitive customs of two hundred years ago.

In the department of health, a report was made by Dr. D. F. Lincoln, which recommended that all candidates for the practice of medicine within the State shall be compelled to be examined by a board appointed for the purpose, before being admitted to practice.

Mr. D. B. Hagar read a paper written by the Hon. J. W. Dickinson on county superintendence of the public schools. The paper advocated such superintendence. Among the reasons given was the desirability of having the public schools of country towns under such direction that they shall be more nearly equal to the city schools. The country schools are in many cases very deficient, and this fact has been an inducement in some cases for people to leave such towns, in order that their children may have better opportunities for learning.

Mr. James M. Bugbee, of Boston, read an elaborate paper on the origin and development of local self-government, with particular reference to that of cities. These papers were accompanied in each instance by able and suggestive discussions, calculated to quicken interest and lead to clear views and sound conclusions upon their respective themes.

Communications.

"DARWINISM."

IN THE INDEX for Jan. 8, Mr. H. C. Neville has some strictures on what he terms "Darwinism." Judging from Mr. Neville's articles, he seems to be in rather an uncomfortable state of mind. While dissatisfied with the old forms of philosophy and theology, he seems unable to comprehend the enormous scope of modern science, and always seems on the point of turning back to the old ideas and superstitions. His present complaint is Darwinism, but he begins at the wrong end of his article. He first vents his disgust at Darwinism, and then winds up by saying that its truth is not proved. The correct method is to find out first if a thing be true, in utter disregard of how it may affect our feelings.

I merely wish to suggest how Mr. Neville can prepare himself to write on Darwinism with candor, so that the disgust and partisan prejudice may be left out. For, by his allusion to the descent of man from monkeys, I am reminded of Prof. Huxley's saying that, whenever you hear a person say that Darwin asserts the descent of man from monkeys, it is a sure sign that person knows nothing of Darwin's theory. Let Mr. Neville begin with Lamarck and the author of Vestiges of Creation. Let him read all the books of Darwin, A. B. Wallace, Huxley, Spencer, Tyndall, Prof. Haeckel, with a number of such works as Prof. Gray's Darwiniana, and Prof. LeConte's on the relation of evolution to religion thrown in, and he will possibly have a wider outlook, and be better able to judge of the development theory.

It is true that evolution is not proved in the same sense that a theorem in geometry is demonstrated, but the evidence in its favor is so great as to make it practically accepted by the most scientific men and even by the most advanced among the clergy. Darwinism is only one branch of evolution, that relating to the development of lower or simpler forms of life into those organizations which are higher or more complicated. It is, in short, the differentiation of organs into corresponding functions. In the lowest forms of life, the whole body is one organ for the combined function of assimilation and digestion. Mr. Darwin is the main exponent of the biological branch of evolution, so that Mr. Neville has attacked the special instead of the universal.

So much for the truth. Now for the feelings. Mr. Neville refers to "the literal beastliness with which Darwinism invests human nature"—"it would degrade every conception of human nature"—"descent of man from monkeys," etc. But what are the facts in the case? In the first place, we are not descended from "loathsome reptiles." If Mr. Neville's grandfather was a monkey, besides being rather remarkable in itself, it would be a case of unusually rapid development; for even the ability to write against the grandest system of philosophy ever entertained by man would be more than even Darwin himself could expect in so short a time. The probable fact that it took millions of years for the homogeneous matter to become differentiated into solar systems; and the probable fact that life began in invisible specks of protoplasm, then from a single organ on through millions of years until the complex organism of the vertebrates was reached, and the delicate brain of man can speculate on his own origin,—all these facts do not militate against the grandeur of man's present position and capabilities, nor are they in the least a matter of disgrace. It is a fact that our bodies are composed of matter, of the same kind of chemical elements as those of lower animals and of the inorganic world. If that is degradation, we cannot help it.

Again, although the laws of heredity are strong, we know how very small a part of the parents physical person goes to the child, so that the body of man is really made up from the external world. If there chance now to be in my body an atom which untold ages ago was in the body of a "loathsome reptile," which atom before that was perhaps only an innocent atom of carbon in the leaf of a tree, where is the degradation? The line of life, or the power of assimilating external materials into a series of personal bodies, is certainly no disparagement to our present powers. Rather the reverse. For, if our ancestors were almost divine, the less merit to us for being inferior to them; but, if they were animals and savages, the more merit to the law of evolution for our being superior to them.

Does Mr. Neville go to Genesis for the origin of man? Assuming the theistic principle, what is the difference? In the one case, Deity made man out of matter, only a few years ago. In the other, He made man out of similar matter, but by a process of gradual development in immense periods of time. On the theistic principle, did not God create everything? Where, then, is the disgrace? I might even allude to the Scripture text about the clay in the hands of the potter.

Not even the possibility that millions of years ago our ancestors (in the Darwinian sense) may have had tails affects our moral consciousness here and now. Conscience, or knowing with ourselves right and wrong, is fully recognized, and its origin explained by the evolution theory. It is developed by experience, the only source of ideas, the result of the interaction between the organism and the external world. But the above "possibility" is only such. I must here refer to the error before alluded to. But the theory only claims that men are descended from a superior branch of an ancestral tree, of which gorillas and monkeys are descendants of similar though inferior branches. So that in that branch the tail may have been wanting, or, at the worst, rudimentary.

Perhaps even the catastrophe of superseding Jack the Giant Killer by "monkeys, hyenas, and snakes," would not be so terrible, if "the scientific expounder of man's origin" would defer his stories until children can understand their present surroundings, and the proper sense of that origin. If Mr. Neville would read carefully Mr. Spencer's works on sociology and ethics, he would see that the human race is only now reaching its full nobility through the altruistic principles of beneficence, justice, liberty, which tend to remove the brute-force principle of selfishness and tyranny. No, Mr. Neville should not feel degraded because millions of years ago his ancestors may have had permanent tails instead of wearing them on their coats. Go through all the noblest faculties of the mind, as love, patriotism, intellectual power: if we have them, they are, and we are not degraded, by the fact that they are the accumulated results of ages of experience. But it is also a sad fact that the physical tail of antiquity still crops out in the mental traits of humanity. In the same number of THE INDEX, Mr. Abbot says that "the human soul is still here in all its beauty and its tenderness." I hope that most human souls have some beauty and tenderness. But crime, meanness, ignorance, bigotry, and especially the tyrannical principle, recede slowly before the march of the human mind. Yet we expect, according to the great laws of evolution, that these mental appendages will become at least rudimentary.

Mr. Neville's two positions are, first, that Darwinism is a vague, unproved theory; and, secondly, that it is degrading. Suppose we admit his first position: I think he omits to state how, why, or in what manner the theory is degrading. He evidently makes the mistake that, because Darwinism, when improperly understood, may in certain persons produce a subjective feeling of degradation, therefore the theory is degrading per se, or in itself.

Perhaps one who is "descended from the brutes" owes an apology for criticising one descended from the gods. And I make it by saying that I mean no disrespect to Mr. Neville, and think that, if we should meet, we should be very good friends.

J. E. PECK.

Du QUOIN, III.

ROMANISM.

Wordsworth speaks somewhere of Nature leaving certain objects to a slow decay, that what we are and have been may be known. Romanism is a case of survival of this sort. It enables us here and now to understand the curious moral and mental condition of the mass of mankind, one, two, and three thousand years ago. It apparently survives to make us aware of the immense advance that truly modern communities have made socially, politically, and morally. In Romanism we have the past embodied, as it were, as a warning into what a low condition civilized society might relapse if the reactionary spirit were allowed to get the upper hands. In this country, Romanism is as much an exotic as it is in China; it is the religion of ignorance, poverty, shiftlessness, brutality, insubordination, and crime. One of the most singular historic facts of the nineteenth century is the revival of Romanism and ecclesiasticism which began after the fall of Napoleon I. It was, of course, caused in part by the Holy Alliance of kings and emperors, which had for its object the suppression of popular government and liberal principles in both hemispheres. The excuse for this Alliance was the excesses of the revolutionary spirit in France. Liberty was stigmatized as infamous. England, Prussia, and Russia, all three powers outside of the pale of Romanism, under the influence of an intensely reactionary spirit, actually restored old Pius VII. to the Vatican, after his long imprisonment by Bonaparte; who, if he had succeeded in his Russian expedition, intended to have suppressed the Papacy, and declared himself Pope-Emperor, uniting in his own person a civil and ecclesiastical supremacy over all Europe in fact,—for, if Russia had been conquered, all Europe would have been at the feet of the Corsican adventurer. But man proposes, and the course of things disposes.

A reactionary literature also came to the assistance of the Holy Alliance of kings and emperors who were bent on towing the modern world back to the status of the Dark Ages. Walter Scott, who was really, despite his Toryism, on the side of his reason and common-sense a thorough Scotchman, was on the side of his imagination and emotional nature a reactionist of the most potent description. Interiorly, he respired the very air of the Middle Ages. His Lady of the Lake, Ivanhoe, and Jacobite poetry and romances were mightier agencies of reaction than the Holy Alliance itself. They cast a spell over all Europe. At one period, everybody in Europe was reading the Waverley Novels. Even Dickens never had a moiety of Scott's world-wide influence. The lost cause of Stuartism was almost revived. The spirit of the ages of faith was rekindled in the breasts of the aristocracy of Great Britain. Then followed Puseyism and ritualism in the English Church. Wordsworth played into the hands of Romanism with his ecclesiastical sonnets. The two most popular poets in the English speaking-world, to-day, are sentimental Romanists. We mean Tennyson and Longfellow.

We have omitted mention of the reactionary movement in the world of literature and art in France and Germany called Romanticism. This was part and parcel of the Romanist reaction. Over in this country, the stalwart Vermonter, Brownson, became a disciple of the French reactionist Lacordaire, and reasserted in American speech the exploded dogmas of the spiritual despotism of the Middle Ages.

Other eccentric Americans have also followed the example of Brownson. Meantime, the immense emigration from the south of Ireland to this country, during the last forty years, has made all our large towns and cities only too familiar with Romanism.

Meantime, notwithstanding this cataclysm of mediæval bigotry and superstition, the cause of liberty in both hemispheres has prospered; and science and rational knowledge are becoming the watchwords of ever-increasing hosts in all civilized communities. Light and liberty are winning new trophies in every collision with the dark spirit of mediæval despotism. The Pope has been reduced to a mere priest and ecclesiastical authority. The Jesuits, those ecclesiastical tramps and Janissaries of the Papacy, have been banished from Germany, and are interdicted from teaching in France. Even in Catholic Belgium, popular education under the control of the State has become a fixed fact in the teeth of Roman ecclesiastics and their fulminations. Italy is united and independent; France is a republic; Germany also is consolidated. American slavery has been abolished; Napoleon III. is dust; and his empress, at whose instance the attempt was made to introduce Roman Catholic Imperialism into Mexico, is childless, crownless, and powerless. Her Mariolatry did her no good.

Thus have Romanism and Jesuitism lost in every instance, of late years, in both hemispheres. The latest Jesuitical enterprise of fighting popular education in the United States will in the long run bring those engaged in it to signal grief. In fact, there is no chance of the Bastille being rebuilt in France, or the fires of the Inquisition being rekindled even in Spain, or the instruments of ecclesiastical torture being brought forth from their dusty repositories for the suppression of heresy. Reactionary bigotry shows in such queer publications as the Catholic World that it has forgotten none of the nonsense of the Dark Ages, or of the pagan period which preceded the Dark Ages. But it stops short with an oral or printed reiteration of the nonsense aforesaid. It dare not proceed to put its detestable principles in force. It dare not bring out its faggots. Meantime, Bourbonism, Ritualism, and Romanism seem to survive to keep intelligent, modern, progressive communities in a constant state of vigilant activity, so that political and mental freedom may nowhere suffer detriment, but be continually promoted and strengthened over the whole area of civilization.

B. W. BALL.

THE ALLEGED PERIL OF MORALITY.

The increase of Liberalism, the decline of Orthodoxy, and the cultivated scepticism inculcated by science, have given rise to the prediction by "the faithful" of a "moral interregnum,"—a season during which immorality will run riot throughout the world. Goldwin Smith draws this conclusion from the present tenor of English literature, society, and politics.

This certainly is an interesting and important topic for all humanitarians, and we submit the following thoughts with regard to the cause and remedy for this threatened disaster to society.

The pertinent inquiry, in this connection, is, What is the true, the real basis of morality, in distinction from an illusory or fanciful basis?

If, with the ecclesiastic, we assume ecclesiasticism and its dogmas to be the true basis, then must morality stand or fall with the fate of those institutions. The assiduity with which this notion has been inculcated by ecclesiastics has created a large class who, having become sceptical of ecclesiastical authority or infallibility, have at the same time broken loose from their moral moorings, because they do not know of any better, more logical or necessary basis for ethics.

If, contrariwise, a more substantial basis for morality can be shown than the other, then must it follow that the inculcation of that system would prevent the predicted moral interregnum.

Speaking for ourselves and following a line of thought, which, like an Ariadne thread, has run through the systems of Socrates, Plato, Swedenborg, Comte, and Spencer, the most solid basis upon which to construct the edifice of popular morality is Science. Let any one examine the accessible data, historical and scientific, bearing upon this question, and then ask himself honestly whether a distinct system of ethics, antedating Christianity (probably contributing to it), and later evolving itself independently of it, has not been developed?

Are not the facts of nature and mind such that, following the scientific method, ethics are inevitably derivable from them?

May not popular morality be more substantially established upon the self-evident facts of nature and mind than upon the obscure traditions or attenuated arguments or abstractions upon which alone rests the authority of ecclesiasticism, and upon which they are contented to rest the fate of morality?

It is sometimes the fortune of Joseph Cook to prove too much for his own system, and to demonstrate the sufficiency of science where he apparently had no such intention; for instance, in his illustration of the conditions of spiritual peace by taking typical forms of man at his highest, the harmonization with conscience at its highest.

He represents himself as standing in the Louvre at Paris, before those masterpieces of artistic representation of human physique,—the Venus de Milo or the Slave sleeping in the Market Place. He asks a roué what would be the effect upon these of subjection to the temptations of European capitals. The roué replies that they would return unsullied, because they are too large to crawl upon all fours.

The proper inference from this appears to us to be that the immediate source of ethics is in the facts of nature and mind, and that science is sufficient for morality.

In the case of the types alluded to, their virtue did not depend upon obscure traditions or attenuated abstractions, but upon the conscious facts of their own organization. QUILIBET.

THE CONSENSUS OF THE COMPETENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Here is a good example of the employment of the idea—and in fact almost the very words—expressed by your happy term, "The Consensus of the Competent":—

"New York has all the appearance of being one of the most luxurious cities in the world, whilst the discontent of the working classes is often propitiated, if I may believe the general consensus of my American friends, by tolerating heavy taxation."... "First Impressions of the New World," by the Duke of Argyll, in Fraser's Magazine, January, 1880.

Very truly yours,

THEODORE STANTON.

TENAFLY, N.J., Jan. 23, 1880.

JESTINGS.

CAN RIVALRY between churches be called a steeple-chase?—New York Telegram.

"DON'T CRY, LITTLE BOY. Did he hit you on purpose?" "No, sir: he hit me on the head."

GIN SLING is the name of a Chinese student at Harvard, who is preparing himself for the bar.

A PIOUS MAN who can drive a balky horse ten miles without being set back ten years in his religion is ripe enough for a better world.

A NEGRESS, speaking of one of her children who was lighter-colored than the rest, said: "I nebber could bear dat brat, 'cause he show the dirt so easy."

"DIGBY, will you take some of this butter?" "Thank you, ma'am, I belong to the temperance society,—can't take anything strong," replied Digby.

WAKING UP.—Parson: "Rather drowsy weather this, Farmer Jones." Farmer Jones: "Aye, parson, so it be; 'minds one o' sermon time, don't it?"—Fun.

AN IRISH CRIER at Ballinasloe, being ordered to clear the court, did so by the announcement: "Now, then, all ye blackguards that isn't lawyers must leave the court."

"WHEN I PUT MY FOOT DOWN, I'll have you to understand," said Mrs. Nojoker, "that there is something there." On investigation it was found to be a No. 11 shoe.

A PRIEST ASKED of a condemned criminal in a Paris jail: "What kind of a conscience have you?" "It is as good as new," replied the prisoner; "for I have never used it."

"I SUPPOSE," SAID A QUACK, while feeling the pulse of a patient who had reluctantly submitted to solicit advice, "I suppose you think me a bit of a humbug?" "Sir," gravely replied the sick man, "I was not aware until now that you could so readily discover a man's thoughts by feeling his pulse."

ALARM HIS REVERENCE.—"I was sorry not to see you at church this evening, John." John: "Lor, you fritens a body zo, sir!" His reverence: "My mission is to alarm the unconverted, John." John: "'Tisn't that, sir; you sed in your sarment, this mornin', that 'twas no use trustin' to the common taters, and I never plants no other sort; so I've a bin down to the tater field to zee 'ow they be lookin'. Mine be all right zo vur. You shouldn't friten a body zo, sir."—Fun.

ONE OF THE secretaries of a Church Missionary Society, a distinguished man, was about to preach to a colored congregation, when he was introduced by the regular minister of the church, a black man, in these words: "Now, den, brudren, I'se heah to info'm you dat Brudah Blank is gwine to preach to you to-day. He is de Secretary of de Missionary Society, a distinguished an' a eloquent man,—in fac', my bruddun, he is a sounding brass an' a tinklin' cymbal."—Irish World.

A BOY'S VACATION LETTER.—A small boy was sent to the country to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter, describing his trip and boarding place, etc. A week went by, and his poor mother was nearly distracted, when she got the following interesting letter from him: "I am here, and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went in swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pocketbook, and I want some money; and I shall bring the pup home."—Boston Globe.

AN AMUSING ANECDOTE, of which Prince de Bismarck and Lord Odo Russell are the heroes, is published in the Vienna Neue Freie Presse. One day, when the English Ambassador was calling on the Chancellor, the conversation happened to turn on the numerous and annoying visits the latter had to undergo, owing to his high position. "How do you manage to get out of them?" asked Lord Odo. "Oh, I have several little dodges!" replied the Chancellor, with a smile. "For instance, I have arranged with my wife to enter the room and request my presence elsewhere, on some pretext or another; whereupon, of course, my visitor has to leave." Hardly were the words out of his mouth, when Princess de Bismarck opened the door, and told her husband not to forget that the hour for taking his medicine had arrived. The effect of the announcement on the Prince and his visitor must be imagined; but Lord Odo took the incident in good part, and, after exchanging a laugh and a cordial shake of the hand with the Chancellor, took the hint and his departure.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 to 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 to 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,

HENRY S. STREBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-ly, N.J.

J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism: Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Sent $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 50 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Saver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; address by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. M. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting, 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinckley, and C. B. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of Important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-ly, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS, SENT BY MAIL AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).....	1.50
ALCOOT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Mrs. Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols.....	3.50
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Field Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrations.....	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins".....	1.50
Under the Lilacs. Illustrated.....	1.50
Work: A Story of Experience.....	1.75
Silver Pitchers and Independence. A Centennial Love Story.....	1.25
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Chawl-Straps.....	1.00
Cupid and Chow-Chow, &c.....	1.00
My Girls, &c.....	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinafore, &c.....	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation; being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
Culture and Anarchy.....	2.00
Last Essays on Church and Religion.....	1.50
Mixed Essays.....	2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma".....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism; with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.....	1.75
Isaiah XL-LXVI. With the shorter Prophecies allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes.....	1.50
Isaiah XL-LXVI. With the shorter Prophecies allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes.....	1.50
New Poems.....	2.00
Bible Reading for Schools.....	.35
Higher Schools and Universities in Germany. With New Preface.....	2.00
BACON'S Essays.....	2.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.25
Lombard Street.....	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.....	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	1.50
Mind and Body.....	5.00
Logic. Deductive and Inductive. 1 vol. Cloth.....	2.00
Emotions and the Will.....	2.00
BARING GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages.....	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.....	.75
Eating and Drinking.....	.75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper.....	.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 81 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Moral Condition.....	3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. (Cloth, extra.....	1.50
A Book of Poems.....	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	1.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Book of Opals.....	1.25
CLARKE (Dr. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
CLIFFORD (Wm. K.). Being and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols.....	1.00
CLOPP (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	1.50
Childhood of Religions.....	1.25
COBBE (FRANCIS POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.20
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Idols and Ideals.....	1.50

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
GAIL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.00
Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	2.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Different Forms of Flowers.....	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variations of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth.....	2.00
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol. Cloth.....	1.25
Orchids.....	1.75
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization.....	2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.....	1.75
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede.....	1.50
David Deronda.....	1.50
Felix Holt, the Radical. Illustrated.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.50
Romola. Illustrated.....	1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner. Illustrated.....	1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.....	.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
Mayday and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasie Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols.....	6.00
The Unseen World, and other Essays.....	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Gerrit Smith.....	2.50
Life of Gerrit Smith.....	2.50
Creed and Conduct.....	1.00
Cradle of the Christ.....	1.75
Rising and Setting Faith.....	1.00
Visions of the Future.....	1.50
Beliefs of the Unconverted.....	.25
Sermons. Old Series. 40 numbers each.....	5.50
10c. 2 vols. half calf.....	5.50
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each.....	.10
Stories from the Lips of a Teacher.....	1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs.....	1.50
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Knowledge and Faith.....	1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	1.00
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.....	2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	2.00
Round my House.....	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River. The two in one volume.....	2.00
Wanderholme: A Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire.....	2.00
Modern Frenchmen. Five Biographies.....	2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner. R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts.....	2.50
Fishing and Boating.....	5.00
Hay Blount. Passages in a Boy's Life on Land and Sea.....	1.50
GALA DAYS.....	1.50
Woman's Wrongs.....	1.50
Summer Rest.....	1.50
A New Atmosphere.....	1.50
Sketching Birds.....	1.50
Wool-Gathering.....	1.50
Sermons to the Olergy.....	1.50
Sketches and Sketches.....	1.50
First Love is Best.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters.....	1.50
Verses. A Book of Edson.....	1.25
The Story of a Poem.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.25
Bits of talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks.....	1.00
Rits of Travel at Home.....	1.00
Nelly's Silhouette. A Story of Colorado.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life, Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Lamarckian Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
Critiques and Addresses.....	1.50
Physiography, an Introduction to Study of Nature.....	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.....	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.....	1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Form, Matter, Air, Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50
III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.50
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with Dissection on Aerodynamics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
X. Science of Law. By Prof. S. Amos.....	1.75
XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Marey.....	1.75
XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper, M.D., LL.D.....	1.75
XIII. The Theory of Descent, and Darwinism. By Prof. Oscar Rehnisch.....	1.50
XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. V. V. V.....	2.00
XV. Funki. By M. C. Cooke, M.A., LL.D.....	1.50
XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.....	1.50
XVII. Money and Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons.....	1.75
XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel.....	2.00
XIX. Animal Parasites and Mesomeres. By Mons. Van Beneden.....	1.50
XX. On Fermentations. By P. Schützenberger.....	1.50
XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Bernstein.....	1.75
XXII. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.....	1.50
XXIII. Studies in Spectrum Analysis. By J. N. Lockyer.....	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
China.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato, Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	8.00
KNAPPET (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.....	1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustine to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	3.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWIS (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. Problems of Life and Mind. Vols. I. and II. Per vol.....	3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind.....	3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method.....	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
A Fable for Critics.....	.75
Under the Willows and other Poems.....	1.50
The Vision of Goethe.....	.75
Three Memorial Poems.....	1.50
Fire-side Travels.....	1.50
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES) Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART) Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each.....	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	2.50
Autobiography.....	2.50
Memorial Volume of Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN) Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
The Ship in the Desert.....	1.50
Songs of Italy.....	1.25
MIVAT (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
Man and Apes. An Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol.....	2.50
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.....	2.00
Contemporary Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes.....	1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN.) Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a Woodpile. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.....	3.50
Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., completing the work. Four vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
On Missions. A Lecture Delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873.....	1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India.....	2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHILIPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Tragic Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Fear?.....	1.00
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Avice.....	1.50
Travels in the World. Illustrated.....	1.50
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.....	1.50
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds suggested under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHLLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.A., M.D., F.R.S.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.A.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. Logic. By W. S. Jevons.....	.50
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL.) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.25
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	7.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait of the Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	1.50
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Association at Belfast.....	.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	3.00
Vols. III, IV, and VI, each.....	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Sauterlings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.....	1.50
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.....	2.00
Widow's Bastard Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHITNEY'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	1.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldswaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Pantries. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems.....	2.00
Child Life.....	3.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.

VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving

Principles of the Ox Brain
and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.

A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive free attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Arute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

MR. CHADWICK'S NEW BOOK,

THE FAITH OF REASON.

"Of all preachers occupying regular pulpits as distinguished from lecture platforms, he seems to have completely emancipated himself from pulpit conventions. His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence. . . . When we consider their quality, we marvel for what reasons of the day can compare with these in richness, force, and beauty?"—Rev. Dr. F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

FOR

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,

23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?

11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. ABBOT). Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.

- VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77. Five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING

NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Koenen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.40 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE FAITH OF REASON. A Series of Discourses on the leading topics of Religion. By John W. Chadwick, author of The Bible of To-day. Pages 224. Price $1.00.

"His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit-teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence."—Rev. Dr. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 283 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederick Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Enigmas of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete Index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half Calif. $6.00.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

A CHEAP OFFER

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 9,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH

AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27th Year. A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS'

LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
 2. Max Müller.
 3. Emerson.
- For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N. Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR,

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest Inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all Inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & Co. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 529.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEB. 12, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

LIBERAL LEAGUE PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSSES.

SENECA, the preceptor of Nero, understood the difficulty of teaching the indifferent. He observed: "That can never be said too much which is never learned enough."

CONFUCIUS anticipated the spirit of modern science, when he said: "When you know a thing, maintain that you know it; when you do not know it, admit the fact: this is wisdom."

IT IS a matter of course that the repealers will not relish this issue of THE INDEX. But in the apt words of another: "When we want to drain a marsh, we do not take the votes of the frogs."

SUPPOSE that a "Christian" had murdered John Smith, but was convicted for the murder of John Brown, whom he had attacked but not killed. Suppose that thereupon other "Christians" immediately met in convention all over the country, passed resolutions of sympathy and admiration for the prisoner, and held him up as a signal instance of persecution for opinion's sake and a "martyr to religious bigotry." What would "liberals" have to say of such proceedings?

LAST SPRING a respectable New York journal, not intending to be unjust, referred to the repealers as the "free-lust wing of the Free Religionists." Since then the repealers have been making themselves still more disgusting to the public by their vociferous and fulsome eulogies of notorious public offenders. There is not a liberal or a liberal organization in the country that can afford to be indifferent to the practical disasters which frenzied libertinism is entailing on the whole liberal movement.

JAMES PARTON wrote to the Truth Seeker of February 7: "Here I am again with my monthly pittance, which I trust will find you in good courage. Every week brings new proof of the necessity of standing by Mr. Bennett to the uttermost and to the end. It has become the first duty of an American citizen." Notwithstanding his known character,—in fact, because of it,—Bennett is upheld more desperately and more clamorously than ever by the free-love horde, as their hero, martyr, and saint; and Parton heads the army of claqueurs. It is perfectly true, though Joseph Cook did say it, that "men are measured by their heroes."

REV. ALEXANDER B. JACK, D.D., of Hazelton, Pa., gave an address last May before the Massachusetts Bible Society, in which he made a notable assertion of the infallible verbal inspiration of the Bible, as follows: "The Bible is God manifest in language. The syllabic presence of the Eternal is in the Bible. The vocal abiding of the Almighty is in the Bible. Language breathed from everlasting lips makes up the Bible. If it is the Word, it is of course all the Word. All scripture—every sentence, every syllable, every utterance—is given by inspiration of God. What a sublime conception... to think that what is now enshrined in syllables was once enshrined in God! If it is the Word, if it is all the Word, then it is an unimprovable Word. To alter the Scripture is to alter God!"

THE Religio-Philosophical Journal of January 24 very forcibly says: "D. M. Bennett's admirers are loud in praise of what they call his 'noble and manly confession': to the observer whose mind is clear it would appear that, instead of confessing, he has, like the shrewd fellow he is, simply pleaded guilty, and urged extenuating circumstances. He is not the first offender who has played the same dodge when confronted with the proofs of his guilt. Only the week before his love letters were published, his Truth Seeker, in referring to a paragraph in THE INDEX republished from the Boston Herald, by the strongest implication asserted that the letters were forgeries: this shows how necessary was the publication of the evidence of his guilt. When he and his paper shall exhibit fruits meet for repentance, the Journal will gladly note the fact, and the decent portion of society will receive him on probation."

PROFESSOR TYNDALL, in his book on Sound, points out that modern science owes all its triumphs to the conscientious use of the intellect—an application of the moral idea of which the world at large has very little conception, yet which marks the distinction between the real and imaginary "truth-seeker." He says: "Those who are unacquainted with the details of scientific investigation have no idea of the amount of labor expended on the determination of those numbers on which important calculations or inferences depend. They have no idea of the patience shown by a Berzelius in determining atomic weights; by a Regnault in determining coefficients of expansion; or by a Joule in determining the mechanical equivalent of heat. There is a morality brought to bear upon such matters which, in point of severity, is probably without a parallel in any other domain of intellectual action." Yet questions of an ethical nature demand the same rigorous fidelity to the facts of the case, and the same "severe morality" in deducing practical duty from them.

THE MOST EFFICIENT auxiliary to the "God in the Constitution" movement, now to be anywhere found in this country, is the National Liberal League. How this demoralized organization is playing directly into the hands of those who desire to engraft Christianity into the United States Constitution is made very evident by the Philadelphia Christian Statesman of January 1, as follows: "The Liberal League of Ithaca, New York, which declined to secede with Mr. Abbot when the National Liberal League virtually put itself on the side of unrestrained circulation of obscene literature through the mails, has now determined to withdraw because the President, Elizzur Wright, of Boston, refuses to accept the resignation of the Secretary, A. L. Rawson, whose grossly immoral character Mr. Abbot has exposed. The history of this whole movement is most instructive. After years of patient, strenuous, and self-sacrificing labor, Mr. Abbot succeeded in effecting a national organization for the secularization of the government, and almost immediately was forced to abandon it, because of the profligate principles and conduct of the men who rallied to his standard, while only eight or ten out of nearly one hundred auxiliary leagues adhered to him. If this does not prove that secularism cannot organize its followers without imperiling society, we are at a loss to see what evidence could establish the fact. The conditions of success in the Liberal League movement were fairly fulfilled. It had for its leader and master spirit, editor of its publications and framer of its organizations, a man of culture and scholarship, of intense convictions, severely logical, of irreproachable private life, and well fitted in every way to command the respect of the public. Yet it has sunk in three short years into unutterable contempt and abhorrence because of the character of the men whom its principles attracted around it. Severer condemnation could hardly be passed upon any movement. Compare such a record with the history of Christianity. Even its enemies have been driven, in order to account for its success, to point out that its morality and its doctrines have in all ages, especially in its years of early weakness and poverty, attracted to its support the purest and best men of the races among whom it was proclaimed, and that it exerted a wonderful transforming power upon those who embraced it. After the French Revolution, a French politician declared, 'If there were no God, it would be necessary to decree one. It is impossible to govern the world without the idea.' The attempt of Mr. Abbot goes to show that even an attempt cannot be made to sever American institutions from the Christian religion, without endangering public morals."

AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N.Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Irvington, Ind.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HARGREAVE.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSANTHAL.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Ed. of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York.
 W. J. R. HARGREAVE, Ed. of "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....Chicago, Ill.
 COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill.
 DR. T. L. BROWN.....Binghamton, N.Y.
 HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa.
 MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City.
 MRS. AMY POST.....Rochester, N.Y.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.....Tenasly, N.J.
 MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....Lottsburgh, Va.
 JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N.Y.
 RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N.Y.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....W. H. HAMLEN.
 F. E. ABBOT.....C. D. B. MILLS.
 D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
 Arkansas.....JOHN AHRNS, Monticello.
 California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
 Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
 Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
 Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOBLT, Greenville.
 Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
 Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
 Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
 Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
 Iowa.....J. C. MICHENER, Ader.
 Kansas.....JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
 Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
 Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
 Maine.....D. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
 Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
 Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTLE, Boston.
 Michigan.....KARL SCHMERMANN, Detroit.
 Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
 Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
 Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
 Nevada.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
 New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
 New Jersey.....FRANCIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
 New York.....C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
 North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
 Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
 Oregon.....SAMUEL COLE, Humboldt Basin.
 Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
 South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
 Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRIOR, Chattanooga.
 Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
 Vermont.....R. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
 Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
 West Virginia.....DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
 Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
 Dakota.....D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
 District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
 Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
 Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.

D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL UNIONS,

Chartered by the American Liberal Union.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
 SYRACUSE, N.Y.—[Officers not reported.]
 ALBANY, N.Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
 BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
 PASSAIC CITY, N.J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
 JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
 ROCHESTER, N.Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Gale.
 CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y. MOSES HAYS, Rochester, N.Y.
 FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. UEBING, West Newton, land, N.Y.
 Z. T. WATKINS, Syracuse, N.Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N.Y.
 NETTIE C. TRUEDELL, Syra-FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, case, N.Y.
 GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MOSES W. DODGE, Albany, N.Y. waukee, Ill.
 J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N.Y.
 HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
 W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. HOPE WHITFIELD, Boston, Mass.
 T. O. GAGE, Fayetteville, N.Y. D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
 B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thordake, CHARLES ELLIS, Boston, Mass.
 JOHN W. TRUEDELL, Syra-cuse, N.Y.
 CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y.
 ERNE TURK, Chelsea, Mass.
 JOHN NILL, Watertown, N.Y.
 E. A. SAWTLE, Boston, Mass. M. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N.Y.
 THOS. D. GAN, Albany, N.Y. JOHN PREST, Albany, N.Y.
 JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N.Y. C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, K. F. HOLLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
 D. E. MOREY, Malden, Mass.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Dec. 12, 1879.

Voted, That, in the judgment of this Board, the name "National Liberal League" has become so widely and injuriously associated in the public mind with attempts to repeal the postal law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature by mail,—with the active propagandism of demoralizing and licentious social theories,—and with the support of officials and other public representatives who are on good grounds believed to have been guilty of gross immoralities,—that it has been thereby unfitted for use by any organization which desires the support of the friends of "natural morality."

Voted, That for this reason the Directors of the National Liberal League of America recommend that the name of this organization be changed to "AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION," and they respectfully submit this recommendation to their constituent Auxiliary Liberal Leagues for consideration and action.

Voted, That, since it is inexpedient to call an Annual Congress of this League at the present time, this Board will deem itself authorized to make the proposed change of name on receiving approving votes to this effect from a majority of the Auxiliary Leagues.

Voted, That the Secretary be instructed to send a certified copy of these votes to the President and Secretary of each Auxiliary League, with a request for immediate action thereupon; and to report to this Board at his earliest convenience.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Feb. 6, 1880.

Whereas, A certified copy of the resolutions adopted by this Board on December 12, 1879, was duly sent by the Secretary to the President and Secretary of each constituent Auxiliary League; and

Whereas, The reasons therein given for recommending a change of name by this organization have been heartily and unanimously approved by all the constituent Leagues heard from at this date; and a majority of all the Leagues on our list of auxiliaries has approved the name of "American Liberal Union," while one of them has expressed a preference for the name of "National Secular Union," therefore,

Voted, That the name of the National Liberal League of America be, and hereby is, changed to AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Prospect of an Apotheosis of Morals.

A CRITICISM OF GOLDWIN SMITH'S "MORAL INTER-REGNUM."

BY ROWLAND CONNOR.

When those who are not very young, nor yet very old, first began the study of geology, imaginations were very much stirred by pictures of the gigantic convulsions which once disturbed the earth's crust. We repeated the words, "the time of the upheaval of the Andes chain of mountains," or "when the Himalayas were first thrown up," and we learned to talk of the period of the sandstone formations of the carboniferous era, of the changes produced by the glacial epoch or the ice age, and endeavored to conjure up some sort of conception of the tremendous catastrophes and cataclysms of the past. It was by very slow degrees that any scepticism with regard to the reality of these gigantic convulsions crept into the geologist's mind, and only very recently has the truth been established that earth's crust in the past was subjected to the same forces, and only the same forces, which are in operation all about us. We have learned at last that present forces, given only time enough, will eventually produce phenomena as gigantic as any remaining from the unhistoric past; that to-day mountains are lifted up, strata deposited, and climatic changes are in progress. Whenever we look back upon the products of former geologic ages, we gaze upon accumulated results. The grand effects visible were millions of years in the making; and, while we look upon them, we practise unconsciously and of necessity the artist's trick of foreshortening. Cosmic convulsions were natural, if superficial, hypotheses of an early stage of study.

Now of course it goes without saying that no analogy between the history of the development of a material science and the history of the development of the civilization of human beings can be pushed into exactness. But, if not an adequate basis for a valid argument, it may serve nevertheless the purpose of a useful illustration; and we think we may assume general approval of the assertion that not only in geology, but in many other pursuits, we have learned to be sceptical regarding the reality of any discovery which requires extraordinary convulsions for an interpretation. We have good reasons for believing that a careful scrutiny of the present will furnish definite indications of the ways of the past and future; and when we read, as we do in Professor Goldwin Smith's article on "The Prospect of a Moral Interregnum," in the November Atlantic, that "a collapse of religious belief of the most complete and tremendous kind is apparently now at hand," we are reminded of the now obsolete catastrophes of geology, and instinctively question the reality of the occurrence of complete and tremendous collapses of any kind in the past or future, knowing full well that they are not taking place in the present.

"Moral interregnum" is the phrase which, in the article under review, does duty as an analogue of the old geological catastrophe. There have been three great moral interregnums in past history, and a fourth is impending. The civilization of Hellas was sustained by the religion of Hellas, and the overthrow of the religion was followed by a moral interregnum. The civilization of Rome was sustained by the religion of Rome, and its overthrow was followed by a moral interregnum. The civilization of the Middle Ages was sustained by Catholicism, and the downfall of Catholicism entailed a moral interregnum. Our present civilization is sustained by a reformed Christianity; but the apprehended collapse of religious belief will bring with it "a crisis in the moral sphere,"—in other words, we have before us the prospect of another moral interregnum.

It is apparent at a glance that Professor Smith can appeal to the sympathies of only a small audience, although he may excite the fears of a much larger one. All sincere believers in Christianity as a supernatural religion, that is, in spite of modern scepticism, nearly all inhabitants of the most civilized portions of the earth, will give but little heed to fears confessedly inspired by occurrences following the overthrow of the pagan religions of Greece and Rome; and no ardent Protestant will take to heart evil tidings predicated upon the immoralities supposed to have followed the downfall of Catholicism; and all Catholics will deny, of course, the reality of this supposed downfall. Many, moreover, who are sceptically inclined with regard to Christianity will recur to the hypothesis that the overthrow of the religions of Greece and Rome was an overthrow in appearance only. The argument is not yet given up, and is likely to acquire new strength by reason of some statements in Professor Smith's article, that Christianity itself succeeded only by adapting itself to, or incorporating with itself, numerous pagan superstitions; that the apparent displacement of one religion by another, therefore, was merely an improvement, accompanied with change of name, of that already existing; and that, inasmuch as religious downfalls did not really occur, the probability is that neither did moral interregnums occur, or, if they did, that they were referable to other causes than a decline in religious faiths.

It is by no means necessary, therefore, to accept our author's conclusions with regard to the present "prospect," even if we accept his theory that religious systems have been in the past and are to day the only vitally important bases of morality. Scarcely one of the facts brought forward to sustain his conception of the "prospect" but might be differently interpreted by careful examination; and his facts certainly are not numerous enough, nor is any one of them strong enough, to uphold the argument, if a few attempts of this kind should succeed. But it is because we believe that his theory of moral sanctions is fundamentally erroneous, and that it needlessly complicates many theological and social questions, and involves a mischievous muddling together of problems which should be carefully separated, that we are unable to accept the conclusions supposed to be derived from it. We believe that he has been deceived with regard to collapses and interregnums, even as the old geologists were deceived with regard to vast physical convulsions; and that the application of his theory has produced a number of powerful but distorted and unreal pictures. We believe that a better view of morals will show that we are really advancing toward an apotheosis of morals, —a grand and sublime conception; and that the prospect of a moral interregnum is but the ghostly fabrication of an unduly foreshortened and imperfect vision.

It becomes necessary, therefore, to consider the subject from a different point of view, and, that this may be done with any degree of satisfaction, to give a brief statement of a different theory of morals.

Every reflecting reader of travellers' accounts of savage life has been struck with the immediate break-down of all attempts to practise among savages the moral principles universally observed in civilized intercourse. The numerous and interesting volumes of recent African explorations contain abundant illustrations of this fact; and the explanation is always to be found on the same page with the fact. Savages, from the nature of their lives, from the primitive condition of their intellectual development, can have no understanding of our morality. This is evident from a description of any one of their characteristic customs. Consider, among thousands of parallel illustrations, the burial custom of a Central Africa tribe, as described, we believe, by Cameron. Upon the death of a chief, a stream is turned from its course. In the bed of the stream a trench is dug. The floor of the trench is paved with living bodies. Upon this foundation a platform is erected by placing men and women upon hands and knees. Upon this living platform is laid the dead body of the chief. The earth is then thrown back into the trench, burying living and dead together, and the stream is turned again into its original course.

Place alongside of this a relation of Stanley's. During his descent of the Congo or Livingstone River, he and his followers were attacked again and again by canoe-loads of savages, whose war-cry was "Meat! meat!" They saw in the explorer and his party only a new opportunity for obtaining a fresh supply of food; and we cannot wonder that Stanley speaks of the depressing effect upon his temper of thus being hunted day after day like a wild beast. But we must remember that all men out of his own tribe were to each savage so many wild beasts to be hunted and killed for food, if possible, and that he in turn was a wild beast to all of his equally savage neighbors.

A little reflection upon incidents like the above, taken almost at random from any truthful account of exploration among savages, will suffice to convince any candid person that a savage who is capable of indulging in these and kindred practices can have no conception of morality. Even if the recorded facts fail to be utterly incongruous with our ideas of the most primitive morality, we should remember that all travellers of repute tell us plainly that they omit from their books all accounts of the most revolting practices and customs. There is a lower abyss than any described in print, within the horrible depths of which the faintest moral spark cannot be kindled. All savages practise infanticide and the killing of the aged. They are inconceivably nasty and cruel. Nudity and cannibalism are two facts of savage life, the inevitable effects of which require a strong imagination or actual observation to grasp. But we need not pursue the subject. It is evident that savages possess nothing whatever corresponding to our ideas of morality.

There is a very important addition, however, in the nature of a modification, to be made to this last statement. Although the savage will remorselessly slay his own child in a fit of temporary anger, produced by some trivial or unavoidable accident (as in the case of the Patagonian observed by Mr. Darwin, who killed his little boy for accidentally breaking some eggs), nevertheless, he exercises a certain amount of rude care over his children. Did he not, his tribe would soon become extinct. Although, again, the savage will drink the blood of one of his own wives, and partake of the flesh of her roasted or putrid body, as was done by the Fiji Islanders, nevertheless he does make some provision, however wretched and insufficient, for his wives. Otherwise his tribe would soon vanish away. Again, savages are obliged to combine their individual forces for purposes of warfare and the chase, or they would be easily and rapidly exterminated.

Now it is evident that, in these relationships of the savage to wives and children and other savages, we witness very rude forms of human association; and it is equally evident that in these rude forms of association the germs of morality originate,—not morality as we understand it, not anything worthy of being dignified by the name of moral science or moral principle, but the beginning of that which is afterwards developed into a crude and low morality. There is, primarily, no sense of duty in the care of wife or protection of child or defence of neighbor, but the primary necessities of existence in time beget the obligation; and, ultimately, these simple obligations expand into a broad field of moral practice. But this is not the place to pursue the tempting theme.

Morality, then, is born of human association. If this statement be correct, and the zealous adherent of the theological theory of moral sanctions will admit that, without human association of some kind, moral practice would be impossible, it follows as a necessary deduction that morality will vary with the character of this association. This deduction we believe to be not only logically derivable from the premises, but to be capable of independent proof from almost every page of history. Where association is savage, morality is as undefined in character, and often as undiscoverable, as are the spores of the minutest cryptogamous plants; but as association modifies its character, becoming more intimate and intricate,—as, in other words, it exhibits more of the characteristics of civilized life,—so does morality change its character, exhibiting at length a massive and superb growth with manifold and extended ramifications, its fragrant blossoms the noblest deeds of the truest heroes of the most perfect civilization.

To prove that morality varies with the character of human association would be only to write out in detail a few of many facts, coming at once to the memory of every reader willing to recall his historical studies with this proposition in mind. We know not to what quarter of the globe or to what condition of civilization or to what epoch we could turn, and not find abundant proof of our proposition awaiting us. From savagery, through barbarism and nomad life to semi-civilization, and beyond and up to the most advanced form of present civilization, the statement holds equally good wherever the test may be applied. Where association is slight, but not savage, as among the Esquimaux, morality is simple, and may be called almost childlike. Where association is somewhat more intimate, but decidedly barbarous, as among most tribes of North American Indians, morality changes correspondingly. The morality of the nomad tribe is markedly different from that of the agricultural community, although sometimes it may be difficult to decide as to which represents the most advanced form. In industrial and commercial communities, we have, of course, the most intimate and varied forms of association, and, correspondingly, the most varied forms of moral practice and the most highly developed systems of morals. It should be borne in mind, moreover, that in communities of the completest civilizations and most complex codes of morals we are liable to meet with great fluctuations of moral practice, because of the infinite number of forces constantly exerted to vary the temporary requirements and even permanent character of the civilization.

An important application of our theory of morals is now to be made. If morality is born of human association and varies with the character of this association, it follows as a legitimate corollary that morality will be influenced in its variations by pronounced alterations in any of the more important constituents of the association; and as religion, thus far in history, has been inseparably connected with all human association, does it not follow, again, that fundamental alteration in religious belief will of necessity affect morality?

We are thus brought face to face with the chief question at issue in the present discussion, and, as thus stated, we give unhesitatingly an affirmative answer. Religious beliefs have been important factors, without doubt, in the history of civilization, and changes therein, equally without doubt, influence morality. Thus far we go willingly with all advocates of the theological theory of morals, but not one step farther. Religious belief influences morality. It is also a development of human association in its earlier forms, and, if not a development, at least a concomitant of its later forms. The sincerest believers in the Christian religion as a supernatural revelation are most zealous in declaring that the revelation could not have been given until the world was ready for its reception; that is, until human association had acquired a sufficiently intimate character. But while religion has thus grown with human growth, and has been an important adjunct of morality, it has not been the basis of morality. This is the fundamental error of our author. At times religion has gone hand in glove with morality, and at times they have fought against one another. The great mistake is made when two elements of civilization of close historical assimilation, but of independent origin, are considered as cause and effect; and then from this mistaken assumption the equally mistaken inference is drawn, that the one cannot live independently of the other. Religion is not, we maintain, the fundamental basis of morality. African tribes, like the one whose chief's burial ceremony has been mentioned, have an abundance of religion,—of a beastly kind, indeed, but religion, nevertheless,—but no morality. On the other hand, the small nomadic tribes of Northern Patagonia have a considerable amount of very fair morality; but all the religion that a dweller in their tents was able to discover was a few words of jargon repeated at the salutation of each new moon. Reared together and intimately associated religion and morality have been; but their development has not been strictly synchronous, and religion has not been even the most important factor in moral variation.

If challenged here, as of course we should be, to name anything of more importance than religion in its influence upon morality, we reply that war has always influenced morality more than religion. Proof of this assertion is almost self-evident,—completely so, in fact, to one who does not look through the colored lenses of theological spectacles. The practice of the best morality is possible only in a community at peace. The moment a nation goes to war, its morality breaks down, and no religion yet developed or revealed has been able to keep it from breaking down. With the single exception of Mohammedanism, the great religious systems of the world—those of Buddha, Confucius, Jesus—are adapted only to peaceful times, and the morals associated with them can be practised only in peaceful times. But the moment any nation goes to war, although faith in its religion may be as strong as ever, and in time of religious wars even stronger than ever before, the accepted moral principles of the nation are at once thrown overboard. Every religious system of any value at the present day sanctions at least the moral precepts of the old Jewish system, "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods"; but, when the most Christian nation engages in war, it becomes the immediate duty of its people to kill, to steal, to covet and destroy their neighbors' goods to the extent of their ability. Warfare in fact has its morality, cruel, deceptive, and bloodthirsty, but a morality nevertheless, and a necessary morality, moreover, whenever war is itself a necessity. This is not the place for a justification of defensive warfare. Its rightfulness, however, is practically admitted by all existing nations, notwithstanding the doctrinaire maxims of a few philanthropists, who, if their own doctrines were universally accepted for five years' time by their own countrymen, would quickly illustrate the falsity of their dogmas when tried by the theory of the survival of the fittest, for some other nation would seize the opportunity to pounce upon them and gobble them up. We assume that defensive wars, at least, are as yet a necessity of our immature civilization, and, so long as war is necessary, it will be found that no religion is strong enough to uphold during its continuance the morals of peace.

The most ferocious wars of modern history, moreover, have been religious wars, not only those between Mohammedans and Christians in South-eastern and South-western Europe, but those in France, in the Netherlands, in Germany, wherein all the combatants were followers of the prophet of Nazareth, and fought in the name of a religion which sanctions only the peaceful morality of the Sermon on the Mount. Religion, therefore, has not only been unable to sustain morality against the inevitable deteriorations of war, but has itself been the sole cause of many of the most inhuman wars of history.

Commercial intercourse is another actor on morality of great and growing influence for good, fostering it where religion fails. The ignorant Bulgarian Christians were scarcely prevailed upon yesterday to accord to the Jews the simple rights which their religion commands them to give to all men; and they yielded at last to the wishes of the great nations of Europe (who in this respect were all Bulgarians once), because the Jews have now become a commercial necessity. The single Jewish house of the Rothschilds has had more influence upon some phases of moral practice in Europe than all the priests of all the churches; and their influence has come from the necessities of commerce. The now prevailing humane treatment of the Jews, it may be said, is due to the general decrease of religious bigotry; but the loss of religious bigotry is itself largely due to commercial intercourse. The influence of commerce upon morality is seen also in the fact that there is scarcely a single great commercial or banking house of London or New York, the word of which, once given, would not be observed as sacredly as its bond; whereas the word and the bond of agricultural or non-commercial communities will go to everlasting perdition on very slight provocation. It is a significant fact that, with very few exceptions, the repudiating States and towns of the United States are not upon the seaboard. Commercial honor enforces a more rigid obedience to many moral precepts than religion.

Another agent against which religion often fails to hold its own as regards influence on morality is tribal or, more properly, race temperament, under which head we group the many factors—climate, inheritance, etc.—by which race temperament is formed. We mention only in proof the facts that the morals of Spain are not the morals of Ireland, those of Ireland are not those of Southern Germany, and those of South America and Mexico are not those of the first three countries, although in all of these countries or parts of countries precisely the same religion prevails. Again, Dr. H. W. Bellows states that, when taunted by the Mohammedan boys of Upper Egypt as a Christian, and he reflected upon what the name signified to those who used it, who associated with it only the immoral and superstitious practices of the ignorant sects about them, he was for the first time in his life ashamed of the Christian name. Hosea Biglow was correct in his observation that—

"Ther's a wonderful power in latitude
To shift a man's morril relations an' attitude;"—

a power, we may add, not only wonderful in itself, but uncontrollable by religion.

We omit here all but a reference to social restraints, often more influential than religion,—personal ambition, a regard for children, etc.,—confident that enough has already been presented to prove that religion is not always the most important agent in moral variation, and that morality and religion, therefore, do not necessarily stand or fall together.

But to the above we must add another important word; namely, that not only are other agencies oftentimes more important than religion, but (a very difficult fact for the champions of the religious basis of morals to face) the power admittedly exercised by it has often been a pernicious power. Of this fact any ecclesiastical history will furnish abundant proof. The asceticism of the early Christian Church, under the influence of which hundreds of thousands deserted their homes and wasted life in deserts and caves, had a powerful and most poisonous influence upon morality. The lives of Saints Anthony, Pacho mins, Benedict of Mersia, Abraham, Mary of Egypt, and others, are instructive illustrations of this destructive influence. Gibbon states that "the progress of this monastic movement was not less rapid or universal than that of Christianity itself"; and Mr. Lecky says that "there is perhaps no phase in the moral history of mankind of a deeper or more powerful interest than this ascetic epidemic. A hideous, sordid, and emaciated maniac, without knowledge, without patriotism, without natural affection, passing his life in a long routine of useless and atrocious self-torture, and quailing before the ghastly phantoms of his delirious brain, had become the ideal of the nations which had known the writings of Plato and Cicero and the lives of Socrates or Cato." The highest model of the Christian saint for several centuries was Saint Simeon Stylites, who began his career by breaking his father's heart, and who, twenty-seven years afterwards, murdered his mother by his cruelties. "It would be difficult to conceive a more horrible or disgusting picture than is given of the penances by which this saint commenced his ascetic career. He had bound a rope around himself, so that it became imbedded in the flesh which putrefied around it. A horrible stench exhaled from his body, and worms dropped from him whenever he moved." His performances upon pillars have been too often described to need repetition. For a whole year he stood upon one leg, the other being covered with hideous ulcers; and for thirty years he continued to indulge in like filthy gymnastics, a detailed description of which the necessities of no decent argument can justify. Consider what must have been the moral influence of Christianity, when this disgusting brute was everywhere held up as the ideal man, the most perfect model of Christian excellence! The same spirit was universal. Saint Jerome's exhortation to Heliodorus to desert his family, if repeated to-day, would disgrace a Zulu. The ascetic epidemic lasted for centuries, and its influence taints the practical morality of Christianity to day.

More modern illustrations of this point are not wanting. A recent traveller in Syria, for instance, tells us that it is almost impossible in some parts of that country to secure the conviction of a thief or murderer. Mohammedans, Jews, and various Christian sects,—Catholics, Maronites, Greeks, etc.,—live in close proximity. All are intensely bigoted, the Mohammedans perhaps being least so; and each sect, as a religious duty, shelters the reprobates among its own members from prosecution by those of any other sect. Here religion directly fosters immorality; and illustrations of this fact are so abundant in past history and present action that an inquirer will soon cease to wonder at the late Professor Clifford's extreme assertion, that "historical Christianity, as a social system, invariably makes men wicked when it has full swing."

Professor Clifford, by the way, has been cudgelled by a writer in a recent number of Fraser for his statement that "Spain, the middle and south of Italy, and Greece are countries of which the population consists chiefly of habitual thieves and liars, who are willing opportunely to become assassins for a small sum." Now, if there are any countries on the face of the earth which should be thoroughly saturated with religious influences, certainly they are those just named; and just as certainly even, if the sweeping language above quoted be incorrect, not one of them is, to say the least, preëminent for morality. In the single province of Granada there were, during three months of 1875, no less than four hundred murder cases, and probably therefore a still greater number of murders; and in Italy, according to ministerial report, there were last year more than two thousand murders and over ninety thousand ordinary robberies, highway robberies, and burglaries. So great an amount of immorality as must prevail where these figures are officially reported will scarcely be known, we venture to suppose, even in that community in which "evolutionists" and "positivists" first got the upper hand, in the immoral times that are supposed to be before us.

As a last though not least illustration of the deleterious influence of religion on morals, it should be remembered that Mr. Galton has clearly shown that it is to religion that the degeneracy of Spain is in great measure due. For a long time the Inquisition stamped out every original thinker and all men of the least independence of spirit; and the priesthood, which not unnaturally attracted any first-class men whom the Inquisition might have spared, forbade its incumbents to establish legitimate families. Thus for centuries Spain positively inverted the law of natural selection. Under the mandate of religion, the best were exterminated, and the least fit were selected to survive and propagate. Could the most devilish spirit of irreligion invent anything worse than this?

A brief examination of some statements and admissions in Professor Smith's article, which appear to weaken the force of its conclusions, may here be made. We are informed, for instance, that "the moral civilization of Hellas in her earlier and brighter days was supported by her religion"; but this religion, we are subsequently informed, was "primitive and tribal," entangled with a gross mythology, immoral legends, a worship of sacrifices, a thaumaturgical priesthood, an infantine cosmogony, a polytheistic division of the physical universe into the domains of a number of separate deities." Surely we have a right to ask for very decided proofs that the morality supported by so weak a religion was any better than that which succeeded the religion's fall, especially when we are told that the religion "fell before awakened intellect and the first efforts of scientific speculation." Do an awakened intellect and scientific speculation beget immoralities?

No proofs of any moral interregnum are here with the exception of a reference to a description by Thucydides of the immoralities attending the civil war of Corcyra (which are referred by Thucydides himself to "faction and ambition," and for which, as shown above, the war itself may have been a sufficient cause); a reference to the sophists, which certainly proves nothing; and an admission that Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle were products of this period of decay. We need only add, by way of comment, that not a few very religious men would be willing to hail the coming of almost any kind of an interregnum which should give the world another three such names as these; and that we greatly wonder that Hellenic morality could so long endure the strain of being mixed up with so "primitive" a religion.

We cannot say that the argument gains any strength as tested by Roman history. "Roman religion," we are told, "like that of Hellas, succumbed, and to forces similar in the main"; that is, to "awakened intellect" and "scientific speculation." Cannot these, we are again tempted to ask, be consistent with religious faith? But the writer adds the sentence: "Practical good sense probably played a more important part in the overthrow of superstition at Rome than in Hellas." But this "superstition," which is thus opposed by "practical good sense," is the religion of Rome. What follows? Is practical good sense opposed to religion? Does superstition prevent a moral interregnum? Or does practical good sense produce a moral interregnum? Or is Christianity only a superstition? Why, we may well inquire, does our author refer to Rome at all? Either his illustration is without any pertinency whatever, or else Christianity is a superstition opposed to practical good sense. If this be the case, let us pray for the moral interregnum to come, and come quickly; for, according to the course of history as thus interpreted, it will probably be followed by an improved superstition, which will be provisionally mistaken for a true religion, and can be used therefore by its adherents to bolster up a new morality.

The admission is made, with reference to Rome, that "a tremendous strain was laid on public morality by the circumstances of the empire,"—tremendous enough, we may add, to account for any moral lapses that may have taken place. But how shall we account for the fact, consistently with the theory under examination, that Cato and Cicero, and Seneca, Marcus Aurelius, Epictetus, and the Stoic philosophy, were all born during this decaying period? It is a very dreary attempt to account for these men and their teachings to assert that "Christian ideas were no doubt in the air." What is meant by "in the air," if not that some of the noblest moral systems the world has ever known were preached and practised independently of the sanctions of any religious system?

What is said of the moral interregnum following the religion of the Middle ages we should scarcely refer to, were it not for the very curious statement that "Catholicism fell through the superstitions and impostures which had gathered round it, and which intellect awakened by the Renaissance spurned away. . . . With it fell the morality which it had sustained, and once more we find ourselves in a moral interregnum." For the third time in Professor Smith's article, we here meet with the astonishing statement that an awakened intellect produces or helps to produce a moral interregnum. For the obvious and logical inferences from this statement we refer to the good sense of each reader.

This last moral interregnum is supposed to cover the period reaching from the time of the Borgias in Italy to the advent of the Puritans in England,—a long and eventful period, the characteristics of which cannot be summed up in a paragraph or even in an article. We shall only add, therefore, that the terrible wars of this period, almost invariably fought in the name of religion, and the revolutions necessarily attending the process of nation-making, will, in our opinion, readily account for any observed disturbances of morality.

A careful examination of the rest of Professor Smith's article will show that he is chiefly troubled by two facts: first, that science and criticism have undermined the supernatural foundations of Christianity; and, secondly, England's treatment of inferior nations. With regard to the second, we need say nothing. With regard to the first, the fear is that this undermining of superstitions (for as "superstitions" they are regarded by Professor Smith) will lead to immoralities mostly in the form of inhumanity. "What," it is asked, "will become of the brotherhood of man and of the very idea of humanity? Historically, these beliefs are evidently Christian. Will they survive the doctrines with which in the Christian creed they are inseparably connected?" To which we reply, Historically, these beliefs are not Christian. The very passage quoted by Professor Smith from the New Testament, and with reference to which he asks, "On what other basis do they rest?" proves the contrary; for the passage ("God hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth") is taken from Paul's speech at Mars' Hill in Athens, and Paul supports his own assertion by saying: "As certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring." In other words, the doctrines were already familiar to Paul's hearers, being contained in their own literature,—a much more substantial and satisfactory place of deposit, we take the liberty of supposing, than "in the air," where Professor Smith was apparently well content to find them in a previous paragraph. Humanity, to-day, is not only "in the air," and in Pagan as well as Christian literature, but is firmly implanted in the hearts of men, and its influence is broadening with every generation. English treatment of the Zulus may of itself be bad enough to justify the taking of a pessimistic attitude towards the prospects of modern morality; but we cannot help wondering a little that, when recording the fact that the chief protest against the Zulu and Afghanistan wars came from the Comtists,—that is, from the "positivists," the "agnostics," the "evolutionists," the very people whose sceptical tendencies are undermining the religious basis of morals,—and not from the Christians, Professor Smith should coolly number them among "religious" people who "prefer the name of Humanity to that of God." A passage like this begets an uncomfortable suspicion that the entire article may have led us only upon a wild-goose chase after names instead of things.

As a last inquiry, Is there really any sufficient reason for apprehending an immediate and tremendous collapse of religious belief? Of the religious beliefs of the untold millions inhabiting Asia, our knowledge is not very accurate; but what little we possess does not justify the expectation of any immediate collapse. The recently discovered millions of Central Africa will perhaps undergo a somewhat rapid change from various forms of Paganism to Mohammedanism and Catholicism and some of the more superstitious forms of Christianity. South America, Central America, and Mexico will not be relieved of the incubus of an ignorant Catholicism during the present generation. The sceptical ideas which our author dreads have as yet obtained a firm hold, with rare exceptions, only among a small but increasing minority of the people of Great Britain, Germany, France, and the United States, the mass of the people of these countries being wedded as firmly as ever, apparently, to those dogmas of the Church which are supposed to be, and indeed really are, in a state of incipient decay. The terrible beings termed "agnostics," "positivists," "believers in natural selection and the struggle for existence," "evolutionists," and "materialists" (no discrimination is attempted with regard to these classes, which embrace apparently only those having a little knowledge of natural science and Biblical criticism), may be the coming rulers of the world, but they have many years before them ere they grasp power, and (a fact which should take something of its keenness from the sharp edge of despair) they are to be found only in those parts of the world which are as yet preëminent for morality; and, a fact of far greater moment, these terrible beings are themselves included among the most eminent supporters of morality. This is admittedly true of England; and in the United States we can affirm, from personal knowledge, that the anti-slavery reform was mainly in the hands of men and women who were at least "loose" in their theology, and that no one of our many reform and philanthropic movements can be mentioned but numbers them plentifully among its active workers. In fact, a plausible argument might be framed to show that, from the last interregnum up to the present time, almost exactly in proportion as religious faith declines, moral enthusiasm takes its place. It may be, as suggested, that this vivid humanitarianism exists only because of the influence of "the penumbra of gospel morality," from which the next generation will be free; but this supposition cannot be entertained by one who believes that every advance in civilization is of necessity accompanied by a strengthening of moral ties, and that the next generation will accordingly be more firmly moral than the present, unless civilization itself, by reason of great wars or epidemics or other unforeseen calamities, should unexpectedly and temporarily deteriorate.

We affirm, therefore, a positive belief that the prospect is one of genuine encouragement; and with this affirmation we file the declaration that we are not optimists nor enthusiasts. Of course nothing true in Christianity can ultimately be lost; but the decay of the superstitions associated with it will not be as rapid, nor will an apotheosis of morals be as soon reached, as many good people may fear in the one case, or as all may wish in the other. We conclude our article with a few reasons for believing that we may "front face" with good courage.

The prospect of a purely industrial civilization in those parts of the world already civilized is before us, although the promised land is not yet attainable. This means that that great debaser of morals—war—will become less frequent. Already the great nations of Europe are pretty distinctly marked out by natural barriers, alike geographical and ethnic; and, as these lines become more clearly defined and recognized, the uselessness of war will become more apparent. The costliness of war, moreover, will become more and more unendurable; and international arbitration will gradually take the place of a resort to arms. Commercial intercourse, which, as we have seen already, exerts a powerful and beneficial influence upon morality, will then have unrestricted scope for exercise, and the morals of industry, the noblest morals conceivable; now so frequently and disastrously strained and soiled by war, will become the only system recognized, and will consequently strengthen and purify with a rapidity now impossible. No one, we believe, can at present form an adequate conception of the immensely beneficial change in the moral code that would be produced by a world at peace for a single generation. The doctrine of the brotherhood of man would receive an impulse such as no religion has ever yet been able to give it. The savage instincts and propensities, of which all men still possess an unnecessarily large share, and which religion has sometimes checked and sometimes encouraged, would be subjected to a long rest, and, like all unused organs and faculties, would diminish in strength in proportion as better instincts increased. The peace millennium, we repeat, is not at hand; but there are some faint streaks of light along the horizon, which are sure harbingers of its coming.

Patriotism, contrary to what we might suppose from some purely a priori considerations, appears to increase in intensity with the development of civilization. The home ties of the savage are slight, those of the civilized man exceedingly strong; and patriotism, which is in great measure a development or expansion of the home feeling, increases in vigor as homes become more worthy of being preserved. Not only so, but patriotism in its higher forms adds to itself an additional sentiment arising from associations connected with the national ideal, whatever this may be. The most impressive exhibitions of patriotism heretofore have been connected with warfare, deeds done in defence of national existence or to enhance national glory. But as the necessity for national defence lessens, and will at last pass entirely away, patriotism will find an adequate field in the perfecting of the national ideal; and the patriotic energy which is now perforce wasted in repelling the assaults of an enemy, and at best is apt to be inspired by some elements of jealousy and hate, will be expended in giving powerful and persistent aid to the most elevated moral sentiments.

Social restraints, already more powerful than religion in influence upon the moral life of many persons, will acquire an increased conservative power as communities become consolidated by permanent industries. Society, distinctively so called, is destined to play an ever-increasing part as an aid to right living. The lady who told Mr. Emerson that none of the consolations of religion could confer upon her the peace of mind which she derived from the consciousness of being well-dressed expressed a truth latent in many minds,—namely, that the refinements of social life have already become absolutely necessary to enjoyable existence; and they will gather strength with each succeeding generation. Society is doing more than religion to-day towards the suppression of the coarser vices, such as drunkenness and unchastity, and probably does more than it receives credit for in preventing political corruptions and defalcations and in sustaining business integrity.

There is a great moral power also in the study of the natural sciences,—a study which has received a wonderful impulse in the present generation, and will be pursued in the next with a greatly increased vigor. We can scarcely conceive of a man with scientific tastes being at the same time grossly immoral. The successful pursuit of science, we should remember, requires the most persistent exercise of the very best qualities of muscle and brain. Correctness of observation, carefulness of discrimination, keenness of insight, caution in induction, bold but restrained imaginative exercise, persistent application, an enthusiasm enkindled by the prospect of the possession of a new fact or an enlarged generalization,—in short, constant appeal to the noblest faculties cannot fail to exert a moral influence which will more than make good any loss coming from dampened ardor in the field of theological speculation.

But it is in the pursuit of social science (which might almost be defined as the science which seeks a philanthropic solution for economic problems) that we find a moral activity without parallel in past history. This age might well be called the age of the moral Renaissance, except for the fact that there is nothing in the past with which to compare the present moral activity. Not only are innumerable charitable societies of all kinds doing all the good they can, in a more or less blind way often, but inspired nevertheless by a true enthusiasm for humanity, but, better still, strong brains are dealing with philanthropic problems as they have never been dealt with before. The origin, causes, and cure of poverty are investigated, with a determination to solve this long-standing and hopeless problem, and with abundant augury of ultimate and complete success. The "associated charities" have done more within a few years to abolish dishonest poverty—the first practical step toward the cure of honest poverty—than all the monks and nuns and priests of the world have accomplished in former generations. The same energy and determination are at work also upon the question of crime and the checking of criminal propensities. Prison reform, asylum reform, legislative, judicial, and executive reform in government administration, are all prosecuted with a clearness of method and an energy of purpose that no age distinguished for religious devotion ever dreamed of. Not a month passes but some new discovery in education instructs us how to economize to best advantage the time and health and strength of our children, and thus to make a positive addition to the length and happiness of every life. "The moral prosperity of the community," said a recent lecturer on "The Ethics of the Labor Question," "depends much upon the health of its workers, and that depends very largely upon sanitary surroundings, sewerage, tenement houses, light, and ventilation." When in the past did these important moral assistants receive a tithe of the attention conferred upon them to-day? But the catalogue of moral activities would itself fill all the pages of a goodly sized article, and we may as well stop here as anywhere.

The utmost effect upon religion that can be produced by "science and Biblical criticism" is the stripping away from "gospel morality" of the superstitions that have been associated with it. Upon these superstitions, which, according to our author, no intelligent man can now believe, the exclusively theological and sometimes immoral dogmas of the churches have mainly rested. Very recently we heard from a Boston pulpit, and from the lips of a prominent divine of one of the largest denominations in the United States, the straightforward declaration that moral conduct was in no sense a factor in the scheme of salvation. The speaker declared that, as he looked into the faces of men before him, men whom he knew to be the loving husbands of wives and the tender fathers of children, upright and unblemished in all business and social relations, he was saddened by the thought that at the day of judgment he would be called upon to testify against these noble moral men, because they refused to accept the scheme of salvation which he proclaimed! Now, plainly, from a moral point of view, this kind of preaching is, in Scripture phrase, "earthly, sensual, devilish"; and no moralist can dread the prospect of a day, however soon to come, when the organs of credulity which furnish the nutriment for the dogmas upon which it rests will become so weak that the dogmas shall die of inanition. If any kind of theological dry-rot has already seized upon them to the extent supposed by Professor Smith, then indeed the prospect of an apotheosis of morals is nearer than we had believed.

FOREIGN.

THERE HAS BEEN A sensation trial at Madras respecting the guardianship of the sacred hair of Mohammed. This hair is enclosed in a safe called the "Ansaree Shareef," and the possession of the relic carries with it a small pension. Four persons claimed it,—two by succession and two by right of a will. One was a woman, and the Judge decided that she could not hold it, because she could not fulfil the ceremonies connected with it, and finally intrusted this valuable hair to one of the male litigants.

"SINCE THE LAST issue of this journal," says Mr. Charles Watts in the Secular Review, "Mr. G. J. Holyoake and myself visited Mr. T. Paterson at his lodgings. We found him, as we anticipated, very weak, and evidently declining, but with much of the old fire and energy for which he was formerly so distinguished. I left Mr. Paterson the sum of £12, subscriptions received on his behalf at the office of this paper; and Mr. Paterson desires me to convey to all his friends his warm appreciation of their kind assistance. He does not think himself entitled to urge a claim upon the gratitude of the Free thinkers of the present generation, a notion which both Mr. Holyoake and myself combated."

THE Church Times, in its review of the past year's events, describes the Royal Commission on the Sale of Livings as a failure, because it made no "real effort to grapple with the abuse." It adds the following passage, wherein we think the right nail has been hit on the head: "The truth is that the gentry and the lawyers, who count for a great deal in the Commons, and for everything in the Lords, had no mind to see the abuse put down, and, accordingly, they have done no more than suggest a few palliations, about as valuable as a glass of lemonade in the blue stage of cholera." So much for the hopes indulged in by those who were fatuous enough to think that vultures would willingly surrender the carcass upon which they batten. Disestablishment is the only cure.

THE ROMAN BREVARY.—The Marquis of Bute has published a translation of the Roman Brevary, in which it is now stated he has been engaged for several years. The translation is given in two volumes of about fourteen hundred double column pages each, and is said to be a very meritorious work, the translation being very faithful, the English simple and elegant, and the foot-notes being full. He uses, by permission, Cardinal Newman's and the other translations of the hymns which are so beautiful. Some are not aware, perhaps, that every Catholic priest, from the Pope to the hardest-working missionary, is required to recite at different hours every day a number of psalms, hymns, prayers, etc. This is usually called an office, and the offices for the whole year from the book, or set of books, are now translated into English for the first time.

THOMAS CARLYLE'S old letter on eternal punishment is republished by the Edinburgh Scotsman: My dear Madam.—The question that perplexes you is one that no man can answer; you may console yourself by reflecting that it is by its nature insoluble to human creatures,—that perhaps what human creatures mainly have to do with such a question is to get it well put to rest, suppressed if not answered, that so their life and its duties may be attended to without impediment from it. Such questions in this our early existence are many. "There are two things," says the German philosopher, "that strike me dumb: the starry firmament (palpably infinite) and the sense of right and wrong in man." Whoever follows out that "dumb" will say little upon the origin of our conceptions of heaven and hell—or an infinitude of merited happiness and infinitude of merited woe—and have much to reflect upon under an aspect considerably changed. Consequences good and evil, blessed and cursed, it is very clear, do not follow from all our actions here below, and prolong and propagate and spread themselves into the infinite, or beyond our calculation or conception; but whether the notion of reward and penalty be not, in the whole, rather a human one transferred to that immense divine fact, has been doubtful to many. Add this consideration which the best philosophy teaches us, "that the very consequences" (not to speak of the penalties at all) of evil actions die away and become abolished long before eternity ends; that it is only the consequences of good actions that are eternal,—for these are in harmony with the laws of this universe, and add themselves to it, and coöperate with it forever, while all that is in disharmony with it must necessarily be without continuance and soon fall dead; as perhaps you have heard in the sound of a Scottish psalm amid the mountains: the true notes alone support one another, all following the one true rule; the false notes, each following its different false rule, quickly destroy one another, and the psalm, which was discordant enough near at hand, is a perfect melody when heard from afar. On the whole, I must account it but a morbid weak imagination that shudders over this wondrous divine universe as a place of despair to any creature, and, contrariwise, a most degraded human sense, sunk down to the region of the brutal (how-ever common it be), that in any case remains blind to the infinite difference there ever is between right and wrong for a human creature—or God's law and the devil's law. Yours very truly,

T. CARLYLE.

Poetry.

A RIDDLE. [FOR THE INDEX.]

BY MARGARET STEWART SIBLEY.

Stoled priest, in dim cathedral;
Monk, in convent old and gray;
Sage, above old parchments poring,
Read this riddle strange, I pray.

Calm-eyed Sphinx, remotely gazing,
Hast an answer in thine eyes?
Have the centuries found and left thee
Silent still and also wise?

If the elder nations knew it,
Is it buried in thy sand?
Long the world has groped in darkness,
Waiting still to understand.

Well I know that rain and sunshine
Fall alike on good and bad,
And the sum of human gladness
Doubtless balanceth the sad.

But why doth one neighbor constant
Feasting have within his gate,
While misfortune waiteth grimly
On the other, like a fate?

One sends venture after venture,
And his ships come safely back,
Bearing rare and royal cargo;
Never storm hath crossed their track.

But the other—naught but losses!
All his ships gone down at sea:
Both are just, and much I marvel
Why this mystery should be.

One seeks danger as 'twere pleasure,
All Death's terrors hath defied;
Death pursues the other swiftly
As he rideth to his bride.

In one household grow the childre
Tall and strong and fair of face,
While beside another hearthstone
Sorrow sitteth in their place.

Every morning dawns with gladness
For the hearts whom joy hath blest,
But to others morn nor evening
Bringeth ever peace or rest.

One sees Fate in all disaster
And endures with mute despair;
While another sends to heaven
All his soul in anguished prayer.

One, through all disorder seeming,
Traces Nature's perfect laws;
While another worships humbly
Only God,—"The Great First Cause."

Day by day some traveller leaves us
For that journey vague and far,
But no tidings are vouchsafed us
What or where its havens are!

Are there gains for all our losses,
Recompense for all our pain?
Mute the dead lie, silence keeping;
All our questioning is vain.

Stony Sphinx in Libyan desert,
Priest and sage alike, are dumb;
Long the world has questioned, waited;
Will the answer ever come?

In the countless ages coming,
Æons from our day and time,
Shall one guess this wondrous riddle
Frosted o'er with hoary rime?

Mayhap, like the knight of story,
Searching for the "Holy Grail,"
One, with hands and heart of whiteness,
In his seeking shall not fail.

And through endless cycles growing,
Thought will widen as the space,
Till the Father of our longing
Shall, at last, unveil His face!

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEB. 7.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

F. H. Henshaw, $3.20; Charles Collins, $3.20; Michael Neale, $3.20; C. B. Collins, $13.20; Hon. George Hoadley, $20; W. W. Spaulding, $5; W. Hanford, $3; Andrew Shearer, $1; George Dimmock, $4.04; John Consaulus, $3.20; J. S. Perry, $3.20; Wm. A. Butler, $3.20; H. Williams, 50 cents; Samuel Keese, $2; Rhoby Kenyon, $3; Charles Voysey, $4.86; Mrs. K. B. Harrington, $3.20; Prof. P. H. Clark, $3.20; Gen. E. J. Turabull, $1.50; J. H. Sherwood, $1; Amos Luke, $1; Wiley Britton, $2; Dr. J. D. Featherstonagh, $10; Geo. W. Wood, $3.20; H. C. Halliwell, $20; L. R. Hopkins, $10; Miss S. E. Dunn, $3.20; Jas. M. Reid, $3.20; W. C. Macdonald, $2; Thos. S. Murray, $4.80; Joseph Marsh, $8.17.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEB. 12, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street; J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible; it recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MORIS B. GREENSFLDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N.Y.	5.00
A. POLSON, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. PRESNO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York, N.Y.	5.00
GEN. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MAGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRS, New York, N.Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N.Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHSCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
R. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BARBOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N.Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D.C.	5.00
GEO. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N.Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARR, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HOB. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N.Y.	1.00
N. LEWINSON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N.Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MISS FRANCES DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
PROF. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
DR. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00
MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERRILL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Bradenton, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. KIRK, Winthrop, Iowa.	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N.Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D.C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N.Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N.Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N.Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00

SOLOMON FRIEND, New York	1.00
MR. GANS, " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Maple Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	5.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa	1.00
F. B. MERGER, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston	5.00
MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
WYOS. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
MRS. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHN V. GRIEBEL, Shelbyville, Mass.	1.00
JOHANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRALEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN, " " "	200.00
MRS. A. B. PERCIVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
CAPT. P. S. CROWELL, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
MISS MARIANNE CHRISTEN, New York	1.00
MRS. CHRISTEN, " " "	1.00
MR. F. W. CHRISTEN, " " "	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " " "	1.00
MRS. MARY F. DAVIS, " " "	1.00
M. S. FECHHEIMER, " " "	10.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER, " " "	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Tewksbury, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. HAYNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIE S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
B. R. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
C. W. WENDE, Cincinnati, Ohio	1.00
MRS. CAROLINE A. TUCKER, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
HANNAH E. STEVENSON, Boston, Mass.	10.00
AVERY W. HARBAGE, Toledo, Iowa	2.00
HOB. FRANCIS SPRINGER, Columbus City, Iowa	5.00
E. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
E. D. BURLEIGH, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
JAMES MCCLATH, Quincy, Mass.	1.00
REV. J. C. LEARNED, St. Louis, Mo.	2.00
W. C. FISK, Toledo, O.	2.00
JOHN CHAPPELL SMITH, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
MARGARET, " " "	1.00
MRS. HINCKLEY, " " "	1.00
THOS. MUMFORD, Sen., " " "	1.00
J. S. JOHNSON, Almont, Mich.	5.00
HENRY PRATT, New York City	2.00
REV. JUDSON FISHER, Alton, Ill.	1.00
LOUIS FRANK, Roxbury, Mass.	15.00
PROF. F. E. NIPHER, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
MRS. J. S. EDGERLY, East Somerville, Mass.	2.00
MRS. H. HERMAN, New York City	5.00
M. FRANK, " " "	2.00
M. COHN, " " "	1.00
S. GUTERMAN, " " "	1.00
G. ENGELSMAN, " " "	1.00
ABRAHAM HERMAN, New York City	5.00
A. BLUMENTHAL, " " "	5.00
GUS. KAUFMAN, " " "	5.00
HENRY FRIEDMAN, " " "	5.00
MRS. LUCRETIA MOTT, Philadelphia	10.00
DR. G. F. MATTHEWS, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
MRS. KATE GANNETT WELLS, Boston	5.00
JULIA A. IRESON, Lynn, Mass.	10.00
ISABEL IRESON, " " "	10.00
J. E. IRESON, " " "	10.00
KATE C. IRESON, " " "	10.00
JAMES DILLAWAY, Somerville, Mass.	10.00
REV. M. J. SAVAGE, Boston	5.00
MRS. S. S. AUSTIN, Cambridge, Mass.	2.00
F. T. STUART, Boston	1.00
MISS L. B. ATWELL, Boston	1.00
NANCY W. COVELL, South Framingham	1.00
HULDAH P. ROBINSON, Allston	1.00
MICHAEL NEALE, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
CHARLES COLLINS, Dayton, Ohio	1.00
ADOLPH WURZBUYER, New York	2.00
A. S. BAMBERGER, " " "	3.00
CHAS. I. STIX, " " "	5.00
H. MOSENTHAL, " " "	1.00
A. A. LEVY, " " "	1.00
ERNEST EHRLMAN, " " "	1.00
CHAS. F. ADAMS, " " "	5.00
CHAS. C. LANE, " " "	3.00
ALFRED WOLF, " " "	1.00
ANGELO HELLMAN, " " "	1.00
HERMAN RAUBSAMEN, " " "	5.00
PHILLIP NETTRE, " " "	5.00
WILLIAM STONE, " " "	1.00
L. N. ASIEL, " " "	1.00
C. A. CURTIS, " " "	1.00
MR. & MRS. T. A. KOHN, " " "	2.00
A. SELIG, " " "	2.00
A. LICHTENSTEIN, " " "	1.00
S. BURNHEIMER, " " "	2.00
FELIX HERSELD, " " "	5.00
M. WALLER, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL SHELTER, " " "	5.00
ALBERTINA VON ARNIM, " " "	2.00
C. I. PRATT, " " "	2.00
G. H. PUTNAM, " " "	1.00
WILLIAM FRANKFURTH, " " "	5.00
OTTO W. FUTTEVER, " " "	5.00
MRS. E. B. FOOTE, " " "	1.00
EMIL COLMIL, " " "	5.00
MAX NATHAN, " " "	5.00
ALEX. GUTMAN, " " "	5.00
JOSEPH AVON, " " "	5.00
M. B. BRYANT, " " "	5.00
MRS. SUSAN T. BRYANT, " " "	5.00
I. F. CULLMAN, " " "	1.00
H. DORMITZER, " " "	5.00
M. S. ROEMER, " " "	5.00
F. E. MILLER, " " "	5.00
W. C. BARNES, " " "	1.00
I. H. ADAMSON, " " "	2.00
G. W. MILLER, " " "	5.00
W. A. KIMBALL, " " "	1.00
S. BENEDICTS, " " "	1.00
EDW. HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	5.00
LEOPOLD LOWRY, " " "	1.00
JOSEPH BECKEL, " " "	2.00
F. M. ADAMS, " " "	1.00
R. E. DIETZ, " " "	5.00
MRS. T. H. NEVILLE, " " "	2.00
S. WOLBERG, " " "	5.00
ELIZABETH HAMLIN, " " "	1.00
ELINOR HAMLIN, " " "	1.00
DANIEL MUNOY, Bristol, Pa.	1.00
MRS. J. C. MILLS, Galesburg, Ill.	2.00
MISS M. C. LUFKIN, " " "	1.00
MISS S. E. DUNN, Dover, N.H.	2.00
MRS. KATE NEWELL DOGGETT, Chicago, Ill.	1.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
MRS. F. A. ANGELL, " " "	1.00
T. B. SKINNER, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
LEVI BEADLER, Augusta, Mich.	1.00

Total. $1,481.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

THE LOGIC OF "REPEAL,"

AS ILLUSTRATED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

Resolved, That we are in favor of destroying the dams.

Resolved, That we are totally opposed to the rush of the waters after the dams are destroyed.

Resolved, That whoever says we are in favor of flooding the country is either a fool, a knave, or a Christian,—which is the same thing.

A NEW PETITION FOR "REPEAL."

The free-love ring which at once rules and ruins the National Liberal League has just begun in New York to push a new petition for the repeal of the postal laws of 1873. This persistent attempt to get rid of the only effective statutes against the sale and circulation of matter declared to be criminal by the common law was first instigated, and is now again secretly urged forward, by parties who found their infamous profits cut down and their infamous business crippled. Pettifogging and unscrupulous lawyers were found to make out a plausible case for these parties, and to hoodwink the liberal public by their cunning sophistries. But the merits of the case have been already so fully and widely discussed that no excuse remains for further delusion. As an influential New York paper not long since put it:—

"The recent discovery of the body of a murdered girl in a trunk at Lynn brought to light the terribly significant fact that over six hundred women, some married, some single, are recently missing from their homes, within a not very large geographical province, of which Boston may be regarded as a centre. Most of them were believed by their friends to have given themselves up to a life of shame. This is the terrible fruitage of such seed as Heywood and Bennett are sowing. It is a monstrous doctrine that denies to society the right to protect itself against such a crop as this. And those who deny the right have only their own folly to blame, if an indiscriminating public regards them as accessories, after the fact, of a crime which they really abhor, but which they allow themselves by their theories of free speech so effectively to defend."

President Hayes, in his first veto message on the army appropriations bill, said: "The laws now in force should not be repealed, except in connection with the enactment of measures which will better accomplish that important end" [i.e., the security of free and fair Congressional elections]. Precisely the same principle applies to the case of the postal law of 1873; and the common-sense of the people at large perceives it. The "repeal" movement not only flouts every consideration of public morality and public welfare, but keeps the community blinded to the justice of modifying that law, and stiffens public opinion against even the slightest modification of it. It is a movement originated and pushed for purely selfish and unscrupulous ends, to the immense and rapidly increasing injury of the liberal cause, by parties whose only desire is to fill their own pockets; and the fact that they have cajoled and deceived a large number of well-intentioned persons does not change the other facts in the least. It is the imperative duty of all intelligent liberals, and especially of all intelligent liberal organizations, to oppose publicly, promptly, and emphatically a madness which threatens to bury all healthy liberal movements for years under an overwhelming avalanche of public scorn.

A NEW PROTEST AGAINST "REPEAL."

AN IMPORTANT CHANGE OF NAME, AND THE REASONS FOR IT.

At a meeting of the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, held in this city on December 12, 1879, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Voted, That, in the judgment of this Board, the name "National Liberal League" has become so widely and injuriously associated in the public mind with attempts to repeal the postal law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature by mail,—with the active propagandism of demoralizing and licentious social theories,—and with the support of officials and other public representatives who are on good grounds believed to have been guilty of gross immoralities,—that it has been thereby unfitted for use by any organization which desires the support of the friends of "natural morality."

Voted, That for this reason the Directors of the National Liberal League of America recommend that the name of this organization be changed to "AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION," and they respectfully submit this recommendation to their constituent Auxiliary Liberal Leagues for consideration and action.

Voted, That, since it is inexpedient to call an Annual Congress of this League at the present time, this Board will deem itself authorized to make the proposed change of name on receiving approving votes to this effect from a majority of the Auxiliary Leagues.

Voted, That the Secretary be instructed to send a certified copy of these votes to the President and Secretary of each Auxiliary League, with a request for immediate action thereupon; and to report to this Board at his earliest convenience.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, held last Friday, February 6, the Secretary reported that the Auxiliary Leagues in Florence, Massachusetts; Jacksonville, Illinois; Syracuse, New York; Albany, New York; Chelsea, Massachusetts, and Boston (the other two leagues having made no report), had all voted in favor of a change of name for the reasons stated, and that five of them had voted in favor of the name suggested. The following preamble and resolution were then passed by the Directors:—

Whereas, A certified copy of the resolutions adopted by this Board on December 12, 1879, was duly sent by the Secretary to the President and Secretary of each constituent Auxiliary League; and

Whereas, The reasons therein given for recommending a change of name by this organization have been heartily and unanimously approved by all the constituent Leagues heard from at this date; and a majority of the Leagues on our list of auxiliaries has approved the name of "American Liberal Union," while one of them has expressed a preference for the name of "National Secular Union," therefore,

Voted, That the name of the National Liberal League of America be, and hereby is, changed to AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

A printed copy of the resolutions of December 12 was also sent to each of the Vice-Presidents, with a request for his or her individual opinion on the change proposed. Replies have been received at this date as follows, and are commended to the most careful attention of our readers as showing what is thought on the grave issues at stake by the best liberal minds even now, and what is certain to be the ultimate opinion of all respectable liberals at no distant day:—

From the Hon. E. P. Hurlbut.

ALBANY, Jan. 5, 1880.

MR. FRANCIS E. ABBOT:

My dear Sir,—I have received your note of Dec. 31, enclosing the Resolutions of the Board of Directors of the "National Liberal League of America," proposing to change their name to that of "American Liberal Union," with the reasons which influenced their action. These seem to me to be sufficient to justify their cause.

The design of the founders of the National Liberal League was to secularize the National and State governments, and for that purpose to gain, as adherents, such of our fellow-citizens, of whatever political or religious opinions, as favored that design. As a society, we held to no opinions aside from secularism, and only intended to carry to its full completion the object of the founders of our political institutions. It was obvious that in this undertaking we should encounter much prejudice and misrepresentation, and that we had assumed no small labor. Nothing could ensure our success but a concentrated effort, directed to one single point, and conducted with wise policy and a high moral purpose.

Now it has resulted that, while we have attracted to our standard many of the wisest and best of our fellow-citizens, we have at the same time become associated with men of an entirely different character, who are not content to work for pure secularism in the State without mixing with it and compelling it to carry the wildest and most extreme theories in morals, religion, and politics,—theories which sink of their own weight of absurdity, and would carry down with them any cause, however good and noble, to which they were attached.

In order to succeed, our cause must not only be good, but it must be befriended by the right persons, whose characters and whose espousal shall lend it weight, and who will not associate it with any theories or doctrines condemned by the reason or offensive to the moral sense of their fellow-men.

I am clear that we cannot too soon inscribe a new name on our secular banner.

Very sincerely yours,

E. P. HURLBUT.

From the Hon. Samuel E. Sewall.

DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I am quite rejoiced that the Directors of the National Liberal League of America have decided to change its name for that of the "AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION."

The reasons given for this course are conclusive. It would have been better had the change been made earlier. Some very good men undoubtedly believe that the United States Government ought not to prohibit the circulation of obscene literature by the mail. But, to my thinking, those who maintain the opposite opinion ought carefully to avoid the appearance of being connected with any society which upholds such a doctrine.

Publishing obscene books and prints is held in England to be an offence at common law; and long before the Revolution Massachusetts had passed a statute subjecting the same crime to severe penalties. The existing statute in this State on the subject has made the punishment even more heavy. Similar laws prevail in other States, I presume in most of them; though I have not examined all the codes. Such laws are considered important to protect the morals of the people, especially of the young. It is very evident that, in all the changes of opinion, the moral feeling of the community has not grown weaker, but stronger, against this class of crimes.

The national government, acting on the principle of the State legislation, has made it a criminal offence to import obscene publications into the country. This law and the statute which prohibits the circulation of such literature through the mails cannot be assailed, except for defects in detail, without at the same time attacking the whole system of State legislation in regard to such publications. Defects in detail are to be found in some of these statutes, and judges and juries both here and in England have sometimes held that to be obscene literature which does not really deserve the name. But this is no reason for repealing the laws which punish those who publish such literature.

The freedom of the press is not violated by decreeing that the publishing such literature in any way is illegal. Congress was right in saying that the mails of the country shall not be the sanctuary of this abomination.

As a general rule, it is essential to the freedom of the press that there shall be no censorship to prevent any person from presenting to the public any writing which he pleases. But he does it at his peril. If he publish false charges against another, he may be sued or indicted. The law neither approves nor authorizes calumny. It cannot justly prevent the publication, because it is impossible for any human tribunal to be so wise and so impartial as to decide without a trial on the propriety of every attack on individual character. But the case of obscene books and pictures is entirely different. The evidence of the obscenity of a book or picture is in the work itself, visible to all eyes. Any honest man of good education and sound judgment can judge of the criminality of such a publication, as well as a judge or a jury. It is not the question of who is guilty, but of the intrinsic nature of the work. It is a defect in the statute that it simply prohibits the circulation of such works by mail. It would be better to delay the passage of any questionable matter through the mail till the postmaster could submit it to the United States District Attorney, or other functionary, and have his written sanction to stopping it. It is very rarely indeed that any mistake would be made. But there is as little danger of a mistake being made by a district attorney as by a judge.

This defect in the statute, or others which might be pointed out, is no good reason for repealing it, as long as the principle on which it rests is sound.

S. E. SEWALL.

BOSTON, Jan. 19, 1880.

From the Hon. Nathaniel Holmes.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 8, 1880.

MR. F. E. ABBOT:

Dear Sir,—I have received your favor of the 31st ult., asking for my opinion of the proposed change of name of the "National Liberal League of America" to "American Liberal Union." So far as the mere name is concerned, I see no objection to the change. As to the matters really involved, I have given but little attention to them; and I am hardly prepared, on such information as I possess, to express an opinion that should be entitled to much weight. Upon the facts supposed in the propositions voted, I should certainly concur in the judgment of the Board of Directors.

The postal laws, excluding obscene literature from the mails, seem to be wisely framed; and I do not myself see how any rational person can object to them. If it were possible that any one could be unjustly condemned under them, it would seem that it must be by some error, or fault of construction, on the part of judge or jury, in the particular instance, rather than by reason of any imperfection in the laws as they stand enacted. I think you are entirely right in resisting all attempts to repeal these laws; nor do I see that any amendment is needed. In the nature of the thing, it must be mainly a matter of judicial construction what constitutes an "obscene" publication, within the meaning of the law: it would be impracticable for the statute to undertake specifically to define every possible case. If it were conceivable that a man could be punished, under the existing laws, for mailing a publication that was not obscene, but merely unorthodox (according to somebody's notion of Orthodoxy),—if judge or jury could so far mistake, beyond correction on appeal,—the case would have to be set down as one of those rare instances in which the administration of justice proves to be imperfect, whatever the subject may be; and under any form of government.

I understand it to be one object of the Liberal Leagues to promote true religion and sound morality as well as freedom of thought and speech, placing both upon their proper foundations. Such an object, surely, can have no affinity with "gross immoralities." Liberty does not mean license. Freedom of thought does not mean free scope and impunity for erroneous, foolish, or pernicious opinions: these must take their inevitable consequences in the forum of the public judgment. The law does not meddle with opinions, but deals with acts; and acts may be so injurious to the well-being of society or the State as to justify prohibition and punishment under positive law. But the liberal associations can scarcely be expected to be more successful than the Christian churches in excluding unworthy members from their communions. It is certainly to be hoped that bad men will not be made any worse by being admitted into their company.

I have never supposed that the Liberal Leagues had political purposes in view, or were intended to become a political party. If such were to be the case, I would have nothing to do with it; for I am thoroughly of the conviction that these matters of morality, religion, science, knowledge, do not properly come within the sphere of civil government and positive law, but belong to philosophy, education, and the general culture of humanity, being a part of that common liberty which the civil government is bound to secure to all citizens alike. On these topics, opinions and feelings are, and ever will be, so various and conflicting that people must agree to differ in peace and good humor; to array them in hostile camps under a political flag would (I conceive) be unwise and impolitic, if not dangerous to liberty itself.

This is what I have to say, though I am not quite sure it is an answer to your question.

Yours truly, NATHANIEL HOLMES.

From the Hon. George W. Julian.

IRVINGTON, Ind., Jan. 4, 1880.

DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I notice the proposed change of name of the Liberal League of which I have the honor to be a Vice-President, and I cordially approve of it. There is often much in a name; and the bad repute which the National Liberal League has fairly earned, and with which it is indissolubly associated, makes it clearly incumbent upon the true friends of organized liberalism to muster under an unmistakable banner. Common prudence and a "decent respect for the opinion of mankind" leave them no other honorable alternative. Profoundly regretting the causes that have led to this necessity, I am

Very truly yours,

GEO. W. JULIAN.

From William J. Potter, Esq.

GRANTVILLE, Mass., Jan. 10, 1880.

TO THE SECRETARY OF "THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA":

My dear Sir,—I approve wholly and most heartily of the proposed change in the name of the National Liberal League of America, and for the reason given in the vote of the Board of Directors. It is certainly most desirable, for the good repute of the organization itself, that it should be relieved of the odium now attached to the title "Liberal League"; and I believe, moreover, that this is absolutely necessary, in order that the organization should be able to work effectively for the objects which brought it into existence. Purity and uprightness of character more important than any matter of creed,—this has been one of the most fundamental principles of liberalism; and, when liberalism ceases to keep this principle in the forefront of all its activities, it abandons that which is the most essential element of its own life and the strongest weapon that it holds for the conversion of public opinion.

I think the new name, "American Liberal Union," a good choice.

Yours very truly, WM. J. POTTER.

From F. S.-Pott, Esq.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Jan. 28, 1880.

MR. F. E. ABBOT:

Dear Sir,—While deeply deploring the circumstances alluded to in your communication, and agreeing with the Board of Directors of our "National Liberal League" in considering it very unfortunate that in the public mind our affirmation of a principle has been misinterpreted as an approval of the actions of an individual who personally can hardly have any claim to our sympathies, I still cannot make up my mind to renounce that principle on account of its casual misapplication.

Neither do I feel at liberty to give my vote in favor of changing the name of our "National Liberal League" to "American Liberal Union," as this change would go far to imply the concession that the misinterpretation quoted above in fact rightly applied to our cause.

Yours respectfully,
FRIEDRICH SCHUENEMANN-POTT,
V. Pr. N. L. L.

From Rev. Minot J. Savage.

BOSTON, Jan. 6, 1880.

EDITOR INDEX:

Dear Sir,—I am glad to see the proposal to change the name of the "Liberal League of America." It struck me as unwise, in the first instance, to have two bodies with names so much alike. But, now that the bodies themselves are so much unlike, there ought not to be the least danger of confusing them in the popular mind. Liberalism we can be proud of, but we don't want to have to carry the other thing.

Yours, etc., M. J. SAVAGE.

From Dr. B. Felsenthal.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6, 1880.

F. E. ABBOT, Esq.:

Dear Sir,—The resolutions passed on Dec. 12, 1879, by the Board of Directors of the "National Liberal League of America," concerning a change of the society's name, has my hearty approval and consent. The reason for such a change is too obvious and too weighty; and I have not the least doubt the proposed change of name will be approved by almost every Auxiliary League.

In sincere regard, I remain, dear sir,

Yours very truly, B. FELSENTHAL.

From Rev. W. H. Spencer.

MY DEAR ABBOT:—

I heartily approve of the proposed change of name, and for the reasons assigned in your circular. "What's in a name?" Unfortunately there is a good deal in the name "National Liberal League," which smells to heaven. We cannot fumigate it as the early Christians did the heathen temples, for a holier use. It is too late. With the vast majority of real or nominal Christians whom we must win to our cause, the aforesaid name, if it has any import, is associated with free-lovism in its worst sense, and with all sorts of social vagaries and wild schemes of reform; and unhappily there is too good reason for this growing impression. The name has, of late, been in altogether too close connection with "polecat opinions," to be sweetened by any burying or bleaching process which we are master of. If we wear the scent on our reputations, it may not indeed strike through to our character, but it will offend and repel otherwise friendly people; and this is justification sufficient for rejecting the name, or one that might easily be mistaken for it. We object to living next door to a house of ill-fame. Of course we do not mean quite that. For virtuous and generous and brave, no doubt, are many in the ranks of the "National Liberal League,"—nay, are most perhaps. Yet so long as their generals, or several of them, represent libertinism instead of liberty, is the world to blame for thinking that the rank and file of the army are leaning that way? It does so think, and it will so think, and it has some reason to so think, unless the army publicly and privately denounces the immoralities of its leaders.

It is not to the point to say that we must often work with bad men for a good cause. Yes, but we are not called upon to make bed-fellows of them. We believe in hospitality and broad fellowship; but, as Wendell Phillips once said, "it is not our duty to marry a prostitute in order to reform her." Excuse us, if we seem to draw our illustrations from Five Points. It is because we are near there when we deal with this subject. We gladly turn away.

We believe in liberty, but we do not believe in this intellectual and moral vagabondism, that so often is seen tramping through the country under the banner of "liberalism," and we utterly refuse to train in such company. We believe that liberty and justice demand the secularization of the State, but, desirable as this is, it is insignificant in importance, compared with the preservation of the unity and the purity and the sacredness of the family relation. We can wait for liberty, but without purity, to-day and to-morrow and always, our days as a nation are numbered.

W. H. SPENCER.

HAVERHILL, Jan. 1, 1880.

From Samuel L. Hill, Esq.

MR. F. E. ABBOT:—

The change of name proposed by the directors of the "National Liberal League of America" to that of "American Liberal Union" is in my opinion expedient, for the reasons given.

SAMUEL L. HILL.

FLORENCE, MASS., Jan. 2, 1880.

From Dr. Isaac M. Wise, editor of the Cincinnati "American Israelite."

To all of which I consent. ISAAC M. WISE.

From Rev. Robert Collyer.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7, 1880.

DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I think the change proposed in the name of our Society is needed. The question, "What's in a name?" as it touches the title about which we first organized, is only capable to my mind of one answer, as things have drifted; and that is a very evil odor,—what the Bible calls "a stink." I don't think I am over-delicate of the nostril; but some months ago I had to request that my name should be withdrawn as a vice-president of the original organization. Still I shall be glad to serve in a Union which will look to whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, and lovely, even though they be not as yet of good report.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT COLLYER,

Minister to the Church of the Messiah.

Notwithstanding the "request" above mentioned, Mr. Collyer's name is still published by the officers of the National Liberal League as one of their Vice-Presidents—as is also that of Mr. Samuel L. Hill, notwithstanding his public protest in the Springfield Republican against the continued use of his name by that organization.

From Joseph McDonough, Esq.

ALBANY, N.Y., Jan. 5, 1880.

F. E. ABBOT, Esq.:

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of a copy of the resolutions of the Directors of the League, proposing a change of name, and of your note asking my opinion on the proposed change. I think it very desirable that a change in the name of our organization should be made, but do not think the Board have selected the best possible substitute.

The word "liberal" seems to me indefinite. All the sects and parties claim to be liberal; also it is the property of the other party. The name "American Secular Union," I think, would be much better. The word "secular," and the secular party in England as founded by Mr. Holyoake, have given a meaning, and, I might say, a public recognition, of the name and its meaning, as belonging to the Freethought party, which is much in its favor. The adoption of that name, I think, would likewise tend to facilitate our coöperation with the secular party in England, which I think would be desirable.

I may say that the Liberal Association here, on mature consideration at a business meeting, have passed a resolution to recommend the name suggested above. I have also consulted Dr. Schlesinger, who is one of the Vice-Presidents, and he concurs in my opinion.

Of course the name adopted will be accepted by us, and our society will coöperate to give success to the organization. Yet I think it would be wise to act cautiously in changing the name, and, if possible, select one which would be, as I think the one I suggest would be, totally distinct from the old one, and yet allowing the coöperation of any man or woman of liberal opinions.

I enclose check for five dollars for a year's subscription to THE INDEX, to which I wish the success it deserves, but I am afraid does not get.

Believe me yours very sincerely,

J. McDONOUGH.

From Dr. Max Schlesinger.

ALBANY, Jan. 8, 1880.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Esq.:

Dear Sir,—I hereby acknowledge receipt of your circular containing excerpt from the records of a meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Liberal League of America, having reference to a proposed change of name of our League.

Deeply attached as I was to the name of "Liberal League," I nevertheless coincide with the Board that, since the name has been made a reproach and by-word, we have to disown it. I would therefore indorse any change of name. I would concur in the opinion of the Albany Liberal Association to have the name changed to "Secular Union," if I was not afraid that this would involve a change of platform. Secularism has its well-defined objects, which, it seems to me, are not quite the same as those of the original Liberal League.

Thanking you most heartily for your heroic defence of the liberal cause against those who would bring it in disrepute,

I am most respectfully yours,

DR. M. SCHLESINGER.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

THERE ARE GROWING signs that the third term is not likely to be Grant-ed.

MR. CRAIK, the husband of Dinah Maria Mulock, is a partner in the London book firm of Macmillan & Co.

MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS is the oldest living American authoress, and is said to be almost destitute.

JOSH BILLINGS is sixty-three years old, and has accumulated a fortune of $100,000 by his bad spelling.

EDGAR FAWCETT is announced for the poet of the Phi Beta Kappa Society at its anniversary next summer.

TENNYSON is at Farringford, his place on the Isle of Wight, where he always resides at this season of the year.

REV. JOHANN HODJA, a Roman Catholic priest of Baltimore, has renounced the Catholic faith and joined the Presbyterian Church.

ERNEST RENAN is soon to begin a course of lectures in London on "The Deterioration of Christianity in Percolating through the Roman Empire."

MRS. EMMA R. SILL, who lectured in the interests of the Greenback party in New York last fall, has brought suit for the sum of $200 against certain of its candidates for unrequited services.

PROF. JAMES DEMILLE, of Dalhousie College, Canada, the well-known author of the Dodge Club and other contributions to Harper's Magazine, died at Halifax, N.B., on the 28th inst., in the forty-eighth year of his age.

PROF. PROCTOR has written a letter to the New York Herald, denying the report that he has changed his views on evolution, and given his adherence to views more compatible from the Orthodox standpoint with the recognition of God.

GOV. DAVIS, of Maine, is only thirty-seven years of age. He is the son of a farmer, and while in the army studied Latin, reciting to an officer. At the close of the war, he attended the Seminary at Kent's Hill, and helped himself along by teaching.

MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD, the past month, has given courses of lectures at Milwaukee and Whitewater, Wis.; Chillicothe and Gavitt, Mo.; Ann Arbor, Union City, and others, Mich.; and La Rue, Ohio. He is to speak for the Albany Liberal Association, Sunday, February 15.

HERBERT SPENCER, the English philosopher, is sixty years of age, and has never been married. He was educated for a civil engineer, but his philosophic tastes led him into a more studious life. He always had an effeminate look, and his health has been poor for a long time.

DR. HITCHCOCK insists that knowledge is a preventive of disease, showing that the insane in Massachusetts are nine-tenths uneducated paupers, and so are fifty-nine thousand of the sixty-six thousand in asylums in England. Who will start a knowledge sanitarium or study-cure?—Rochester Democrat.

THE LATE JOHN BLACKWOOD, one day in conversation with Miss Anne Brewster, related how he and George Eliot had corresponded some time before he knew she was a woman. "I called her 'Dear George,'" he said merrily, "and employed some easy expressions, such as a man uses only to a man. After I knew her, I was a little anxious to remember all I might have said."

A PLEASANT ANECDOTE of Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson was related by a lady in Meadville, Penn., the other day, and is reported by the Index of that town. When Mr. Emerson was travelling in Egypt with his daughter, they met an Englishman who did all in his power to make it pleasant for them, and, when the time came for their separation, said: "You may wonder, sir, at my having overstepped my usual reserve so far as to become so intimate with you, but it is for the sake of a countryman of yours, one bearing the same name,—Emerson—Ralph Waldo Emerson. He has done me much good, and I hope some time to cross the ocean to meet him." And Mr. Emerson never told him it was himself whom he sought.

Communications.

"CHARITY" versus PRINCIPLE.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 20, 1880.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

My dear Sir,—My sincere devotion to the great cause of human liberty, in behalf of which you have labored so faithfully through the columns of your able journal for the last ten years, prompts me to write you this letter. I deem it proper to say that I entirely concur with you in your views in regard to the absolute necessity of keeping the liberal movement entirely free from all affiliation with libertinism, or even suspicion of being tainted with free-love; and I am satisfied that every sincere liberal in this land will approve your efforts to free the liberal movement from all responsibility for the abominable doctrines and teachings of D. M. Bennett and his followers. I honestly believe that the course of Bennett in endeavoring to engraft the pernicious doctrines of Heywood's infamous pamphlet upon the platform of the Liberal League, through his papers and at Syracuse, N. Y., in 1878, has done the cause of truth more harm than all the sermons of the clergy and the denunciations of the religious press.

While reading his paper for the past two or three years, I found much in it I could not approve; but, regarding him as a well-meaning but unguarded man, I supported his paper and sympathized with him in his misfortunes. As I look over his files now, it seems to me that there was method in his madness, and that he labored zealously in heaping abuse upon Comstock and the officers of the law, in order to force them to persecute him, and thereby enable him to play the rôle of a martyr. He is now reaping the fruit of his own folly. I am truly sorry for him. A man of his age and experience ought to have had more discretion. He ought to have known that he could not set at defiance the principles of morality and the laws of the country without ultimately suffering for it. Had his private character been ever so pure, his intolerant bigotry in the advocacy of his views set at defiance the fundamental principles of liberalism, moderation, truth, and justice.

But, while Bennett's shortcomings are great, and inimical to the growth of pure and wholesome liberalism, I respectfully suggest that I fear you are inadvertently giving him aid by the publication of the wholesale calumnies of Rev. Joseph Cook, contained in your issue of the 15th inst. I am surprised that you have not exhibited your usual impartiality and justice in commenting upon the National Liberal League. The men and women who met in the Convention at Cincinnati, last September, were not free-lovers or libertines. The great body of them were as far removed from such abominable principles as any other members of the community, and detest Heywood's doctrines as cordially as you do. I have no doubt that nineteen-twentieths of those who followed the leadership of Bennett at Syracuse, in 1878, did so under a total misapprehension of the true state of the facts, as well as of the sinister purposes of Bennett and his followers; and if you and your friends had only manifested, since that important occurrence, a little more forbearance and spirit of charity, nearly all the leagues would now be united under your banner. You founded the League, and you must not abandon it. I believe that it is an organization capable of exerting a great influence for good in society. You must not desert the vessel you launched so successfully nearly five years ago. You must have patience, and abide your time. The world is advancing. You have done much in the past, and can do more in the future, to aid in the grand effort to redeem mankind from the slavery of superstition and bigotry. You must not lose faith in mankind because of the Bennett-Comstock fiasco. It is but a mote upon the sunbeam of progress. The sturdy, intelligent, virtuous men and women who compose the Liberal League, with the exception of a few personal friends of Bennett, have no faith in or sympathy with free-love doctrine. They one and all indorse the noble sentiment of their distinguished champion, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, in favor of social and domestic purity; their only paradise, an honest, happy home; their only divinity, a virtuous wife; their only angels, their little cherubs around the hearth.

The sentiment is growing day by day that no man tainted with immorality can be a suitable leader in a great moral movement like the Liberal League, and hence that the days of usefulness of D. M. Bennett are past. If you and your friends restrain your unkind criticisms and hostility, three-fourths of the men and women in the National Liberal League will follow the example of the Tompkins County League, unless Bennett and his indorsers withdraw from its leadership. There is too much hard common sense among the mass of mankind, for the family relation to be destroyed or injured by Cupid's Yokes or any such senseless production. So stand for the right in truth and charity, and all will be well.

A MEMBER OF LIBERAL LEAGUE.

[Our correspondent is as friendly as he is honest and well-intentioned; yet he is not sufficiently informed as to what is going on behind the scenes to understand fully the absolute necessity of the course we have pursued. The way to get rid of bad leaders is not to submit to their lead and execute their evil purposes, but to expose them unflinchingly and thereby undeceive their dupes. It is not a question of "charity" at all, but of fidelity to principle. There is not a more corrupt set of men anywhere than the ring which now controls the National Liberal League; and this corruption betrays itself in their continued, united, and defiant support of proved scoundrels. Whether the majority of those who follow the lead of this ring are their sympathizers or their dupes, and whether they do or do not comprehend the monstrous harm they are doing to the liberal cause by their mortifying submission to such leadership, is a point which neither our correspondent nor we can determine by a mere assertion. We hope, and are willing to believe, that the majority are dupes rather than sympathizers; but the dupes are rapidly leaving already, and sympathizers alone will remain behind. The trouble with Joseph Cook is that what he said this time was in the main no calumny, but the truth; and it has been the profession and boast of all liberals that they would "welcome the truth from whatever source." Are they, after all, just as blind and prejudiced as the churches themselves, when the truth happens to hurt? The fact is that the National Liberal League obeys the will of men whose purposes are as vicious and selfish as their policy is ruinous to the League's original objects. In the civil war, the rebel army had many honest and misguided men in it; but the Union army could not for this reason stop fighting the rebel army as a whole, and the dupes had to share the fate of the traitors. It is exactly so to-day. The only way for the honest and pure members of the National Liberal League to prove themselves such is to break away from it utterly, until it reverses its false public position and chooses honest and pure men for leaders. Neither the malicious abuse of enemies nor the mistaken expostulation of friends can move us a hair's breadth from this stand—not because we are wilful, but because the public need is altogether too imperative and too plain.—Ed.]

REFORMATORY.

THE IDEA of a united and reciprocal system of dispensing charity in cities, among the different organizations devoted to this purpose, has been for some time growing in favor, and last year was put into practical operation in Boston. It aims to diminish mendicancy, and enable those who are in need to depend upon themselves, so far as they may, to improve their condition. It does not attempt (we are told) to supersede the existing organizations for charity, but to associate them together, and so to register the beneficiaries of each that paupers shall not be repeaters upon the benevolence of the well-disposed. "In every district," says the Boston Herald, in a recent article upon the subject, "there are a certain number of visitors who take one or two cases as their special charge, and see what they can do to raise the family into a position where they can be practically independent. But, better even than this, it takes these people by the hand. The visitor makes a diagnosis of each case. He goes to the bottom of the difficulty, and attempts to overcome it. If it is too much for him, he seeks the counsel of the superintendent, or, if necessary, of the ward conference; and the result is that, sooner or later, the family are put in a condition to take care of themselves. This would be the case with middle-aged people with children. But, where people are advanced in life and cannot help themselves, the visitor has another line of duty, which may possibly result in the placing of these persons where they shall be sure of a comfortable home. In every case, it is the bringing of different classes of people into personal contact who have heretofore been widely apart."

THE SPRINGFIELD Republican, under the general caption of "Too Much Bowery," thus speaks, in a recent issue, of the growth of the liquor traffic and concert saloons in that community: "The large cities are infested with drinking saloons to which custom is drawn by variety show performances of a low order, and in which liquor is sold by 'pretty waiter girls.' These establishments represent the most degraded side of the festering life of a great community, and are the breeders of debauchery and crime. Wherever the moral barriers in any community are let down, liquor-selling, with accompaniments more or less shameless, flourishes at the expense of higher things. The existence of three saloon theatres in Springfield, therefore, is a landmark which does not show progress in a good direction. Our generous license policy, and consequent competition in the sale of beer, led first to garden concerts, and next to the importation of theatrical performances similar to those which nightly flourish in the Bowery at New York. Men and women actors give a cheap and coarse variety entertainment to an audience of men and boys who sit beclouded in tobacco smoke, and guzzle more or less beer,—admission, 10 cents. Every allusion of doubtful propriety 'brings down the house.' Three of these entertainments are open every week-day night, and young men 'seeing life' 'take them all in.' It is not an uncommon thing for mill operatives and others from the towns about to come in to 'see the shows.' Perhaps we ought to be thankful that 'the pretty waiter-girls' have not yet been imported to our New England city,—and perhaps not. The fact is, this sort of thing has already gone quite too far. It is time for public sentiment to call a halt. Amusement is well enough, and to be found legitimately in full measure; but performances which stimulate bad passions and nightly worse than waste the time of hundreds of young men are not necessary. They are demoralizing and evil to an alarming degree, and can profitably be made the subject of municipal consideration."

THE FIRST NUMBER of the Philanthropist, just issued in New York, contains the following announcement: "We respectfully invite communications on leading questions of Philanthropy, said communications being always based on an honest and full acceptance of the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the revealed will of God." It states that its paramount object is to inaugurate a new departure "in the administration of organized charities, whereby the collection and disbursement of charitable funds shall be removed back from irresponsible local and political agencies to the essential control and supervision of the various churches, not only thus embracing all these local and minor private organized charities, but the leading State institutions, as insane asylums, orphan asylums, reformatories, prisons, and almshouses." In accordance with this purpose, it makes this quotation from a circular of the New York Board of Philanthropy: "The amount appropriated and personally donated to charity in the State of New York, in one year, is simply stupendous. These funds, forty years ago, were generally raised, held, and disbursed by men who were substantially churchmen. They are now, at the distance of only one generation, raised, held, and disbursed by men who are substantially outside the churches, and who are without any declared sense of religious obligation to be faithful in their custody and use. In a normal condition of affairs, these funds would be intrusted to a body of men publicly pledged by ordination to fidelity in this very respect. Who does not see that any such church system of almsgiving, attested by experience and Divine Revelation, would inevitably do away with the buying and selling of legislative appropriations, the prostitution of charity to the promotion of political and mercenary ends, and the nameless abuses in its administration in the hands often of strangers and charlatan adventurers? Nothing can be more evident than that there is an urgent public necessity for a new departure, and a radical revolution in regard to our public and private charitable institutions, whereby charitable funds shall be rescued from unclean hands, and remanded to the custody of the church authorities of the various denominations." Not to enter upon the discussion of the above proposition, or to enumerate similar examples, there has just been a very encouraging and impressive exhibit of the superior efficiency and beneficent effects of the administration of charitable institutions, in accordance with the "full acceptance of the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the revealed will of God," in the disclosures of Rev. Mr. Cowley's conduct of the "Shepherd's Fold" in New York.

JESTINGS.

"YOU JUST take a bottle of my medicine," said a quack doctor to a consumptive, "and you'll never cough again." "Is it so fatal as that?" gasped the consumptive.

HE WAS inclined to be facetious. "What quantities of dried grasses you keep here, Miss Stebbins! Nice room for donkey to get into." "Make yourself at home," she responded with sweet gravity.

VERY INNOCENTLY an Irish newspaper concludes its account of an imposing ceremony: "The procession was very fine, being nearly two miles long, as was also the prayer of the Rev. Mr. McFadden."

A DANDY, while being measured for a pair of boots, observed, "Make them cover the calf." "Heavens!" exclaimed the astonished artist, surveying his customer from head to foot, "I haven't leather enough."

"SHALL WE TAKE a 'bus' up Broadway?" said a young New Yorker, who was showing his country cousin the wonders of the city. "Oh dear, no!" said the frightened girl: "I would not do that in the street."

THE TIME TO "STRAY."—Parson: "Seated alone in the evening of life, your thoughts, my friend, must oftentimes 'wander' to many subjects." Aged Rustic: "Yes, they does, sir, mostly a-Sundays, when you be a-preaching."—Fun.

THE CLERGYMAN in a certain town having, as the custom is, published the banns of matrimony between two persons, he was followed by the clerk's reading the hymn beginning with these words: "Deluded souls that dream of heaven."

ONE SABBATH afternoon a worthy minister, observing by the time he had reached the third "head" of his discourse the drowsy disposition of several of his hearers, quietly remarked: "In the third place, those of you who are awake will notice," etc.

MRS. TOADEATER: "And what do you think of our country, Lord Vacuum?" Lord V.: "Aw,—like the States ever so much,—the fwide oysters, and the buffaloes, and weed birds, and Niagwa Falls, and all that sort of thing,—awfully jolly, you know."—Harper's Bazar.

WHEN THE burglar was up before the Justice of the Peace, that official remarked: "Before you were arrested, in one week you committed four burglaries with impunity." "Yes," answered the scoundrel, "it did almost seem as if I was protected by an unseen power."

HERE IS A SCENE that occurred at the registry of women as school voters at Lowell, Mass. "Where were you born?" asked the registering alderman of a woman. "My birthplace, sir, is identical with that of the great statesman who subsequently resided and died at Marshfield, in this State!" "Where was that, please?" faintly breathed the paralyzed functionary. With a glance of withering scorn, she sneered: "There! I thought you wouldn't know!" and passed on exulting through the petty formalities that remained.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.

J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or reading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or $0 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

FREE OF THE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. O. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. O. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Religion of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. E. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion." Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address, for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting, 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston Mass.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of these several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.

VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving

Principles of the Ox Brain
and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.

A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discursive with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workingman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

MR. CHADWICK'S NEW BOOK,

THE FAITH OF REASON.

"Of all preachers occupying regular pulpits as distinguished from lecture platforms, he seems to have completely emancipated himself from pulpit conventions. His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence. . . . When we consider their quality, we marvel, for what sermons of the day can compare with these in richness, force, and beauty?"—Rev. Dr. F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

FOR

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,

23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY or WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?

11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING

NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. H. Kuyper, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kuenen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the latest scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE FAITH OF REASON. A Series of Discourses on the leading topics of Religion. By John W. Chadwick, author of The Bible of To-day. Pages 234. Price $1.00.

"His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit-teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence."—Rev. Dr. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 233 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Evolution of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete Index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half calf, $6.00.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 9,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH

AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27th YEAR. A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS'

LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
 2. Max Müller.
 3. Emerson.
- For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N. Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR.

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest Inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & Co. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 530.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEB. 19, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

THE LIBERAL PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

- SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.
- SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.
- SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.
- SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSES.

MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD will speak next Sunday forenoon at the Parker Memorial, in this city. His many friends will improve this opportunity to hear him. His subject will be: "Old and New Conceptions of Religion and Ethics."

THE BOSTON Herald has a keen wit to preside over its "Men and Things": "Moses Hull says this is a bad time for workingmen. It is for workingmen who do not work, but who live on those who do—like Moses, for example."

A FRIEND of ours made a "great hit" the other day, when, referring to a notorious lecturer who had figured successively in various "reforms" so long as there was anything to make out of them, he dryly remarked: "He has a mouth to let!"

A NOTE OF WARNING is thus sounded by the Brooklyn Catholic Review: "Curiously enough, it now appears probable that New England has been selected as the ground upon which the battle of religious education against secular instruction is to be fought out in this country and definitely settled."

THE Catholic Review, in a characteristic editorial on Thomas Paine, says: "The greatest kindness that it is possible now to do the memory of Tom Paine is to let oblivion cover it with moss. If there is sense in the adage, 'Let sleeping dogs lie,' there is greater sense in not going out of our way to stir up a compost heap which time is rapidly resolving into its kindred dirt."

SAYS REV. DR. SCHAFF in the Princeton Review for September, 1879: "The negroes are very religious by nature, and infidelity is scarcely known among them; but their moral sense of honesty and chastity is weak. They have a marked preference for the Baptist and Methodist types of Christianity, which seem to be best suited to their emotional and demonstrative nature." Subtract from the character here depicted the "marked preference" for religion and Christianity, and the residuum will be a correct likeness of a certain class of liberals now quite too prominent for the good name of liberalism.

REV. M. J. SAVAGE, the liberal preacher of Boston, writes to the Christian Register: "I want just space enough to say that, having studied with much care Mr. Albert Stickney's A True Republic, I am convinced that every thoughtful man in America ought to know and think over its contents." We echo Mr. Savage's verdict with emphasis. That book ought to be studied diligently by everybody who votes, by everybody who ought to vote, and by everybody who wants to vote. Col. Stickney believes in universal suffrage, and desires to get rid of the "machine" which practically takes all political power out of the hands of the voters.

MR. HOLYOAKE, with his usual admirable penetration, has pointed out some valuable indirect benefits conferred by the coöperative movement on those who have joined in it: "You cannot have an association unless you have a little common-sense, good temper, and a good deal of good-will. The art of having a good temper takes a long time to instil, and so does the art of good-will. Anybody has good-will toward people they like and whom they care for; it is easy to promote their welfare; but to promote day by day the welfare of the people you don't like, to administer to the opulence, the comfort, and influence of those you hate,—it requires a new education altogether to accomplish that."

THE Bicycling World is astonishingly interesting even to those who have not caught the bicycling fever, if we may judge by our own impressions. Mr. Charles E. Pratt, the editor, evinces a journalistic talent which must come by nature or "grace," since it cannot have come from the antecedent training of his legal profession. Some ten years ago, the Free Religious Association held a series of itinerant conventions at the West, and were irreverently styled "hell on wheels" by outsiders. Mr. Pratt will show them in the future how to deserve this soubriquet better by mounting on bicycles and travelling according to approved scientific principles. If any of our readers are interested in this mode of locomotion, they cannot do better than to send $1.50 for a year's subscription to the editor, 40 Water Street, Boston.

SAYS THE San Diego Union: "An amusing application of the wonders of the telephone as an assistant detective of crime comes to us from Julian. Several horses were recently stolen in that neighborhood, and suspicion fell upon a certain Indian as the thief. Some one having introduced a telephone up there, the same was being exhibited, when it occurred to the owner of the stolen horses to get the Indian to come in and hear the 'Great Spirit' talk. The Indian took one of the cups, and was thrilled with astonishment at being apparently so near the Great Keeper of the happy hunting grounds. After some little time spent in wonderment, the Indian was solemnly commanded by the Great Spirit to 'give up those stolen horses!' Dropping the cup as if he had been shot, the Indian immediately confessed to having stolen the horses, and tremblingly promised, if his life was spared, he would restore the 'caballos' at once, and he did so."

THE PENNSYLVANIA Republican Convention, on Feb. 4, made a declaration of principles which shows how the ideas of the Rochester platform are irresistibly creeping into practical politics: "First, the union of the States with equal rights, indestructible by any unconstitutional means; second, protection to the person, liberty, and property of the citizen of the United States in each and every portion of our common country, wherever he may choose to move, demanding of him only obedience to the laws, and proper respect for the rights of others; third, strict integrity in fulfilling all our obligations, State and National; fourth, the perfect security of free thought, free speech, and a free press, and of equal rights and privileges to all men everywhere, irrespective of nationality, color, or religion; fifth, a free and pure ballot, thoroughly protected, so that every man entitled to cast a vote may do so just once at each election without fear of molestation, moral or physical, on account of his political faith, nationality, or hue of his skin; sixth, honesty in elections."

REV. J. B. HARRISON wrote not long since to the Christian Register on "The Method of Antagonism," in a manner which brings out a truth too little appreciated by sentimentalists: "It seems to me that it is not always easy to decide what are, and what are not, 'open questions,' till we learn what other people think about them. Whatever thoughtful, earnest men differ about is an open question, is it not? I am one of those who 'see in liberalism the free spirit and the vital principle of growth, and not a newly formulated body of anti-orthodox doctrines,' but I think that 'the substitution of better ideas and methods in religion in the place of Orthodoxy can be better affected by the method of antagonism than by first recognizing the common ground, and then seeking to enlarge that ground.' So I suppose this must be an open question, as we happen to hold precisely opposite opinions about it. I think that history gives us no instance of substitution by agreement, but it is full of instances of successful substitution by earnest, inspired, persistent antagonism. The antagonism is an essential, unavoidable feature and element of such a process of substitution as is now going on in Christendom. It is not to be regretted. It is a much more wholesome sign of the times than indifference or spurious catholicity. Is it not probable that there will be far more pronounced antagonism before the substitution of better ideas and methods in the place of Orthodoxy is accomplished?"

AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Irvington, Ind.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. E. P. HALLOWELL.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSANTHAL.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Ed. of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York.
 W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Ed. of "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....Chicago, Ill.
 COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill.
 DR. T. L. BROWN.....Binghamton, N. Y.
 HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa.
 MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City.
 MRS. AMY POST.....Rochester, N. Y.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CARY STANTON.....Tenafly, N. J.
 MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....Lottsburgh, Va.
 JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N. Y.
 RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N. Y.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

J. A. J. WILCOX. W. H. HAMLEN.
 F. E. ABBOT. C. D. B. MILLS.
 D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
 Arkansas.....JOHN AHHENS, Monticello.
 California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
 Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
 Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
 Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOELT, Greenville.
 Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
 Georgia.....DR. A. A. BRILL, Madison.
 Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
 Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
 Iowa.....J. C. MICHENER, Adair.
 Kansas.....JOHN FAIRBORTH, Fort Scott.
 Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wiltonville.
 Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
 Maine.....D. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
 Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
 Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
 Michigan.....KARL SCHMERMANN, Detroit.
 Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
 Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
 Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
 Nevada.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
 New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
 New Jersey.....FRANCIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
 New York.....C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
 North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
 Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
 Oregon.....SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
 Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
 South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
 Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRIOR, Chattanooga.
 Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
 Vermont.....R. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
 Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
 West Virginia.....DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
 Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
 Dakota.....D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
 District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
 Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
 Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.

D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HANLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL UNIONS,

Chartered by the American Liberal Union.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
 SYRACUSE, N. Y.—[Officers not reported.]
 ALBANY, N. Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
 BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
 PASSAIC CITY, N. J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
 JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
 ROCHESTER, N. Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Hale.
 CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y. MORRIS HAYS, Rochester, N. Y.
 FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. UBBINO, West Newton, land, N. Y.
 Z. T. WATKINS, Syracuse, N. Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N. Y.
 NETTIE C. TRUESDELL, Syra-FRANCOIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, cuse, N. Y.
 GURFAYUS E. GORDON, Mil-MORRIS W. DODGE, Albany, N. Y.
 WATKINS, Ill. J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N. Y.
 HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y. SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
 W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. HOPE WHIPPLE, Boston, Mass.
 T. O. GAGE, Fayetteville, Mass. D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
 B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, CHARLES ELIUS, Boston, Mass.
 MAJ. JOHN W. TRUESDELL, Syra-bany, N. Y.
 CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Al-cuse, N. Y.
 EBEN TURK, Chelsea, Mass. H. P. STARK, Rochester, N. Y.
 JOHN NELL, Watertown, N. Y. JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N. Y.
 E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass. W. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N. Y.
 THOR. D'GAN, Albany, N. Y. JOHN FREEST, Albany, N. Y.
 JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N. Y. C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
 D. B. MOREY, Malden, Mass.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Dec. 12, 1879.

Voted, That, in the judgment of this Board, the name "National Liberal League" has become so widely and injuriously associated in the public mind with attempts to repeal the postal law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature by mail,—with the active propagandism of demoralizing and licentious social theories,—and with the support of officials and other public representatives who are on good grounds believed to have been guilty of gross immoralities,—that it has been thereby unfitted for use by any organization which desires the support of the friends of "natural morality."

Voted, That for this reason the Directors of the National Liberal League of America recommend that the name of this organization be changed to "AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION," and they respectfully submit this recommendation to their constituent Auxiliary Liberal Leagues for consideration and action.

Voted, That, since it is inexpedient to call an Annual Congress of this League at the present time, this Board will deem itself authorized to make the proposed change of name on receiving approving votes to this effect from a majority of the Auxiliary Leagues.

Voted, That the Secretary be instructed to send a certified copy of these votes to the President and Secretary of each Auxiliary League, with a request for immediate action thereupon; and to report to this Board at his earliest convenience.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Feb. 6, 1880.

Whereas, A certified copy of the resolutions adopted by this Board on December 12, 1879, was duly sent by the Secretary to the President and Secretary of each constituent Auxiliary League; and

Whereas, The reasons therein given for recommending a change of name by this organization have been heartily and unanimously approved by all the constituent Leagues heard from at this date; and a majority of all the Leagues on our list of auxiliaries has approved the name of "American Liberal Union," while one of them has expressed a preference for the name of "National Secular Union," therefore,

Voted, That the name of the National Liberal League of America be, and hereby is, changed to AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

The False and True Liberalism in Religion.

ABSTRACT OF A SERMON IN THE DES MOINES UNITARIAN CHURCH, FEB. 1.

BY REV. JOHN R. EFFINGER.

[The following is an abstract of a sermon delivered as above, which was so well received by the society before which it was delivered that those present requested its author to furnish it for publication in the Register. With this request, Mr. Effinger has so far complied as to prepare this abstract.—ED. Register.]

The word "liberal" as applied to religion has many shades of meaning. It is used to designate those who, while they still adhere to the ancient doctrines of the Church, yet cherish a feeling of tolerance and sympathy for those who honestly reject them. Again, there are those within the orthodox ranks who at one time express the most broadly rationalistic views, and at another time subscribe to the most rigidly orthodox propositions, and their inconsistencies are supposed to be explained by saying that, though orthodox, they are liberal, a position flanked by so many soft and comfortable material considerations as well as insurance against some possible post mortem catastrophe that it is considered by many the ne plus ultra of worldly and heavenly wisdom combined.

Going outside the pale of the popular religion, we find a great body of people called Liberals, which easily divides itself into several classes. These, though widely apart in spirit and purpose, are often lumped together and treated as practically one. There are those calling themselves Liberals, who are chiefly animated by a spirit of opposition to the Church, its doctrines, its observances, its ideals. "Liberty" is their watch-word,—liberty to think, to act, to speak as they see fit. Science is their only authority.

Another class, containing many men and some women, whose worth and ability and pure aims are known of all, declare themselves outside all historic faiths and take their stand on the universal principles of natural religion. They decline to be called Christians, because they accept the popular definition of Christianity as the true one. The name, they say, has been so long associated with superstitions and absurdities that it is now inseparable from them, and in rejecting the one you must reject the other.

There are others who come under the general name of Liberals, who yet retain their allegiance to Christianity. They define Christianity to be love, courage, obedience, and devout trust, and regard Jesus, not as the sacrifice for human transgression, but as a spiritual leader and inspirer of human souls. While recognizing all that is good and true in past and present forms of religion, they deny the right of anybody to lay down propositions in speculative matters which all must assent to under pain of the displeasure of God.

My purpose to-day is to speak of Liberalism outside the so-called orthodox churches, which for practical purposes I shall divide into two kinds, the false and the true.

False Liberalism in our day is coming to have a very large following. Its main characteristic seems to be that it desires freedom, not for the sake of promoting a higher morality, but for the sake of loosening the bond of moral obligation.

It would seem that a class of men whose moral development lags far behind their intellectual have somehow come to regard themselves as leaders in the van of progress; and with standard-bearers, some of them smirched all over with social crimes and immoralities, they come forward to demand that vice and impurity shall have the same countenance and protection in the law as virtue and purity.

Those of you who are familiar with the action of the convention of so-called Liberals at Cincinnati, last summer, need not be told that I refer to its determined effort to secure the repeal of all laws prohibiting the transmission of obscene literature through the mails, and its canonization, as hero and martyr, of a man who was and is still serving out his sentence in the Albany penitentiary for the violation of these postal laws, a man who is now known as a self-convicted sensualist and libertine. And the fact that a large majority of the Liberal Leagues of this country sustain this action is enough to make one blush to hear the name of Liberal. If the word had no other significance than these men give it, we might well discard it in loathing contempt. But the false liberalism and the true are as far apart as the antipodes.

False Liberalism is without moral discernment or moral purpose. It points the finger of scorn at every moral offender inside the pale of the Church, as if for no other purpose than to throw discredit upon religion; and all the time there is a great beam in its own eye, which must first be pulled out before it can see clearly to extract the mote from another's.

If you go to this kind of Liberalism, expecting from it sympathy and help in any movement for real reform, you will be disappointed. If you expect of it a spirit of self-sacrifice for the good of others, or any personal consecration to high and holy purposes, any humility of soul before pure and lofty ideals of life and character, you will be disappointed.

To accept its proffered leadership would be to land society in moral chaos and ruin. . . . Such Liberalism as this is but Libertinism masquerading in the guise of reform.

I utterly repudiate its claim to stand as a moral force in the world. . . . It is simply an upheaval of gross passion and appetite suborning the half-developed intellect of a class to basest uses. And it is every man's duty to shun and denounce it as the foe of all that is purest and most sacred in the life of man.

Unfortunately, many persons who are not able or do not desire to discriminate present this spurious Liberalism as the true and genuine sort, and so endeavor to throw discredit on all who reject the popular faith. But I stand here to-day to vindicate the cause of a true Liberalism. I will not submit to have the cause of religious freedom represented by those who belie and disgrace it.

True Liberalism asserts for itself freedom of thought, not in the interest of the base passions and downward tendencies of human nature, but in the interest of a higher morality and the rights of the human mind. . . . It declares that as the power of human thought and observation increases, and we get larger ideas of science, of history, and government, so we get larger ideas of religion. It turns no look of scorn upon the past, but regards each step that humanity has made as full of interest and significance for the present time, and gratefully accepts the good which has come to us through the medium of tradition. . . . Its aim is not to overthrow religious faith, but to reveal its impregnable foundations in human nature itself. . . . Since it is manifestly impossible for all men to believe alike in speculative matters, it denies the right of any section of humanity to dictate to all others as to what ought to be believed. It teaches that to lay stress on speculative doctrines or forms or ordinances is but to "lithé mint, anise and cumín." . . . It insists that religion has outgrown its ancient forms and doctrines, and demands a restatement in the light of to-day, and that, because of the refusal of the Church to make such a restatement, it is losing its power over a large part of the intelligent world, causing great numbers of people to drift out year by year into indifference and even contempt for religion.

True Liberalism would try to persuade men that religion is something more and greater than any or all of its forms, and that no man can neglect or despise it without injury to his own soul. It proclaims character as the all-important thing, and that any man who puts such emphasis on belief as to make it primary, and character secondary, is not a true teacher of religion.

It deprecates the division of men into warring sects, spending their strength in mutually opposing and thwarting each other. It insists that there is common ground for all good men to stand upon, regardless of intellectual differences, and that no man who loves truth and righteousness is a heretic in such company.

True Liberalism is religious and not irreligious. Whatever denial it makes of old forms and creeds, it makes no denial of the essential thing which these forms and creeds were intended to express. . . . Whatsoever authority it sets aside, it bows with profoundest reverence before the throne of an enlightened conscience.

Says a noble representative of genuine Liberalism of the true Liberal: "He loves that word 'religion.' . . . It is to him the highest word he knows,—the word into whose syllables all noblest meanings crowd; the word that represents the goal of aspiration, the consummation of manliness, the prophecy of the human being as he is to be. . . . He humbly glories in the title too great for him to seriously claim, yet lower than that title he will not wear. It names him as he would be, if it does not name him as he is,—the religious man."

If religion is to be saved from universal rejection and contempt among the educated classes, if society is to be guided in the ways of a higher civilization, a nobler development and application of its moral power, it must be through the agency of a true Liberalism.

If the human heart is to become more truly the temple of the indwelling God, and humanity more truly united in the bonds of brotherhood; if man is to be freed from fear and shame and rise up in his true dignity as a child of the eternal love and wisdom,—it must be through the guiding, educating power of a religious Liberalism.

If we are ever to have a religious faith commensurate with our conceptions of the material universe, it must come through the courage and spiritual insight of the reverent soul of Liberalism. . . . Still there are those who try to persuade men that Liberalism which every true man must denounce is but the legitimate offspring of religious Liberalism. . . . Says our cautious friend in the Orthodox Church, "You may be all right now; but in denying the authority of the Church and the creed, and in following the delusive light of reason, you have taken the first step in the downward road of moral ruin, and who knows where you will land at last?"

I answer that, as a single matter of fact and experience, this is not true. In every community, numbers of its best and purest men and women, who are respected by all classes of society, are pronounced Liberals, of some name or other. The false Liberal, who has only a scoff and a sneer for sacred things, is oftener than otherwise the legitimate outcome of a rigid Orthodoxy. The unreasonableness of the creed, and too often the insincerity of its professors, have given him a complete aversion to everything which bears the name of religion,—even its most wholesome restraints. . . . And for this sad result Orthodox narrowness and an imperfect moral education are responsible. . . . The very fact that the Church will condone a man's heresy on condition of his silence, that the Church will receive men into her fold when she knows that they do not accept her saving doctrines, is an indication that these doctrines are really a dead letter, and that the profession of them is largely a hollow form, which must breed moral weakness and insincerity.

It is an interesting question, which I should like to have answered, why heresy is so harmless and tolerable inside the Church, so dangerous and intolerable the moment it steps outside and speaks its honest thought?

If honesty, if sincerity, if earnestness and courage, are the first steps in the downward road, then where shall we find the upward path, and who of all the saints is safe?

Friends of religious Liberalism, let us not be dismayed by the clamor of ignorant prejudice and intolerance about our ears; let us hold on our way with faithfulness and courage; let us kindle anew the fires of consecration upon the altar of our hearts, assured that it is our Father's good pleasure to give us the Kingdom, and that in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.—Iowa State Register, Feb. 3.

THE NEW ENGLAND LIBERALS.

We do not know whether the liberals of New England, the President of whose society is Prof. Felix Adler, and whose organ is THE INDEX, of Boston, Mass., will take it as a compliment or not; but in our estimation they are entitled to a formal recognition by the synagogue as adherents to Judaism, upon the same principle as Mr. Voysey, of England, has claimed for the theists that same privilege.

It was some eight or nine years ago that the writer found at his rooms in New York a note to the following effect:—

"DEAR FRIEND,—Do not fail to come up to my room this evening. Beside our usual recreation [which consisted of debating on recent literary productions, drinking tea, and playing chess], I have something novel for you, which, I am certain, you will enjoy. W. M. R."

We did not fail to go up. Our friend R., who is somewhat of a pedant, insisted upon our sitting very quietly and listening very attentively to what he was going to read. We obeyed, and to our great surprise our friend began "The Impeachment of Christianity." It was not with unmingled pleasure that we listened to the bold, outspoken, rationally conceived, logically connected, and scholarly represented argument. The millions of Christian believers who are happy in their belief, and whom such an argument might touch to the quick, were present in our imagination, and we felt sorry for them. We had been somewhat over a year in this country, knew nothing of the state of Christianity in America, and lived under the happy delusion that "the wolf and the lamb lived peacefully together," in as far as religious questions are concerned. We could not see the reason why the old scars should be stirred in such a forcible manner. Of course we exposed our misgivings to the reader. A debate ensued, and we were enlightened as to causes which aroused such attacks against the popular belief; the school of New England liberals, and their object in view.

It was then that we heard for the first time the name of Francis E. Abbot, the editor of THE INDEX, the author of the "Impeachment of Christianity," and we became a regular reader of that journal. And the more we read it, the better have we learned to respect the true manliness of the editor, the unflinching courage with which he pursued the work, and the class of people which he represented.

As the movement of New England Liberalism is calculated to unite the various elements which have placed themselves outside of the pale of the dominating belief, and as THE INDEX society works on the broadest liberal principles, neither imposing any of its principles nor allowing any preconceived notion to stand as a barrier between it and those who display its colors, it was but natural that, at the first attempts to make the movement popular, unprofitable elements should be absorbed into it together with the rest. Every one who made front against the common enemy was welcome; his motives and principles were not looked into. Thus it happened that many persons with impure motives have for a time become identified with the movement.

We were a member of the Centennial Congress of Liberals, which was held at Philadelphia in July, 1876. The proceedings of the meetings, the officious manner of some persons as well as the sentiments of some speakers, made a very discouraging impression upon us. We were sorry to see Mr. Abbot, whose earnestness, tact, and abilities we have learned to appreciate, and whose personal amiableness and quick mind and sagacity we had admired on a previous occasion—we were sorry to see him and several other members, ladies and gentlemen, for whom we conceived great respect, identified with the promiscuous assembly. We went even so far as to write to a Jewish scholar whom we had not known personally at that time, but whose name we had read in the list of Vice-Presidents, that it was no honor for him to be counted among this people. Our position toward Mr. Abbot and THE INDEX we have not changed: we continued in our respect for the man and his work. We see now that our judgment about the movement in general had been too hastily formed at that Congress, and that by earnestness, perseverance, and skill the leaders of the Liberal League of America have succeeded to a great extent to "clear the grain from the chaff." Some two years ago, at a meeting at Rochester, a split has taken place, by which the worse element of the society has been separated, and the original Society of New England Liberals stands now, weaker, perhaps, as to the number of membership, but by far stronger as to the points of earnestness, respectability, and purity of motive and principle.

This society has taken upon itself the task of performing the duties of Judaism toward the outside world. Progressive Judaism, indeed, has its hands full in making front against superstition, bigotry, and abuse of principle which have become rooted in the hearts of our own brethren during the centuries of oppression and suffering,—too much to do for itself to work for those that are outside of its pale. The agitation of a Jewish scholar against popular superstition and its consequent abuses has the disadvantage of popular prejudice against the Jew. Hypocritical Christian fanatics will say to their adherents, "Can anything else be expected of a Jew who is bound to object to all Christian institutions?" With this generalism, the argument is passed by without due examination. Not so easily can the arguments of the liberals be dismissed. They are born of Christian parents, and most of them have been raised as Christians, even adherents to the popular faith for a time. If they speak to the masses, they have more chance of being listened to. Common-sense is bound to ask the question, "Why has this man, who belongs to our own race, whose faith was for a time that of our own, broken the barriers and placed himself in opposition to that which we consider sacred?" And, if the truth will only gain a hearing on the part of the deluded, it is sure to conquer delusion. Of course, the one who addresses the people on such subjects must be earnest and pure. If any selfish or impure motives can be imputed to him, knavery and hypocrisy will turn this to their advantage. Mr. Abbot and the school of liberals which THE INDEX represents are fully qualified to labor for the elevation of the masses. We therefore unhesitatingly extend them our hearty greetings and congratulations at the beginning of the second decade of the publication of THE INDEX.—Chicago Jewish Advance, Jan. 16.

"IS LIBERALISM A FAILURE?"

It is not we that ask the question; but one of the editors of THE INDEX, the best of all the liberal—that is (we do not use the term offensively), infidel—papers. She writes in view of the fact that the great mass of the Liberal Leagues, which Mr. Abbot had done more than any other man to organize, have gone off in defence of the free circulation of writings declared indecent by the courts. She finds her private correspondence with liberals full of expressions of discouragement:—

"I am too much disgusted with liberalism," writes one, "to talk about it temperately. I consider organized liberalism a miserable failure. Any liberalism worthy of the name is yet a thing of the future." Another says: "I feel pained and disgusted, week after week, with reading the lies, slanders, ridicule, and narrow conceptions with which our papers are filled. . . . I despair of any improvement in our time to any great extent. By evolution, other generations will be wiser and cleaner, I know; but now the outlook is not encouraging." Another writes: "I am disgusted all through with things liberal, and wish the lightning would strike me into whatever is beyond this vale of hypocrisy, cowardice, and lies. What can be done? To me all is dark and dreary." Another, whom the writer in THE INDEX seems to point out as Col. Higginson, says:—

"Yes, the line is being drawn between liberalism and licentiousness; but how many will be found on the right side of that line? Time will show; and let us take time. I think, if possible, that the best thing to do is for the 'sheep' to go into retreat, while the 'goats' are rampant; to pull down our signs, withdraw our names, and—do nothing. What if we should die, being members of the Liberal League, and go to judgment? If asked if we were members of that body, what could we say? If we owned it, we should be treated as free-lovers, communists, and no better than tramps."

We are not surprised at this feeling of discouragement and disgust. The lines have been drawn between the sheep and the goats in the liberal ranks, and the goats are in an overwhelming majority. Can we tell why?

The reason is this: Christianity differs from liberalism in that it preaches self-abnegation, consecration to God, unselfish love to man, the strictest morality, and then offers infinite motives thereto, founded on hope, fear, gratitude, and the example of God incarnate on earth. It teaches with authority; it assumes to know; and then it applies the most tremendous impulses from every possible direction that can be applied to the human will. Its devotees are pledged men. They have promised to live the life of Christ, and if they fail they are perjured to their vows, and in their own belief liable to the pains of hell forever.

These supreme motives liberalism cannot, in the nature of things, whether its doctrines be true or not, supply to its supporters. It is almost inevitable that, while a few of its number may be actuated by the loftiest devotion in consecrating their lives, as some of them do, to philanthropic labor, they will always be in a very small minority. Liberalism, organized and open to everybody that holds its negations, is sure to be composed of "goats." The "sheep" will find themselves in bad company. This organization can hardly be anything else than a "miserable failure." Their decent papers, like THE INDEX and the Religio-Philosophical Journal, will have to use the best part of their energies in fighting their own side. Why, Christianity, with all its motives and pledges, has hard work to keep up a fair average of membership, even though its churches are, like Mr. Abbot's new league, a picked secession from the ungodly world. This new league has come out from the other, as the churches come out from the world. Its members are "a peculiar people," selected, like the members of the Church, on moral grounds; and we commend to them the fight which they have on their hands against immorality, and we pledge them the hearty sympathy of our similar secession. We hope that, with what motives they can muster, they will not "go into retreat," nor "do nothing"; but will fight the good fight of works, while we are fighting the good fight of faith.—N. Y. Independent, Feb. 5.

THE POPE AND THE ST. BARTHOLOMEW MASSACRE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NATION:

Sir,—In a notice of Professor Baird's History of the Huguenots of France, published in your issue of the 15th inst., you declare that the favorite Protestant view of the St. Bartholomew Massacre, which is that it was planned in cold blood and with long deliberation, and that the Pope was privy to the plot, is now clearly disproved, and never more clearly than by Professor Baird, who, however, is without mercy in his exposure of the dishonest attempts that have been made, in a sectarian interest, to relieve the Pope and his court from the shame of being accessories after the fact to this enormous crime. Your notice concludes with the following words:—

"There is one line of defence for the Roman Church, and only one: it is to affirm (as that Church does logically and consistently affirm) the rightfulness of religious persecution, and thus to justify the fierce glee with which the 'Strages Ugonottorum' was approved at Rome and commemorated in medal and in painting."

I submit that it is absurd to say that those who affirm the rightfulness of religious or other persecution are thereby justified in approving of massacre. Protestant churches, governments, and individuals have affirmed, and to some extent do still affirm, "the rightfulness of religious persecution"; but they are not, therefore, accused of giving countenance to butchery or assassination. There are Americans who hold that it would be right to put down Mormonism by force of law,—that is, by religious persecution,—but they do not imagine that this would justify them in approving of the massacre of Joseph and Hiram Smith. The massacre of the Catholic Macdonalds of Glencoe, under William III., was cold-blooded and deliberate, and more brutal even than that of the Huguenots of Paris, but it was scarcely referred to in the press or other publications of the day; there was no outburst of indignation, and Protestant Scotland and England gave it a tacit approval. Shall we, then, say that there is one and only one line of defence for the Protestants of Scotland and England of that day,—that they affirmed "the rightfulness of religious persecution," and were thereby justified in approving of the most atrocious butchery which has been committed in modern times? No: a fair and thoughtful mind will perceive at a glance that this one and only line of defence which the Nation traces out for the Pope is an imaginary line, the only point to which is that it at least runs parallel with the vulgar taste for whatever may be made to tell against the Catholic religion. What is the line of defence which Macaulay sets up for this seeming approval of the massacre of Glencoe? It is simply this: that the real facts of the butchery were not made known to the public till long after its perpetration. The Whig version was that Maclean had laid an ambush for the soldiers, and had fallen into his own snare; and the Jacobite version was that a detachment of soldiers had been sent under cover of darkness to surprise the inhabitants of Glencoe, and had killed thirty-six men and boys and four women. Neither version gave even a hint of the real facts (vide Macaulay's History of England, vol. iv., p. 172).

Now, we may set up precisely the same defence for the Pope's seeming approval of the St. Bartholomew massacre. When he permitted the "Te Deum" to be sung, he did not know the real facts in the case. The second day after the massacre, King Charles declared openly in Parliament that he had been driven to this deed of blood in order to prevent the carrying out of a Huguenot plot to assassinate the whole royal family, the King of Navarre, and the leading Catholic nobles of France. This was the version which was sent into the provinces and to Rome, and the religious services held in Rome were held in thanksgiving for the preservation of the royal family and chief nobles of France from the hands of assassins. That this was a false version has nothing to do with the question under discussion. That it was the version which the Pope received is evident from the sermon which Muret preached upon the occasion of this solemn celebration at Rome. "Veriti non sunt"—these are his words—"adversus illius regis caput ac salutem conjurare. . . . Qua conjuratione, sub id ipsum tempus quod patrando sceleris dicatum ac constitutum erat, divinitus detecta atque patefacta, conversum est in illorum sceleratorum ac fœdfragorum capita id, quod ipsi in regem et in totam prope domum ac stirpem regiam machinabantur." The version given by King Charles to his Parliament is repeated by the preacher in Rome; and it is manifest that Gregory XIII. believed, when he permitted the act of thanksgiving, that a plot to assassinate the King of France and the whole royal family had been discovered just in time to prevent a national calamity, and that the conspirators had been summarily dealt with. The "Te Deum" was in the nature of the congratulations which it is customary for European sovereigns to send in our day when an attempt is made on the life of the Emperor of Germany or Russia, or the King of Italy or Spain. Much more might be said, but I fear I may already have written more than you will like to publish. Professor Baird's book I have not seen, and can therefore say nothing of his merciless exposure of the dishonest attempts which have been made by Catholics to defend the Pope and his court.

J. L. SPALDING.

PEORIA, Jan. 19, 1880.

[The objection to the line of defence which Bishop Spalding ingeniously sets up in place of the line proposed by us is simply that it is not tenable. In the first place, neither the Protestants of England nor of Scotland have ever claimed the relation both to God and man claimed by the Pope. In the second place,

Bishop Spalding supposes Pope Gregory XIII. to have been dependent for his information respecting the events occurring in France upon the lying assertions made by King Charles in Parliament and in his despatches to his envoys at foreign courts. As a matter of fact, he was not thus dependent. He had a skilful representative in Paris in the person of the Nuncio Salviati. It is true that the first tidings of the massacre that reached Rome were brought by a courier sent by the Guises to the Cardinal of Lorraine, but it was not until letters from Salviati were received and read in full Consistory, on the sixth of September, that the good news was credited. It was in consequence of the information conveyed in these letters that the Pope and cardinals resolved on the spot to go in solemn procession to the church of San Marco to render thanks to Almighty God for the signal blessing conferred upon the Holy See and upon all Christendom. And it was no "false version" of the story that occasioned the three nights' illumination, the firing of cannon from Sant' Angelo, the striking of commemorative medals, and the painting of the scenes of the butchery on the walls of the Vatican. The Pope might pretend to give credence to the story of a Huguenot plot for the destruction of the lives of the king and the chief Roman Catholic nobles, as contained in the royal declarations. He relied, however, upon the secret despatches of his own Nuncio; and the Nuncio assured him that the rumor that the slaughter had been provoked by the detection of a Protestant conspiracy was not only false, but absurd. In his first despatch, sent upon the very day of the massacre, Salviati had not a word to say about the existence of such a conspiracy. In a letter written nine days later, having heard the royal story, he declared that it would be a disgrace for any one possessed of any acquaintance with the affairs of this world to believe it,—"ce seroit une honte pour quiconque est à même de connaître quelque chose aux affaires de ce monde de le croire" (Chateaubriand's trans.). It was with such accurate information before him that the Pope despatched Cardinal Orsini as his legate to congratulate the King upon "the glorious and truly incomparable transaction of His Majesty, which, looking merely at the matter of glory, could be equalled by no act of his predecessors."

We do not see, however, that the case for the Pope would be essentially improved, could it be shown that he was at first deceived respecting the true history of the massacre. Where and when did he exhibit sorrow or shame at discovering the base imposition that had been practised upon him? Instead of betraying any such generous emotion, he persisted in his rejoicing, instructed his legate to remind Charles of his promise to destroy every Huguenot still remaining in France, and calmly watched Vasari as he deliberately sketched and elaborated, at the pontifical command, the paintings which were to perpetuate the memory of the most atrocious incidents in the events of St. Bartholomew's day.—Ed. Nation.

SCHOOL-BOY ETHICS.

At that vealy age when a boy, contemplating the purchase of his first razor, begins to emerge from the parental leadership into self-possession, and to assume the responsibilities of his own independent manhood, there is a transition stage alike interesting and risky in its ethical developments. It is peculiarly the sowing time for boys, and the trying time for parents and teachers. The mother feels something like the hen whose chickens grow web-footed and take to the water, and the father ponders with inward seriousness the question what to do with the boy.

To begin with, considerable allowance should be made for the vituline friskings of this stage of development. There is a certain surplus of animal spirits to be disposed of. There is an acrobatic tendency, moral as well as physical. A powerful curiosity obtains to taste of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. It builds up a boy at least one cubit to light a cigarette, and to puff it in the street is a sort of challenge, and at the same time a victory of his self-assertion that makes him feel good. It is at this period that the boy begins to resent the home restraints and the teacher's rule as interferences with his incipient rights. Not that a mother's love is spurned: a large place for it is left in the hidden tenderness of his heart; but her apron-strings are no more to be his bands. Not that a father's counsels are to go unheeded, but heeded with a margin. Not that the school regulations are to be defied, but they are to be evaded. And on these tacit principles there springs up a peculiar code of school-boy ethics.

Its first law is "not to tell." By the fundamental principle of school-boy honor, tale-bearing is mean. This feeling is so firmly incorporated with his self-respect that it compromises his respect for his teachers, if they insist upon tale-bearing as a method of school discipline. Its meanness reflects itself on them, and reacts upon their discipline.

This primary law of school-boy ethics extends itself into petty deceptions and evasions. Obedience becomes eye-service. When the teacher's back is turned, the law relaxes. If the credit-mark due to genuine study can be obtained by "ponying" or copying or whispering, the difference, however fraudulent, is counted gain, and the immorality of it is discounted. It is not so, we are told, at West Point Academy. Truthfulness in all social relations, not excepting this between the pupil and the teacher, is said to be such a fundamental law of military good behavior, that all frauds at the blackboard or examinations are set down against a cadet's social standing. While eavesdropping is a shameful meanness, the school-boy's conscience palliates it, when practised to steal certain secrets of the faculty.

These petty deceptions and evasions naturally lead by easy steps to downright lying. Such a code of honor prevails that, while it is the lowest depth of school-boy meanness to "give away" a fellow-student, it is quite excusable to lie for him, and, not to love a neighbor disproportionately, to lie also for one's self.

And this untruthfulness goes a worse step further. The teachers are considered as in league with the parents. They are copartners in guardianship. That open and ingenuous frankness which ought to keep transparent the intercourse between the parent and the child is marred. The temptation is to keep from the friends at home what is kept from the teacher, and to live in certain respects a false life, the self-assertion of a bad independence. The father's purse, it may be, is used for hidden expenditures covered by the same habits of deception that have evaded the scrutiny of the teacher.

There comes indeed a time when the boy-life must begin to drop off like ripening fruit from the parent life, when the home authority merges into the boy's growing freedom. But, in order to the true ripening of a manly character, an ingenuous openness between parents and children is the most fortunate condition. The concealment fostered by the school-boy ethics belongs to a perverse and morbid development. In this connection may be mentioned habits of profaneness and vulgar talk, which could not exist in the fresh air and sunshine of an open home-life. But if they are the vernacular of the school, and if the school-life proceeds upon the dormitory system, free from family restraints, the boy of tender years by an easy absorption takes on the manners and morals of the school. And with such an isolated and independent life, never rationally intended for young boys, come slovenly habits of housekeeping, soiled carpets, tumbled beds, dusty furniture, rusty stoves, foul odors, tobacco smoke, lager beer. The latter drug is getting too free a course in some school dormitories and irresponsible boarding-houses. A close investigation might also find, were it possible to penetrate the veil of school-boy concealments, secret societies for purposes of having good times, but not at all conducive to good habits of study.

Were a close comparison to be instituted, we should probably find a striking difference in moral tone between the school-boy and the school-girl ethics, much to the advantage of the latter.

This subject needs overhauling, not only by the teachers of our academies and high schools,—although the latter need it less, by reason of their home influence and more wholesome moral ventilation,—but by the parents and guardians of our boys, and by the boys themselves. It would be a good subject for thorough discussion in their debating societies. Let the educational journals take it up. It would be a good plan for the faculties of our several prominent boys' academies to be represented in a mutual convention to compare notes on this subject, and enlighten each other on the best ways and means of ventilating and elevating the school-boy code. Is not the moral tone of the school discipline itself sometimes at fault? Does not the suspicious and police-like espionage of some teachers lead to ways that are dark on the part of the boys, by breaking down a manly self-respect, and thrusting aside that ingenuous openness which belongs to the mutual delicacy of gentlemanly intercourse? Is not the marking and prize-winning system too often a hot-bed of unhealthy character? Is it quite fair to dull and plodding boys who, as Prof. Huxley said the other day in distributing prizes to the "University college school-boys" in London, "would probably be nowhere in an examination, and who yet exert a great influence in virtue of what is called force of character"? Are such equitably weighed in the scales of examinations and reports? Have character and the education of character their just relations to scholarship in the conduct of our schools? It is a good thing to have high recitation and examination marks and to enter college without conditions, but it is a far better thing to have our boys well started during their school-days in a career of truthfulness, purity, and manly honor.—Springfield Republican, October 3, 1879.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

THE DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH says that Parnell does not tell the truth.

DEAN STANLEY was a pupil at Rugby under Dr. Arnold, and became an Oxford man. He is now sixty-five years old.

GEORGE HENRY LEWES left a sum of money to found a studentship in physiology, which is open to women as well as men.

HON. E. C. WASHBURN quite recently gave a very graphic and interesting account of "Paris under the Commune" before the Long Island Historical Society.

TOURGUENIEFF has published a letter repudiating the accusation that he sympathizes with Nihilism, and declaring himself "a liberal in the old English dynastic sense."

THE SALE OF THE pictures and drawings of the late William M. Hunt brought the sum of $63,000. It is doubtful whether they would have yielded so much while he was living.

MISS LADD, a Connecticut girl who graduated at Vassar and is at Johns Hopkins University, has displayed mathematical ability so great that she has been invited by Harvard College to take a special course under Professor Peirce.

HONORABLE RICHARD FROTHINGHAM, ex-mayor of Charlestown, Mass., distinguished as a writer of local American history, for many years one of the editors of the Boston Post, a warm friend of Thomas Starr King, and the author of a tribute to his memory, has just died at Charlestown, at sixty-eight years of age.

A COURSE OF LECTURES, under the auspices of the Harvard Philosophical Club, will be given in Boylston Hall, Cambridge, on Monday evenings, as follows: Feb. 16, William James, "A Defence of Faith"; Feb. 23, C. C. Everett, "The Comic"; March 1, Francis E. Abbot, "Philosophy the Guide of Life"; March 8, G. H. Palmer, "Progress in Philosophy."

SOME of Herbert Spencer's works have been placed on the Oxford list of text-books for students in the scientific classes, to the by no means small scandal of the orthodox. It is not so very long since the Bishop of Exeter himself shrank from giving, with the university motto, Dominus illuminatio mea, upon its cover, Mr Herbert Spencer's Sociology to a prize-taker.

ELDER ROUNDS, pastor of an Advent Church at Portsmouth, N.H., has completed a chart two hundred and sixty feet long, on which is the result of seven years of hard figuring. It proves conclusively, he says, that Christ will come in September, 1881, and remain a thousand years, during which time "all nations will be converted, and at the end of that time the world will be destroyed and rebuilt, and we reign forever in Paradise."

"DICKENS AS A JOURNALIST" will be an interesting work. There is no better training for an author than to serve an apprenticeship on a newspaper. It teaches him to keep his finger on the public pulse, to know instinctively and instantaneously what pleases the public taste. The necessity of discussing promptly and tersely a great variety of questions destroys that indolent habit of "waiting for inspiration," which is the besetting sin of artists and authors. All, or nearly all, of the great writers of the present century, French, English, and American, have had more or less editorial experience.

PROFESSOR SWING wisely remarks that it will be a great mistake and a great misfortune if the return of good times shall bring back the old fervor for property and adventure which made mortgages among the most popular things of the day. "Mortgages," he adds, "are a pestilence, and debts are a regular cholera. Estates die under them. Churches sicken, and have to be sat up with at night; individuals pine away, wives and children become disheartened in the mortgage season, and the financial gravedigger is busy day and night. Swamps and dirty houses were the black death of Europe, debts are the plague of America."

MRS. LEROY JONES, who for the last week has been supposed to be in a trance at Oswego Falls, will be buried to-morrow, as signs of decomposition have at last appeared. Her husband, who is a religious enthusiast of the Free Methodist Church, now says he was fully persuaded his wife was dead a week ago, but he deferred burial in order to give opportunity for divine interposition. He fully believed the Lord had power to work a miracle in raising his wife to life, and thought at first he saw signs of such divine intervention. He now says his faith in the return of his wife to life is all gone, and she must be buried.—New York Herald, Feb. 5.

THOMAS PAINE is likely at last to have the justice done to his memory which has so long been denied it. There have been more commemorations of his birthday this year than usual. The two most remarkable addresses upon him that we have noticed have been that of Col. Ingersoll at Chicago and of Dr. Adler at Chickering Hall, New York. The latter drew one of the largest audiences which Mr. Adler has ever addressed in the city, and filled the hall in every part to its fullest capacity. It was particularly notable for the absence of the extravagant and fulsome laudation into which indiscriminating radicals, in their efforts to establish the merits of Paine and his claims to grateful remembrance, are disposed to fall.

"ON THURSDAY EVENING I went to the reception announced in my last letter, given by Mr. William F. Gill to Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton," writes the New York correspondent of the Indianapolis Journal. "It was quite a notable evening; for, though it rained in torrents, many well-known people and some distinguished persons were present. Here, for instance, was Prof. John Fiske, of Harvard, who wrote that novel and popular series of articles ten years ago to the Atlantic on "Folklore," and is now delivering a famous series of historical lectures in this city. He looks, as he stands there, somewhat like a German or Norwegian sage. A youthful sage, though; for he cannot be more than thirty-five. He is six feet tall or more, with a high, round, well-poised head, covered with tightly curling reddish-brown hair, and full whiskers of the same clinging and tenacious mood and sandy tone, clipped short, revealing a sensitive, mobile mouth. His gray eyes look out through gold spectacles. He is already becoming plethoric, and looks like a moderately good liver,—a little Bayard Taylorish in his figure. When I asked him what he should do next in a literary way, he said another course of lectures was forming in his thought,—something of our early political history. John Fiske's habit of thought is essentially German; and, if he shall choose, he may perhaps come nearer than any other living American to doing for this country what Buckle so brilliantly began to do for England,—give something of the philosophical evolution of our national life."

THE BIRTH of the poet Longfellow is to be celebrated in the public schools of Cincinnati on the evening of February 27, the poet's seventy-third birthday. John B. Peaselee, superintendent of schools, has accordingly written to Prof. Longfellow, stating that fifteen thousand pupils would take part in the exercises, every one of whom would have learned a number of extracts. During the year, also, the superintendent has given to the scholars some forty talks, of about an hour each, upon the life and writings of the poet. In view of this study and of the coming celebration, the superintendent hoped that the poet would find time to write a few lines to be recited upon the occasion. Prof. Longfellow's response is as follows:—

"CAMBRIDGE, Dec. 25, 1879.

"My dear Sir,—I have had the pleasure of receiving your very interesting letter, and wish it were in my power to comply with your request to send you some lines to be read on the occasion you mention. But want of time and numerous engagements render it impossible. I can only send you my Christmas and New Year's greeting to the grand army of your pupils, and ask you to tell them, as I am sure you have often told them before, to live up to the best that is in them; to live noble lives, as they all may, in whatever condition they may find themselves, so that their epitaph may be that of Euripides: 'This monument does not make thee famous.' O Euripides, but thou makest the monument famous." With best wishes for yourself and all your pupils in all the schools, and the hope that your labors may be crowned with perfect success, I am, my dear sir,

Yours faithfully,

"HENRY W. LONGFELLOW."

THE HOME of W. D. Howells, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, in Belmont, is thus described by a newspaper correspondent: "To the right, sloping down into a valley, is an old orchard, luscious in its suggestiveness, while the roadside, even to the travelled path, is here filled with bushes of the choke-cherry, whereon the red, puckery fruit is hanging in clusters. We are now at the summit of this eminence, and what a view! The range takes in Cambridge, with its tower of Memorial Hall amid the surrounding foliage; on the left is Tufts College; that white shaft is Bunker Hill; and yonder is the gilded dome of the State House. What a sea of houses before you in the distance, what a beautiful meadow of green under the hill at your feet! An opening is made through this old wall to the right, which serves as an entrance; and what a charming house is that! It has a character all its own, and reminds you of the quaint old houses of colonial days, while something about it reminds you of pictures you have seen of the picturesque Swiss cottages. The lower story is of brick, the second of wood, covered with old-time shingles, painted an old-fashioned red. What a wealth of little and big windows in charming contrast, no two alike; how many cool verandas; what quaint chimneys; what a commodious roof; how odd the singularly turned pillars supporting the awning; what a novel stained glass window; how unique and picturesque the whole house! Sunflowers and goldenrod adorn the roadside, and there is such an absence of trimness, of method or neatness in the grounds as to make you in love with it at once. How you dislike smooth lawns and colored foliage plants, as you take in the native beauty of these unkempt grounds! It is the home of the greatest of our younger American novelists, and here the Lady of the Aroostook was written."

FOREIGN.

CETEWAYO IS SAID to be taking writing lessons, and spends his idle hours in writing "Queen Victoria" in a big, round hand.

BISHOP COLOGNE, of Berlin, expresses the opinion that the termination of the conflict between the Church and State is as far off as ever.

A HUNDRED AND THIRTEEN commemorative monuments have, within the past twenty years, been erected in various parts of Italy to its great poets, scientists, philosophers, and artists of the past, and to the statesmen and warriors who aided in Italian unification.

SIR CHARLES DILKE writes from France, where he is travelling: "I am amazed at the reported action of our authorities at Cabul in hanging Afghan private soldiers for fighting against us under the orders of their regimental officers at the battle of Charasiab; and, if no one else does so, I will call the attention of Parliament to the matter."

THE Italie gives an account of Peter's pence collections during this year. According to this statement, France contributed 1,100,000*fr.*; America, 900,000*fr.*; Great Britain and Ireland, 75,000*fr.*; Austria-Hungary, 700,000*fr.*; Italy, 600,000*fr.*; Belgium, 300,000*fr.*; Germany, 150,000*fr.*; Holland, 60,000*fr.*; and Switzerland, 30,000*fr.*

IN SCOTLAND, except among Catholics and Church of England people, Christmas is scarcely noticed. Other denominations who notice the season defer the rejoicings to Twelfth (old Christmas) day. A Scotchman, who was asked how Christmas was spent in his country, replied: "Hoot, awa, mon, we dinna mind the Yule,—the Christmas ye ca it, mon. A' we mind is New Year's day, and then every mon who can afford it gets drunk."

THE FRENCH COUNCIL OF STATE has given judgment on twenty-six appeals by monks and nuns against prefectural decrees removing them from primary schools and appointing lay teachers in their place,—decrees issued at the instance of the municipalities supporting the schools. Their contention was that they could be dismissed only for misconduct. The tribunal, however, held that teachers, like other public functionaries, have no fixity of tenure, and dismissed the appeals.

RUSSIAN OFFICIALS are said to excel in stealing. Millions of roubles vanish annually from the State exchequer, nobody seems exactly to know how. The latest achievement, upon a scale of unprecedented grandeur, of this class that has come to public cognizance, is the theft of eight million pounds of iron from the Juposan Iron Works, in the mining district of Uta. It is believed that the whole staff of officials employed in these works has been concerned in the gigantic transaction which has but just come to light, and small hope is entertained of bringing direct culpability home to any individual.

THE REV. THOMAS RATCLIFFE, rector of Stapleford, near Nottingham, England, complained in court that one day, when he was officiating at the funeral of a parishioner, he found the churchyard full of people, some of whom threw turf at him, knocking off his hat. On other occasions while engaged in funeral ceremonies, he had been insulted by boys, one of them throwing stones at him. For the defence, a number of witnesses were called, including one of the church wardens, who said that on the day in question the rector was so much under the influence of drink that he had to be assisted in the performance of the service. This the complainant denied, but the judge dismissed the case.

THE SON of the late Rev. Dr. Forbes Winslow is vicar at St. Leonard's, England. He is angry with persons who go to his church well dressed, but do not contribute money. "When the alms-bag is passed to you," he said in a late sermon, "you look at it as an unwelcome and impertinent intrusion upon your devotions, as an object rather of speculative curiosity than of practical import, and you pass it, with an air of languid, supercilious indifference, down a row of equally well-dressed and equally languid fellow-worshippers, who do not so much as contribute one farthing apiece to the service of Almighty God. Shame upon you! Would to God that I could raise the blush of humiliation to your cheeks, that I could goad you out of your indifference, that I could sting you to a proper sense of your indescribable and contemptible meanness!"

FROM THE GERMAN Army List for 1880, it appears that it has not yet been found possible to fill up all the vacancies in the commissioned ranks of the German forces. Of the one hundred and five regiments of infantry of the line, twelve only have at the present moment their full complement of officers. The cavalry also is short of officers, one regiment being deficient of more than half its complement of second lieutenants; but the artillery is very fully supplied. On the other hand, the number of officers not actually serving with the colors in time of peace, but whose services would be available in time of war, has increased of late; the present army list showing six thousand two hundred and thirty-eight landwehr officers of all ranks and arms of the service, and five thousand thirty-four reserve officers. The old Prussian military families, it may be remarked, are still well represented in the service, there being forty-five Arnims, thirty-eight Bülowes, and thirty-three Kleists in the list.

ONE OF THE Baptist missionaries in India, Mr. Downie, writing an appeal for more men for the Telugu Mission, to help train the ten thousand new converts, says the Devil in every form is after them. The Roman Catholic Bishop of Madras has his eye on them. A new Catholic chapel has been put up in Nellore, adjoining the Baptist mission compound, and two "European priests are busy at work, doing everything in their power, making free use of money, etc., to induce our people to join them"; and the same priests have funds for a chapel in Ongole. The heathen are also trying to win the converts back to their old religion. Mr. Downie tells the American Baptist churches that, if they would avert the threatened evil, they must come to the rescue at once, and provide men and means. Four new men are needed, chapels and school-houses must be built, and native helpers fitted out. Money invested now would be well invested. If the churches respond, they will "have in India one of the grandest missions on the face of God's earth."

A POOR COUNTRY parson writes to the London Daily News: "At this time, when there is an outcry which amounts to a demand for a reduction in tithe, will you allow me to present your readers with my actual income and outgoings for the last year: Income as commuted for 1879, £258 4*s.* 4*d.* From this sum, before I can expend a single penny for wife or family, I have to spend: Poor rate, £39 15*s.* 11*d.*; income tax, £3 5*s.* 10*d.*; inhabited house duty, £1 2*s.* 6*d.*; land tax, £11 8*s.*; archdeacon's fees, 10*s.* 1*d.*; Queen Anne's Bounty, 10*s.* 6*d.*; insurance, £1 3*s.*; collecting tithe, £2 2*s.*; total, £59 17*s.* 11*d.* This reduces my income to £198 6*s.* 5*d.* From this sum, I am obliged from my position as a country parson to deduct for inland revenue: Carriage, £2 2*s.*; dog, 7*s.* 6*d.*; man for horse, 15*s.*; school rate, £4 4*s.*; clothing club, £1; rings at church, £1; total, £9 8*s.* 6*d.*, further reducing my small income to the sum of £188 17*s.* 11*d.* This amount has to meet the expenses for a horse, without which I must resign my living, and indeed a necessity in this country as a means of communication with my parishioners, repairs of vicarage, servants, food, clothing, and furniture for myself and my wife."

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEB. 14.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, &c. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

A. Selig, 60 cents; Dr. S. C. Johnson, $5; J. J. Vertrees, $5.60; D. Bates, $2.50; R. G. Norton, 35 cents; L. F. Gardner, 15 cents; Dr. T. H. Everts, $3.20; Mrs. A. C. Spooner, $3.20; Charles Buffum, $20; W. W. Wilson, $30; T. B. Skinner, 10 cents; A. A. Knight, $13.20; A. Bate, $3.50; S. S. Green, $3; F. V. Smith, $3.20; Dr. J. P. Atwater, $1; A. J. Boche, $3.20; Edwina Brown, $3; Ca-h, $3; John Casson, $3.50; Mrs. C. B. Richmond, $4.40; J. W. Goodrich, $3.20; J. B. Bradley, $3.20; Alex. Risk, $5; T. J. Brockway, $5; International News Co., $1.52; Wm. E. Evans, $3; Mrs. E. R. Francis, $3.20.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEB. 19, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 221 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FRY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSSES B. GREENSLEDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N.Y.	5.00
A. FOLSON, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. PRESNO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York	5.00
GEN. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JERU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	1.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. SPORIS, New York, N.Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N.Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N.Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D.C.	5.00
GEO. STOKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	1.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N.Y.	3.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. MARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HOB. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N.Y.	1.00
N. LEWISON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N.Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MISS FRANCES DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
PROF. P. A. PRILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
DR. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00
MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERRILL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Braintree, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. KISK, Winthrop, Iowa	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N.Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D.C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOHNES LIENAU, New York, N.Y.	1.00
W. C. FREESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
MRS. CHAS. CHASKEL, New York, N.Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N.Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, " " "	2.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, New York	1.00
MR. GANS, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Maple Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. TRAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	1.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston	1.00
EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans, La.	1.00

S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa	1.00
F. B. MERGER, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston	5.00
MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
MRS. J. W. JUD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRALEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN	200.00
MRS. A. B. PERCIVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
CAPT. P. S. CROWELL, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
MISS MARIANNE CHRISTERN, New York	1.00
MRS. CHRISTERN, " " "	1.00
MR. F. W. CHRISTERN, " " "	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " " "	1.00
MRS. MARY F. DAVIS, " " "	1.00
M. S. FECHHEIMER, " " "	10.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Tewksbury, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. HAYNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIE S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
R. B. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
C. W. WENDTE, Cincinnati, Ohio	1.00
MRS. CAROLINE A. TUCKER, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
HANNAH E. STEVENSON, Boston, Mass.	10.00
AVERY W. HARRINGTON, Toledo, Iowa	2.00
HON. FRANCIS SPRINGER, Columbus City, Iowa	5.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
E. D. BURLEIGH, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
JAMES MCGRATH, Quincy, Mass.	1.00
REV. J. C. LEARNED, St. Louis, Mo.	2.00
W. C. FISK, Toledo, O.	2.00
JOHN CHAPPELLSMITH, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
MARGARET " " "	1.00
MRS. HINCKLEY, " " "	1.00
THOS. MUMFORD, Sen.	1.00
J. S. JOHNSON, Almont, Mich.	5.00
HENRY PRATT, New York City	2.00
REV. JUDSON FISHER, Alton, Ill.	1.00
LOUIS PRANG, Roxbury, Mass.	15.00
PROF. F. E. NIPHER, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
MRS. J. S. EDGERLY, East Somerville, Mass.	2.00
MRS. H. HERMAN, New York City	5.00
M. FRANK, " " "	2.00
M. COHN, " " "	1.00
S. GUTTERMAN, " " "	1.00
G. ENGELSMAN, " " "	1.00
ABRAHAM HERMAN, New York City	5.00
A. BLUMENTHAL, " " "	5.00
GUS. KAUFMAN, " " "	5.00
HENRY FRIEDMAN, " " "	5.00
MRS. LUCRETIA MOTT, Philadelphia	1.00
DR. G. R. MATHES, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
MRS. KATE GANNETT WELLS, Boston	5.00
JULIA A. IRESON, Lynn, Mass.	10.00
ISABEL IRESON, " " "	10.00
EMMA D. IRESON, " " "	10.00
KATE C. IRESON, " " "	10.00
JAMES DILLAWAY, Somerville, Mass.	2.00
REV. M. J. SAVAGE, Boston	5.00
MRS. S. S. AUSTIN, Cambridge, Mass.	2.00
F. T. STUART, Boston	1.00
MISS L. B. ATWILL, Boston	1.00
NANCY W. OVELL, South Framingham	1.00
HULDAH P. ROBINSON, Alston	1.00
MICHAEL NEALE, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
CHARLES COLLINS, Dayton, Ohio	1.00
HERMAN RAUBSAMEN, New York	5.00
ADOLPH WURZBURGER, " " "	3.00
A. S. BAMBERGER, " " "	2.00
CHAS. L. STIX, " " "	1.00
H. MOSENTHAL, " " "	1.00
A. A. LEVY, " " "	1.00
ERNEST EHRMAN, " " "	1.00
CHAS. F. ADAMS, " " "	5.00
CHAS. C. ANE, " " "	3.00
ALFRED WOLF, " " "	1.00
ANGEL HELLMAN, " " "	1.00
PHILIP NETTRE, " " "	5.00
WILLIAM STONE, " " "	2.00
L. N. ASIEL, " " "	1.00
C. A. CURTIS, " " "	1.00
MR. & MRS. T. A. KOHN, " " "	2.00
A. SELIG, " " "	2.00
A. LICHENSTEIN, " " "	1.00
S. BURNHEIMER, " " "	2.00
FELIX HERSFELD, " " "	5.00
M. WALLER, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL SHETTER, " " "	5.00
ALBERTINA VONARNIM, " " "	2.00
C. I. PRATT, " " "	2.00
G. H. PUTNAM, " " "	5.00
OTTO W. FETTERVER, " " "	5.00
MRS. E. B. FOOTE, " " "	1.00
EMIL COLMIL, " " "	5.00
MAX NATHAN, " " "	5.00
ALEX. GUTMAN, " " "	5.00
JOSEPH ARON, " " "	5.00
M. B. BRYANT, " " "	5.00
MRS. SUSAN T. BRYANT, " " "	1.00
I. F. CULLMAN, " " "	5.00
H. DORMITZER, " " "	5.00
M. S. ROHMER, " " "	5.00
H. R. MILLER, " " "	5.00
W. C. BANNING, " " "	1.00
I. H. ADAMSON, " " "	2.00
G. W. MILLER, " " "	5.00
W. A. KIMBALL, " " "	1.00
S. BENEDICKS, " " "	1.00
EDW. HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	5.00
LEOPOLD LOWRY, " " "	1.00
JOSEPH BECKEL, " " "	2.00
F. M. ADAMS, " " "	1.00
R. E. DIETZ, " " "	5.00
MRS. T. H. NEVILLE, " " "	2.00
S. WOLBERG, " " "	5.00
ELIZABETH HAMLIN, " " "	1.00
ELINOR HAMLIN, " " "	1.00
WILLIAM FRANKFURTH, Milwaukee, Wis.	5.00
DANIEL MUNOY, Bristol, Pa.	1.00
MRS. J. C. MILLS, Galesburg, Ill.	2.00
MISS M. C. LEEKEN, " " "	1.00
MISS S. E. DUNDY, Dover, N.H.	2.00
MRS. KATE NEWELL DOGGETT, Chicago, Ill.	1.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
MRS. F. A. ANGELL, " " "	1.00
T. B. SKINNER, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
LEVI BEADLER, Augusta, Mich.	1.00
M. B. SIBLEY, Deadwood, Dakota	1.00
MRS. P. B. SIBLEY, " " "	1.00
MR. E. F. UNDERHILL, New York	5.00
MRS. E. F. UNDERHILL, " " "	5.00
A. SCHEIDLER, " " "	1.00
L. DREYFUS, " " "	1.00
L. STAAB, " " "	5.00
M. MORGENTHAU, " " "	1.00
LOUIS R. ERICH, " " "	10.00
D. B. HESS, " " "	5.00
M. L. HOLBROOK, " " "	1.00
S. BACHMAN, " " "	1.00
D. BACHMAN, " " "	1.00

A. I. DITTENHOFFER, New York	1.00
I. EHRICH, " " "	1.00
M. R. LEVY, " " "	5.00
I. OLLENHEIMER, " " "	5.00
ROBERT FERBER, " " "	1.00
T. H. BLAKELY, " " "	1.00
SAMUEL SACHS, " " "	3.00
SAMUEL JACOBY, " " "	5.00
EMIL SALINGER, " " "	1.00
R. M. SHERMAN, " " "	1.00
J. WEINMAN, " " "	5.00
CASH, " " "	5.00
E. G. SWINNEY, " " "	5.00
MRS. C. NEYMAN, " " "	2.00
MRS. E. S. MILLER, Geneva, N.Y.	10.00
"COSMIAN," Springfield, Mass.	10.00
L. A. FAIRCHILD, Boston	5.00
MR. AND MRS. J. J. BARKER, Toledo, Ohio	10.00
B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.	2.00
JOSEPH MARSH, Northampton, Mass.	1.00
JAS. M. W. YERRINTON, Boston	5.00

Total.....$1,603.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

THE BOARD OF INDIAN COMMISSIONERS AND THE PAINE MEMORIAL CORPORATION.

HOW TO MEET, AND HOW TO EVADE, A DEMAND FOR INVESTIGATION.

The promptitude and vigor with which Secretary Schurz has recently coöperated with General Fisk in exposing and punishing the corrupt conduct of Commissioner Hayt, and the honorable anxiety he has thereby manifested to maintain the integrity of the public service, are above all praise. It furnishes a striking illustration of the manner in which a demand for investigation into alleged malpractices ought to be met in all cases, and teaches a lesson of grave significance to the "liberals" of the country at this juncture. Not to conduct their own affairs in the same spirit of jealous concern and watchfulness for the honesty and purity of their cause will be to forfeit the confidence of the community, condemn their own movements to public derision and scorn, and frustrate all their efforts in behalf of the principles they profess to serve. How to meet a demand for needed investigation, so as to turn suspicion into praise, is strikingly shown by the Daily Advertiser of February 7, as follows:—

The Hayt Inquiry—Interesting Correspondence.

General Clinton B. Fisk, to whom the country is indebted for the recent successful investigation of affairs in the Indian bureau, brought his charges at a time when the late chief of the bureau was strongly entrenched in office, enjoying the confidence of his superiors, and turning a deaf ear to complaints made in all parts of the Indian country. General Fisk had little encouragement even from his own associates, and his persistence in pressing the inquiry until they were persuaded he was right, and joined with him in bringing it to a satisfactory result, is the best possible assurance of his usefulness and fidelity as a public officer. But the following letter, received from Secretary Schurz near the close of the sessions of the board, and before its report on Mr. Hayt's offence was made public, is perhaps a more striking proof of the excellence of the service he has rendered:—

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, }
"WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 2, 1880.
"TO THE HONORABLE BOARD OF INDIAN COMMISSIONERS:

"Gentlemen,—The thorough investigation made, by a committee of your appointment, into certain charges against Commissioner Hayt, suggests to me that further inquiries on your part into the conduct of Indian affairs and the business methods and management of the Indian bureau might be eminently useful. In consequence of recent disclosures, many allegations of dishonest practices and mismanagement are publicly put forth, and it is of great interest to the service to ascertain whether they are founded in truth or not. I would, therefore, respectfully request you to appoint a committee for that purpose.

"Very respectfully yours,
"C. SCHURZ."

In compliance with this request, the commissioners appointed General Fisk and Messrs. William H. Lyon and Albert H. Smiley to prosecute further inquiries, General Fisk being appointed at Mr. Schurz's special desire. This is highly creditable to the Secretary, and gives good evidence of his purpose to let all the light possible in upon the administration of the Indian service. And there is need of a great deal of light.

A discreditable contrast to the conduct of General Fisk, Secretary Schurz, and the Board of Indian Commissioners, is the action of the Paine Hall Corporation.

In THE INDEX of January 22, a week before the annual meeting of the Corporation, Mr. Ellis published an article composed mainly of citations from original documents of unquestionable character, with only enough of comment to show their connection and bearings. It seemed to prove conclusively that the Paine Hall Fund donated by Mr. James Lick for the advancement of the liberal cause had totally disappeared, so far as the records could throw any light upon it, and that the trust created by the generous donor had been either mismanaged or betrayed. It also showed that there is reason to fear that the title of the Corporation to the Paine Memorial Building is vitiated by the fraudulency of the mortgage under foreclosure of which the Building had been sold. These two main points—namely, the alleged disappearance of the Lecture Fund and the alleged fraudulency of the second mortgage—certainly justified the call then made for the appointment of a Committee of Investigation by the Corporation itself. How has that call been met?

1. Whether reasonable or unreasonable, it is a conviction rooted deep in the common sense of mankind that, whenever a man is charged with wrong-doing, he will himself demand investigation of his conduct if he is innocent, or strive to avert it if guilty. The person chiefly concerned in Mr. Ellis' statement is Mr. J. P. Mendum. Not only has he made no demand for investigation, but he has taken no notice whatever of the invitation freely and publicly extended to him to publish here a counter-statement in his own defence.

2. So far as appears by the just published report of the proceedings of the Corporation, no motion was made by any member at their meeting for investigating the truth of the two main charges specified in the statement of Mr. Ellis, nor was any such investigation made as a fact.

3. Not only was no motion for the appointment of a Committee of Investigation made by any member of the Corporation, but a request for investigation made by one of the original Trustees, and addressed to the President and Stockholders, was wholly suppressed.

In order to be entirely fair and just, we here quote in full all the reports submitted at the late meeting of the Corporation, as published in the last number of the Boston Investigator, February 11. They are pertinent only as showing what was not done at that meeting; and we call particular attention to the total omission of all reference to the Lecture Fund and to the alleged fraudulency of the second mortgage—THE TWO MAIN POINTS RESPECTING WHICH AN INVESTIGATION WAS CALLED FOR:—

Report of the Secretary of the Paine Memorial Corporation

For the year ending Jan. 29, 1880.

In pursuance of a notice issued by J. P. Mendum to the subscribers of an agreement to associate themselves with the intention of forming a Corporation to be known as the Paine Memorial Corporation, the first meeting of said subscribers was held Jan. 29, 1879, and it was there voted to organize for the purpose of purchasing the Paine Memorial property, to pay therefor the sum of $65,000, to limit the capital stock of the Corporation to that amount, and to accept the Constitution and By-Laws as offered, and the following named gentlemen were unanimously elected Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. Elizur Wright, Horace Seaver, Jacob Bean, Russell Marston, Josiah P. Mendum, John S. Verity, Howell Matson, John A. O'Malley, and Ernest Mendum.

At the same meeting John S. Verity was elected Treasurer, and Ernest Mendum Secretary, for one year.

At a meeting of the Directors held Feb. 3, 1879, Elizur Wright was elected President, and Horace Seaver Vice-President, of the Corporation.

At a Directors' meeting held Feb. 10, Messrs. J. S. Verity and E. Mendum resigned their position on the Board in order to fill the offices of Treasurer and Secretary, and Messrs. Moses Hull and John Buntin were elected to fill the vacancies so caused.

At a special Stockholders' meeting, held Sept. 6, 1879, it was voted to purchase the Paine Memorial Building as soon as the Directors were satisfied as to the validity of the title of said property as held by Mr. J. P. Mendum, and to pay therefor the sum of $65,000 and accrued expenses since organization, less the income upon said property since said date, and that the Directors make such payment upon the said estate as in their discretion seems advisable. At this meeting there were present 870 votes.

At a Directors' meeting held the same date, it was voted to appoint a committee of three to examine the title of the Paine Memorial Building, and Messrs. Wright, Bean, and Matson were elected to serve on this committee.

At a Directors' meeting held Oct. 13, 1879, said committee report that on examination they find Mr. J. P. Mendum's title to the property perfectly valid, and that the only title to said estate vests in him, subject to a mortgage of $50,000 held by the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company. It was then voted to accept the deed of the property as offered by Mr. J. P. Mendum, and also to accept Mr. F. L. Union as a lessee of the premises for the sum of $3,500 per annum.

Voted, That the Corporation lease to Mr. Josiah P. Mendum for the business purposes of the Boston Investigator such portion of the premises as he now occupies and as are expressed by a plan accompanying the lease.

Voted, That the funds in the hands of the Treasurer, and as fast as they shall come into his possession, be applied toward the extinguishment of the debt now on the property.

The number of meetings held during the year have been: of stockholders, 2; directors, 11; largest attendance at directors' meeting, 8; smallest, 5; average, 6.9-11. Number of stockholders, 223; officers, 11; directors, 9.

Capital stock of Corporation, 2,600 shares.....	$65,000.00
Stock sold, 1,205 shares.....	$30,125.00
Stock unsold, 1,395 shares.....	34,875.00
Amount of mortgage, Jan. 29, 1879.....	50,000.00
Paid on same, Oct. 15, 1879.....	11,000.00
Amount of mortgage now on building.....	$39,000.00
In hands of the Treasurer for further reduction of mortgage.....	2,437.23
Balance against Corporation, Jan. 29, 1880.....	$36,562.77

E. MENDUM,

Sec'y of the Paine Memorial Corporation.

BOSTON, Jan. 29, 1880.

A Statement by Elizur Wright.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE PAINE MEMORIAL CORPORATION AND THE PUBLIC:—

As Chairman of the Corporation's Committee on the title of the Paine Memorial Building in Boston, it is proper for me to say that, before accepting the estate on behalf of the Corporation, the history of the building and all transactions in regard to it were fully investigated, and competent legal advice was taken, of which I herewith present a copy. The fact that certain malcontents have resorted to the newspapers rather than the courts is of itself pretty good evidence that no legal or equitable rights have been trespassed upon in the transfer of the estate which has so happily secured the noble building to the cause for which Thomas Paine spent his life.

ELIZUR WRIGHT.

BOSTON, Feb. 7, 1880.

Validity of the Title.

BOSTON, Oct. 4, 1879.

ELIZUR WRIGHT, Esq., Chairman of Committee on Title to Paine Hall:

Dear Sir,—The question having been asked me as to my opinion whether or not J. P. Mendum can give a good title to the estate known as Paine Memorial Hall, I respectfully answer as follows: After the estate was conveyed by Paul to Mendum, Seaver, and Savage, as joint tenants, they made a mortgage to the City Five Cents' Savings Bank for $40,000, which was discharged, and a mortgage made to the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company for $50,000. Then a mortgage was made to Henry A. Norris, April 20, 1875, which was duly assigned to Owen Jones, May 21, 1875. Then the estate was conveyed to Mendum, Jenkins, Seaver, Underwood, and Robinson, as Trustees, June 15, 1877. This conveyance to the Trustees was made subject to the two mortgages then outstanding; namely, first mortgage of $50,000, second mortgage of $12,000, with interest on both.

Mr. Jones entered for the purpose of foreclosing his mortgage of $12,000, and sold the estate at public auction on the premises, Oct. 27, 1877, and J. P. Mendum was the purchaser, and the deed was duly executed, and recorded to him: therefore the only title to the estate is in Mr. Mendum, except to the mortgage of $50,000, and any unpaid taxes, and Mr. Mendum can make a good deed and title to the estate. In regard to any question about the Lick Fund, I would say that it was used in the building before any mortgage was made, and properly used; and no liability attaches to the building, and I have already stated to Mendum, Savage, and Seaver, if there was any liability it was their own personal matter, for which they alone, and not the estate, was responsible.

Respectfully yours,

SAM'L W. CREECH, JR.

Report of the Treasurer of the Paine Memorial Corporation,

For the year ending Jan. 29, 1880.

RECEIPTS.

From sales of stock.....	$30,125.00
From collections.....	8.83
From rent of building.....	875.00
From part payment on stock.....	58.75
From interest of deposit in bank.....	30.00
From contributions.....	2.50
From lease.....	1.00
Total.....	$31,101.08

EXPENDITURES.

Attorney's fees for services in organizing Corporation.....	$100.00
Equity in building.....	15,000.00
Payment on mortgage.....	11,000.00
Interest on mortgage ($50,000).....	1,700.00
Balance of account with J. P. Mendum.....	9.97
Recording deed.....	1.00
Taxes on property.....	687.50
Interest on $11,000.....	68.30
Bill for printing circulars.....	3.50
Bill for repairing boiler.....	30.65
Bill for polishing doors, sashes, etc.....	53.15
Water tax.....	9.78
Cash on hand to balance account.....	2,437.23
Total.....	$31,101.08

JOHN S. VERITY,

Treasurer Paine Memorial Corporation.

BOSTON, Jan. 29, 1880.

We have examined the above reports, and find them correct.

S. R. URBINO,

JACOB BEAN,

Auditors.

It will be noticed that Mr. Wright refers, in his above "statement," to an "investigation" made before the article of Mr. Ellis was published. Whatever this investigation was, it could not possibly have covered the two main points of the Lecture Fund and the second mortgage, for the testimony of Mr. Savage was not taken, nor was he summoned as a witness by that committee. An "investigation" thus conducted was wholly ex parte; and an ex parte investigation will not be accepted by intelligent men in this case as satisfactory or conclusive. Neither does the above opinion of Samuel W. Creech so much as mention the alleged fraudulency of the second mortgage, or state that it was good for its face. That opinion, dated Oct. 4, 1879, is no answer to the charge of Mr. Savage, subsequently made, that this mortgage was fraudulent. The reports above given are utterly silent on the two main charges preferred. They will not be accepted as answering those charges, except by those who are resolved to believe without a particle of evidence. The necessity of an impartial, not an ex parte, investigation is clearer than ever.

But the pretence that an ex parte and utterly irrelevant report is a satisfactory answer to charges which it completely ignores, is not the worst feature of this business. Mr. Savage, in the exercise of his incontestable right as one of the original Trustees of Mr. Lick's two donations, made to the Corporation in writing a courteous request for the appointment at this meeting of a Committee of Investigation respecting the use that had been made of the money. This written request was addressed to the "President and Stockholders," and was put into the hands of the President in person; who, however, omitted to lay it before the Stockholders, and suppressed it altogether! By assuming the extraordinary responsibility of suppressing this very important and proper request, and withholding it from other interested parties to whom it was addressed no less than to himself, the President deprived the Corporation of a precious opportunity to set themselves right before the world, by voluntarily investigating grave charges laid at their door. This suppression of Mr. Savage's communication was a terrible mistake, extremely injurious to the Corporation, as cannot fail to appear in the end. The President's reason for it, as stated below, was that "the matters referred to" in the communication "had already been investigated and reported on." But neither the alleged disappearance of the Lecture Fund nor the alleged fraudulency of the second mortgage (the real "matters referred to" by Mr. Savage) is so much as mentioned in the "report," published above, on which the President relied; and the necessity of an impartial investigation is more obvious and urgent than ever. The proof of these statements is contained in the following letters, sent by Mr. Savage to THE INDEX for publication:—

TO THE PRESIDENT AND STOCKHOLDERS OF PAINE HALL JOINT STOCK COMPANY:

Dear Sirs,—As one of the Trustees of the Lick Building Fund and Treasurer of the Lick Lecture Fund, it is my sincere wish that a Committee of Investigation be appointed at this meeting, Jan. 29, 1880, to inquire into all transactions relative to the use and appropriation of money donated in trust for the diffusion of Liberal Thought, for which purpose Paine Hall was built.

Feeling satisfied that matters of interest will come to light with regard to the Lick Lecture Fund, and also respecting the legality of other proceedings, I respectfully submit this to your body.

THEO. L. SAVAGE,

BOSTON, Jan. 29, 1880.

BOSTON, Feb. 4, 1880.

MR. THEO. L. SAVAGE:

Dear Sir,—Your letter of Jan. 29 was duly received, but I did not lay it before the Stockholders of the Paine Memorial Corporation, because the matters referred to in it, and voluminously published in THE INDEX, had already been investigated and reported on. The Stockholders feel perfectly satisfied with their title, and, if anybody else is not, and has good reason: not to be, the courts as well as the newspapers are open.

Yours truly,

ELIZUR WRIGHT.

BOSTON, Feb. 7, 1880.

THEO. L. SAVAGE, Esq.:

Dear Sir,—Yours of the 6th received. No record was kept of the investigation, that I am aware of. I presume you will find in the minutes of the Directors the names of the committee, and the result reported by them only. The legal opinion taken will be published in the next Investigator. Every man has a right to his opinions, and to publish them to his heart's content. But I wonder at Mr. Ellis' publication in THE INDEX. He professes to be a "Liberal" and to have the honor of Liberalism at heart. He had previously published in the Herald and been answered, so that the facts on both sides were before the public. He finds THE INDEX badly disgruntled, and repeats his charges therein, that Mendum has stolen the Lick Fund and the new corporation has received stolen goods which it cannot legally hold. This would be criminal whether in Christians or infidels. If Ellis were a Christian, and Paine Hall a church, I should think him a fool to be growling in the newspapers when he ought to be prosecuting in the courts. There are some things to regret in the history of Paine Hall, but I think all of you, including Ellis, meant to be honest. Times were awful hard, none of you were much experienced in business, the Lick donation of mill property disappointed you. You all did the best you could; but unfortunately you got into a quarrel, which is always bad for sinners as well as saints. I don't think anything is to be gained by keeping up the quarrel; and I think, if I could see you, I could convince you of that. Our enemies, the ecclesiastics, don't care a pin which of us is right or which wrong. They would like to exterminate both sides, and would like to see the quarrel go on to the extent that neither party should hold the hall.

Yours truly, ELIZUR WRIGHT.

BOSTON, Feb. 12, 1880.

MR. THEO. L. SAVAGE:

Dear Sir,—I think you will find in the last Investigator the information you require. The Directors of the Paine Memorial Corporation looked into all the matters brought forward by Mr. Ellis, so far as regards the title to the estate, and no further. They found that any dissatisfaction of Mr. Lick's heirs or Mr. Ellis could not affect the title to the property, which Mr. Mendum has transferred to the Corporation, otherwise they would not have accepted it. As to breach of trust or fraud, that concerns only those who believe such a crime has been committed. I do not. If Mr. Ellis or you or Mr. Lick's heirs do, I advise you to spend no more breath or printer's ink outside the courts. There are thousands of cases of high Christian fraud, perjury, and robbery, which I should sooner help bring into court. Please tell Mr. Ellis that, if he has really got a good case of fraud against Mendum, Seaver, yourself, or the Paine Memorial Corporation, he has only to go to some worthy Christians to get all the means necessary for a successful prosecution. They will doubtless shell out the money, thank and despise him.

Yours truly, ELIZUR WRIGHT.

These letters are melancholy reading. The writer admits that "there are some things to regret in the history of Paine Hall"—as is only too evident. But he also thinks that "all of you, including Ellis, meant to be honest." That is the point to be settled now. It will be settled solely by the degree of willingness shown to investigate and rectify these "things to regret." If there is a combination to suppress investigation and perpetuate known wrong, the world's verdict will be, not that "all of you, including Ellis, meant to be honest," but that those who want investigation are honest, and those who resist it are the reverse. Nothing could be more ruinous to the cause of liberalism than to adopt the doctrine above implied: namely, that liberals ought to shield each other in wrong-doing, and expose only Christians who commit it! Such a principle would swamp the best cause in the world, and ought to swamp it. On the contrary, we distinctly and with vigor refuse to have any cause that is not honest, noble, and pure, or that can be hurt by any amount of daylight, or that exacts the least connivance with fraud, or that commands a guilty conspiracy to keep the fruits of rascality and cover it up. If liberalism is such a cause as that, so much the worse for liberalism, and we wash our hands of it forever. But this we indignantly deny. Those who insist on investigating suspected dishonesty to the very bottom, and on righting every wrong that has been committed, are the only true friends of liberalism. If not, liberalism itself is a hideous hypocrisy, a sickening sham and shame. From that crushing verdict we would fain rescue it betimes.

Reluctantly, however, we are forced to the conclusion that there is no hope of thorough and searching investigation of this case on the part of the President and Stockholders of the Paine Hall Corporation. "Go to the Courts!" they cry. Very well; the advice, though offered in bravado, is none the less good. The parties concerned refuse impartial investigation—refuse to let the truth, whatever it is, be known—refuse the appeal to reason and justice, and contemptuously refer all who want them to the courts. If, then, the liberals desire to abolish this festering scandal, to the courts must they go.

THE NATIONAL BUREAU OF EDUCATION.

It is very important that the work which our National Bureau of Education is doing should be kept before the public mind, that it may be properly sustained and enabled to continue and enlarge its functions. It is doing much to make education not sectional, but national, and at once affords information of what is doing for education in every part of the country, and tends to correct false estimates and unjust judgments. Thus, too, an experiment tried on a small scale in one part of the country is made effective as experience for the whole nation.

One of the circulars issued in 1879 is on "Training Schools for Nurses." Only nine of these now exist,—three in New York, three in Massachusetts, and one each in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and Washington. These schools have struggled through much difficulty; but now the benefit of their experience will be freely given to all parts of the country, and the circular of the Bureau will be a text-book to start with. Another circular gives a very interesting account of the various attempts at the establishment of cooking schools, and much valuable information even to individuals in regard to the preparation of food. The relation of education to labor is one of the most important questions of the day, and its practical difficulties can only be solved after full discussion and many experiments. Every record of actual experience in any department of labor is therefore a most valuable contribution to our knowledge on this subject.

Circular number three gives an interesting lecture by Dr. Jarvis on the value of "Common School Education to Labor," which shows clearly its actual practical value in the daily work of life; while the answers to queries from workmen and employers are full of rich suggestion. When practical workmen estimate the increased value of labor from education as it now is at fifty and even a hundred per cent., we certainly must wish to defend and preserve our system of education, and earnestly seek to improve it.

Number two is a report of various meetings of superintendents and others interested in education, and is full of valuable matter for thought. One of the most interesting papers is that of Mr. Orr, of Georgia, giving a résumé of the educational work done in the South before the war and since. It shows how fatal was the aristocratic system of labor to the best interests of education. Mr. Orr claims for Georgia a good provision of colleges for men and even for women. The first college which gave a degree to woman was the Wesleyan College in Georgia. But he is obliged to admit that there was no thorough system of elementary schools, and that the public school system was totally inefficient even for the white population,—the black being left wholly out of the account. But he does not overstate the difficulties in the way of the establishment of the new school system under reconstruction. The great want is of material means, and especially of well-instructed teachers. The reports of foreign schools and an abstract of the French Commissioner's paper on the schools of America are full of interest. These circulars do not dogmatically advocate any theory or method of education. The testimony of different educators is given on their own responsibility, and we may often differ from them entirely on the conclusions they draw; but they enable us to look at these disputed points on many sides, and to form an intelligent judgment, or at least to compare the opinions of those who have actual experience.

With this ample recognition of the work of the admirable Secretary of the National Bureau, we must regret that he has—we must believe carelessly—allowed himself to print at the national expense, and for national circulation, a sentence which will seem unjust and untrue to many, and which is liable to keep up that dangerous feeling of sectarian bigotry which is the most dangerous foe to our system of education. Our nation includes and affords equal rights to all religions; and Jews, Mohammedans, Buddhists, as well as many who profess allegiance to no church, take part in our government, our education, and our philanthropy. Yet Gen. Eaton, in his address to the Washington School of Nurses, makes the following statement:—

"The fact that a training-school for nurses is new will be sufficient to arouse opposition in some quarters. Need I say that, without and beyond the influence of Christianity, this objection might be fatal? For other religions leave no room for what is new, and do little to inculcate those sentiments of benevolence which make it a duty and an honor to relieve every form of human distress. . . . Moreover, no other than Christian civilization has given to woman the sphere you offer her through this school," etc.

Is it possible that Gen. Eaton did not read Ivanhoe when he was a boy, and does he not remember that the lovely Jewess (who was not a mere dream of Scott's imagination, but drawn from life) says: "Among our people, since the time of Abraham downwards, have been women who have devoted their thoughts to Heaven, and their actions to works of kindness to men; tending the sick, feeding the hungry, and relieving the distressed"? This is true of the Jewish race to this day, who found hospitals, and care for the sick quite as well as Christians, and whose women not only possessed much skill in nursing, but medical knowledge also. The leading woman in Berlin, in philanthropy, is a Jewess. And one need have done no more than read Mr. Arnold's lovely poem, the Light of Asia, to smile at hearing that no religion but Christianity inculcates benevolence and the relief of distress, since that is the whole foundation of Buddhism, and is really the side on which it goes to such excess as to require a sterner doctrine of utilitarianism to balance it. Gen.

Eaton is not a theologian, and in his active and useful life has probably had little leisure for the interesting study of the history of religions; but, remembering that he speaks with national authority, he should be careful not to use expressions which would unnecessarily wound the religious sensibilities of large bodies of the American people. This may seem to some a trifling criticism; but, when we remember how critical are the relations of religion and education in our country to-day, it is important that we should most carefully guard against the slightest wrong done to any body of religionists, as we must guard the school system from any false assumptions on their part.

E. D. C.

Communications.

MORALITY AND RELIGION.

How far, if at all, morality depends upon the religious sentiment, and whether that sentiment will survive and flourish when the doctrines of the Christian system shall have become no longer believable, are questions of absorbing interest in high literary quarters, and are already challenging popular attention. Earnest and reflective persons in all ages have agreed that morality as an end, or at least the chief condition and factor of social life, is the supreme good. As such it becomes of right the test of all philosophies, institutions, doctrines, and tendencies of thought. The difficulty lies in the crudeness and want of discrimination in its popular application. A parent who secures obedience by the threat that bears will come out of the dark and eat up bad boys would impute immoral tendency to a natural history that discredits such fears, and would not see how by such a pretence he became implicated in a personal immorality.

Morality and truth are essentially one. Whatever is untrue cannot consist with absolute morality. This would no doubt be conceded on all hands; but it would still be claimed that, while truth is ultimate, underived, and self-sufficing, morality depends upon something that is ultra-human, and must have sanctions and supports derived from realms beyond experience, and so not within the scientific jurisdiction; that there is no logical basis, no sufficient motive or sanction for morality outside of the religious feeling.

It is further claimed in the same connection that there can be no healthy or helpful religious development, except as it is built about a frame-work of doctrine not amenable to the canons of science.

Now it seems to me this position can be refuted both on theoretical grounds and by appeal to facts negative and affirmative. A chief difficulty, however, confronts us at the start, in that religion insists on faith as the supreme moral act, and the sole test of all questions in this high realm. We are thus hampered at the outset by religious definitions and scales of value which reason cannot submit to, and which religion finds it difficult even provisionally to lay aside in order to find a common starting-point. This starting-point is the gist of the whole contention, and the religious attitude is well expressed by Faraday, who, in answer to the question how it was possible for one of his intellectual sagacity to subscribe to the tenets of the sect to which he belonged, replied: "In those matters, I prostrate my reason. Were I to apply the severe method of science to religious questions, I should become an unbeliever." Of course reasoning is foreclosed where faith is itself the sufficient ground for the truth of its statements. Still it seems to me the difficulty comes of confused thinking and bad statement.

It may indeed be the case that there is a realm of fact forever irreducible by intellectual processes; an unknown and an unknowable that forever renders a complete philosophy of things impossible to us. But, if so, then one thing is certain: no fact in that realm can be the subject of any affirmation. No revelation of anything is, in the nature of things possible, except to and through the intellect. Strictly speaking, we have no faculty to discern truth, to state it or to take another's statement of it, except the intellect. To put words into sentences with subject and predicate, and to derive meaning out of sentences, are intellectual acts; and it is a bad psychology to claim any such a function for the heart, or for any other faculty than the intellect. If the word faith shall be defined to include the act by which the truth of propositions is apprehended or facts perceived, then to just that extent is an act of faith an intellectual act. When one is said to speak from the heart or to the heart, every discriminating thinker understands the affirmation to be that the intellect—the intelligence—takes present emotion as the subject-matter of its discourse, and deals with it in a manner calculated to excite emotion in the hearer. Some are so constituted that emotion is a chief fact with them. Such, unless disciplined by the severe method of science, will make crude and puerile interpretations of what goes on within them, and will impose what they weakly think spiritual laws upon the outer world. But whatever the subject-matter of discourse, whether emotion, spiritual realities, Bible phrases, or material processes, propositions whether wise or foolish are purely intellectual products and amenable to intellectual criticism. It is not a correct account of what takes place to say the intellect "prostrates" itself as in the presence of what it recognizes to be authority. If there is not present what the intellect accepts purely on intellectual grounds as sufficient evidence of the truth, and it yet affirms the statement to be true, then is the intellect prostituted, suborned, and debauched.

The word faith in such derivatives as faithful, fidelity, etc., carries moral implications of the highest order; but as an intellectual process it is a flat failure. To say that it is the substance of things or the evidence of things is to say what is not true, at least in the world we know. It is to mix up mental states with outside realities. A profound faith in the attainability of a desired end may stimulate effort, and indirectly develop many high qualities; but to say that faith is itself either the substance or the evidence of the thing to which it relates is a fatal intellectual confusion. Such an hallucination, persisted in with reference to any practical concern in this world, would send its victim to a lunatic asylum. It surely cannot be a proper method anywhere.

It matters not what the devotee may say or think about it: if he believes at all or thinks he does, it is because he has reasons for it, however puerile they are in fact. Men may think foolishly, and reason like idiots, but they cannot think outside of the thinking faculty. The error and pretence grow out of a state compounded of mental inertia, influence of vested social interests, and want of intellectual honesty. But intellect always has drawn and always will draw all things after it. Morality itself requires it; and it never rises higher than when the thinker on purely intellectual grounds lays aside, as absolute, formularies that have enshrined and symbolized the highest sanctities. Devotion to truth, as it is in nature, and reverence for rectitude and the integrity of human nature, if not religion, is something better.

It is a misfortune to have thus to use many words to find our criterion and method,—to make our own tools before we can proceed to our discussion of the nature, relations, and respective value of religion and morality. It might have seemed sufficient to refer to the rapid conquest by the scientific method of one field after another from that domain into which it has been thought sacrilege for science to intrude, and argue thence the ultimate conquest of the very citadel of faith. But it is more to my purpose to show that scientific progress is only a deeper loyalty to the truth of things, and is essentially and intensely moral, and is also identical with what is best in religion.

Every religious system claims for itself special, exclusive, divine authority, and is by the logic of that claim pledged to hostility to all other systems. Religion, historically, is ethnic or racial. It cements and solidifies the tribe; while morality is broadly human, and is an essential factor of social life as distinguished from national life. The central injunction of morality is reciprocity; of religion, obedience. Morality grows out of and implies the relation of mutuality and equality, and includes the humanities of mutual helpfulness and the reprisals of self-defence; while religion is parental and autocratic, including the benefits and evils of loyalty, protection, and despotism. As within the brotherhood of the same allegiance, the requirements of religion may adopt, and become entirely identical with, those of morality; but as to persons of another faith, or no faith, the claims of morality are over-ridden. By relaxing the severe logic of religion, and confining its discriminations to other-world relations and interests, simple morality has come out clearer, and is better observed than was possible when religion took full jurisdiction of temporal matters. The theory of morals—that is, morality considered as a body of doctrine—has always suffered from alliance with theological doctrines, as political rights have by alliance of State with Church.

The most pathetic and eloquent cry of all the ages was wrung from the great heart of Job, when men with moral sense and common sense perverted by theological conceptions vilified him as unworthy of respect, and made him an outcast from their sympathetic regard.

The great tragedy Christendom weeps over, it daily in million-fold ways repeats by condemning to death, to infamy, social ostracism, public and private scorn and censure, on purely religious grounds, persons of whom the unreligious moral sense says, "I find no fault in them."

Morality, as a body of rules, or a sense of obligation, grew out of the experienced good and evil consequences of particular classes of acts as related to other persons in general. The standard of every age and people is derived from its own needs. It is never in fact adjusted to other-world conditions. Neither the moral sense nor the moral code has a supernatural source or other-world adjustment. It is elementary in human nature, sanctioning conduct all experience shows to be essential to general social life. Projecting itself into the next world, as the belief in immortality emerges, it built heaven and hell, whose glories and gloom reflecting back seem to give sanctions to social duty, that are ultra-experimental. The religious sense, though narrower and more special, is not less in the natural order. It is constituted primarily of the good and evil, consequent, respectively, on allegiance and obedience or on insubordination and rebellion to superior power. That experience, capitalized and transmitted by inheritance, became the fear, reverence, and sense of obligation we call religious. As one or the other of these forces was dominant in society and in actual control has the corresponding sentiment been dominant. When no temporal sanctions any longer attach to conduct adjusted to supposed supernatural relations, the formularies and forms of such conduct will slowly pass away; but no qualities of character that are useful to society will be lost. Reverence, humility, and resignation are too deeply rooted in human nature to be much disturbed by a change of theory about the unknown. There may indeed be a moral interregnum, but it will be because the minions of an effete dynasty refuse allegiance to the rising republic.

Under a government by the people, of the people, for the people, duty will more and more assimilate to the moral and less to the religious. The religious aspect of it will become a reminiscence and a sentiment restricted to ideal relations. Cardinal Manning's "supernatural order" will never again, let us hope, penetrate, take possession of, and become concentric and coextensive with the civil and political administration.

The central, genetic distinction, then, of the two kinds of obligations, is one is duty toward persons irrespective of rank; the other, as to a superior, and, in its highest idealization, to the supreme. True, as civilization advances, religion adopts the moral code, and gives to its injunctions a flat value; but it waters the stock with rites, which it floats by putting on the stamp of the sterling duties. Upon that side have come all the great impostures that have cursed society. The religious sanction has never been wanting to the greatest despotisms and injustices. I do not remember any great crime that was ever done in the name of morality. If religion could discard its peculiar code, and become identical with the requirements of natural morality, a certain gain for conduct would be conceivable. But it resists any such a theoretical reconstruction. Considered as divine commands, all sense of proportion in duties is lost. A violation of the least is as fatal as of the greatest; and the unnatural contrivance of substituted punishing and imputed virtue is made necessary. Modern society with all its precious freightage of high interests cannot be run on that theory.

A certain warmth is imparted to character when duty is performed as obedience to divine command; but the broader view, which conceives it as rooted deep in the nature of things, away beyond the power of any will to disturb, and is offended by the claim of a flat value, cannot be charged as lowering its authority or making its basis insecure.

The religious view, hampered by the traditions of the divine character and behavior, seems to me to obstruct the rectification and adjustment of the moral code to the needs of modern society. Supernaturalism and divine caprice are obsolescent conceptions. So far as they have relation to real facts within or without, they are misinterpretations. But the emotions and qualities of character popularly associated with them, and supposed to grow out of them, so far as they have a practical human value, are rooted too deeply in human nature to be harmed by truer interpretations.

It is easy to understand how, to those whose emotional life and intellectual habits have become adjusted to the traditional view, it should seem that the grip of duty, and the very substance of obligation, would be gone, if their familiar formularies were discredited. But the sublimest moralities of history are built on the broader conception. If occasion offers, I will in another paper consider some factual details bearing on the practical value of the two views.

E. D. STARK.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 22, 1880.

THE LETTER AND THE SPIRIT.

There have been two schisms in the Society of Friends, mainly concerning "the Man Christ Jesus,"—one in 1880, and the other in 1827; and these divisions of sentiment may be considered an epitome of those which have agitated the Church during the last eighteen hundred years. We read that "there was division because of him" in early times; and these divisions, "the fathers" tell us, were caused by a literal rendering of the Scriptures. Origen, Athanasius, and Augustine, warned most emphatically the people against this. Says Athanasius, "If you understand sacred writ according to the letter, you will fall into the most enormous blasphemies."

Notwithstanding this, and the declaration "that the letter killeth," we find in ancient and in modern times orthodox and liberal erring in this respect; and in THE INDEX they are frequently to be seen!

The Friends are now united in holding Christ to be an inward principle of light and power in the soul,—first of light, and then of power! John Woolman says, "There is a principle in the human mind which hath in different ages and different places been called by different names: it is, however, pure, and proceeds from God." No student of the Scriptures need be told of the many names by which Christ is called. Jesus uses "the spirit of truth" and "the Son" as interchangeable terms, and that by a realization of this principle we are "to be set free,"—herein "being baptized into Christ we have put on Christ." And we Friends claim that this is the true "Messianic idea" which Jesus taught, and which was not a personality, but a principle, a "seed" in the human mind; and that this was so much his story and his theme that his friends, when they came to write about him, used his name as a synonyme to denote it and to express it.

Now take Acts x., 43, to which my friend, "C. K. W.," objected in No. 512 in THE INDEX: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remissions of sins." This is a discourse of Peter's, and he is speaking concerning this principle, as in verse thirty-seven we read, "That word, I say, ye know," or in verse thirty-three it is written that "God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost," which again is but a synonyme for "the Spirit of Truth."

My desire is, as God's servant, that we Free Religionists may be baptized into this principle, immersed into it, and the letter of Scripture will not then kill a proper understanding of the text. Elias Hicks said that Jesus never called men unto himself. And is this not clear, when he says, "That it is expedient that

I go away, for, if I go not away, the Comforter will not come"? The apostle, also alluding to the same theme, says, "I live, but not I: Christ liveth in me." The gospel (I speak not of books) invites men to this universal Christ: Paul calls it "the hidden mystery Christ within," "Christ the power of God." In reading the Scriptures, we should make allowance for the wealth and the warmth of the Orient, and not interpret them according to the rectangular Western mind.

DAVID NEWPORT.

ABINGTON, Pa., 1st mo., 7th, 1880.

LIGHT WANTED!

DEAR EDITOR OF INDEX:—

Although a diligent reader of THE INDEX for several years, I am still bewildered about the mysteries and problems of existence, and to-day I have tried to imagine what would have been the result, if a plain revelation had been made, or plain rules of conduct given. Leaving out Holy Ghosts, Virgin Marys, Trinity, Hell, Devil, etc., would it have saved us from persecution, bloodshed, insanity, and all the horrid evils of religion, so called? Or is our nature such that fighting and horrors are our lot? If so, why born? and where shall we bring up? If we are derived from the ape, at what link in the chain were we immortal? And why immortal, if this world is the best they have to give us?

IN THE DARK.

JESTINGS.

A RATHER gayly-dressed young lady asked her Sunday-school class what was "meant by the pomp and vanity of the world." The answer was honest, but rather unexpected: "Them flowers on your hat."

A LITTLE BOY of four was sleeping with his brother, when his mother said: "Why, Tommy, you are lying right in the middle of the bed: what will poor Harry do?" "Well, ma," he replied, "Harry's got both sides."

A LITTLE BOY was sent to a shop for some eggs. Before reaching home, he dropped them. In answer to his mother, who asked, "Did you break any?" he replied, "No, I didn't break any, but the shells came off some of them."

THE REV. MR. — was once called upon to marry a man to his fourth wife. As he approached the couple he said: "Please to rise." The man wiggled about in his chair a moment, and finally spoke: "We've usually sot!"

AN IRISH GENTLEMAN having purchased an alarm clock, an acquaintance asked him what he intended to do with it. "Oh," said he, "it's the most convenient thing in the world; for I've nothing to do but to pull the string and wake myself."

"CAPTAIN, please give me a light," said a volunteer the other day. "Certainly; but, if we were regulars, such a liberty would not be allowable." "Is that so?" said the private; "but if we were regulars, you wouldn't be captain, perhaps."

A CHILD OF SIX YEARS of age, having the story of the fall explained to her, meditated for a considerable time on it, when she suddenly broke out: "Aunt, when Adam and Eve disobeyed God, why did he not kill them, and begin over again?"

IT IS WELL to be exact, although the belief may be carried too far for the symmetry of the sentiment. A Buffalo man wrote to a Danbury relative of the death of a young friend. "Her wearied spirit sank to rest at twenty minutes to three, railway time."

A GENTLEMAN has started a café just opposite a cemetery. He dedicates his house "to those coming from funerals," and announces on his sign, "Private rooms for all who desire to weep by themselves. Wines and liquors of the very best."—Paris Letter.

AN OLD SCOTCH LADY, who had no relish for modern church music, was expressing her dislike for the singing of an anthem in her own church one day, when a neighbor said, "Why, that is a very old anthem. David sang that anthem to Saul." To this the old lady replied, "Weel, weel, I noo for the first time understand why Saul threw his javelin at David, when the lad sang for him."

SILENCE does not always mark wisdom. I was at dinner some time ago, in company with a man who listened to me, and said nothing for a long time; but he nodded his head, and I thought him intelligent. At length, towards the end of the dinner, some apple dumplings were placed on the table, and my man had no sooner seen them than he burst forth with, "Them's the jockeys for me!" I wish Spurzheim could have examined the fellow's head.—Coleridge.

A NEW CATECHISM for the use of candidates for the ministry has been prepared by an able newspaper reporter. It runs something like this: Q.—"Have you such a thing as a memory about you?" A.—"I have." Q.—"Is it conscious or unconscious?" A.—"It is unconscious." Q.—"Does it assimilate or appropriate?" A.—"It appropriates." Examiner.—"Mark him 'Passed with distinction,' and give him a church on the avenue at once."—Chicago Tribune.

YOUNG MAN, don't swear. Swearing never was good for a sore finger. It never cured the rheumatism nor helped draw a prize in a lottery. It isn't recommended for liver complaint. It isn't sure against lightning, sewing-machine agents, nor any of the ills which beset people through life. There is no occasion for swearing outside of a newspaper office, where it is useful in proof-reading and indispensably necessary in getting forms to press. It has been known, also, to materially assist the editor in looking over the paper after it is printed. But otherwise it is a very foolish and wicked habit.—Oshkosh Christian Advocate.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
" 13 " 25 " 8 " "
" 26 " 51 " 6 " "
" 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:--

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

Gentlemen,--Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns--better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address
THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:--

- WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
- WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
- Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
- GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
- DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
- Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-fly, N.Y.
- J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
- C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
- W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
- BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
- ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
- JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America--that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,--is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or $0 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS.

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion.

A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,--all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873.

Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874.

Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonneschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,--as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"--together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875.

Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876.

Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,--together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877.

Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting, 1878.

Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,"--why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Newman, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879.

Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, P. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.--Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.--Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.--Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.--Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.--"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.--"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.--"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.--The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.--The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.--The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.--The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.--Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.--On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.--A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.--The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET, Boston Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal
DEVOTED TO
FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

- W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
- W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
- Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
- GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
- DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
- Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-fly, N.Y.
- J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
- C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
- W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
- BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
- ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
- JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

THE INDEX aims--

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of these several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).....	1.50
ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days. A new edition.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Meg, Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
Higher Cousins, or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrations.....	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins".....	1.50
Under the Lilacs. Illustrated.....	1.50
Work: A Story of Experience.....	1.75
Silver Fishers and Independence. A Centennial Love Story.....	1.25
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Rhawl-Straps.....	1.00
Cupid and Chow-Chow, &c.....	1.00
My Girls, &c.....	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinefor, &c.....	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
Culture and Anarchy.....	2.00
Last Essays on Church and Religion.....	1.50
Naked Essays.....	2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma".....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism; with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.....	1.75
Isaiah XL. With the shorter Prophecies allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes.....	1.50
French Eton.....	1.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Rible Reading for School.....	.35
Higher School and University German. With New Preface.....	2.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
Lombard Street.....	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.....	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
Mind and Body.....	1.50
Logic. Deductive and Inductive. 1 vol. Cloth.....	2.00
Emotions and the Will.....	2.00
BARING GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages.....	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.....	.75
Eating and Drinking.....	.75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper.....	.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New Edition. The entire work, with a complete Index. 2 vols.....	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. Cloth, extra.....	1.50
A Book of Poems.....	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). The Foot Naturalist. With Memorial Verse. Thoreau (Mrs. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside. Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals.....	1.25
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
CLIFFORD (Wm. K.). Seeing and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols.....	7.00
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	1.50
Childhood of Religions.....	1.25
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	5.00
CONWAY (MONOURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Idols and Ideals.....	1.50
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	3.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Country. or, Women's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.90
Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	3.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Different Eras of Flowers.....	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth.....	2.00
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol.....	1.75
Orchids.....	1.75
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization.....	2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.....	1.75
Intellectual Development of Europe. 2 vols.....	3.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated.....	1.50
Daniel Deronda. 2 vols.....	3.10
Felix, or, the Radical's Daughter.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.00
Romola. Illustrated.....	1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner. Illustrated.....	1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series. Portrait.....	1.50
Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and other Pieces.....	1.50
Solitude and Solitude.....	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. George Eliot's translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Outline of Comparative Mythology, based on the Doctrines of Evolution with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols.....	6.00
The Unseen World, and other Essays.....	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Transcendentalism in New England.....	2.50
Life of George Eliot.....	2.00
Grand and Good.....	1.00
Cradle of the Christ.....	1.75
Rising and Setting Faith.....	1.00
Visions of the Future.....	1.40
Beliefs of the Unbelievers.....	.25
Sermons. Old Series. 40 numbers, each 2 vols.....	5.50
New Series. 75 numbers, each 1 vol.....	1.00
Stories from the Lips of a Teacher.....	1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs.....	1.00
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Safest Creed.....	1.50
Knowledge and the Will.....	1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) complete Works, including Monographs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 8 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCOIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	1.75
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Elizabeth F. Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigma of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.....	2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMBERTON (PHILIP G.). A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Art.....	2.00
Round my House.....	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River. The two in one volume.....	2.00
Wendeholme: A Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire.....	2.00
Modern French Painting.....	2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner, R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts.....	2.50
Etching and Etchers.....	5.00
Harry Blount. Passages in a Boy's Life on Land and Sea.....	1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living.....	1.50
Days.....	1.50
Woman's Wrongs.....	1.50
Summer Rest.....	1.50
A New Atmosphere.....	1.50
Staircase Blocks.....	1.50
Wool Gathering.....	1.50
Sermons to the Clergy.....	1.50
Sketches and Sketches.....	1.50
First Love is Best.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters.....	1.40
Verses. Enlarged Edition.....	1.25
The Story of Boon. A Poem. Paper covers.....	.35
Bits of Travel.....	1.25
Bits of Talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks.....	1.00
Rita of Travel at Home.....	1.50
Nelly's Silver Mine. A Story of Colorado Life. Illustrated.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.). Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. A Story of the Revolution.....	1.50
Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of, with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME (DAVID). The Life.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons and Sermons.....	1.50
Critiques and Addresses.....	1.50
American Addresses.....	1.25
Physiography, an Introduction to Study of Nature.....	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.....	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.....	1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. Physics and Politics. Or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50
III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerodynamics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
X. Science of Law. By Prof. S. Ames.....	1.50
XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Marey.....	1.75
XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper.....	1.75
XIII. The Theory of Descent and Darwinism. By Prof. Oscar Schmidt.....	1.50
XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Vogel.....	2.00
XV. Funct. By M. C. Cooke, M.A., LL.D.....	1.50
XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.....	1.50
XVII. Money and Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons.....	1.75
XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel.....	1.50
XIX. Historical and Messmates. By Mons. Van Beneden.....	1.50
XX. On Fermentations. By P. Schützenberger.....	1.50
XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Bernstein.....	1.75
XXII. The Theory of the Relation to Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.....	1.50
XXIII. Studies in Spectrum Analysis. By J. N. Lockyer.....	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
China.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions, by B. A. Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Bolog Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	8.00
KNAPPET (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.....	1.00
LOCKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	3.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life. Problems of Life and Mind. Vols. I and II.....	3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind.....	3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method.....	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Works.....	2.00
A Fable for Critics.....	.75
Under the Willows and other Poems.....	1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal.....	.75
Three Memorial Poems.....	1.25
Free-lance Travels.....	1.50
LURBCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
Pre-historic Times.....	5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 6 vols., each.....	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty, both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	2.50
Autobiography.....	2.50
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
The Ship in the Desert.....	1.50
Songs of Italy.....	1.25
MIVAT (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
Man and the Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol.....	2.00
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.....	2.00
Catechetical Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes.....	1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau. 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., etc.; completing the work. Four vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
On the Origin of the Species. Delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873.....	1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India.....	2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.). A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.90
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham. The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHILIPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolley Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedge and the Woods.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.50
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Avis.....	1.50
Trinity's Wedding Tour. Illustrated.....	1.50
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.....	1.50
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc., With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHÉLLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.A., M.D., F.R.S.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. Logic. By W. S. Jevons.....	.50
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Trays.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	2.00
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
TROBIAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	7.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	7.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	1.50
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Electricity and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	.50
Vols. III, IV, and VI, each.....	.375
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Sanctaries.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.....	1.50
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.....	2.00
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	1.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Panels. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIKIE'S (JOHN G.) Poems.....	1.00
Child Life.....	2.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.

VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving Principles of the Ox Brain and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.

A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workingman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

MR. CHADWICK'S NEW BOOK,

THE FAITH OF REASON.

"Of all preachers occupying regular pulpits as distinguished from lecture platforms, he seems to have completely emancipated himself from pulpit conventions. His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence. . . . When we consider their quality, we marvel, for what sermons of the day can compare with these in richness, force, and beauty?"—Rev. Dr. F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

FOR

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,

23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?

11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidence for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address
B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

for

TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 18 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING

NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort. Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Keunen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE FAITH OF REASON. A Series of Discourses on the leading topics of Religion. By John W. Chadwick, author of The Bible of To-day. Price $1.00.

"His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit-teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence."—Rev. Dr. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 283 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Geo., author of the Enigmas of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete Index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half Calif. $6.00.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

A CHEAP OFFER

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 9,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH

AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27th YEAR. A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS' LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
2. Max Müller.
3. Emerson.
For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N. Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR.

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest inventions and the most recent advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all Inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & Co. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 531.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEB. 26, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

THE LIBERAL PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution; including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSES.

MR. GLADSTONE recently said: "To my great pain and disappointment I have found during the last three years that thousands of churchmen supplied the great mass of those who have gone lamentably wrong upon questions involving deeply the interests of truth, justice, and humanity." He had not heard from the National Liberal League and the Paine Memorial Corporation.

LORD BACON pithily said: "Men mark when they hit, and never mark when they miss." And he quotes the old Pagan who, being shown a temple filled with pictures of those who had been saved from shipwreck and had paid their vows, and being asked if he did not now acknowledge the power of the gods, replied: "Ay, but where are they painted who were drowned after their vows?"

A COURSE of lectures upon the great pioneers of German religious thought will be delivered in this city in March, by Mr. Edwin D. Mead. Mr. Mead has recently returned to Boston from Leipzig, where he has been for a long time pursuing his studies in philosophy and religion. A transcendentalist himself of the Emerson and Parker school, he is sure to treat such thinkers as Lessing and Kant and Fichte in a most sympathetic spirit, and whoever has at heart the interests of a genuine philosophy of religion should endeavor not to miss this opportunity for fresh contact with the great German idealists.

COL. HIGGINSON tells this good story: "I have heard a story about G. W. Curtis, a story which is good enough to be true, and which ought to be true, and so I have never asked Mr. Curtis to verify it. He was a delegate to the State Convention at Syracuse, and while at the hotel he overheard a conversation about different conspicuous delegates. Finally, to his consternation, they edged around to his name. 'There's Curtis,' said one. 'Yes, there's Curtis,' said the other, emphatically. 'Curtis is a good deal of a man,' said the first. 'Yes,' responded the second, 'he's rather intelligent.' 'He is,' said the first, 'he is quite intelligent.' 'He is quite intelligent,' said the second, 'very—uncommon intelligent—for a literary man.'"

SOME WICKED SCEPTIC wrote this to the Boston Advertiser: "The following was suggested by a paragraph on the 'conscience fund' in your issue of the 26th of January. Last summer I was present at a certain place, when a certain woman was asked whether or not she should vote. Her reply, in substance, was that she should not; that, having laid by a little money, she was afraid that the assessors would ask some uncomfortable questions, which would lead to the discovery of said money and taxation on the same; that she had been posted by another woman, who also had a snug little sum of money concealed from the assessors. What an opportunity to increase the conscience fund! What a purification the ballot would receive, if surrounded by half a million such women!"

THE Religio-Philosophical Journal pithily remarks: "When the seventy-five Methodist ministers called on Gen. Grant, their talking man began with the singular remark, as a reason for their seeking the interview: 'They had been appointed by God to be leaders of men.' Admitting that God had so appointed them, what had that to do with Gen. Grant's candidacy for the Presidency? His answer was most adroit, for he told them that during the war the Southern branch of the Methodists were against the union, while the Northern were loyal. This 'call' business is a sham that school-boys nowadays laugh at. God no more calls preachers than he does hod-carriers and boot-blacks. Men call themselves to professions they are nowise suited for, and God should not be held responsible for their miserable failures."

THE Catholic Review thus meets the statement that "Romanism has never made the slightest impression on native-born American Protestants": "For concentrated ignorance of the facts in the case, that assertion is worthy of Joseph Cook, while for prophetic insight it might be envied by the conductor of Zadkiel's Almanac. Here in New York we have one new religious congregation of secular priests, the Paulists, almost entirely made up of men who were once 'native-born American Protestants.' In North Carolina there are several Catholic churches whose congregations are made up almost exclusively of this element. Brownson was American by lineage and Presbyterian by education, as is also Father Augustine Hewit. Dr. Gans was not only American, but had been a minister of the Dutch Reformed Church for twenty or thirty years prior to his conversion. And there is hardly a Catholic church in one of our large cities which does not count converts of this class among its faithful members."

REV. M. J. SAVAGE, in a late discourse, thus expressed the vital difference between Christianity and Free Religion, though without using those names: "It is our business in this matter of opinion to search simply for truth. Emotion, the love of the heart for systems in which we have been trained,—O friends! I feel it as keenly as you,—but I have learned this one thing: emotion is called out by those things that we have long associated with, that we have learned to love, with which we have become familiar. No man can have this sentiment concerning anything or any person that is new. It needs time. The thought of the last century becomes the sentiment and poetry of this; and the thought of this century will be the emotion and poetry of the next. It is our business—for our own sake, for God's, for the world's sake—to find what is true, and let the heart come after and learn to love and venerate and worship the truth. It is not the heart's business to lead the head, but the head's business to lead the heart." Christianity has always made the heart lead the head: Free Religion makes the head lead the heart. Both head and heart are equally permanent in human nature, but great mischief comes from inverting their true relationship.

PROFESSOR DAVID SWING says in the Alliance: "Expositions are as needful in theology and morals as in agriculture and manufacture; and, if liberalism has any goods, it should meditate over the loss of business it must incur by this failure to advertise. It may be that the Orthodox party being the more numerous can call together a multitude more easily than its rival can summon one; but it is more probable that its multitude when called is more willing to obey. To be easy and lazy is one of the vices of all religious liberalism. The narrower a man is, the more active he will be in the one direction. Hence a Roman Catholic is more zealous than a Protestant, because by becoming broader the Protestant becomes more quiet, as voices rattle more in their narrowest places and grow silent where they are broad. As a Catholic surpasses a Protestant in fervor, so an Orthodox Protestant will attend more symposia in a year than a heretic would attend in a lifetime. A Mississippi politician will utter more red-hot eloquence in a year than a Webster would promulge in a century, because the Yazoo man performing in a small circle bobs around very rapidly. Liberalism is indolent to the degree of its liberality. Its opinions are so broad that it does not earnestly desire to contradict the ideas of anybody under the sun. 'All are about right. It needs no Chautauqua Lake or Ocean Grove with which to inculcate ideas, for all ideas are already good enough. Let us have peace.' Now this is really the vice of liberal thought, and almost warrants the conclusion that the narrowest minds will always rule the world, because the more narrowness the more activity."

AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N.Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Irvington, Ind.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSETHAL.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Ed. of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York.
 W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Ed. of "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....Chicago, Ill.
 COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill.
 DR. T. L. BROWN.....Binghamton, N.Y.
 HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa.
 MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.....Tenasly, N.J.
 MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....Lottsburgh, Va.
 JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N.Y.
 RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N.Y.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

Miss JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....W. H. HAMLEN.
 F. E. ABBOT.....C. D. B. MILLS.
 D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
 Arkansas.....JOHN ARENS, Monticello.
 California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
 Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
 Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
 Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOBLT, Greenville.
 Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
 Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
 Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
 Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
 Iowa.....J. C. MICHENER, Ader.
 Kansas.....JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
 Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
 Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
 Maine.....D. W. BROWN, Bangor.
 Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
 Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
 Michigan.....KARL SCHMEMMANN, Detroit.
 Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
 Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
 Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
 Nevada.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
 New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
 New Jersey.....FRANCOIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
 New York.....C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
 North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
 Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
 Oregon.....SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
 Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
 South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
 Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRIOR, Chattanooga.
 Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
 Vermont.....R. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
 Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
 West Virginia.....DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
 Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
 Dakota.....D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
 District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
 Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
 Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.

D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL UNIONS.

(Barred by the American Liberal Union.)

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
 SYRACUSE, N.Y.—[Officers not reported.]
 ALBANY, N.Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
 BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
 PASSAIC CITY, N.J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
 JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
 ROCHESTER, N.Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Cale.
 CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS; The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y. MOSES HAYS, Rochester, N.Y.
 FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. URBINO, West Newton, land, N.Y.
 Z. T. WATKINS, Syracuse, N.Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N.Y.
 NETTIE C. TRUEDELL, Syra-FRANCOIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, case, N.Y.
 GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MOSES W. DODGE, Albany, N.Y. waakee, Ill.
 HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y. J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N.Y.
 SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
 W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. HOPE WHIPPLE, Boston, Mass.
 T. O. GAGE, Fayetteville, N.Y. D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
 R. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, CHARLES ELLIS, Boston, Mass.
 JOHN W. TRUEDELL, Syra-Mass.
 CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Al-Mass.
 ERNIE TURK, Chelsea, Mass. JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N.Y.
 JOHN NILL, Watertown, N.Y.
 E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass. M. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N.Y.
 THOS. D. GAN, Albany, N.Y. JOHN PREST, Albany, N.Y.
 JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N.Y. C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
 D. B. MOREY, Malden, Mass.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Dec. 12, 1879.

Voted, That, in the judgment of this Board, the name "National Liberal League" has become so widely and injuriously associated in the public mind with attempts to repeal the postal law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature by mail,—with the active propagandism of demoralizing and licentious social theories,—and with the support of officials and other public representatives who are on good grounds believed to have been guilty of gross immoralities,—that it has been thereby unfitted for use by any organization which desires the support of the friends of "natural morality."

Voted, That for this reason the Directors of the National Liberal League of America recommend that the name of this organization be changed to "AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION," and they respectfully submit this recommendation to their constituent Auxiliary Liberal Leagues for consideration and action.

Voted, That, since it is inexpedient to call an Annual Congress of this League at the present time, this Board will deem itself authorized to make the proposed change of name on receiving approving votes to this effect from a majority of the Auxiliary Leagues.

Voted, That the Secretary be instructed to send a certified copy of these votes to the President and Secretary of each Auxiliary League, with a request for immediate action thereupon; and to report to this Board at his earliest convenience.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Feb. 6, 1880.

Whereas, A certified copy of the resolutions adopted by this Board on December 12, 1879, was duly sent by the Secretary to the President and Secretary of each constituent Auxiliary League; and

Whereas, The reasons therein given for recommending a change of name by this organization have been heartily and unanimously approved by all the constituent Leagues heard from at this date; and a majority of all the Leagues on our list of auxiliaries has approved the name of "American Liberal Union," while one of them has expressed a preference for the name of "National Secular Union," therefore,

Voted, That the name of the National Liberal League of America be, and hereby is, changed to AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Decay of Faith.

A DISCOURSE DELIVERED IN LYNN, FEB. 2, 1880, BEFORE THE FIRST FREE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY.

BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Death is the last act of the soul upon the world's stage, the end of the book of life. Its image is cold and forbidding. Death has no attractions. There is no charm about the form robbed of life's warmth and color. In the realm of Nature death is fulfilment. The seed we plant in the ground must decay that the life-germ contained within its folds may have birth and come forth into the light! Nature in her season of decay puts on but a border of mourning,—changes scarcely a seam in her robe. There is a truth in decadence which all have not yet learned. Did we look rightly at the decaying form, we should see not the image of death, but the image of life.

The same law governs spiritual and material things. The life-form perishes when the life outgrows it, or can no longer use it; and the faith-form decays when faith rises above it. There is to-day a wide spread complaint that faith is decaying; but by faith is meant belief in certain theological statements. A general falling away from the old creed-worship is noticed. People do not trust so much to outward observance for the perfecting of human character. Those dogmas that were uppermost in religious exercises half a century ago have fallen into disfavor. The soul has lost its belief a thousand times, but faith in what is good has remained. Forms have perished, creeds have become too narrow; but the soul lives on, and believes as sincerely to-day as it ever believed. The ideas of an angry God and an endless hell have passed away, and we do not lament their departure. Believing, we rejoice to see such things removed. New stars rise when others set, and the decay of the present forms of religious belief will be succeeded by better and truer expressions of human faith.

There are times when the soul is stricken with doubt, when it looks out upon life with no hope in its eyes; but such times do not last. Faith often wavers, is often shaken, but it is a fact not to be blotted out. There is decay of a certain kind of faith, but its decay will bless the world rather than harm it. The credulity that could be imposed upon is dying out, though it is not all dead. The Christian Church everywhere stands upon this credulity.

The ancients painted Love blind. It is faith that is blind to-day. Superstition cannot boast as many victims as a century ago, but it does too much mischief yet. The old belief that there was a God who could be made to obey the wishes of man, that he would do man's work, feed the poor, clothe the naked, enlighten the ignorant, is decaying; and it ought to decay. Such a belief has no truth and no sense in it.

Prayers for the divine hand to do what the human hand left undone; prayers for the divine heart to send its throb of sympathy where the human heart refused to show the feeling of love; prayers for divine aid where human assistance was denied,—are not sent to the divine ear in such clouds as they once were. There is need enough of help; but the help man needs must come from man. If a human being starves, it is man's fault. If a human soul grows up brutal and ignorant, human society is to blame. If men and women are slaves to earthly things, men and women have made them so. There is dearth of moral life, and there will be as long as animal life can hardly be sustained. Men cannot be rounded out in their intellectual faculties while their bodies are pinched and starved. The world walks six times to the bench, the field, the loom, for once to the lecture. This ratio shows the relation between the body and the soul. As long as it takes six days of the week to feed and clothe the body, we need not wonder that the soul is poor and ragged. Instead of praying God to check vice, remove evil, teach ignorance, relieve suffering, and help the unfortunate, let us set about doing it ourselves. We cannot shift our responsibility; and to profess to have faith in prayers to God for such blessings as human love alone can bestow is a pious excuse for meanness and selfishness.

There is nothing that this age needs more than religious common sense. A thousand follies are worn around the neck of piety. Religion is covered up with beautiful hypocrites, and whatever is true and good is crowded out with pious appearance and pretense of sacredness. The world has been imposed upon by priestly tricks.

We want religion cleared of all those mysteries that serve only to confuse the understanding of man. A simpler thing than religion cannot be imagined; a more complex thing than the popular theology can hardly be constructed. The world has been fooled long enough by holy legerdemain. There is nothing in pure religion and undefiled that cannot be understood and practised by every soul. We have numbered our temples with useless material. Scores of ecclesiastical traps choke the aisles of our churches, and there is more red tape in religion than in politics. Hundreds of petty things are loaded down with divine meanings that are only devices of sacerdotal ambition and avarice.

The faith that clings around the temple is more sacred than the temple itself. The reverence that adorns the altar makes it beautiful, not the jewelled trappings that deck the shrine. The feeling which springs from man's heart is the consecrating power, not the words of the priest. In vain were all the splendid words of ordained lips to awake the loyalty of the human heart to the high name of truth, were choose his own position; and, if he take anti-Christian ground, he has no place in the Christian camp." The only apparent meaning of this is that we must take a man as his name, definitions, and creed are. To do this honestly and justly, we must assume that a man is truly represented by his name, definitions, and creed. And Dr. Bartol's sermon, except the fatally true and fine passage I have quoted, is written from this thoroughly orthodox, thoroughly superficial, and thoroughly false point of view. In the passage I have quoted, Dr. Bartol appears at one moment to pass over the brink of the most evident application of orthodox assumption. In saying, "But there is no proper anti-Christianity," he for the moment implies that the profession of anti-Christianity is the sinful hypocrisy of a bad heart, and that, when we find this profession, we may be sure it is a lying profession, and that behind it is a son of Belial, a child of the devil, a mind without noble gifts and a heart without pure qualities. This is the only consistent ground for an attack like Dr. Bartol's on the Unitarian position, and several of his phrases, by the way, are justifiable only from this point of view, such as his implication of Unitarian "indifference about truth, or whether anything is true"; his curiously wild vaticination,—"Unitarianism will be defeated, discountenanced, and defaced, by becoming a vast, unfenced field or space, for the ventilation of all the opinions that can blow under the sun"; his reference to asking "impiety to preach"; his comparison with the case of a man who invited one in to criticise his own family as "imposters"; and his implication that on Unitarian ground and under the Unitarian name "liberty becomes a spurious liberalism," and "liberty becomes a foul libertinism," in consequence of being "without limit, moral discrimination, and legal guard." These words of hard side-hitting are honestly due only from one who sincerely holds that a mistaken creed worn on the outside produces a bad heart and foul character in the inner man.

Dr. Bartol's next sentence is: "But a man mus

Dr. Bartol cannot ride the orthodox hobby backward into the abyss of unreason and uncharitableness without vacating his life-long seat as a profoundly inspired and rarely gifted master of free grace and truth; and, to be consistent, he must either deny the real word of God so abundantly and so beautifully spoken by him, and asserted still in the passage which I have quoted, or take back his harsh, unjust, and entirely unsustained criticism of Unitarianism. To elect to remain inconsistent can only make him a lost leader, however he may continue to think and speak free truth on the one hand, while smiting it on the other hand. Free truth, as even Dr. Hedge admits, and as Dr. Bartol asserts in the passage quoted above, does not and cannot identify creed and character, and refuse to meet on common Christian ground one who, in name and definitions and profession, is anti-Christian, while in real grace and truth of heart and life, of gifts and qualities and conduct, he is clinging, though with a noble freedom and fine individuality, to the ideal which was essentially the mind of Christ.

There could hardly be for a scholar and a thinker a more superficial course than that of following the vulgar Christian world of disciples, from Peter downwards, in its assumption as to what real Christianity is. The term Christ properly "connotes," not the personal element of Joshua the joiner, whose Hebrew name turns, in passing through Greek into English, into Jesus, but the pure spiritual element of the consecrated martyr-teacher,—Christ meaning consecrated. And if one found in the ideas of this consecrated martyr-teacher something to prune away, incidental mistake not contrary to his chief conceptions, common justice would take him by his truth, his ample truth for which he lived noble and died faithful. Both the personal element and the individual element of incidental error fall away, and are left out of account in real justice to a master and martyr of the character and rank of Christ or Socrates. Not only that, but true recognition of such a master is not a discipleship to him and his authority, but to grace and truth, in a freedom, a direct worship, and an independent consciousness parallel to his; so that, of two professors, one taking—from deep and pure and noble regard to divine ideals—anti-Christian nominal ground, and the other nominal Christian ground from motives of common conformity the first is sure to be the repeater of the position and figure of Christ, and the second almost sure to smack of anti-Christ, repeating the position and figure of the foremost originator of pseudo-discipleship, the chief enthusiast of those who devised for themselves the name and authority of Apostles, to whom Christ said, "Get thee behind me; Contrary One: thou art my stumbling-block; for thy thoughts are not on the things of God, but on those of men,"—the whole fault of contrary Peter consisting in that very reference of Christ's truth to Christ's person instead of to God, which Dr. Hedge accepts from "the Christian world." Dr. Hedge sustains his profession of pseudo-discipleship—conformity to the Christian world—by making reference to that word of devised Apostolic dogma, "Father, Son, and Spirit," which is, to all scholars untainted with the spirit of conformity, one of the most certainly late inventions of contrary apostolic construction of a gospel about Jesus, substituted for the original master's gospel of pure theism,—the pure things of God.

Dr. Hedge, instead of making up an illusive appearance of Athanasian Apostolic Catholic Unitarianism, which counts three and says they are one, might wisely take example from Dr. Rowland Williams, an eminent Cambridge University Broad Churchman of Dr. Hedge's own generation, who wrote:—

"There was one faith of Christ, and another of the apostles and men after the Apostles, and yet another of the monks after Athanasius. . . . In the New Testament, Christ himself, in his most genuine doctrine, seems to turn the Messiah of Daniel, as he does all the other Old Testament glories, into a spiritual sense; making our war one of the mind; our victory—over sin; our King—the Spirit of God; our prophecy—truth; our sacrifice—self-dedication; our resurrection—the revival of the soul from the death of sin; our valley of Hinnom—the burning pain of remorse. But, as the spirit becomes turned into flesh, they who thought that the body of the new faith raised by Jesus was his fleshly frame turned many other of his sayings into carnal grossness. What Christ spake as images, they take as truth, and use to destroy the truth. . . . There is now as much a veil on the hearts of Christians as formerly on those of Jews. They do not see the end of the gospel; that is, the thing signified in it. They have no eye for the idea. . . . I believe in the eternal spirit, mysterious, eloquent, life-giving; whose scripture is the Word, and whose son is Mankind."

The author of these sentences wasted consummate ingenuity upon the hypocrisy of churchmanship, although he meant, if he ever left the Church, to go to America and imitate Theodore Parker's experiment rather than join with Unitarianism. But with all his Anglican phrases, definitions twisted towards old error, and creed simulating detected falsities, he held in the spirit the simple truth of the mind of Christ, from which the apostles departed flagrantly, and to which the Christian world has been true only in a deepest and best life of God in the soul, and not in definitions, dogmas, creed, and formal confession. The Unitarian hearing, then, of Jew and anti-Christian, was a meeting of types of the consecrated mind, like to the mind of Christ; and there was more joy in heaven over such unity of spiritual brotherhood than there could be over any number of Christian worlds emulating the Pharisee in the temple. By all high rules of spiritual life, sound philosophy, genuine learning, and noble manners, Unitarian Christians, in proportion as they were superior to the Christian world and flesh and devil,—never far apart,—were bound to hear Mr. Abbot for what they spiritually discern in him, the abundant cleaving of his soul to genuine grace and truth, and not for his mere name, and definitions, and reading of Christianity. And the more they thought him wrong in his reading and defining and naming, the more bound they were by their adherence to the mind of Christ to close with him in brotherly conference, to cheer him with applauding hearts for the figure he yet keeps of pure and brave love of holy truth, and to conspicuously acknowledge that before God and in true Christian view his standing is not forfeited by any errors of opinion,—least of all by an error so entirely on the surface as his opinion that the Catholic Apostolic doctrine, in its narrow, shallow, and rigorous Jesuitism, represents that pure and simple Christ who was crucified for doing precisely what Mr. Abbot is doing, teaching the way of grace and truth so far outside of recognized religion that the Biblical men or Scribes said he had overthrown the Jews' Bible, as no doubt he had; and the orthodox or Pharisees said he had utterly broken their Holy Seventh Day (Saturday), the Jew Sabbath, as unquestionably he had, and that without devising a Jew Christian Sunday to take its place; and the hypocrites or professional religionists said that he had put their religion and fellowship and dignity in the way of coming to an end, as most truly he had, by taking the lowly, the human, and the loving as his principles, until all love and all trust made religion, all humanity made his church, and all ministering service made his dignity.

There are two kinds of discipleship, posterior and parallel. The Apostles and the Christian world have been posterior disciples, with the unhappiest capacity for going off in wrong directions after the "things of men," leading one another astray, from contrary Peter down to Dr. Hedge and Dr. Bartol, until in great part they have made a Satanic Christianity in place of the original and pure Christianity of the master and the martyr of the cross. The parallel disciples are those who have with free individuality pursued "the things of God," out of conscience and consciousness like those of the mind of Christ; and if, from necessary denying of Satanic Christianity they have supposed themselves no way Christian, the error, serious as it is, especially in its injustice to their prototype, does not at all deflect their discipleship from absolute truth; and could they be aware with how much finer originality, more radical truth to pure ideals, more heroic courage, and more darkened and lonely suffering, the young master of Galilee and martyr of Calvary had gone before them, they could not but study generous justice to him in the reading of religious history. That a body of posterior disciples can move so nearly on the true line as to break with contrary wrong-headedness, and hail across no great separating distance one whose shining track is true to the divine goal, a parallel disciple, having the way and the truth and the life with refusal and denial of the name, is an event fit to make joy in heaven. How it has made Dr. Bartol sorry, not to say wroth, is an enigma, the solution of which, I trust, is not to be found in Dr. Bartol's complaint that Mr. Abbot was heard "while Christian instructors of not inferior genius, and with a truly precious word, were silenced and left out." Even unselfish pique was too false a key for Dr. Bartol to strike without peril to his own truth and honor as a seer and speaker of the divine word.

The intimation which I gave in my first paper that I would deal with Dr. Martineau's position, I have not yet followed up, because I desired to first dispose of the more immediately pressing matters which I have now treated. I shall come now to Dr. Martineau, for the special purpose of dealing with his denial of the Christian name to such "Pure Theists" as Francis W. Newman and Frances Power Cobbe. Dr. Martineau, I may say, is not at all as solid as he is brilliant; is not so much a scholar as he is a scribe; much more a rhetorician and priest than he is a thinker and master of prophetic insight. He has very fine powers and very rare qualities, and his heavenly vision has been deep and broad, if only it could have made itself superior to his life-long hesitation to follow truth simply, and not forever halt between truth and tradition, advanced prophecy and a backward church. Dr. Martineau is enslaved to a sense of his own importance and infallibility; and, where he might have been a foremost wise man, he is too often a foremost sophist. Nothing could well be more false to his own light than his conspicuous abuse of science in Dr. Tyndall, the misrepresentation of facts, the vaulting derision, the unveracious and uncandid rhetoric, which brought him the applause of the whole bench of English bishops, a body probably as wanting in truth pure and simple as any bench of priests ever seen. Dr. Martineau was an eager and bitter Confederate in the war time; he went heart and soul with the corrupt and malignant aristocrats, and was warmly in favor of allowing Confederate cruisers to fit out in Liverpool. I can see precisely how a great scholar, honest, able thinker, and boldly straightforward radical, like George Grote, fought with all his might the attempt to seat Dr. Martineau in the London University or University College chair of Moral Philosophy. Mr. Grote was right. Dr. Martineau thoroughly knows the things of God, but he habitually keeps his eye on the things of men; and as preacher, rhetorician, and controversialist, he pretty commonly postpones the former to the latter. I do not know in the history of religion a more marked failure of a really rare and able man to have the courage of his knowledge and convictions, and to set truth above tradition. That my judgment rests on facts will appear from the studies which I have made of Dr. Martineau's position.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

HIS ONE-HUNDREDTH LECTURE BEFORE THE CONCORD LYCEUM.—REMINISCENCES OF AN ERA OF REFORM.

Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson delivered a lecture last evening in the regular course of the Concord Lyceum. The event was a notable one in many respects, and peculiarly so in that the lecture was the one-hundredth that, during his long literary career, Mr. Emerson has read before this lyceum of his own town. The customary request was made at the opening that, if any reporters were present, they would make no report. What here follows must not be regarded as a non-compliance with the request: it presents no more, if so much, of the lecture as any receptive and retentive hearer may to-day convey orally from house to house for the delectation of his or her appreciative friends who were unavoidably detained at home. Not many of this appreciative number permitted themselves, however, to be thus detained. The spacious town hall was quite full, though there was no uncomfortable crowding. The Boston trains, especially that of the Lowell road, brought up a very considerable number. The occasion passed off very successfully; for the lecturer appeared in excellent voice and vigor, for one whose years count up to seventy and seven, and his eyesight proved also equal to the task, for in only one word did his reading vary from the manuscript so far as to obscure the sense, and this was promptly rectified upon the suggestion of his daughter who sat near the platform.

Mr. Emerson announced the subject to be "Historical Notes of Life and Literature in Massachusetts." He said that there are always two parties,—the party of the past and that of the future, or that of the establishment and that of movement. It is not easy to date the eras of activity which from time to time are manifest with anything like precision; but the period beginning about the year 1820, and ending twenty years later, is to be regarded as such a one. It may be characterized as a war between institutions and nature, which caused a split in every church, as of Calvinists into old and new schools, and Quakers into old and new schools, and new divisions upon questions of politics, temperance, and slavery. The general mind had become aware of itself. Men grew conscious and intellectual. The swart earth spirit which had made the strength of past ages was all gone, and another hour had struck. In literature there appeared a decided tendency to criticism, and young men seemed to have been born with knives in their brains. The popular religion of our fathers received many shocks during this time; but much is to be attributed to the slow but extraordinary influence of Swedenborg, a man of prodigious mind, tainted, as I think, with a certain suspicion of insanity, but exerting a powerful effect upon an influential class. As among the more immediate causes of this intellectual and reformatory activity to which he had referred, the lecturer named the impression made upon the young men gathered at Cambridge by Edward Everett, who had just returned from Europe after a five years' residence there, and who presented with natural grace and splendid rhetoric some of the phases of contemporary German philosophy and literature. Dr. Frothingham and Professor Norton also contributed in making familiar the latest results of German thought.

But more potent than any of these influences, as a paramount source of the religious revolution of the period, was modern science, especially the science of astronomy. It came to be apprehended that, as the earth is not the centre of the universe, so it is not the special scene or stage on which the drama of divine justice is played before the assembled angels of heaven, the planet being but a speck in the created universe, too minute to be seen at the distance of many of the fixed stars, which are plainly visible to us. These new perceptions required of men an extension and uplifting of their views as to the dealings of the Creator, and they received a confirmation in the then new science of geology. The writings of Dr. Channing, especially his papers on Milton and Napoleon, the first specimens in this country of that large criticism which had given power to the Edinburgh Review, were among the sources of this new intellectual activity. Channing, said the lecturer, was regarded as the star of the American Church while he lived; and we thought then, if we do not think now, that he had no peer. His sermons and addresses are printed, but the eye and the voice could not be printed: his discourses lose their best in losing him. Reference was made to the beginnings of cooperation among the new order of thinkers, and it was stated that nobody knew who gave or when was first applied to these the name of "Transcendentalists." The organ of this new order of thinkers, the Dial, was mentioned; and quite a full statement was made respecting the Brook Farm experiment, with incidental comment on the theories of Owen, Fourier, and other socialistic reformers. Much of this comment was evidently designed to be amusing, and called forth the laughter of the audience. Two specimens must here suffice. The married women, he said, uniformly disliked the Brook Farm way of life. It had too much of the hotel about it. A common school might do very well; but a common nursery was not to be tolerated. It might be admitted that the incubator has its advantages, but the hen on her own account must prefer the old way. Amid these scenes of "attractive labor," he said, the country members were astonished to see that one man of the association ploughed all day, and that one looked out of the window all day, and perhaps drew the first man's picture as he appeared when ploughing; but both got the same wages at the end of the day. He thought that Brook Farm had not proved wholly a failure, but that many practical lessons had come from the experiment, and that America of to-day is no longer eccentric or rude in its strength, but begins to show traces of a continuous and steady growth, whose proportions shall befit the spaces of the continent.—Advertiser, Feb. 5.

"ALOHA!"

"ALOHA!" A HAWAIIAN SALUTATION. By George Leonard Chaney. (Boston: Roberts Brothers. 1880. 16mo, pp. x.-299.)

Mr. Chaney, a well-known Boston clergyman, spent the first four months of 1876 in a tour to the Hawaiian Islands, visiting Oahu, Maui, and Hawaii, and seeing as much of the group as any recent traveller has seen except that energetic English tourist, Miss Isabella Bird. He had the usual experience of visitors to these islands, a vivid enjoyment of the two things which, for the heroine in Lothair, made life worth living, namely, "climate and the affections." The Hawaiian climate and scenery are unsurpassed. The joyousness of the aboriginal people, and the hospitality of both aborigines and foreign settlers, are things scarcely conceivable by the American who has not seen the islands. It is the most experienced travellers who find the amiability of the natives and the charm of the foreign society to be exceptional. Rightly or wrongly, Mr. Chaney repeats old testimony when he says: "Honolulu is socially the Paris of the Pacific, the most cosmopolitan city, perhaps, in the Western hemisphere. . . . I question if anywhere in the whole world general society is more attractive than in Honolulu. Nowhere else do so many nationalities blend in harmonious social intercourse." Mr. Chaney enjoyed this society without analyzing it. He might have pointed out that a main secret of its charm is to be found in its isolation. In Honolulu, the Anglo-Saxon, the Frenchman, the Chinaman, the German, are divided by thousands of miles from their natural battle-fields in politics, art, and religion. The island capital is neutral ground; for a social centre it has its little court; add that as to site and climate it is an earthly paradise, and it would be a hard case if its people could not agree, as they mostly do, to base their society upon their common sympathies, and to let the secular quarrels alone. It is a charming society, and yet there is in it a fault which Mr. Chaney has not recorded, and perhaps did not perceive, an ailment which is chronic, and which is aggravated by this very remoteness, otherwise socially lenitive, from the older worlds: it is the prevalence of personal gossip. The subtlety and energy which in other capitals, large or small, are given to public affairs, are in Honolulu devoted to an active, penetrating, and tireless interest in one's neighbor's affairs. It is a simple case of the conversion of forces.

But Mr. Chaney spent great part of his time in the saddle and elsewhere than in Honolulu. The island of Oahu, with its beautiful windward ravines; Maui, with its yet wilder scenery; the "mystery and majesty" of the great gorge of Iao, its broad fields of sugar-cane and its rare filices (Mr. Chaney and his family, who accompanied him, fell into the latest island fashion during their stay, and became ardent fern-collectors); and, chiefly, the great mountains and solemn desert uplands of Hawaii, with its greatest of living volcanoes,—these were what fully satisfied our traveller's heart after the somewhat unsubstantial nature-worship that he learned in the vicinity of Concord. He describes with enthusiasm the beauty of Hilo Bay, his point of view being the fronting islet, fringed with cocoanut-trees, which forms a part of its barrier from the waves of the Pacific. Mr. Chaney had previously seen many of the famous landscape views of Europe, but he says:—

"If there is anywhere else in the world a view in which grandeur and sweetness so conspire to elevate and console the spectator as the view from this island, I have not found it: Byron's Bay in front, its face all smiles,—not laughing, far removed from that immeasurable laughter of the ocean which Homer celebrates, and in which there seems something almost sardonic,—then the keen edge of the beach flashing over the blossoming waves like a sickle that forever cuts a field forever blooming; . . . the fields of sugar-cane, the uplands covered with rich Hilo grass; then the belt of forest trees; and above all, yet in and through all, for we feel its presence even when its form is shut out by clouds, stands Mauna-Kea, the perfect mountain. It has the greatness of angels, above us, yet with us."

Mr. Chaney has the gift of poetic expression, as will be clear from the above quotation, though his book is not free from faults of taste. It deserves to be widely read in this country of unrest: it is a vivid, enthusiastic, and, from the tourist's point of view, not over-flattered picture of a contemporaneous lotoland and one of the most charming countries in the world.—New York Nation, Feb. 5.

AN AMERICAN KING DAVID.

When the Spaniards, under the famous Cortés, came to Mexico in 1519, they found the country inhabited by people already civilized. About a hundred years before, the Tezucucans, the most enlightened of the native tribes, had a prince whose history has a striking resemblance to that of the Hebrew King David. His name is a hard one, but, by dividing it into double syllables, we may master it,—Nezahualcoyotl. In his youth, like David, he was obliged to flee for his life from the wrath of a morose monarch who occupied the throne; and he met with many romantic adventures and hair-breadth escapes.

Once, when some soldiers came to take him in his own house, he vanished in a cloud of incense, such as attendants burned before princes, and concealed himself in a sewer until his enemies were gone. He fled to the mountains, where he slept in caves and thickets and lived on wild fruits, occasionally showing himself in the cottages of the poor people, who befriended their prince at the peril of their own lives. Once, when closely pursued, passing a girl who was reaping in a field, he begged her to cover him from sight with the stalks of grain she was cutting: she did so, and, when his enemies came up, directed the pursuit into a false path. At another time, he took refuge with some soldiers who were friendly to him, and who covered him with a war-drum, about which they were dancing. No bribe could induce his faithful people to betray him.

"Would you not deliver up your prince if he came in your way?" he once asked a young country-fellow, to whom his person was unknown.

"Never!" replied the peasant.

"Not for a fair lady's hand and a great fortune?" said the prince.

"Not for all the world!" was the answer.

The prince, who was rightful heir to the throne, grew every day in the favor of the people, and at last he found himself at the head of an army, while the bad king was more and more detested. A battle was fought, the usurper's forces were routed, and he was afterward slain. The prince, who so lately fled for his life, was now proclaimed king.

He at once set about reforming abuses, and making wise laws for his kingdom. He established a society devoted to the encouragement of science and art. He gave prizes for the best literary compositions (for these people had a sort of picture-writing), and he was himself a poet, like King David. His poems, some of which have been preserved and translated, were generally of a religious character. His favorite themes were the vanity of human greatness, praise of the unknown God, and the blessings of the future life for such as do good in this. The Tezucucans, like the Aztecs, were idolaters, who indulged in the horrid rites of human sacrifice to their awful deities; but this wise and good king detested such things, and endeavored to wean his people from them, declaring, like David, that above all idols, and over all men, ruled an unseen spirit, who was the one God.

The king used to disguise himself, and go about among his people, in order to learn who were happy, how his laws were administered, and what was thought of his government. On one such occasion, he fell in with a boy gathering sticks in a field.

"Why don't you go into yonder forest, where you will find plenty of wood?" asked the disguised monarch.

"Ah!" cried the boy, "that forest belongs to the king, and he would have me killed if I should take his wood; for that is the law."

"Is he so hard a man as that?"

"Ay, that he is,—a very hard man, indeed, who denies his people what God has given them!"

"It is a bad law," said the king; "and I advise you not to mind it. Come, there is no one here to see you: go into the forest, and help yourself to sticks."

"Not I!" exclaimed the boy.

"You are afraid some one will come and find you? But I will keep watch for you," urged the king.

"Will you take the punishment in my place, if I chance to get caught? No, no!" cried the boy, shrewdly shaking his head. "I should risk my life if I took the king's wood."

"But I tell you it will be no risk," said the king. "I will protect you; go and get some wood."

Upon that the boy turned and looked him boldly in the face.

"I believe you are a traitor," he cried,—an enemy of the king! or else you want to get me into trouble. But you can't. I know how to take care of myself; and I shall show respect to the laws, though they are bad."

The boy went on gathering sticks, and in the evening went home with his load of fuel. The next day, his parents were astonished to receive a summons to appear with their son before the king. As they went tremblingly into his presence, the boy recognized the man with whom he had talked the day before, and he turned deadly pale.

"If that be the king," he said, "then we are no better than dead folks, all!"

But the king descended from his throne, and smilingly said:—

"Come here, my son! Come here, good people both! Fear nothing. I met this lad in the fields yesterday, and tried to persuade him to disobey the law. But I found him proof against all temptation. So I sent for you, good people, to tell you what a true and honest son you have, and that the law is to be changed, so that poor people can go anywhere into the king's forests, and gather the wood they find on the ground."

He then dismissed the lad and his parents with handsome presents, which made them rich for the remainder of their lives.

FRANCISCAN FRIARS have gone into the wine business extensively at Los Angeles, Cal.

COLORED MEN edit six newspapers in North Carolina, three in Louisiana, two in Tennessee and Texas; and in Virginia, Alabama, and Mississippi, one each.

SPURGEON'S CHURCH in London conducts twenty Sunday-schools, with five hundred teachers and five thousand eight hundred and fifty-three scholars.

THE BANKER of the Vatican, who managed the Pope's financial matters in Rome, has absconded, leaving behind debts amounting to more than 700,000 lire.

THERE ARE church accommodations in Providence, R.I., for 75,000 of the 100,000 inhabitants of that city; but not more than 30,000 habitually attend public worship.

THERE ARE 2,133,044 members of Baptist churches in the United States, with 24,794 churches, and 15,401 ministers. 30,000 new members were added during the year 1879.

THE RUSSIAN CHURCH has eleven thousand five hundred and seventy-two members and nine church buildings in Alaska and California. The church in San Francisco has about two hundred members.

THE Evangelist says that, as forty thousand of our two hundred and ninety-two thousand Indians can write, and thirty thousand are members of churches, the fact proves beyond a doubt that the Indian is capable of being civilized.

THE INDEPENDENT CATHOLIC CHURCH is gaining some strength. Mr. Felix O'Hare, a young deacon from the Propaganda, Rome, was ordained Sunday, Feb. 1, at Clarendon Hall, New York; and there is talk of forming a church in Boston.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

THE LIFE PUZZLE.

Fate set this wee, frail, human boat
Upon an unknown sea afloat,
With naught behind and naught before,
Save hope's unseen and distant shore.

Shot into life with but a choice!
Stricken out of life without a voice!
And yet we sail life's mystic sea,
Filled with a sense that we are free.

HOLMES HINKLEY.

PRAYER UNDISGUISED.

Of good received make us, O Lord, forgetful;
With present ills may we be duly fretful;
For future good may we show healthy greed;
Grant that our friends may nothing of us need;
Lord, make us wise—without the trouble of thinking;
Give us good health—'sute of rich food and drinking;
May we live long—but without growing old;
May we sell well—but without feeling sold;
Give us much wealth—without the pain of saving;
And labor's fruits—but not its tedious slaving.
May we be skilled, with many a dextrous thump,
To flagnellate the devil round a stump;
May general laws, with all their forfeits dire,
In our particular cases quite miss fire.
The impossible, for us, O Lord, perform,
Give us the sun-shine, but without the storm;
May we be filled, but never yet be cloyed,
Of want and wealth may we be ne'er devoid.
O, fire our souls with pleasure and good cheer,
De'll take the consequences—till they're here.

G. E. TUFTS.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEB. 21.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

J. J. Barker, $1; A. G. Fisher, $3.64; A. Vacher, $3.64; Rev. J. McDowell, $3.64; Prof. W. C. Russell, $3.20; International News Co., 25 cents; S. L. Bailey, $3.20; L. B. Farrar, $3.50; Alex. Risk, $2; L. G. Feich, $10; Lucy S. Richardson, $1; Dr. L. P. Babo, 25 cents; Robert Fletcher, $3.20; O. Wellington, $6.40; Lydia Maria Child, $2.25; J. E. Larimer, $6.40; A. S. Latty, $3.25; H. T. Hedges, $1; W. W. Moore, $3.20; W. W. Grant, $13; E. Fezandie, $3; Passaic City Liberal League, $1.60; David Branson, $6.25; William Foster, $4; J. C. Corseus, $10; David Fey, $3.20; Capt. L. P. Howes, $3.20; Rev. E. R. Sanborn, $9.60; John Wilson & Son, $3.20; Miss M. Goddard, $1.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEB. 26, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREE, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to give the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D.
CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H.
CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD,
C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SEUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD,
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARAH
A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

D. MRS. EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
D. R. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENSFELD, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITTS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N. Y.	5.00
A. FOLSON, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. FRESHO, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York	5.00
Gen. J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JEHU HIATT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chichepe, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
E. S. STORR, New York, N. Y.	25.00
LOUIS SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N. Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHSCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
Dr. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
Dr. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
Dr. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
PATRON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N. Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D. C.	5.00
GEO. STICKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
M. B. LEVY, New York, N. Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N. Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FRELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HOB. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
O. M. DENNISON, New York, N. Y.	1.00
N. LEWINSON, " " "	1.00
J. REUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. S. FRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
R. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N. Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N. Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MISS FRANCES DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JANES, " " "	1.00
PROF. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
Dr. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00
MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERRILL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Bradenton, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. FISK, Winthrop, Iowa	2.00
DR. B. B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MURRY, Seneca Falls, N. Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D. C.	1.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	5.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N. Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N. Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N. Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00

MISS EMMA S. BUTRO, New York	2.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " ".....	5.00
L. TOPFITT, " ".....	1.00
L. ALBERT A. LEVI, " ".....	10.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " ".....	1.00
MR. GANS, " ".....	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " ".....	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Maple Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	5.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston	1.00
EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans, La.	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa	1.00
F. B. MERCER, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
H. N. W. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston	5.00
MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
WIS. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
MRS. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHN V. REBEL, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
JOHN ANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRALEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN.....	200.00
MRS. A. B. PERCIVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
CAPT. P. S. CROWELL, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
MISS MARIANNE CHRISTERN, New York	1.00
MRS. CHRISTERN, " ".....	1.00
MR. F. W. CHRISTERN, " ".....	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " ".....	1.00
MRS. MARY F. DAVIS, " ".....	1.00
M. S. FECHHEIMER, " ".....	10.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER.....	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Tempsbury, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. H. YNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIE S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
R. B. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
C. W. WENDTE, Cincinnati, Ohio	1.00
MRS. CAROLINE A. TUCKER, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
HANNAH E. STEVENSON, Boston, Mass.	10.00
AVEY W. HARBAUGH, Toledo, Iowa	2.00
HON. FRANCIS SPENCER, Columbus City, Iowa	1.00
E. D. BURRIDGE, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
E. D. BURRIDGE, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
JAMES MCGRATH, Quincy, Mass.	1.00
REV. J. C. LEARNED, St. Louis, Mo	2.00
W. C. FISK, Toledo, O.	2.00
JOHN CHAPPELSMITH, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
MARGARET " ".....	1.00
MRS. HINCKLEY, " ".....	1.00
THOS. MUMFORD, Sen., " ".....	1.00
J. S. JOHNSON, Almont, Mich.	5.00
HENRY PRATT, New York City	2.00
REV. JUDSON FISHER, Alton, Ill.	1.00
LOUIS PRANG, Roxbury, Mass.	15.00
PROF. F. E. NIPHER, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
MRS. J. S. EDGERLY, East Somerville, Mass.	2.00
MRS. H. HERMAN, New York City	5.00
M. FRANK, " ".....	2.00
M. COHN, " ".....	1.00
S. GUTERMAN, " ".....	1.00
G. ENGELSMAN, " ".....	1.00
ABRAHAM HERMAN, New York City	5.00
A. BLUMENTHAL, " ".....	5.00
GUS. KAUFMAN, " ".....	5.00
HENRY FRIEDMAN, " ".....	5.00
MRS. LUCYELLA MOTT, Philadelphia	10.00
G. F. MATTHEWS, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
MRS. KATE GANNETT WELLS, Boston	5.00
JULIA A. IRESON, Lynn, Mass.	10.00
ISABEL IRESON, " ".....	10.00
EMMA D. IRESON, " ".....	10.00
KATE C. IRFSON, " ".....	10.00
JAMES DILLAWAY, Somerville, Mass.	2.00
REV. M. J. SAVAGE, Boston	5.00
MRS. S. S. AUSTIN, Cambridge, Mass.	2.00
F. T. STUART, Boston	1.00
MISS L. B. ATWILL, Boston	1.00
NANCY W. COVELL, South Framingham	1.00
HULDAH P. ROBINSON, Alston	1.00
MICHAEL NEALE, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
CHARLES COLLINS, Dayton, Ohio	1.00
HERMAN RAUBSAMER, New York	5.00
ADOLPH WURZBURGER, " ".....	3.00
A. S. BAMBERGER, " ".....	2.00
CHAS. I. STIX, " ".....	5.00
H. MOSENFALD, " ".....	1.00
A. A. LEVY, " ".....	1.00
ERNEST EHRMAN, " ".....	1.00
CHAS. F. ADAMS, " ".....	5.00
CHAS. C. LANE, " ".....	3.00
ALFRED WOLF, " ".....	1.00
ANGLO HELLMAN, " ".....	1.00
PHILLIP NETTRE, " ".....	5.00
WILLIAM STONE, " ".....	2.00
L. N. ASIEL, " ".....	1.00
C. A. CURTIS, " ".....	1.00
MR. & MRS. T. A. KOHN, " ".....	2.00
A. SELIG, " ".....	2.00
A. LICHENSTEIN, " ".....	1.00
S. BURNHEIMER, " ".....	2.00
FELIX HERSFELD, " ".....	5.00
M. WALLER, " ".....	5.00
SAMUEL SHETTER, " ".....	5.00
ALBERTINA VON ARNIM, " ".....	2.00
C. I. PRATT, " ".....	2.00
G. H. PUTNAM, " ".....	1.00
OTTO W. FUTEVEY, " ".....	5.00
MRS. E. B. FOOTE, " ".....	1.00
EMIL COLMIL, " ".....	5.00
MAX NATHAN, " ".....	5.00
ALEX. GUTMAN, " ".....	5.00
JOSEPH ARON, " ".....	5.00
M. B. BRYANT, " ".....	5.00
MRS. SUSAN T. BRYANT, " ".....	5.00
I. F. CULLMAN, " ".....	1.00
H. DORMITZER, " ".....	5.00
M. S. ROHMER, " ".....	5.00
H. R. MILLER, " ".....	5.00
W. C. BANNING, " ".....	1.00
I. H. ADAMSON, " ".....	2.00
G. W. MILLER, " ".....	5.00
W. A. KIMBALL, " ".....	1.00
S. BENEDICKS, " ".....	1.00
EDW. HAMMERSLOUGH, " ".....	5.00
LEOPOLD LOWRY, " ".....	1.00
JOSEPH BECKEL, " ".....	2.00
F. M. ADAMS, " ".....	1.00
R. E. DIETZ, " ".....	5.00
MRS. T. H. NEVILLE, " ".....	2.00
S. WOLFGANG, " ".....	5.00
ELIZABETH HAMLIN, " ".....	5.00
ELINOR HAMLIN, " ".....	1.00
WILLIAM FRANKFURTH, Milwaukee, Wis.	5.00
DANIEL MUNCY, Bristol, Pa.	1.00
MRS. J. C. MILLS, Galesburg, Ill.	2.00
MISS M. C. LUFKIN, " ".....	1.00
MISS S. E. DUNN, Dover, N.H.	2.00
MRS. KATE NEWELL DOGGETT, Chicago, Ill.	1.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
MRS. F. A. ANGELL, " ".....	1.00

T. B. SKINNER, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
LEVI BEADLER, Augusta, Mich.	1.00
M. B. SIBLEY, Deadwood, Dakota.	1.00
Mrs. P. B. SIBLEY, "	1.00
Mr. E. F. UNDERHILL, New York.	5.00
Mrs. E. F. UNDERHILL, "	5.00
A. SCHEDLER, " "	1.00
L. DREYFUSS, " "	1.00
L. STAAB, " "	5.00
M. MORGENTHAU, " "	1.00
LOUIS R. EHRICH, " "	10.00
D. B. HESS, " "	5.00
M. L. HOLBROOK, " "	1.00
S. BACHMAN, " "	1.00
D. BACHMAN, " "	1.00
A. I. DITTENHOFFER, New York.	1.00
I. EHRICH, " "	1.00
M. R. LEVY, " "	5.00
I. OLLENHEIMER, " "	5.00
ROBERT FERRIER, " "	1.00
T. H. BLAKELY, " "	1.00
SAMUEL SACHS, " "	3.00
SAMUEL JACOBY, " "	5.00
EMIL SALINGER, " "	1.00
R. M. SHERMAN, " "	1.00
J. WEINMAN, " "	5.00
CASE, " "	5.00
E. G. SWINNEY, " "	5.00
Mrs. C. NEYMANN, " "	2.00
Mrs. E. S. MILLER, Geneva, N.Y.	10.00
"Cosmian," Springfield, Mass.	10.00
L. A. FAIRCHILD, Boston.	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. J. J. BARKER, Toledo, Ohio	10.00
B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thornäske, Mass.	2.00
JERSEY MASH, Northampton, Mass.	5.00
JAS. M. W. WINTON, Boston.	1.00
Mrs. MILLY LEHMAIER, New York.	3.00
EMIL SEIDELBERG, " "	5.00
ISAAC MAY, " "	5.00
A. W. BALCH, " "	10.00
B., " "	1.00
ISAAC LOWENSTEIN, " "	1.00
E. C. STEDMAN, " "	5.00
ARNOLD SAMPTER, " "	2.00
S. RAWLSEY, " "	5.00
O. LUBBIN, " "	2.00
I. GUITMAN, " "	1.00
E. SPEGELBERG, " "	5.00
OTTO HORWITZ, " "	1.00
Mrs. LUCRETIA FOLGEE, " "	10.00
BRONSON MURRAY, " "	10.00
CHARLES WEHLE, " "	1.00
A. FRANKFELD, " "	2.00
E. FRANKFELD, " "	1.00
EDWARD DREYFUSS, " "	1.00
E. NAUMBERG, " "	1.00
Mrs. E. NAUMBERG, " "	1.00
MAX NAUMBERG, " "	1.00
P. HECHT, " "	1.00
ENOCH LEWIS, Philadelphia, Pa.	10.00
ELIZABETH R. BROWN, Providence, R.I.	5.00
E. WILKIN, San Buena Ventura, Cal.	2.00
T. W. CURTIS, Meadville, Pa.	1.00

Total.....$1,692.00
WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

POLITICAL ATOMISM AND MORALITY.

The Declaration of Independence proclaims that "all men are created equal." This statement is often denied because it is often misunderstood. It is true or false according to the extent of the application made of it.

All human beings should be considered equal before the law, in respect to those fundamental rights of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" to which the Declaration of Independence especially referred. The law should, and does, regard the life of a babe as inviolable as that of an octogenarian,—the life of a woman as inviolable as that of a man,—the life of a negro as inviolable as that of a white man. With respect to the primary rights of individuality, the law (at least in theory) treats all persons as standing on a level of perfect equality; and the continuance of civilization is compatible with no other conception. The individual, as Sir Henry Maine has shown so ably in his Ancient Law, is the true unit of civilized society,—not the family, as Catholicism teaches. The science of popular government, like the science of mathematics, treats every unit as equal to every other unit for its own purposes. In other words, every individual counts one—no more and no less—before the law; his individual peculiarities and differences are dropped wholly out of sight, and only his natural rights and duties as a person, shared universally and equally with all other persons, are taken into account. Social chemistry is precisely as powerless as physical chemistry to dispense with the conception of ultimate and equal atoms; the constitution of government necessitates an atomic theory no less than the constitution of matter; and the ultimate equal atoms of political society are the individual (that is, indivisible) persons of whom it is simply the complex sum.

This is really all that the Declaration of Independence means by its famous doctrine that "all men are created equal." The forefathers were no visionary doctrinaires, but sagacious, practical statesmen,—too sagacious to despise theory in laying the foundations of a vast political edifice. They did as all competent architects do; they formed a coherent plan before they began to build. The great and imperishable glory of their work is that they founded practical politics upon a truly scientific basis, which practical politics had never before had—namely, upon the theory of political atomism. The rest of their work, though in most respects admirable, was still imperfect; later generations must make numerous corrections and improvements. But the theory of political atomism, or the exact equality of all individuals as to their fundamental rights before the law of the land, is the very foundation of the Great Republic, which could not exist a day on any other.

Now every government which makes and administers the laws on republican principles makes and administers them with reference to the whole people; that is, all the individuals composing the people. Hence it considers only the equalities which subsist among these individuals, and entirely disregards their inequalities (unless these result in crime, for which, of course, there is a special treatment provided that need not be noticed here). While affirming the equalities of all men, however, it would be a gross blunder to suppose that the Declaration of Independence meant to deny the inequalities which no less subsist among them. This blunder has been very frequently made by captious critics, with no other consequence than the exposure of their own shallowness and superficiality. The primary function of all just government is simply the protection of all citizens in their fundamental personal rights; it is only with respect to these rights that they are equal; and it is only with respect to these rights that the Declaration of Independence proclaims their equality.

But personal inequalities nevertheless exist among mankind, together with these equal rights. Mankind differ physically, as in stature, weight, strength, color, sex,—or intellectually, as in culture, education, natural mental powers,—or morally, as in character, conduct, habitual motives of action. General society takes account of these personal differences no less than of the primary equalities of human rights. It by no means regards all men as equal in social value. No business man extends equal credit to all with whom he transacts affairs; he would soon become bankrupt, if he disregarded the inequalities of his customers in point of honesty and ability to pay. So also in the other social relations of life; personal peculiarities and inequalities can neither be denied nor ignored without involving all social interests in confusion and ruin. Government treats all men as alike—as mere political units, or fixed quantities, with universally identical attributes of rights and duties so far as itself alone is concerned. But general society, while recognizing fully these common attributes of humanity in all its members, recognizes also their profound qualitative differences, as giving different intrinsic social values to different individuals. It cannot afford to treat the sage and the fool, the upright citizen and the knave, as in all respects equal; it cannot afford to treat them merely as fixed and equal quantities, but insists on its right to take account also of their unlike individual qualities. Free popular government would go to pieces, if it did not ground itself on the theory of political atomism; but general society, even under such a government as that, would itself go to pieces, if it adopted this theory in its own treatment of individuals.

It must not be overlooked, however, that both government and society necessarily establish each their own moral standard in their treatment of individuals. Government requires its political units to obey the laws, and thus establishes a very low standard of morality by acting on the theory that criminals forfeit through their crimes their natural rights of life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness. Society establishes a much higher moral standard than this, though still not the highest, by inflicting upon offenders not known to the law the various penalties of outraged public opinion. Neither government nor society could exist at all, except by this greater or less recognition and enforcement of morality. Political atomism itself has thus a moral basis; and it is political charlatanism and quackery of the most disgracefully stupid sort to pretend that "government has nothing to do with morality." Ralph Waldo Emerson's magnificent emphasis on the "Sovereignty of Ethics" is implied already in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. National morality is nothing but the necessary corollary and completion of individual morality, covering so much of the moral law of Nature as applies to men in their collective capacity as organized communities. Social morality, rightly viewed, covers still more of this law, as it applies to men in their social relations. Individual morality covers the whole of it, as it applies even in the most hidden recesses of thought, feeling, and volition. Morality in its triple aspect—national, social, and individual—constitutes the very foundation and groundwork of civilization; and the human species has no worse enemy than he who would enfeeble the sense of moral obligation in the community in any one of these three aspects,

COLORADO.

This distant mountain State has been my place of sojourn for a few weeks past. It has become known world-wide of late for its great mineral resources, and especially for its marvellous production in the precious metals. The amount of silver yielded by the mining camp of Leadville alone, during the year 1879, is reported at more than $12,000,000. Go where you will, prospecting and mining are in the air, pay ore the theme, and dreams of silver and gold and great bonanzas of wealth seem to fill all heads, and crowd out well-nigh everything else.

But these Rocky Mountains, with their wild picturesqueness and massive grandeur, are valuable for more than the precious metals they contain. They proffer a larger riches, a deeper, more exalting communion and possession, than silver or gold, or all metals together can afford. Lecky has somewhere said that it is impossible to lay down a railroad without exerting an intellectual influence. And certainly no one can ride up this road along the Clear Creek Cañon, winding its way beneath the frowning cliffs and amid the jaws of precipitous rocks that close in upon you on either side, without receiving a moral effect.

Here are majesty and power, power in repose, the rugged granite mountain dwelling in communion with the everlasting. What scenes has it witnessed! what ages, epochs, æons in the earth's past has it known, felt, survived! What a history stands here written, legibly written, reaching into untold periods of the fore-time, and waiting for the eye that should decipher and read it all out clear! Here is seen something of the origin of the prairie, the raw material from which the plains were made. For here, slowly disintegrating from the rock, are the elements which, warmed in the genial sun, mellowed and mingled together, do show you to-day, in every foot or square inch of soil that can gather in the roughness of this gorge, "All Nature quick and bursting into life."

And here, too, are the rocks too refractory for any of the present influences to work upon and subdue them, that refuse to be reduced and pulverized even in the thousands of years, and are waiting, as geology hints to us, for "another period," another glacial epoch, to come and grind them down, so that they, too, shall ameliorate and ripen to blooming meadow and fruitful, smiling prairie. There is no lack of manifold suggestion, to any mind, in this weird and silent majestic presence.

You see here in this mining camp, as might naturally be expected, all the types of quality and character, every variety of face, voice, expression, revealing the inner soul, and some sinister-looking and repellent enough. But, as a general thing, the miners are of a good class,—far better, I imagine, than they will average in the coal-producing region of our country, better quite likely than they will hold in Leadville and other newer sections in Colorado. I have been attracted and deeply interested in them. You meet men hard-handed and toil-marked indeed, accustomed to the heavy labors of the tunnel and the shaft, but bright, broad-browed, intelligent, and earnest. They spend their leisure moments in reading, ardent pursuit after knowledge, and feeding of the mind. Converse with them, you shall find them full of information, acquainted with books, apt in expression, and rich in suggestive wisdom.

And what has interested me more than aught else has been to find them broad, free, progressive religiously. They have left the old house of bondage, the Egypt, the Hagar in the wilderness; and their eyes are turned toward the dawn, they are looking for the new and better faith that shall come. It fills one with fresh astonishment to see how universally and almost completely the process of disintegration has gone on, crumbling into fragments and fine dust the old structures of religious belief, the hampering creeds and superstitions with which the people have been bound. There are drearier giants' castles here than ever Bunyan saw in his dreams. They are fast being razed to the ground, and the captives walk forth free.

Whatever may come,—and Heaven grant it may quickly be a better and not a worse that shall succeed!—the old can never be rehabilitated and restored. The change we see, like what the elder Mirabeau beheld preparing in France more than a hundred years ago, and which he designated as "the general overturn," has the stern push of destiny behind it, and it cannot be stayed. When the pick and the drill think, when the light of deliverance reaches and illumines the dark recesses of the tunnel and the shaft in the bowels of the mountains, then be sure the period of the old nightmares, the Judaism and the scholasticism of the mediæval centuries, is past, and the dawn of the new life is come.

I spent a few days recently in Denver, where, despite all the preoccupation with mining and sudden, in some instances fabulous, accumulations of wealth, with which that city now is specially full, I found a very cordial hearing for the themes I seek to treat. A goodly number of thoughtful, cultivated, earnest men and women assembled from evening to evening to hear of the early history and growth of the religious sentiment, and the possibilities that seem already looking in upon us, and ripening towards fulfilment for the future. On Sunday P.M., Feb. 1, a very earnest and apparently interested audience gathered in the parlors of the Grand Central Hotel, that were opened by the kind and freely proffered hospitality of Mrs. Gage, the hostess. I witnessed there, too, renewed indication of what may be observed everywhere in regard to the very interesting and significant condition, at the present time, of the public mind. How exhilarating the fellowship that communion in one central thought, and oneness in hope, in resolve and expectation, afford! Long and with a grateful delight shall I remember Denver. May the liberal sentiment of that city grow and burn, until it become a white mounting flame, not only for thought and social converse, but also for bold, brave, aggressive deed!

It is an agitation—ours—akin to that of anti-slavery in the past days. People are in many instances sensitive and excitable; they are afraid to bear the presence of the pure light of Truth: as, for instance, to inquire dispassionately how or in what respect Jesus differs and stands distinguished above other great religious teachers and acknowledged masters, prophets of humanity in the different ages and climes; and how the Bible is marked and set apart from other books of religious wisdom; why it should be held exceptional, sole, in the literatures of the world. We have to encounter great prejudice, a blindness of worship, as of fetishism. There will be, there must be, a crisis reached, a stern, hard conflict. May it be brief and benign, attended with as little heat and exacerbation as possible, and without rude ruptures or any violence!

There seems to me at this hour great need of the living voice. It is the person, the presence, the preacher, that the people deeply want,—the word of inspiration, and uplifting, from lips touched with the heavenly fire. How shall it be sent forth? How make provision for this pressing want, even partially and initially, is, I think, a question eminently worthy the devoted attention of our best and wisest minds, here and now.

C. D. B. M.

IDAHO SPRINGS, Col., Feb. 8.

RELIGION IN GERMANY.

The Contemporary Review for last August contains an interesting article from Prof. von Schulte, on the "Religious Condition of Germany." Of the Universities he says: "There are indeed in every University one or more University preachers; but, apart from theological students, their sermons meet with a very scanty appreciation or hearing. There is no obligation on the part of either professors or students to attend the academic service, and practically it seems to be merely a pretext for giving the officiating professors or clergy an increased salary."

Of Sundays, he says that "not only do the trains run as on other days, but by almost every line there are also extra trains for the convenience of the holiday makers. . . . In many places, especially in Austria, companies choose Sundays and holidays for their great excursions; extra trains are put on especially in the morning; and arrangements for dancing for the people, popular concerts, etc., are fixed almost exclusively for these days."

Among his statements showing the religious condition are the following: "We may say generally that the so-called educated classes, Catholic or Protestant, especially the men, trouble themselves very little, as a rule, about the sacrament, etc., though of course there are exceptions to this rule, as for instance when an individual is identified by party interests with the church party, or when his presence at church is required by his official position, as in the case of those employed about the court. The same holds good of confession among the Catholics. It may safely be said of Austria that seventy-five per cent. of the educated men and fifty per cent. of the women neither attend church nor go to confession or to the sacrament; and this is the case in many other places also."

"As a rule, it is unquestionable that the Catholic worship is throughout Germany better attended than the Protestant; that is to say, a larger proportion of Catholics than of Protestants attend church."

"In the larger towns, the Protestant churches are often deplorably empty, never crowded except when some celebrated preacher is expected." B. F. U.

IN THE CLOSE of his letter of February 12, in last week's INDEX, Mr. Wright wrote "wealthy Christians." It was printed "worthy Christians."

PERSONAL ITEMS.

A ST. LOUIS Roman Catholic felt so bad because his brother became a Presbyterian that he committed suicide.

EDWARD F. WILLIAMS, a retired ship-builder, and president of the Greenpoint, Long Island, Savings Bank, is under arrest for sending indecent matter through the mails.

THE WIDOW of the late Prof. Alpheus Crosby, of Dartmouth, has presented the college with her husband's working-library, consisting of eight hundred Greek, Latin, and German works.

DON MANUEL LARRAINZAR is publishing at Mexico a study, in five volumes, on the History of America, its ruins and antiquities, and on the origin of its inhabitants. The work is in Spanish.

REV. GEORGE W. WILCOX opens a communication in the Snow Hill, Del., Messenger as follows: "Wanted, immediately, in the Methodist Episcopal church, in Berlin, one hundred men and women to seek their souls' salvation."

THE REV. ROBERT COLLYER is filling up the pews of his church in New York. He has begun a series of Sunday evening sermons upon the Bible, which not unfrequently contain passages that, unless he is more guarded, are likely to class him with the unbelievers.

MRS. GRAY, whose husband recently published a highly interesting volume on China, has written a companion to it called Fourteen Months in Canton. It is more familiar in style than Dr. Gray's book, and is partly in the form of letters to the author's mother. The work is published by Macmillan.

MISS FANNY DAVENPORT, the actress, sends this letter to the New York Herald Irish relief fund:—

"WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 11, 1880.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

"Enclosed please find my check for $100. May it only be one-thousandth part of the fuel supplied to keep your fire burning, and God speed to all your good efforts in Ireland's cause.

"FANNY DAVENPORT."

THE REV. DR. BELLOWS' residence on East Fifteenth Street, New York, was recently visited by fire. It broke out in the basement, and caused considerable commotion in the neighborhood. The Doctor is not regarded especially sound in his faith in the nether fires, but it may be presumed that the event just referred to has afforded a practical conviction of the possibility of such an existence. Happily, the damage was small, about $50 worth.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL is very cordially welcomed by the London News as minister to England. Among other complimentary allusions to him, it says: "He is one of a number of men who have won a distinct and peculiar reputation in literature for their country, and who have made Harvard University and Cambridge village places that all strangers in America love to see. Every one in this country will be pleased with President Hayes' latest appointment.

DR. FELIX ADLER, the curious will be interested to know, is but twenty-eight years of age. There are many who are not particularly curious, but rejoice in his joy, and feel a lively interest in all that pertains to his future prospects and happiness, who will be pleased to learn that he is about to present an example of the principle of cooperation he is accustomed to advocate so ably in domestic life, in which he and a young and beautiful lady of Brooklyn are to be the conspicuous figures.

"THERE is something," says the London Spectator, "about the writings of Charlotte Brontë, Jane Austen, George Eliot in her best phase, and the other two great geniuses above mentioned [Emily Brontë and George Sand] which has been surpassed only by the very best men's work, if George Eliot's best has ever been surpassed at all. But the disproportion between the average female writer and these is greater than between their productions and those of the average male writer. Few men are able to write so bad a novel as very many women do who write novels at all."

LONGFELLOW writes as follows to a little Cincinnati school-girl: "Yes, indeed, it will be very pleasant for me to remember that the school-girls of Cincinnati are thinking of me on my birthday. Few things could be more pleasant, and I assure you that when the day comes I will think of you all with equal kindness. The old can understand the young, having once been young themselves. But the young cannot so well understand the old, having never themselves been old. So perhaps you will not quite understand with how much sympathy I can enter into your feelings, and particularly when you tell me you are going to celebrate my birthday."

BISHOP COLENSO's concluding volumes on the Pentateuch and Book of Joshua will soon be published in London. His conclusions respecting these six books are of a most sweeping character. He denies that Moses was the author of any of the five books which bear his name, or even that he had anything to do with the decalogue. In fact, he goes further, and says the least said about the "activity of Moses" the better. His name is merely that of the imaginary leader of Israel, and he is as mythical and unhistorical as Æneas or King Arthur. The Bishop accepts the documentary hypothesis, and thinks it probable that Samuel wrote the Elohist narrative, which embraces the Book of Genesis and five chapters and five verses of Exodus. The Book of Leviticus was produced by priests between 600 and 420 B.C.

THE CABLE announces the death of Rev. Henry Moule, a well-known English philanthropist. Mr. Moule was the son of a banker, and graduated in 1821 at St. John's College, Cambridge, at twenty years of age. Having taken orders in the Church of England, he became, in 1825, curate of Gillingham, Dorsetshire, and in 1829 vicar of Fordington. He was for several years chaplain to the Dorchester barracks, where in 1846 he built a church for the troops, partly from the sale of a volume of Barrack Sermons. Mr. Moule rendered a vast service to sanitary science by his discovery, about 1858, of what is known as the "Dry Earth System," for the utilization of town garbage and sewage. On this subject he published several pamphlets, as also on remedies for the sufferings of the lower classes in England, on the education of the children of the poor, and on kindred topics.

MR. PROCTOR notes that "compositors make strange work of scientific statements. I sometimes fancy they are not altogether so innocent in this matter as they would have us believe, and that they compose sometimes 'with their tongue' very much 'in their cheek.' They are fond, so far as my own individual experience is concerned, of substituting 'comic' for 'cosmic,' 'plants' for 'planets,' 'human' for 'known,' and in other ways making hash generally of my more serious and solemn statements. The most remarkable change they ever arranged for me was one of which I still retain 'documentary evidence' in a proof of the little book on Spectroscopic Analysis, which I wrote for the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. Here the words, which in the work itself appear—as they were certainly written—'lines, bands, and stria in the violet part of spectra,' were positively printed 'links, bonds, and stripes for the violent kind of spectres.'"

FOREIGN.

MR. W. RENTON, the artist critic and author of Jesus, has enlisted in the ranks of the secular propagandists. His first lecture was given at Edinburgh, January 11.

REV. CHARLES MILLER of St. Mary's, Harlow, England, has an unfortunate love of strong drink, which he does not appear able to control, and hence he has recently been dismissed from the church at the advanced age of eighty-three years.

AT A RELIGIOUS CONFERENCE in London some time since, it was stated that the wages paid to women engaged in producing tenpenny Bibles were not enough to keep body and soul together, and that of the three recent strikes in the bookbinding trade all had arisen out of Bible work.

THE TWO TOWERS of the Cologne cathedral, which is now nearly completed after centuries of work, are the highest in the world. They are 524 feet 12 inches and 415 feet and 1 inch high, respectively; while St. Peter's at Rome is 469 feet 2 inches. The ridge tiles of the Cologne cathedral are 360 feet and 3 inches from the ground, while the top of the dome of St. Paul's in London is only 4 feet 10 inches higher.

THE FRENCH MINISTRY are displaying considerable energy in providing work for the two Chambers. The bill providing secondary State education for girls was passed two weeks ago by the Deputies by a large majority; but to the Ultramontanes it is a very offensive measure. The schools to be created under it are called "godless colleges"; and M. Keller declared it an insult to every Deputy to say, as the bill did, that their wives and mothers had not been sufficiently educated. A bill has also been introduced for compulsory and gratuitous primary education, and the measure was received with much applause by the Deputies. The Government have likewise introduced a bill for reducing the number of Judges.

THE LANDLORDS' remedy for all the ills to which the Irish peasant is subject is a beautifully simple one; namely, emigration. Connaught, we are told, though an excellent province in which to breed cattle, is—to somewhat vary the saying of Telemachus—by no means suited for men. On the other hand, an Irishman of the last century held the opinion that—

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

Whether or not wealth is accumulating in the sister isle, or in the coffers of those sons of that isle who, with true Hibernian insouciance, lavish freely in Paris and London what the bailiffs and middlemen have screwed from the tenantry, is not a very doubtful question. But with regard to emigration it strikes us that the initial difficulty is how to obtain the means of emigrating. There are no Egyptians in Connaught for the flying Milesians to "spoil." Besides this, it would seem that America—the Irishman's Promised Land—is already sufficiently enriched with the bone and sinew of Ireland and the Scottish Highlands. We fancy that landlordism, as we have known it, is on its last legs on the other side of St. George's Channel; and we can discern in this country the uprising of a little cloud at present "like a man's hand," but nevertheless full of potentialities. "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven." Wise men know this, and never strike till the iron is hot. At present it is but heating, and the people "bide their time": when, however, the forging has to be done, it will be done thoroughly.—Secular Review.

Communications.

"EMOTIONALISM."

Is it possible for man to know too much for his own happiness? Truth-worshippers would say no without hesitation. Give us all the facts, whatever they may be, is their incessant cry. Few people seem to realize how much of their happiness in this life depends on what modern philosophers term "subjective delusions."

A mother loves her child with that deep, undying affection known only to a mother's heart. Love idealizes her offspring, clothing it with the image of perfection. Maternal fancy translates the naughty boy from the rank of ordinary juvenile humanity to the glorious sphere of ideal excellence. "Deluded woman!" Truth would say. "Your boy is only an ordinary specimen of his race. The child you see is an imaginary being. Your hopes for his future are all unfounded. You are blinded by what modern science calls an 'emotional bias.' Your love and hope have no foundation in the nature of your child, but are purely subjective delusions!" This is the comfort scientific truth would give the mother. Sublime revelation!

Two young persons of opposite sexes, who have not been emancipated from all "emotional delusions," fall in love. They look into each other's faces, and see a divine beauty. They try to talk about the mystery of their new life, and feel that words only mock the unutterable emotions of their hearts. They are happy, they know not how or why; but this they do know, that life never seemed so lofty, hopeful, and holy as now. Undeceived, these deluded slaves of emotionalism might marry and live a happy life, loving and loved. But admit the stern truth into this Eden of love, and how soon the enchantment vanishes! Then each can say to the other, when freed from all "emotional bias,"

"What thou wast my fancy made thee,
What thou art I know too late."

Those who talk about "freeing man from emotionalism" talk about the impossible. Man's very existence depends on emotionalism. If there could be evolved the purely rational man that some people have in their minds, he would not be fit to live in this world a minute. He would have just about as much soul as a carding-machine. No emotional bias! Lovely creatures we would be, if gotten up scientifically! Too rational to love our parents, wives, children, and sweethearts. No subjective delusions! Seeing ourselves as others see us! Glorious desideratum of modern science!

Man's happiness depends more on what he feels than on what he knows. We need to cultivate the heart more, to educate our emotions to a higher plane. We need more faith in the soul, if it is a fiction. We need to resist the encroachments that a materialistic philosophy is making on the sacred domain of life. We should talk less about monkey and more about men. Modern science exalts the race at the expense of the individual. We are learning to worship an abstract humanity by forgetting the personality of the men around us. We need faith in a progress that has a soul, not a mechanical evolution that is governed by the laws of fate. This is "emotionalism" of course, but it is the ism of one person at least. If the grand conceptions of human nature that poetry and faith have given us are delusions, then I would like to flood the world with delusions. If, to become rational, man must be freed from what certain scientists call emotional and subjective errors, then I hope he may never become rational. If truth lies in the direction indicated by some of the tendencies of modern science, then may ignorance forever blind the eyes of mortals.

As rational people are proof against shocks, those who are too rational to share my emotionalism will not of course suffer any mental perturbation on account of my heresy.

H. CLAY NEVILLE.

Jan. 27, 1880.

"EXAMINER NOTES" EXAMINED.

EDITOR INDEX:—

There is no one writer for THE INDEX that I have read after with more interest and genuine satisfaction than Rev. Edward C. Towne. I thought in his late letter (INDEX January 15) he dissected Unitarianism with a very clean blade, and showed up the funeral of Christianity splendidly. But when at the close he attempts to separate from Christianity the teachings of the apostles even, after all that the Unitarians have thrown out, I felt like crying out: "Stop! If we are to have the play of Hamlet, please leave just a little of Hamlet's part in it, so that we may know what it is intended for, or else give the play some new name." Unitarianism has shorn Christianity of everything which gave it form and strength as a new system of thought, and by which it won its way to distinction and honorable recognition as a new religion. Still they claim to be Christian and to have the genuine article, pure and unadulterated, as the apostles taught it; yet really without the "Messias" of John, without an atonement, without a Savior in whom they must believe or be damned, without the "fall"; in fact without anything which went to make Christianity a live, strong system, they have their apostles left, to whom they refer with pride. But here comes Rev. Mr. Towne, and banishes the apostles, and eliminates their false ideas about his ideal Christ, and virtually says that Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, Paul, and Peter did not know anything about genuine Christianity and the ideal Christ! He then seeks to open an impassable gulf between the apostolic Christianity and the Christianity of Christ himself. Pray tell us, Mr. Towne, what you have left then but the simple natural religion of a pure morality as exemplified in the life of Jesus? Where is the propriety of calling it Christianity? If the apostles and early fathers of the Church who formed and developed Christianity (as a system of thought), and gave it shape and character, failed to incorporate into the system the real spirit of the teachings of Jesus, we ought not, at this late day, to build up an entirely new and wholly different system, attempt to steal their name and assume that they were entirely ignorant of the true meaning of Jesus' mission and teachings, and that we have the whole truth on the subject. Why not leave Christianity intact as a system, with its fall, inherited sin, natural depravity, infallible Bible, salvation through Christ, resurrection of the body, divinity of Jesus, as the long-looked-for Messiah of the Jews, and all its early and crude superstitions which represent faithfully the best thought of those early times, and take a bold, manly stand as anti-Christians, and take some other name? Why not demonstrate to the world that we have indeed a better system of thought, a higher standard of morality, a nobler humanity, which needs no salvation other than that accomplished by evolution, development, and growth, a safer criterion of right in a cultivated and enlightened reason, and want no infallible word to fetter human thought, and hang like a deadly nightmare upon human progress?

Mr. Towne seems to cling still to the old ideas of faith and communion as inseparably connected with all religious growth, and treats that large class who stand aloof from church communion and a settled ministry as a "herd of wayfaring fools and intellectual and moral tramps," and characterizes their manly independence as "vagrant individualism," and treats them with seeming contempt. Can he afford it? He says: "I was myself in this case of Free Religious misconception of Christ until I got free from the pseudo-learning of the popular tradition, and had accomplished extensive study both of the other religions of mankind and of the origins of Judaism and Christianity." All right: if Mr. Towne has learned all about Christianity and the true character of Jesus, and can demonstrate to the "herd of wayfaring fools and intellectual and moral tramps," as well as to the creed-bound bigots of the Church, that the apostles, evangelists, and early church fathers did not know anything about these subjects, and did not understand the genius of the system which they formed and promulgated to the world, and in many instances sealed with their blood, then let him bring out his new system of "faith" and "communion" with his ideal Christ, found in the veritable Jesus of Nazareth as the central figure; but please be just and merciful, and not steal the name from the hoary old system which is fast sinking into a respectable forgetfulness and whose funeral rites Mr. Towne so graphically portrayed in his late letter.

Do not harass the dead, Brother Towne, but pay a decent respect to the remains of so worthy a predecessor. Leave to it its own chosen name, and seek some new and appropriate name for your new order, and thus avoid confusion and an immense amount of perplexity.

S. BIGELOW.

ALLIANCE, Ohio.

"DARWINISM" AGAIN.

GALETTA, Ont., 28 Jan., 1880.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Dear Sir,—I see by THE INDEX of Jan. 8 that Mr. H. Clay Neville runs a tilt against Darwinism in a very rash and violent manner. I can hardly think that he is in earnest, or that he means what he says, especially when he talks of Darwinism bidding us to "venerate" the beasts and slimy reptiles that preceded us. Surely also he does not think on what he is saying when he confesses that he is "wanting in that devotion to truth which would make the evolution of man from monkeys an agreeable thought to him, though he knew it to be true." He admits that this may possibly be treason against science, but it is treason also against common sense and common sanity. Has Mr. Neville ever considered the alternative hypothesis to Darwinism? If Darwinism does not give the true account of the origin of man, then we must suppose that the creative power came down to this earth, and compounded the first man and woman out of clay or mud or some other inorganic material,—that all the delicate and complex tissues of brain and nerve, muscle and blood-vessel, were started into existence at once out of this raw material. Not only so, but the same power must at widely distinct intervals have built up—like a clay modeller—those huge animals which the record of the rocks exhibits to us, whole species of which became extinct before the others came into existence. This is a far more irrational and incredible assumption than that which is made by Darwinism. It professes to give a rational account of the past workings of that plastic power in Nature which moulds man and all animals to their circumstances in such endless variety over the surface of the earth. There is a greater distance between the lowest savage and the highest type of cultured man than there is between the highest monkey and the lowest savage. The Bushman of South Africa and the native Australian can scarcely be said to have articulate speech, and their lives are no whit higher or better than those of the animals around them. In fact, the native Australian is surpassed in cleanliness of habits and perception of beauty by the Bower bird of the same island continent. Does Mr. Neville not feel disgusted with the thought that these are his fellow-men, with these same "ideas of native nobility"? What "lovely catechisms" might be made on this subject for the education of the young!

I wonder on what grounds it is that Mr. Neville believes that a general acceptance of Darwinism would degrade every conception of human life. He has not found anything of this in the writings of Darwin or Huxley or Spencer, or of any of the men of science who have accepted Darwinism as the true theory of organic life. The very reverse is the case. The ideas of morality given utterance to by these men are higher in character, more definite in their relation to every-day life, than any system of morality that has preceded them.

I am afraid, however, judging from the strong air of prejudice that pervades Mr. Neville's article, that he has not troubled himself with the perusal of the works of Darwin or Huxley or Spencer. It is scarcely possible that he would write in such a strain if he had.

J. G. WHYTE.

"TWO, NOT ONE."

TOWANDA, BRADFORD CO., Pa., Feb. 10, 1880.

ED. INDEX:—

I have been close pressed by your "Two, not One," and "Misplaced Switch," in THE INDEX, Jan. 15, which I have only found time to read to-day. They contain too much of vital fact. The essential element in this stage of liberal growth,—I would like to have that emphasized. To demand liberty to act before we have rightly used the liberty to think is folly, and fatal. Right thought, clean thought, will bring right action. The "blue glass" crop of liberals do little honor to themselves or the world they live in. Labor is growth, and to grow in the beauty and comeliness of right manhood and womanhood requires time and labor.

This brings a thought about the misplaced switch. Under martial law, the recruit is but a cog in the wheel: thought, motive, will, are ignored; to obey is the law. Not so in or under the social law: that brings unity in diversity. "As I am, so shall I associate"—is sufficiently correct to show that to endeavor to organize dissimilar and crude minds is dangerous. Civil law hardly suffices. Moral law is yet to come. THE INDEX as an advocate, a missionary for truth and piety, has done much, is doing great good. The Lecture Bureau proposed appears to me to be a step in the right direction. Why this urgent call for organization? Are we to measure muscle with established faith and institutions? Esop gave us a picture in the keen north wind and the burning noonday sun. Why not continue to shine? We have no organization in Towanda, and not more than a dozen avowed liberals; yet has the spirit of liberty so influenced the people that the change is noticeable, and very encouraging in the past five years. Truly, there is riotous communism in the liberal as in the political sphere. I wish to acknowledge and to commend your clear statement of differences. We learn by comparison; and you have shown the relative "black" and "white."

L. F. GARDNER.

THE SCIENTIFIC INTELLECT.

FRIEND EDITOR:—

I was much interested in the perusal of Emerson's essay in the last number of THE INDEX, as well as with thy editorial in respect to it. Now true religion never did propose to limit the "scientific intellect." "Of every tree of the garden thou shalt freely eat, save only of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil." Here is the fullest room for all the powers of the spirit of a man to which the things of a man belong. But the things of God belong to the spirit of God. This was the Socratic philosophy as well as the Pauline, and hence Jesus said: "Of myself I can do nothing." That is, I will not eat of that fruit of which Adam partook. In other words, by searching I cannot find out God, and will not attempt it.

And now what is the fact as to the "scientific intellect"? Has it found out God in its inquiries from the time of Lucretius to that of Spencer? Let the acknowledged agnosticism of the age answer. It has failed and ever will fail in every and in all attempts to discover the ultimate in one single atom.

The truth is, natural truth and spiritual truth belong to separate and distinct spheres. "The natural man knoweth not the things of the spirit of God, because they are spiritually discerned." Or, in other words, to know the things of God, we must live to God, as Socrates and as Jesus did, by faith, which means by fidelity, by fealty, and by righteousness! Thus we are justified before the Eternal, or, as the apostle said, we are "justified by the faith of Jesus Christ."

DAVID NEWPORT.

ABINGTON, Pa., 2 mo., 7th, 1880.

SEEKING TRUTH.

The religious man is he who makes use of religion as the science of living.

A great many people have what they call religion, who are yet strangers to the science needed to make it otherwise than an empty, meaningless term,—in fact, as much of a failure as themselves, void of influence in the regeneration of the world.

To make the most out of facts, to adjust ourselves through and by them; to respond to the harmony of the whole to which each fact belongs,—passing on and up, as each conviction adds to our strength, eager and ready to meet another fact, adjusting ourself to it, and stepping up another round, meeting of course another fact still, and—well, to the real religious man, there seems to be no end to fact, no end to science, no end to truth, no end to the beauty involved in the illimitable.

Seeking truth is a journey that ever leads upward. Gaining truth, we dedicate it to the building up of virtue in strength and purity, that we may be worthy of such company as will doubtless be met with, no matter how high our search for her may lead us.

C. W. N.

JESTINGS.

IRELAND is almost as hard to govern as an American college, says an exchange.

THE MANAGER of a church fair, when asked if there would be music each evening, replied, "No; but there will be singing."

A BASHFUL PRINTER refused a situation in a printing office where females were employed, saying he never set up with girls in his life.

FIRST FRESHMAN: "Did you ever see an ape run?" Second Freshman: "Oh! yes. I've seen an apron. It covered one lap."—Columbia Spectator.

MANY A YOUNG lady who aspires to fame via pencil, brush, and canvas, would become a "rising artist" at once, if she would turn her attention to bread-making.—New Haven Register.

A GENTLEMAN met a stranger on the street, grasped his hand cordially, and exclaimed in tones of politeness, but uncertain recognition, "Mr. Brown, I believe?" "If you believe that," calmly replied the stranger, whose name was Hamilton, "you'll believe anything."

PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY: "Suppose you were called to a patient who had swallowed a heavy dose of oxalic acid, what would you administer?" Jones (who is preparing for the pulpit, and who only takes chemistry because it is obligatory): "I would administer the sacrament."

A TENANT HAS been dancing all night over the head of his landlord. At six in the morning the latter comes upstairs and complains bitterly of the annoyance. "What annoyance?" asks the tenant. "Why, I haven't slept a wink all night," is the answer. "Neither have I," says the tenant, "and yet I don't make any fuss about it."

"DO YOU KNOW," said she, "that if the stars were as near the earth as the moon is, they would be ever so many times bigger and brighter?" "No," said he, "I care nothing for astronomy; but, if your eyes should turn in my direction instead of heavenward, I think they would look bigger and brighter to me." How could she do otherwise than allow those lustrous orbs to shine into his soul. It was a delicious evening.—New Haven Register.

SABBATH SCHOOL CONCERT.—Subject: "God's Providence." Teacher: "Why, children, the good Lord cares for even the little sparrows you see hopping about your doors. Can you not tell me in what ways he cares for them?" "Feeds them," "Tells them how to build their nests," "Gives them wings to fly," are some of the answers given: when all are done, a little mite of a fellow, away in the back part of the room, pipes out: "He divs 'em feeders."

"CHEVALIERS of the press! Down with the despotism of the dictionary!" Class in American history stand up. Read! "Wen Jorg Uashintun wuz at Valle Forg, hiz trupz wur in ned ov fud, klothng, and liker. It wuz vevr kold wethur, and fu uv wur had shuz on thar fet. But Gorg Ushington's kurij nevur fald, and at last Kongres sent him supliz, and he chast the eneme ovur to Nu Jerze, and wipt him at the batel uv Trentum." "That'll do, boys. Run out now and play."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A YOUNG LADY who teaches Sunday-school in the summer at Swampscot is in the habit, after the regular session is ended, of asking questions in natural history. Last Sunday she asked: "What bird is large enough to carry a man?" A little girl held up her hand, and said: "I know,—a lark." "Oh, no!" said the teacher, "larks are not large enough to carry men." "Yes, they are," said the youngster. "My papa goes away for two or three days, and my mamma says he's gone off on a lark."—Saturday Evening Gazette.

A YOUNG COUPLE with their first-born child take upper story rooms looking out on the street. "Be very careful about the windows," says the janitor, who has been showing them over the apartments. "Be very careful about the windows: the balconies are low, and the baby might fall and—" "You can just bet I'll be careful about the windows," says the young mother, folding the precious child to her heart; "for, if mother's little darling was to fall out, what would it's poor moth—" "Oh, it isn't that," says the janitor. "It's on account of the boss. He doesn't like to have the stone pavement mussed up."

POLITE STRANGER, in a railway station, to deaf old gentleman whom he has accidentally hit with his foot: "I beg your pardon, sir." Deaf old gentleman: "Eh?" "I beg your pardon, sir," polite stranger repeats, slightly embarrassed and in a more elevated tone of voice. Deaf old gentleman (raising his hand to his ear): "I don't quite understand you." "I beg your pardon," roars polite stranger, very much confused, in deaf old gentleman's ear: "I kicked you." Deaf old gentleman (very much surprised): "What for?" "An accident," roars polite stranger. "An accident! Bless me, where?" Polite stranger rushes off, and misses his train.

DURING THE past two weeks, a large number of pilgrims have arrived at Glendale, among whom are a number of the gentler sex, and in consequence thereof no one can form an idea of the change that has already taken place. Old forty-niners that have lived in the mountains for the last thirty years on bread and bacon and slept on the ground, and in all that time scarcely laid eyes on a woman, can now be seen on the streets harnessed in store clothes, with billed shirts. There ain't a man in Glendale over twenty years old. On Sunday evening we saw one of these would-be young bucks so much surprised by being asked how he came to leave Alder Gulch in '68 that he adjusted his wig, swallowed half a set of false teeth, and then swore that he was a school-boy in Missouri at that time.—Arizona Miner.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 "13 "25 " 8 " "
 "26 "51 " 6 " "
 "52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-

ny, N.Y.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of our country, is a good sign of the times. There is no country, at all in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." In all "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $1.00 for one year, including postage, or 30 cents for three months on trial.
 Address to THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

FREE

RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Bonneschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. E. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting, 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. E. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
 ny, N.Y.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 Mrs. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike,
 Mass.

THE INDEX aims—
 To increase general intelligence with respect to religion;

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual;

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, rights for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of these several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ADLER (Prof. Felix). Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).....	1.50
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Meg, Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrations.....	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins".....	1.50
Under the Lilacs. Illustrated.....	1.50
Work: A Story of Experience.....	1.50
Silver Fitchers and Independence. A Centennial Love Story.....	1.25
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Rhawl-Straps.....	1.00
Cupid and Chow-Chow, &c.....	1.00
My Girls, &c.....	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinako, &c.....	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
Culture and Anarchy.....	3.00
Last Essays on Church and Religion.....	1.50
Mixed Essays.....	1.50
The Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma".....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	2.50
St. Paul and Protestantism; with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.....	1.75
Isaiah Ser. LXXV. With the Shorter Prophets allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes.....	1.50
French Eton.....	1.00
New Poems.....	.35
Rible Reading.....	.35
Higher Schools and Universities in Germany. With New Preface.....	2.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	2.50
Lombard Street.....	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.....	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
Mind and Body.....	2.50
Logic. Deductive and Inductive. 1 vol. Cloth.....	2.00
Emotions and the Will.....	5.00
BARING GOULD (S.). Ominous Myths of the Middle Ages.....	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	3.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	2.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.....	.75
Eating and Drinking.....	.75
The Scientific Basis of Delirium. Paper.....	.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain, and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 81 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-Day. Cloth, extra.....	1.50
A Book of Poems.....	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	1.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.00
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals.....	1.25
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
CLIFFORD (WM. K.). Seeing and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols.....	7.00
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	1.50
Childhood of Religions.....	1.25
COBBE (FRANCIS POWER). States New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects.....	3.00
Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	.50
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	2.00
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.....	2.00
Idols and Ideals.....	1.50
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.80
Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	3.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Different Forms of Flowers.....	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man.....	1.50
Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth.....	2.00
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol. Cloth.....	1.25
Orchids.....	1.50
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization.....	2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.....	1.75
Intellectual Development of Europe. 2 vols.....	3.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated.....	1.50
David Deronda. 2 vols.....	3.00
Scenes of Clerical Life. Illustrated.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	1.70
Romola. Illustrated.....	1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner. Illustrated.....	1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Series. Portrait.....	1.50
Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and other Pieces.....	1.50
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. George Eliot's translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Outlines of Comparative Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols.....	6.00
The Unseen World, and other Essays.....	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Transcendentalism in New England.....	2.50
Life of George Eliot.....	2.00
Creed and Conduct.....	1.00
Cradle of the Christ.....	1.75
Rising and Setting Faith.....	1.00
Visions of the Future.....	1.00
Beliefs of the Unbelievers.....	.25
Second Series. 40 numbers, each 12c. 2 vols. half call.....	5.50
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each 10c.....	1.00
Stories from the Lips of a Teacher.....	1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs.....	1.00
Spirit of the New Faith.....	1.00
Saves Creed.....	1.50
Knowledge and Faith.....	1.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol. Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Erman and Dorothea. Translated by Helen Frothingham.....	3.50
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.....	2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G. A.) Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts and Art.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	2.00
Round my House.....	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River.....	2.00
The two in one volume.....	2.00
Wendcastle: a Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire.....	2.00
Modern Frenchmen. Five Biographies.....	2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner, R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts.....	2.50
Etching and Etal.....	5.00
Hay Mount. Passed in Boyhood.....	1.50
Land and Sea.....	1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living.....	1.50
Gala Days.....	1.50
Woman's Wrongs.....	1.50
Summer Rest.....	1.50
A New Atmosphere.....	1.50
Sketching Notes.....	1.50
Wood Gathering.....	1.50
Sermons to the Clergy.....	1.50
Sketches and Sketches.....	1.50
First Love is Best.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	1.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
H. H. Bits of Talk about Home Matters.....	1.00
Travels. Enlarged.....	1.25
The Story of Boon. A Poem.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.25
Bits of Talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks.....	1.00
Bits of Travel at Home.....	1.50
Nelly's Silver. A Story of Colorado Illustrated.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
Critique's and Addresses.....	1.50
American Addresses.....	1.25
Physiology, an Introduction to Study of Nature.....	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.....	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.....	1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. The Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50
III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
X. Science of Law. By Prof. S. Amos.....	1.75
XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Marey.....	1.75
XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper.....	1.75
XIII. The Theory of Doctrines and Dogmism. By Prof. Oscar Schmidt.....	1.50
XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Vogel.....	2.00
XV. Fundamentals of M. C. Cooke, M.A., LL.D.....	1.50
XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.....	1.50
XVII. Money and Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons.....	1.75
XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel.....	2.00
XIX. The Nature of Matter and Mesmerism. By Mons. Van Beneden.....	1.50
XX. On Fermentations. By P. Schützenberger.....	1.50
XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Münsterlin.....	1.75
XXII. The History of the Relation of Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.....	1.50
XXIII. Studies in Spectrum Analysis. By J. N. Lockyer.....	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion, India.....	5.00
China.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions. By B. Jowett, M.A. Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	8.00
KAPPERT (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.....	1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	3.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Eliza F. Frithlingham.....	1.50
LEWIS (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. Principles of Life and Mind. Vols. I. and II. Per vol.....	3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind.....	3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method.....	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Foes.....	2.00
My Study Window.....	.75
A Fable for Critics.....	.75
Under the Willows and other Poems.....	1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal.....	.75
Three Memorial Poems.....	1.25
Fireside Travels.....	1.50
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
Pre-historic Times.....	5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	3.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Northmen.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each.....	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjective of Womanhood or Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	2.50
Autobiography.....	2.50
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun.....	1.50
The Song of the Desert.....	1.50
Songs of Italy.....	1.25
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
Man and Apes. An Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol.....	2.50
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.....	2.00
Contemporary Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes.....	1.50
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bedtime Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., etc.; compiling the work. For sale by subscription.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
On Missions. A Lecture Delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873.....	1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of the World.....	2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.90
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham. The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.....	1.25
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolley Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Begged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.50
Poetic Studies.....	1.50
The Story of Aris.....	1.50
Tr try's Wedding Tour. Illustrated.....	1.50
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.....	1.50
PROUTEN'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	1.50
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the light of Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c., with 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.00
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHLLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.....	.50
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.A., M.D., F.R.S.....	.50
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S.....	.50
8. Botany. By Dr. D. Hooker.....	.50
9. Logic. By W. S. Jevons.....	.50
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.....	1.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL.) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.....	2.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, the Conditions essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	8.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
Data of Ethics.....	1.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	2.00
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.....	1.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	2.00
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	2.00
C. C. Codrington.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	1.50
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	3.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	7.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Elements of Geodesy.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Association at East.....	.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI., each.....	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Saunterings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.....	1.50
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.....	2.00
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.....	1.25
WHIPPLE'S (E. F.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	5.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.
VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving Principles of the Ox Brain and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.
A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N.Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N.Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Focasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

MR. CHADWICK'S NEW BOOK,
THE FAITH OF REASON.

"Of all preachers occupying regular pulpits as distinguished from lecture platforms, he seems to have completely emancipated himself from pulpit conventions. His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence. . . . When we consider their quality, we marvel, for what sermons of the day can compare with these in richness, force, and beauty?"—Rev. Dr. F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

MARSTON'S DINING ROOMS.

FOR

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,

23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?

11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Pre-existent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING
NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort. Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kruenen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.50 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE FAITH OF REASON. A Series of Discourses on the leading topics of Religion. By John W. Chadwick, author of The Bible of To-day. Pages 254. Price $1.00.

"His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit-teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence."—Rev. Dr. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 233 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 263 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Enigmas of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete Index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Inquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half calf, $6.00.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $13.50, and the English Edition at $15.00, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Fred. Crick May. Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston

A CHEAP OFFER

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 9,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27TH YEAR.

A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS' LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
2. Max Müller.
3. Emerson.

For terms, etc., address

CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N.Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR,

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest Inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS.

In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & Co. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 532.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

THE LIBERAL PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSES.

THE AGASSIZ MUSEUM at Harvard College is to be enlarged.

HUXLEY says that Lucretius "had drunk deeper of the scientific spirit than any poet of ancient or modern times except Goethe."

THE NEW HAVEN Register jokingly remarks: "Col. Ingersoll's lectures, 'Hell,' 'Burns,' 'Paine,'—nothing can be more consecutively logical and Orthodox."

M. VICTOR HUGO will be seventy-eight years old the 26th of this month, and about the same time he will publish his two new books, Religions et Religion, and Tout la Lyre. The poet is hale and vigorous.

RECENT LETTERS from Mr. O. B. Frothingham say that the Roman winter which he had hoped to enjoy, is so uncomfortably cold that, were it not for the voyage, he should seek the more equable climate of Egypt.

THE NEW YORK Tribune says: "Our latest advices show that while the poor are suffering in Ireland for want of food, two Irish bishops have just sent over $4,000 to Rome as Peter's pence. This seems like a case of feeding the shepherd and leaving the sheep to starve."

PROFESSOR JEVONS, in his invaluable work on The Principles of Science, says (p. 334): "In the progress of time, exact investigation may possibly subdue regions of phenomena which at present defy all scientific treatment. That scientific method can ever exhaust the phenomena of the human mind is incredible." This is said with reference to "man in his economic, sanitary, intellectual, æsthetic, and moral relations." The ethics of the future will be neither utilitarian nor intuitional, but impartially scientific.

MICHELET, in La Bible de l'Humanité, has this poetical passage: "Language and light are two identical words in the primitive sacred language [of Persia], and it is not without reason. Light is, so to speak, the language of Nature. And Language, in its turn, is the light of the mind. The universe hears and answers. An eternal dialogue is carried on between Nature and the soul. If the soul does not translate, does not throw light upon what the other says, this Nature, obscure and uncomprehended, would be as if non-existent."

MR. F. B. SANBORN, of Concord, writes of his neighbor, Ralph Waldo Emerson: "His health is firm, his spirit cheerful and serene as in earlier years, but he sees fewer visitors, and finds his days more precious as they grow fewer. He writes little, reads much, and is revising those papers which he will never publish, but which will yet appear in print some day. His life is no longer a public one in any sense, and those who love him should respect his privacy, and allow one who has served his age so faithfully to withdraw from it as gently as he came before it."

THE LONDON Spectator illustrates the depressing effect of overstimulus of the brain: "It is impossible to read the careful observations now made upon red Indians, some South American tribes, and all the tribes of Australia, without believing that their sadness, the sadness which affects their vital powers, is the result of contact with a civilization which is too strong, too perplexing, too complicated, too like an atmosphere in its steady pressure, for them to escape it, or struggle with it, or, with their untrained powers, endure it. They die sad, of too continuous excitement of the brain. The English cultivated do not die like the Australians, but they grow sad and weary. The brain is unconsciously fatigued till spirits disappear, and the capacity of pleasure is diminished."

THE PHILADELPHIA Bulletin commiserates the city boy: "A city boy does not have a fair chance, even under the most favorable circumstances. The things that he especially desires to do, which are often the very things that, for the sake of his health, he should be allowed to do, are those that the law positively refuses to permit him to do in any public place. He cannot fly a kite in the streets without threats from the police; he is forbidden to ride a velocipede upon the pavement; it is unlawful for him to play ball upon the public highway; he is commanded under penalty not to accept Mr. Charles Reade's advice that he shall practise at throwing stones; he cannot go swimming without making a journey of six or seven miles out of town; and, if he visits any of the squares, he is warned to keep off the grass."

JEFFERSON was a lawyer, learned in his profession, and at one time in a large practice: he did not think very highly, however, of lawyers and law-makers. "If the present Congress," said he in 1821, "errs in too much talking, how can it be otherwise in a body to which the people send one hundred and fifty lawyers, whose trade is to question everything, yield nothing, and talk by the hour?" Even the confederate Congress in 1783, he says, though "little numerous," was "very contentious." Day after day was wasted on the most unimportant matters, and Jefferson wonders "whether Bonaparte's dumb legislature, which said nothing and did much, may not be preferable to one that talks much and does nothing." He then goes on to say: "I served with General Washington in the legislature of Virginia before the Revolution, and during it with Dr. Franklin in Congress. I never heard them speak ten minutes at a time, nor to any but the main point, which was to decide the question. They laid their shoulders to the great points, knowing that the little ones would follow of themselves."

THE NEW YORK Independent, which has vigorously defended for years the principle of State Secularization, and once thought THE INDEX so behind-hand on this point as to charge it with "Halting Radicalism," contained this editorial paragraph in its issue of February 19: "What the Liberal League has come to may be seen from the fact that the decent members of it, who formed it first to express their convictions, and who withdrew into a rival League when they found that the old organization had gone over to the defence of indecency,—these decent members, we say, who gave the League all the character it had, and who had great hopes once of regenerating the country from priestly domination thereby, have now given up their name. Their directors have adopted this tremendous arraignment of the organization which they founded: 'Voted, That, in the judgment of this Board, the name "National Liberal League" has become so widely and injuriously associated in the public mind with attempts to repeal the postal law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature by mail,—with the active propagandism of demoralizing and licentious social theories, and with the support of officials and other public representatives who are on good grounds believed to have been guilty of gross immoralities,—that it has been thereby unfitted for use by any organization which desires the support of the friends of "natural morality." They have, accordingly, definitely given up the name which they declare is no longer fit to be used by the friends of "natural morality," and will henceforth take the name of "Liberal Union." Their auxiliary liberal unions now count but eight, and are at Boston, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Chelsea, Florence, Mass., Jacksonville, Ill., and Passaic City, N.J. We are sorry not to see Ithaca, N.Y., in the list. It had a famous local League once. Can it be that its learned members prefer to cast in their lot with Bennett and Rawson and the obscene jail-birds? We trust the explanation is that they have become so much disgusted that they have disbanded."

AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N.Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Irvington, Ind.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSENTHAL.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Ed. of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York.
 W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Ed. "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....Chicago, Ill.
 COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill.
 DR. T. L. BROWN.....Binghamton, N.Y.
 HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa.
 MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADDY STANTON.....Tenafly, N.J.
 MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....Lottsburgh, Va.
 JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N.Y.
 RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N.Y.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....W. H. HAMLEN.
 F. E. ABBOT.....C. D. B. MILLS.
 D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
 Arkansas.....JOHN ABBENS, Monticello.
 California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
 Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenadn.
 Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
 Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOELT, Greenville.
 Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprize.
 Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
 Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
 Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
 Iowa.....J. C. MICHENER, Adet.
 Kansas.....JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
 Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
 Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
 Maine.....D. W. BROWN, Bangor.
 Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
 Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
 Michigan.....KARL SCHEMANN, Detroit.
 Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
 Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
 Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
 Nevada.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
 New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
 New Jersey.....FRANCIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
 New York.....C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
 North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
 Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
 Oregon.....SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
 Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
 South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
 Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
 Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
 Vermont.....E. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
 Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
 West Virginia.....DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
 Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
 Dakota.....C. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
 District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
 Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
 Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.

D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL UNIONS,

As created by the American Liberal Union.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
 SYRACUSE, N.Y.—[Officers not reported.]
 ALBANY, N.Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
 BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
 PASSAIC CITY, N.J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
 JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
 ROCHESTER, N.Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Cale.
 CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y. MORSES HAYS, Rochester, N.Y.
 FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. URBINO, West Newton, land, N.Y.
 Z. T. WATKEYS, Syracuse, N.Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N.Y.
 NETTIE C. TRUESDELL, Syra-FRANCOIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, cuse, N.Y.
 GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MORSES W. DODGE, Albany, N.Y. waukee, Ill. J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N.J.
 HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N.J. SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
 W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. HOPE WHIPPLE, Boston, Mass.
 T. C. GAGE, Fayetteville, N.Y. D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
 B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, CHARLES ELLIS, Boston, Mass.
 CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Albany, N.Y. JOHN W. TRUESDELL, Syra-bany, N.Y.
 EBEN TURE, Chelsea, Mass. H. P. STARK, Rochester, N.Y.
 JOHN NILL, Watertown, N.Y. JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N.Y.
 E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston, Mass. W. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N.Y.
 THOS. DUGAN, Albany, N.Y. JOHN PREST, Albany, N.Y.
 JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N.Y. C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
 D. B. MORREY, Malden, Mass.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Dec. 12, 1879.

Voted, That, in the judgment of this Board, the name "National Liberal League" has become so widely and injuriously associated in the public mind with attempts to repeal the postal law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature by mail,—with the active propaganda of demoralizing and licentious social theories,—and with the support of officials and other public representatives who are on good grounds believed to have been guilty of gross immoralities,—that it has been thereby unfitted for use by any organization which desires the support of the friends of "natural morality."

Voted, That for this reason the Directors of the National Liberal League of America recommend that the name of this organization be changed to "AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION," and they respectfully submit this recommendation to their constituent Auxiliary Liberal Leagues for consideration and action.

Voted, That, since it is inexpedient to call an Annual Congress of this League at the present time, this Board will deem itself authorized to make the proposed change of name on receiving approving votes to this effect from a majority of the Auxiliary Leagues.

Voted, That the Secretary be instructed to send a certified copy of these votes to the President and Secretary of each Auxiliary League, with a request for immediate action thereupon; and to report to this Board at his earliest convenience.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Feb. 6, 1880.

Whereas, A certified copy of the resolutions adopted by this Board on December 12, 1879, was duly sent by the Secretary to the President and Secretary of each constituent Auxiliary League; and

Whereas, The reasons therein given for recommending a change of name by this organization have been heartily and unanimously approved by all the constituent Leagues heard from at this date; and a majority of all the Leagues on our list of auxiliaries has approved the name of "American Liberal Union," while one of them has expressed a preference for the name of "National Secular Union," therefore,

Voted, That the name of the National Liberal League of America be, and hereby is, changed to AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

On the Choice of Books.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED TO THE STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH, APRIL 2, 1866.

BY THOMAS CARLYLE.

GENTLEMEN,—I have accepted the office you have elected me to, and have now the duty to return thanks for the great honor done me. Your enthusiasm toward me, I admit, is very beautiful in itself, however undesirable it may be in regard to the object of it. It is a feeling honorable to all men, and one well known to myself when I was in a position analogous to your own. I can only hope that it may endure to the end,—that noble desire to honor those whom you think worthy of honor, and come to be more and more select and discriminate in the choice of the object of it; for I can well understand that you will modify your opinions of me and many things else as you go on. (Laughter and cheers.) There are now fifty-six years gone last November since I first entered your city, a boy of not quite fourteen,—fifty-six years ago,—to attend classes here and gain knowledge of all kinds, I know not what, with feelings of wonder and awe-struck expectation; and now, after a long, long course, this is what we have come to. (Cheers.) There is something touching and tragic, and yet at the same time beautiful, to see the third generation, as it were, of my dear old native land rising up and saying, "Well, you are not altogether an unworthy laborer in the vineyard; you have toiled through a great variety of fortunes, and have had many judges." As the old proverb says, "He that builds by the wayside has many masters." We must expect a variety of judges; but the voice of young Scotland, through you, is really of some value to me, and I return you many thanks for it, though I cannot describe my emotions to you, and perhaps they will be much more conceivable if expressed in silence. (Cheers.)

When this office was proposed to me, some of you know that I was not very ambitious to accept it, at first. I was taught to believe that there were more or less certain important duties which would lie in my power. This, I confess, was my chief motive in going into it,—at least, in reconciling the objections felt to such things; for if I can do anything to honor you and my dear old Alma Mater, why should I not do so? (Loud cheers.) Well, but on practically looking into the matter when the office actually came into my hands, I find it grows more and more uncertain and abstruse to me whether there is much real duty that I can do at all. I live four hundred miles away from you, in an entirely different state of things; and my weak health, now for many years accumulating upon me, and a total unacquaintance with such subjects as concern your affairs here,—all this fills me with apprehension that there is really nothing worth the least consideration that I can do on that score. You may, however, depend upon it that, if any such duty does arise in any form, I will use my most faithful endeavor to do whatever is right and proper, according to the best of my judgment. (Cheers.)

In the mean while, the duty I have at present—which might be very pleasant, but which is quite the reverse, as you may fancy—is to address some words to you on some subjects more or less cognate to the pursuits you are engaged in. In fact, I had meant to throw out some loose observations—loose in point of order, I mean—in such a way as they may occur to me,—the truths I have in me about the business you are engaged in, the race you have started on, what kind of race it is you young gentlemen have begun, and what sort of arena you are likely to find in this world. I ought, I believe, according to custom, to have written all that down on paper, and had it read out. That would have been much handier for me at the present moment (a laugh), but when I attempted to write, I found that I was not accustomed to write speeches, and that I did not get on very well. So I flung that away, and resolved to trust to the inspiration of the moment—just to what came uppermost. You will therefore have to accept what is readiest, what comes direct from the heart, and you must just take that in compensation for any good order of arrangement there might have been in it.

I will endeavor to say nothing that is not true, as far as I can manage; and that is pretty much all that I can engage for. (A laugh.) Advices, I believe, to young men—and to all men—are very seldom much valued. There is a great deal of advising, and very little faithful performing. And talk that does not end in any kind of action is better suppressed altogether. I would not, therefore, go much into advising; but there is one advice I must give you. It is, in fact, the summary of all advices, and you have heard it a thousand times, I dare say; but I must, nevertheless, let you hear it the thousand and first time, for it is most intensely true, whether you will believe it at present or not,—namely, that above all things the interest of your own life depends upon being diligent now, while it is called to-day, in this place where you have come to get education. Diligent! That includes all virtues in it that a student can have; I mean to include in it all qualities that lead into the acquirement of real instruction and improvement in such a place. If you will believe me, you who are young, yours is the golden season of life. As you have heard it called, so it verily is, the seed-time of life, in which, if you do not sow, or if you sow tares instead of wheat, you cannot expect to reap well afterward, and you will arrive at indeed little; while in the course of years, when you come to look back, and if you have not done what you have heard from your advisers,—and among many counsellors there is wisdom,—you will bitterly repent when it is too late. The habits of study acquired at universities are of the highest importance in after life. At the season when you are in young years the whole mind is, as it were, fluid, and is capable of forming itself into any shape that the owner of the mind pleases to order it to form itself into. The mind is in a fluid state, but it hardens up gradually to the consistency of rock or iron; and you cannot alter the habits of an old man, but as he has begun he will proceed and go on to the last. By diligence I mean, among other things,—and very chiefly,—honesty in all your inquiries into what you are about. Pursue your studies in the way your conscience calls honest. More and more endeavor to do that. Keep, I mean to say, an accurate separation of what you have really come to know in your own minds, and what is still unknown. Leave all that on the hypothetical side of the barrier, as things afterward to be acquired, if acquired at all; and be careful not to stamp a thing as known when you do not yet know it. Count a thing known only when it is stamped on your mind, so that you may survey it on all sides with intelligence.

There is such a thing as a man endeavoring to persuade himself, and endeavoring to persuade others, that he knows about things when he does not know more than the outside skin of them; and he goes flourishing about with them. ("Hear, hear," and a laugh.) There is also a process called cramming in some universities (a laugh); that is, getting up such points of things as the examiner is likely to put questions about. Avoid all that as entirely unworthy of an honorable habit. Be modest, and humble, and diligent in your attention to what your teachers tell you, who are profoundly interested in trying to bring you forward in the right way, so far as they have been able to understand it. Try all things they set before you, in order, if possible, to understand them, and to value them in proportion to your fitness for them. Gradually see what kind of work you can do; for it is the first of all problems for a man to find out what kind of work he is to do in this universe. In fact, morality as regards study is, as in all other things, the primary consideration, and overrides all others. A dishonest man cannot do anything real; and it would be greatly better if he were tied up from doing any such thing. He does nothing but darken counsel by the words he utters. That is a very old doctrine, but a very true one; and you will find it confirmed by all the thinking men that have ever lived in this long series of generations of which we are the latest.

I dare say you know, very many of you, that it is now seven hundred years since universities were first set up in this world of ours. Abelard and other people had risen up with doctrines in them the people wished to hear of, and students flocked toward them from all parts of the world. There was no getting the thing recorded in books as you may now. You had to hear him speaking to you vocally, or else you could not learn at all what it was that he wanted to say. And so they gathered together the various people who had anything to teach, and formed themselves gradually, under the patronage of kings and other potentates who were anxious about the culture of their populations, nobly anxious for their benefit, and became a university.

I dare say, perhaps, you have heard it said that all that is greatly altered by the invention of printing, which took place about midway between us and the origin of universities. A man has not now to go away to where a professor is actually speaking, because in most cases he can get his doctrine out of him through a book, and can read it, and read it again and again, and study it. I don't know that I know of any way in which the whole facts of a subject may be more completely taken in, if our studies are moulded in conformity with it. Nevertheless, universities have, and will continue to have, an indispensable value in society—a very high value. I consider the very highest interests of man vitally intrusted to them.

In regard to theology, as you are aware, it has been the study of the deepest heads that have come into the world—what is the nature of this stupendous universe, and what its relations to all things, as known to man, and as only known to the awful Author of it. In fact, the members of the Church keep theology in a lively condition (laughter), for the benefit of the whole population, which is the great object of our universities. I consider it is the same now intrinsically, though very much forgotten, from many causes, and not so successful as might be wished at all. (A laugh.) It remains, however, a very curious truth, what has been said by observant people, that the main use of the universities in the present age is that, after you have done with all your classes, the next thing is a collection of books, a great library of good books, which you proceed to study and to read. What the universities have mainly done—that I have found the university did for me was that it taught me to read in various languages and various sciences, so that I could go into the books that treated of these things, and try anything I wanted to make myself master of gradually, as I found it suit me. Whatever you may think of all that, the clearest and most imperative duty lies on every one of you to be assiduous in your reading; and learn to be good readers, which is, perhaps, a more difficult thing than you imagine. Learn to be discriminative in your reading,—to read all kinds of things that you have an interest in, and that you find to be really fit for what you are engaged in. Of course, at the present time, in a great deal of the reading incumbent on you, you must be guided by the books recommended to you by your professors for assistance toward the prelections. And then, when you get out of the university, and go into studies of your own, you will find it very important that you have selected a field, a province in which you can study and work.

The most unhappy of all men is the man that cannot tell what he is going to do, that has got no work cut out for him in the world, and does not go into it. For work is the grand cure of all the maladies and miseries that ever beset mankind,—honest work, which you intend getting done. If you are in a strait, a very good indication as to choice—perhaps the best you could get—is a book you have a great curiosity about. You are then in the readiest and best of all possible conditions to improve by that book. It is analogous to what doctors tell us about the physical health and appetites of the patient. You must learn to distinguish between false appetite and real. There is such a thing as a false appetite, which will lead a man into vagaries with regard to diet, will tempt him to eat spicy things which he should not eat at all, and would not but that it is toothsome, and for the moment in baseness of mind. A man ought to inquire and find out what he really and truly has an appetite for, what suits his constitution; and that doctors tell him is the very thing he ought to have in general. And so with books. As applicable to almost all of you, I will say that it is highly expedient to go into history, to inquire into what has passed before you in the families of men. The history of the Romans and Greeks will first of all concern you; and you will find that all the knowledge you have got will be extremely applicable to elucidate that. There you have the most remarkable race of men in the world set before you, to say nothing of the languages, which your professors can better explain, and which, I believe, are admitted to be the most perfect orders of speech we have yet found to exist among men. And you will find, if you read well, a pair of extremely remarkable nations shining in the records left by themselves, as a kind of pillar to light up life in the darkness of the past ages; and it will be well worth your while if you can get into the understanding of what these people were and what they did. You will find a great deal of hearsay, as I have found, that does not touch on the matter; but perhaps some of you will get to see a Roman face to face; you will know in some measure how they contrived to exist, and to perform these feats in the world; I believe, also, you will find a thing not much noted, that there was a very great deal of deep religion in its form in both nations. That is noted by the wisest of historians, and particularly by Ferguson, who is particularly well worth reading on Roman history; and I believe he was an alumnus in our own university. His book is a very creditable book. He points out the profoundly religious nature of the Roman people, notwithstanding the wildness and ferociousness of their nature. They believed that Jupiter Optimus—Jupiter Maximus—was lord of the universe, and that he had appointed the Romans to become the chief of men, provided they followed his commands—to brave all difficulty, and to stand up with an invincible front—to be ready to do and die; and also to have the same sacred regard to veracity, to promise, to integrity, and all the virtues that surround that noblest quality of men—courage—to which the Romans gave the name of virtue, manhood, as the one thing ennobling for a man.

In the literary ages of Rome, that had very much decayed away; but still it had retained its place among the lower classes of the Roman people. Of the deeply religious nature of the Greeks along with their beautiful and sunny effulgences of art, you have a striking proof, if you look for it.

In the tragedies of Sophocles there is a most distinct recognition of the eternal justice of heaven and the unfailing punishment of crime against the laws of God.

I believe you will find in all histories that that has been at the head and foundation of them all, and that no nation that did not contemplate this wonderful universe with an awe-stricken and reverential feeling that there was a great unknown, omnipotent, and all-wise, and all-virtuous Being, superintending all men in it, and all interests in it—no nation ever came to very much, nor did any man either, who forgot that. If a man did forget that, he forgot the most important part of his mission in this world.

In our own history of England, which you will take a great deal of natural pains to make yourselves acquainted with, you will find it beyond all others worthy of your study; because I believe that the British nation—and I include in them the Scottish nation—produced a finer set of men than any you will find it possible to get anywhere else in the world. (Applause.) I don't know in any history of Greece or Rome where you will get so fine a man as Oliver Cromwell. (Applause.) And we have had men worthy of memory in our little corner of the island here as well as others, and our history has been strong at least in being connected with the world itself; for, if you examine well, you will find that John Knox was the author, as it were, of Oliver Cromwell; that the Puritan Revolution would never have taken place in England at all, if it had not been for that Scotchman. (Applause.) This is an arithmetical fact, and is not prompted by national vanity on my part at all. (Laughter and applause.) And it is very possible, if you look at the struggle that was going on in England, as I have had to do in my time, you will see that people were overawed with the immense impediments lying in the way.

A small minority of God-fearing men in the country were flying away with any ship they could get to New England, rather than take the lion by the beard. They durstn't confront the powers with their most just complaint to be delivered from idolatry. They wanted to make the nation altogether conformable to the Hebrew Bible, which they understood to be according to the will of God; and there could be no aim more legitimate. However, they could not have got their desire fulfilled at all, if Knox had not succeeded by the firmness and nobleness of his mind. For he is also of the select of the earth to me—John Knox. (Applause.) What he has suffered from the ungrateful generations that have followed him should really make us humble ourselves to the dust, to think that the most excellent man our country has produced, to whom we owe everything that distinguishes us among modern nations, should have been sneered at and abused by people. Knox was heard by Scotland—the people heard him with the marrow of their bones—they took up his doctrine, and they defied principalities and powers to move them from it. "We must have it," they said.

It was at that time the Puritan struggle arose in England, and you know well that the Scottish earls and nobility, with their tenantry, marched away to Dunse Hill, and sat down there; and just in the course of that struggle, when it was either to be suppressed or brought into greater vitality, they encamped on the top of Dunse Hill, thirty thousand armed men, drilled for that occasion, each regiment around its landlord, its earl, or whatever he might be called, and eager for Christ's Crown and Covenant. That was the signal for all England rising up into unappeasable determination to have the Gospel there also, and you know it went on and came to be a contest whether the Parliament or the King should rule—whether it should be old formalities and use and wont, or something that had been of new conceived in the souls of men—namely, a divine determination to walk according to the laws of God here as the sum of all prosperity—which of these should have the mastery; and after a long, long agony of struggle, it was decided—the way we know. I should say also of that Protectorate of Oliver Cromwell's—notwithstanding the abuse it has encountered, and the denial of everybody that it was able to get on in the world, and so on—it appears to me to have been the most salutary thing in the modern history of England, on the whole. If Oliver Cromwell had continued it out, I don't know what it would have come to. It would have got corrupted perhaps in other hands, and could not have gone on, but it was pure and true to the last fibre in his mind—there was truth in it when he ruled over it.

Machiavelli has remarked, in speaking about the Romans, that democracy cannot exist anywhere in the world; as a government it is an impossibility that it should be continued, and he goes on proving that in his own way. I do not ask you all to follow him in his conviction ("hear"); but it is to him a clear truth that it is a solecism and impossibility that the universal mass of men should govern themselves. He says of the Romans that they continued a long time, but it was purely in virtue of this item in their constitution; namely, that they had all the conviction in their minds that it was solemnly necessary at times to appoint a Dictator, a man who had the power of life and death over everything, who degraded men out of their places, ordered them to execution, and did whatever seemed to him good in the name of God above him. He was commanded to take care that the Republic suffered no detriment, and Machiavelli calculates that that was the thing that purified the social system from time to time, and enabled it to hang on as it did,—an extremely likely thing, if it was composed of nothing but bad and tumultuous men, triumphing in general over the better, and all going the bad road, in fact. Well, Oliver Cromwell's Protectorate, or Dictatorate, if you will, lasted for about ten years, and you will find that nothing that was contrary to the laws of heaven was allowed to live by Oliver. (A laugh and applause.) For example, it was found by his parliament, called "Barebones,"—the most zealous of all parliaments, probably,—(laughter) that the Court of Chancery, in England, was in a state that was really capable of no apology; no man could get up and say that that was a right court. There were, I think, fifteen thousand or fifteen hundred (laughter),—I don't really remember which, but we shall call it by the last (renewed laughter),—there were fifteen hundred cases lying in it undecided; and one of them, I remember, for a large amount of money, was eighty-three years old, and it was going on still. Wigs were waving over it, and lawyers were taking their fees, and there was no end of it; upon which the Barebones people, after deliberation about it, thought it was expedient, and commanded by the Author of Man and the Fountain of Justice, and for the true and right, to abolish the court. Really, I don't know who could have dissented from that opinion. At the same time, it was thought by those who were wiser, and had more experience of the world, that it was a very dangerous thing, and would never suit at all. The lawyers began to make an immense noise about it. (Laughter.) All the public, the great mass of solid and well-disposed people who had got no deep insight into such matters, were very adverse to it; and the president of it, old Sir Francis Rous, who translated the Psalms,—those that we sing every Sunday in the Church yet,—a very good man and a wise man, the Provost of Eaton, he got the minority, or I don't know whether or no he did not persuade the majority,—he, at any rate, got a great number of the parliament to go to Oliver, the Dictator, and lay down their functions altogether, and declare officially with their signature on Monday morning that the Parliament was dissolved.

The thing was passed on Saturday night, and on Monday morning Rous came and said, "We cannot carry on the affair any longer, and we remit it into the hands of your Highness." Oliver, in that way, became Protector a second time.

I give you this as an instance that Oliver felt that the Parliament that had been dismissed had been perfectly right with regard to Chancery, and that there was no doubt of the propriety of abolishing Chancery, or reforming it in some kind of way. He considered it, and this is what he did. He assembled sixty of the wisest lawyers to be found in England. Happily, there were men great in the law,—men who valued the law as much as anybody does now, I suppose. (A laugh.) Oliver said to them, "Go and examine this thing, and in the name of God inform me what is necessary to be done in regard to it. You will see how we may clean out the foul things in it, that render it poison to everybody." Well, they sat down then, and in the course of six weeks—there was no public speaking then, no reporting of speeches, and no trouble of any kind,—there was just the business in hand—they got sixty propositions fixed in their minds of the things that required to be done. And upon these sixty propositions Chancery was reconstituted and remodelled, and so it has lasted to our time. It had become a nuisance, and could not have continued much longer.

That is an instance of the manner in which things were done when a Dictatorship prevailed in the country, and that was what the Dictator did. Upon the whole, I do not think that, in general, out of common history books, you will ever get into the real history of this country, or anything particular which it would beseech you to know. You may read very ingenious and very clever books by men whom it would be the height of insolence in me to do any other thing than express my respect for. But their position is essentially sceptical. Man is unhappily in that condition that he will make only a temporary explanation of anything, and you will not be able, if you are like the man, to understand how this island came to be what it is. You will not find it recorded in books. You will find recorded in books a jumble of tumults, disastrous ineptitudes, and all that kind of thing. But to get what you want you will have to look into side sources, and inquire in all directions.

I remember getting Collins' "Peerage" to read,—a very poor peerage as a work of genius, but an excellent book for diligence and fidelity,—I was writing on Oliver Cromwell at the time. (Applause.) I could get no biographical dictionary, and I thought the peerage book would help me, at least tell me whether people were old or young; and about all persons concerned in the actions about which I wrote. I got a great deal of help out of poor Collins. He was a diligent and dark London bookseller of about a hundred years ago, who compiled out of all kinds of treasury chests, archives, books that were authentic, and out of all kinds of things out of which he could get the information he wanted. He was a very meritorious man. I not only found the solution of anything I wanted there, but I began gradually to perceive this immense fact, which I really advise every one of you who read history to look out for, and read for, if he has not found it,—it was that the kings of England all the way from the Norman Conquest down to the times of Charles I. had appointed, so far as they knew, those who deserved to be appointed, peers. They were all royal men, with minds full of justice and valor and humanity, and all kinds of qualities that are good for men to have who ought to rule over others. Then their genealogy was remarkable; and there is a great deal more in genealogies than is generally believed at present.

I never heard tell of any clever man that came out of entirely stupid people. If you look around the families of your acquaintance, you will see such cases in all directions. I know that it has been the case in mine. I can trace the father, and the son, and the grandson, and the family stamp is quite distinctly legible upon each of them: so that it goes for a great deal,—the hereditary principle in government as in other things; and it must be recognized so soon as there is any fixity in things.

You will remark that, if at any time the genealogy of a peerage fails,—if the man that actually holds the peerage is a fool,—in these earnest, striking times, the man gets into mischief and gets into treason,—he gets himself extinguished altogether, in fact. (Laughter.)

From these documents of old Collins it seems that a peer conducts himself in a solemn, good, pious, manly kind of way when he takes leave of life, and when he has hospitable habits, and is valiant in his procedure throughout; and that in general a king, with a noble approximation to what was right, had nominated this man, saying, "Come you to me, sir: come out of the common level of the people, where you are liable to be trampled upon; come here and take a district of country and make it into your own image more or less; be a king under me, and understand that that is your function." I say this is the most divine thing that a human being can do to other human beings; and no kind of being whatever has so much of the character of God Almighty's Divine Government as that thing we see that went all over England, and that is the grand soul of England's history.

It is historically true that down to the time of Charles I. it was not understood that any man was made a peer without having a merit in him to constitute him a proper subject for a peerage. In Charles I.'s time, it grew to be known or said that, if a man was by birth a gentleman, and was worth £10,000 a year, and bestowed his gifts up and down among courtiers, he could be made a peer. Under Charles II., it went on with still more rapidity, and has been going on with ever-increasing velocity until we see the perfect break-neck pace at which they are now going. (A laugh.) And now a peerage is a paltry kind of thing to what it was in these old times. I could go into a great many more details about things of that sort, but I must turn to another branch of the subject.

One remark more about your reading. I do not know whether it has been sufficiently brought home to you that there are two kinds of books. When a man is reading on any kind of a subject, in most departments of books,—in all books, if you take it in a wide sense,—you will find that there is a division of good books and bad books; there is a good kind of a book and a bad kind of a book. I am not to assume that you are all ill acquainted with this; but I may remind you that it is a very important consideration at present. It casts aside altogether the idea that people have that, if they are reading any book,—that if an ignorant man is reading any book, he is doing rather better than nothing at all. I entirely call that in question. I even venture to deny it. (Laughter and cheers.) It would be much safer and better would he have no concern with books at all than with some of them. You know these are my views. There are a number, an increasing number of books, that are, decidedly to him, not useful. ("Hear.") But he will learn also that a certain number of books were written by a supreme, noble kind of people,—not a very great number,—but a great number adhere more or less to that side of things. In short, as I have written it down somewhere else, I conceive that books are like men's souls,—divided into sheep and goats. (Laughter and applause.) Some of them are calculated to be of very great advantage in teaching,—in forwarding the teaching of all generations. Others are going down, down, doing more and more, wilder and wilder mischief.

And for the rest, in regard to all your studies here, and whatever you may learn, you are to remember that the object is not particular knowledge,—that you are going to get higher in technical perfections, and all that sort of thing. There is a higher aim lies at the rear of all that, especially among those who are intended for literary, for speaking pursuits,—the sacred profession. You are ever to bear in mind that there lies behind that the acquisition of what may be called wisdom; namely, sound appreciation and just decision as to all the objects that come round about you, and the habit of behaving with justice and wisdom. In short, great is wisdom, great is the value of wisdom. It cannot be exaggerated. The highest achievement of man,—“Blessed is he that getteth understanding.” And that, I believe, occasionally may be missed very easily; but never more easily than now, I think. If that is a failure, all is a failure. However, I will not touch further upon that matter.

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

DO OUR COLLEGES TEACH EVOLUTION?

In his address before the Evangelical Alliance in New York, Dr. McCosh said:—

"It is useless to tell the younger naturalists that there is no truth in the doctrine of development; for they know that there is truth, which is not to be set aside by denunciation. Religious philosophers might be more profitably employed in showing them the religious aspects of the doctrine of development; and some would be grateful to any who would help them to keep their old faith in God and the Bible with their new faith in science."

This is a faithful saying, and we have only repeated it, having Dr. McCosh's warnings chiefly in mind, when we said:—

"We are all taught in our best schools, by our scientific authorities, almost without exception,—and we laymen in science are, therefore, compelled to believe,—that man was, at least so far as his physical structure is concerned, evolved from irrational animals. We, therefore, cannot help doubting, as every thinking and scholarly young man [in these schools] must and does doubt, whether the story of the fall in the first Adam is historical."

This evolution, we showed, is held and taught in harmony with Christian faith; and to deny that it can be so held, we showed, was extremely unwise.

But the Observer, a more zealous than wise friend of revelation, meets our assertion of the prevalence of the doctrine of evolution by an appeal to college presidents, and it seems to get the answers it wants. They give a more or less unqualified negative to our statement. Our statement was nevertheless correct, as we will show.

Had the Observer wished to know what our scientific authorities believe and teach, it would have asked them, and not the theologians at the head of our colleges. But we waive that point, and meet the Observer on its own chosen ground.

It sent the quotation above, from the Independent, to the President of Yale College, and asked him to say, in a "line," whether our assertion was true as to Yale. President Porter replied:—

"The enclosed does not give a correct representation of the teaching in this college by our scientific authorities."

Let us see. We said that "in our best schools, by our scientific authorities, almost without exception," it is taught that man was, "so far as his physical structure is concerned, evolved from irrational animals." We said nothing about man's soul, for we well knew what is the theistic and Christian theory of evolution held by Wallace and Mivart and Gray, and, after them, endorsed by McCosh and taught by many excellent Christian naturalists, that this physical evolution has been guided by a supreme intelligence, and that in due time God added a soul to the body which he had produced by evolution. But let us see what is taught by Yale's "scientific authorities." Professor O. C. Marsh is the Yale teacher of paleontology. In his presidential address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in Saratoga, last August, he said:—

"One of the main characteristics of this epoch [in the history of paleontology] is the belief that all life, living and extinct [thus including man], has been evolved from simple forms. Another prominent feature is the accepted fact of the great antiquity of the human race." (p. 40.) [His italics.]

Of the "theories he is a distinguished advocate. League of Am. p. 47, "now, regarded among the AMERICAN LIBE."

active workers in science as a waste of time to discuss the truth of evolution. The battle on this point has been fought and won." This is just what we said,—that evolution is taught "almost without exception." What is true of Professor Marsh is true of the veteran Professor Dana of Yale. He, too, is a vigorous supporter of evolution, a convert after having long opposed it on the same theological grounds as the Observer; and he is in some respects the most radical evolutionist we know of, as he holds that the primary forms of animals, out of which the several great classes were developed, were determined by the peculiar molecular construction of matter which favored the germ of one class or of another. What is true of these two men is true of Verrill, Brewer, Smith, and of all the other teachers of the biological sciences in Yale College. We venture to assert, without fear of contradiction, that every one of those seven men is a believer in evolution, and in the application of the law makes no exception of the "physical structure" of man. It is very likely that they take no pains, out of deference to lingering prejudice, to teach it; but they believe it, and express that belief when it is called for.

President McCosh writes guardedly from Princeton:—

"In answer to your inquiries, I have to state that we do not teach in this college that man is 'evolved from irrational animals.' I teach that man's soul was made in the image of God, and his body out of the dust of the ground. I do not oppose development, but an atheistic development."

Precisely. He does "not oppose development, but an atheistic development." So do we. He does not teach that "man is 'evolved from irrational animals.'" Of course not; for man is chiefly soul, and it is only the body, the "physical structure," which he allows, with scientists, to be made out of dust and evolved from irrational animals. On this matter, President McCosh's position is admirable. He is our leader. He sees the danger better than any other theologian, and prepares for it. His address before the Evangelical Alliance was an itrenicon between development and faith. His book on Christianity and Positivism was written just to head off such blunderers as the Observer. Spontaneous generation, he says, is not irreligious (pp. 35, 348); nor is development (p. 37). As to man, he says:—

"The impression left, on reading the account of the creation of man in the Book of Genesis, is that, while man's higher nature—his vous, which contemplates eternal truth and the infinite God—was produced at once by the breath of the Great Spirit, his lower nature, and especially his body ['physical structure'], may have been formed out of existing materials, it may be by secondary causes; and there is nothing unreasonable in the supposition that these secondary agencies may be the same as effect the growth of the young in the womb" (p. 354).

This "impression" may well be left on reading the story in Genesis as a poem or a parable, but certainly not as a history which records how the man was framed out of earth and the woman out of his rib.

In Princeton, we will inform the Observer more fully than President McCosh has in the "line" asked for, development is both taught and fought. The veteran geographer, Guyot, holds the views of his old friend Agassiz, and takes frequent occasion to ridicule Darwinism. With him are the clerical professors, Duffield and Atwater, unless the latter is yielding a little of late. Dr. McCosh is quite outspoken in defence of the legitimacy of evolution, though not a Darwinian nor a naturalist. Professor Macloskie, their only naturalist, a man who has developed remarkably within a few years, is even more decided in the same direction, as are, without reserve, the distinguished professors of astronomy and physics, Young and Brackett.

The remaining institutions can be briefly disposed of. President Seelye, of Amherst, an old opponent of evolution, writes with some asperity:—

"This college does not yet teach groundless guesses for ascertained truths of science. So long as the notion that man is evolved from the monkey has not a single fact to rest upon, and is in flat contradiction to all the facts of history, I think we may leave it with the scientists."

This looks like judicial blindness. It is sufficient to state that the professor of geology in Amherst is an unreserved theistic evolutionist, who teaches the antiquity of the human race; and we have no doubt the same is true of his young colleague in natural history.

President Chadbourne writes from Williams:—

"The doctrine is not taught here that man, even in his physical nature, was evolved from one of the lower animals. Wallace, who claims with Darwin the honor of the doctrine known as Darwinism, admits that its principles fail when applied to man."

Wallace says no such thing of evolution, but only of Darwinism; that is, natural selection, which is only one theory of evolution. He believes that man's physical nature was evolved from some one of the lower animals under divine supervision. Williams College has now no professor in biology; but the department is being carried along by the president. He teaches that evolution has not yet been proved; but that, if proved absolutely, it would have no effect on our religious notions.

President Robinson, of Brown University, writes:— "We do not teach the doctrine stated in the enclosed slip."

Prof. A. S. Packard, Jr., is the only instructor in zoology or botany that we recall in Brown. He fully believes in evolution,—man's physical structure no exception,—and his published books support evolution through and through.

The other institutions whose presidents have replied to the Observer are Lafayette, Hamilton, Union, and Rochester. We are not informed definately as to their instruction. We have little doubt that their teachers in biology hold the same views as in all the other colleges.

If we are asked how these college presidents could have given the Observer these answers, we answer: It was partly ignorance, and partly that they used language prudently. The evolution of man's physical structure may not be directly taught, but believed, and taught chiefly by implication.

Why did not the Observer inquire of the president of Harvard College? Probably because he was afraid of the answer he would get. But did he not know that Harvard is one of those "best schools," having "scientific authorities," which we were talking about; and that Louis Agassiz, the great opponent of evolution, the most influential naturalist that ever lived in America, was a Harvard professor; while Asa Gray, the great American botanist, a champion of religion against Materialism and a devout member of an Orthodox church, is another Harvard professor? But its omission was wise. Of all the younger brood of working naturalists whom Agassiz educated, every one—Morse, Shaler, Verrill, Niles, Hyatt, Seudder, Putnam, even his own son—has accepted evolution. Every one of the Harvard professors whose departments have to do with biology—Gray, Whitney, A. Agassiz, Hagen, Goodale, Shaler, James, Farlow, and Faxon—is an evolutionist, and man's physical structure they regard as no real exception to the law. They are all theists, we believe; all conservative men. They do not all believe that Darwinism—that is, natural selection—is a sufficient theory of evolution: they may incline to Wallace's view, but they accept evolution. It is not much taught: it is rather taken for granted. At Johns Hopkins University, which aims to be the most advanced in the country, nothing but evolution is held or taught. In the excellent University of Pennsylvania, all the biological professors are evolutionists.—Professors Leidy and Allen in comparative anatomy, Professor Rothrock in botany, and Professor Lesley in geology. We might mention Michigan University, Cornell, Dartmouth, Bowdoin; but what is the use of going further? It would only be the same story. There can scarcely an exception be found. Wherever there is a working naturalist, he is sure to be an evolutionist. We made inquiry of two ex-presidents of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. One wrote us, in reply: "My impression is that there is no biologist of repute nowadays who does not accept, in some form or other, the doctrine of derivation in time, whatever be the precise form in which they suppose the evolution to have occurred." His successor replied: "Almost without exception, the working naturalists in this country believe in evolution. . . . In England and Germany, the belief in evolution is almost universal among the active workers in biology. In France, the belief is less general, but is rapidly gaining ground. . . . I should regard a teacher of science who denied the truth of evolution as being as incompetent as one who doubted the Copernican theory." We challenge the Observer to find three working naturalists of repute in the United States—or two (it can find one in Canada)—that is not an evolutionist. And, where a man believes in evolution, it goes without saying that the law holds as to man's physical structure.

We have made it plain, we trust, that evolution may be thoroughly Christian. Our contention is, not that it is true, but that it is so generally taught that it is inevitable that our thinking and scholarly young men will generally accept it on the word of those whose business it is to study the matter. The Observer says that, "if the irrational animal gospel is true, Christ's gospel is a humbug." If that is so, then our thinking and scholarly young men will inevitably say that Christ's gospel is a humbug. Our only purpose is to withstand the Observer, and those like the Observer, who are trying to shove the students of Johns Hopkins and Harvard and Yale, and the University of Pennsylvania, and Princeton and Brown and Amherst, and Bowdoin—we cannot mention them all—over the precipice of infidelity.

The Observer must, of course, see the justice of acknowledging that we have fairly substantiated our statement. Will other papers which this week quoted the Observer do the same?—Independent, Dec. 18, 1879.

NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW FOR MARCH.

The leading article in the North American Review for March is by ex-Judge Jere S. Black, and is entitled "The Third Term," being a reply to ex-Senator Howe's paper on that subject in the Review for February. Mr. Black holds that to elect General Grant to a third term of office in the presidential chair would be a violation of a custom that is stronger than any laws or constitutions whatever; that it would, in effect, be the end of our republican institutions, and the instalment of "empire." Hon. E. W. Stoughton follows Mr. Black, taking precisely the contrary view, that not only is a third term not a thing to be deprecated, but that it is eminently desirable, especially if, as in General Grant's case, an interval of time has elapsed between the second term and the third. A timely article by David A. Wells aims to prove that a discriminating income tax is essentially Communism, and that this is specially true of such an income tax as was levied in the United States by Acts of Congress in 1863, and succeeding years. The fourth article is by Rev. Dr. Bellows, and treats of Civil Service Reform. The author recounts what has been done in Britain to reform the civil service of that country, and shows how the experience of British statesmen may be turned to advantage by American lawmakers. Professor Simon Newcomb, in an article on "Our Political Dangers," calls attention to the need of some non-political tribunal for the determination of contested elections. He looks on the presidential struggle of three years ago and the recent excitement in Maine as symptomatic of a diseased political condition, which calls for remedies very different from those which have hitherto been employed. John Lancaster Spalding, Bishop of Peoria, makes a spirited reply to Froude's recent article on "Romanism and the Irish Race in America." The notices of new books are by Mr. E. L. Didier.

FOREIGN.

THE INTERESTING sketches of eminent radicals in and out of Parliament, which have appeared in the Weekly Dispatch, are about to be republished by Messrs. Stewart & Co., in one volume.

A CLERGYMAN of the Church of England, who has been a curate for thirty years, and who has bronchitis, has applied for admission to the Axminster Workhouse because he can no longer earn a living.

AN ADDITIONAL branch of the British Secular Union has been started in South London. A course of free-thought lectures will shortly be delivered in the district, under the auspices of this newly formed branch.

CREMATION is steadily increasing in favor in Northern Italy. Within the last four years, fifty cases have taken place in Milan and ten in the neighboring town of Lodi, while three fresh cases have already been reported this month.

THE POLICE of BERLIN have interdicted the sale of a lithographic picture representing the bust of a female figure wearing the Phrygian cap, flanked with medallions containing portraits of the Socialists Lassalle and Marx, and surmounting a vessel cleaving the waves, lighted by a rising sun bearing the word "Justice."

CANON SIDDON, like his great contemporary, Dr. Pusey, invites confessions and receives them from all kinds and conditions of men, chiefly from Oxford students. His penitents are not asked to go through any formula as in the Roman Catholic Church, but merely to state their troubles. The Canon is very sympathetic, helps the kneeling man as far as he can, intrudes no rash questions, and abstains from suggestive ones. He gives his advice, and, if the penitent desires, administers absolution in words taken from the order for "the visitation of the sick" in the Book of Common Prayer.

"FROM INQUIRIES which I have made among men who take a lively interest in missionary work, it would appear that during the last thirty years, throughout the whole Empire [of Turkey], only some four or five Mussulmans have been converted to Christianity." So writes the correspondent of the Times from Constantinople, in summing up the results of the late action of Sir Henry Layard in the "Khodja incident." Why on earth the Anglican Prayer Book should be rendered into Osmanli, when no Turk cares a piastre about it, is hard to say. Surely if, as some of our statesmen seem to think, it be necessary that the relations between this country and Turkey should be of the smoothest and most satisfactory nature, it is not good policy to allow a few meddlesome missionaries to stir up the slumbering fanaticism of the Ottoman people. Lord Beaconsfield and Sir Henry Layard are doubtless very pious Christians; but no one will consider them as being likely agents to promote the universal acceptance of Christianity.—Secular Review.

ONE NIGHT a few weeks since a tree of liberty, planted nine and half years ago, at Joigny, and therefore the same age as the French Republic, was deliberately sawn off near the root. The circumstance caused no little indignation among the republicans of the district. The police set to work, and their exertions have resulted in six sub-officers belonging to the Joigny garrison being charged with the offence before a council of war at Orleans. Prior to the prosecution being commenced, three Deputies of the Department of the Yonne had written to M. Gréve demanding that the guilty parties should be brought to justice. When questioned respecting the charge, one of the culprits explained that on the night in question he and his companions had been drinking vin blanc, and afterwards brandy, which "finished them." It then occurred to them that they would like to "play a joke" upon the people of Joigny. They, therefore, decided to cut down the tree of liberty. Two of the soldiers were acquitted, and the others sentenced to short terms of imprisonment, the Court apparently taking a lenient view of the offence.

COUNT BELA SZECHENYI, noted for his lion-slaying exploits in Africa, gives an interesting account of the holy tree, alleged to have sprung from the earth at the birth of Gyman-Bucsis, the great reformer of Buddhism, some five centuries ago. This wonder-working tree, a white-flowered syringa, still flourishes in the garden of the Lama Monastery at Kumbum. It is surrounded by barriers of wood and stone, to protect it from the touch of the many pilgrims visiting it annually, and is the source of a handsome income to the sacred Lamas, who collect the leaves, blossoms, and dead twigs falling from it, and grind them up into powder, which they sell as universal medicine at enormous prices. They informed Count Széchenyi that the last miracle was performed by the tree just ten years ago, when a wealthy mandarin, sojourning for a few days in their monastery, had the extraordinary good fortune to discover, growing on one of its branches, a leaf presenting a perfect portrait of Buddha. The worthy Lamas parted with this miraculous leaf to its finder for a consideration that left the mandarin's purse in a much emaciated condition. Count Széchenyi, apprehending that possibly he might be tempted to extravagant outlay by a recurrence of this expensive miracle, got up extremely early one morning, when the guardians of the tree were still asleep, and cut off one of its flowering branches, with which he departed on his journey toward Tibet later in the day.

BIRMINGHAM is surely, par excellence, the town for demonstrations. Since the days of the Chartist and the Reform agitations, the art of "demonstrating" has been understood and practised in Birmingham with a success that few other communities have been able to equal. Occasionally political meetings of greater magnitude may be held elsewhere; but for strength and spontaneity of popular enthusiasm the Birmingham demonstrations must assuredly take first place. The great Liberal meetings in that town last week were protests against the present Government that could hardly have been more powerful and portentous. The Tuesday's banquet has been accurately described as a brilliant success. Perhaps the interior of the fine-looking Town Hall has never presented such a gay and picturesque appearance. Without intending any pun, it may be said that everything, on that occasion, looked bright. Long will Sir W. Vernon Harcourt's speech be remembered for its point and pungency. Such political wit and humor are so rare that the audience was both surprised and delighted. Seeing that several columns of the speech had found their way to the leading newspaper offices of the kingdom before the guests had assembled in the hall, the freshness and apparently impromptu nature of some of the "quips and cranks" was rather astonishing to the initiated. Mr. Bright's historic attack on Toryism was hardly equal, as an oratorical effort, to many of his previous speeches in the same hall; but, in addressing the Junior Liberals on the following Thursday, he warmed up to his work, and spoke with much of his old fire and force. On Saturday evening last, he was quite himself, and in his second speech on that occasion quite entranced the audience with his vigorous eloquence. Mr. G. J. Holyoake prominently figured at each of the meetings. Many of his old friends were delighted to observe the conspicuous position assigned to him at these great representative assemblies in his native town. At the banquet, Mr. Holyoake was conducted to a seat near the principal guests, and at the Saturday meeting was invited to a foremost place on the platform near Mr. Bright, who, recognizing Mr. Holyoake, exchanged a few words of kind and cordial greeting.—Secular Review, Jan. 31.

Poetry.

SOMEBODY'S MOTHER.

The woman was old and ragged and gray,
And bent with the chill of the winter's day;

The street was wet with a recent snow,
And the woman's feet were aged and slow.

She stood at the crossing and waited long,
Alone, uncared for amid the throng

Of human beings who passed her by,
Nor heeded the glance of her anxious eye.

Down the street, with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of school let out,

Came the boys like a flock of sheep,
Hailing the snow piled white and deep.

Past the woman so old and gray,
Hastened the children on their way,
Nor offered a helping hand to her,
So meek, so timid, afraid to stir

Lest the carriage wheels or the horse's feet
Should crowd her down in the slippery street.

At last came one of the merry troop,—
The gayest laddie of all the group.

He paused beside her, and whispered low,
"I'll help you across, if you wish to go."

Her aged hand on his strong, young arm
She placed, and so, without hurt or harm,

He guided the trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were firm and strong.

Then back again to his friends he went,
His young heart happy and well content.

"She's somebody's mother, boys, you know,
For all she's old and poor and slow;

"And I hope some fellow will lend a hand
To help my mother, you understand,

"If ever she's poor and old and gray,
When her own dear boy is far away."

And "somebody's mother" bowed low her head
In her home that night, and the prayer she said

Was: "God be kind to the noble boy,
Who is somebody's son and pride and joy!"

—Harper's Weekly.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEB. 28.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

Miss S. M. Nowell, $3; S. B. Walker, $1.60; William Stone, $3.20; J. J. Nichols, $3.20; James Eddy, $3.20; T. J. Atwood, $4.20; Edward A. Spring, $4; New England News Co., $2.20; G. A. Walker, $1; Warren Emerson, $10; E. W. Meddagh, $100; Thoma Tibbets, $1; W. A. Clark, $4.20; Miss A. Richardson, $1.50; T. Stuart, 20 cents; A. C. Erskson, $6.40; Theo. Brown, $20; James McGrath, $1.30; Dr. E. Wigglesworth, $4; Dr. C. W. Estabrook, $3.20; E. A. Abbot, $1; Hon. J. C. Bills, $3.20; J. P. Haskin, $3.20.

The Index.

BOSTON, MARCH 4, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FRY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

JAMES EDDY, Providence, R.I.	$100.00
DR. E. WIGGLESWORTH, Boston, Mass.	25.00
J. L. WHITING, Boston, Mass.	50.00
MISS A. HALL, Northampton, Mass.	10.00
J. M. ALDRICH, Fall River, Mass.	10.00
MOSES B. GREENEFELDER, St. Louis, Mo.	10.00
S. GRIFFITHS MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CAROLINE MORGAN, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
SPENCER L. BAILEY, Fredonia, N.Y.	5.00
A. FOLSOM, Boston, Mass.	5.00
JOHN CURTIS, Boston, Mass.	5.00
W. D. BREWER, Boston, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. D. FRESH, Charlestown, Mass.	5.00
W. R. MORGAN, New York	5.00
GEORGE J. L. OTIS, Florence, Mass.	5.00
JERU HIAIT, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
R. G. MACGILL, Baltimore, Md.	5.00
MARY E. DEWEY, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
MARY C. SHANNON, Newton, Mass.	30.00
GILBERT BILLINGS, Chicopee, Mass.	5.00
GEORGE E. FRANCIS, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
CHAS. STORRS, New York, N.Y.	25.00
LOUISA SOUTHWORTH, Cleveland, O.	25.00
EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York, N.Y.	10.00
HUGO ROTHSCHILD, " " "	10.00
SAMUEL HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	10.00
THEODORE ALTSCHUL, " " "	5.00
CHAS. WISE, " " "	5.00
A. ROSENHEIM, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL STINER, " " "	5.00
M. B. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
A. H. EDINGER, " " "	5.00
DR. I. ADLER, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS SACHS, " " "	5.00
DR. JULIUS GOLDMAN, " " "	5.00
WATSON (no name), " " "	5.00
WM. G. BABCOCK, Boston, Mass.	5.00
ROBERT MOORE, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
A. IGLAUER, Cincinnati, O.	5.00
THOMAS CORNER, Astoria, N.Y.	5.00
WM. HOGAN, Washington, D.C.	5.00
GEORGE SPOCKNEY, Grand Haven, Mich.	3.00
LEON LEVY, New York, N.Y.	1.00
M. B. LEVY, " " "	1.00
SARAH F. EARLE, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
CHAS. NASH, " " "	5.00
MRS. M. S. WETMORE, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
SAMUEL BURNS WESTON, Leicester, Mass.	1.00
S. B. FULLER, Florence, Mass.	1.00
NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS, Baltimore, Md.	1.00
HENRY W. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.	2.50
HARRIET R. BROWN, " " "	2.50
MISS H. S. WARE, Boston, Mass.	1.00
L. ELSBERG, New York, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. R. G. FELL, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
HOB. J. W. UNDERHILL, Canton, O.	1.00
C. M. DENNISON, New York, N.Y.	1.00
N. LEWINSON, " " "	1.00
J. KRUTHER, " " "	1.00
N. STRAUSS, " " "	1.00
S. HIRSCHBACH, " " "	1.00
F. WATSON, " " "	1.00
WM. BYFIELD, " " "	1.00
ELIZABETH BYFIELD, New York, N.Y.	1.00
EDWIN M. WHEELER, Brooklyn, N.Y.	1.00
MRS. JANE W. DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
MISS FRANCES DISTURNELL, " " "	1.00
HOMER SABIN, " " "	1.00
LEWIS G. JAMES, " " "	1.00
PROF. P. A. PHILBRICK, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
DR. L. I. BUMSTEAD, Lincoln, Neb.	1.00
MRS. A. M. WRIGHT, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WM. H. WOOD, East Providence, R.I.	1.00
MRS. M. A. STEWART, Newport, R.I.	2.00
MRS. CAROLINE E. SERRELL, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
R. P. THOMSON, San Jose, Cal.	1.00
A. FRIEND, Florence, Mass.	100.00
ROBT. DAVIS, Braintree, Fla.	5.00
ALEX. RISK, Winthrop, Iowa.	2.00
DANA B. HUMPHREY, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
WM. C. MUNDY, Seneca Falls, N.Y.	1.00
HENRY BLANCHARD, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
WILEY BRITTON, Washington, D.C.	5.00
L. T. IVES, Detroit, Mich.	1.00
JOANNES LIENAU, New York, N.Y.	1.00
W. C. PRESTON, Iowa City, Iowa	1.00
JAMES CHASKEL, New York, N.Y.	5.00
MRS. A. C. RICHARDS, New York, N.Y.	5.00
LEOPOLD OPPENHEIM, " " "	5.00
HENRY WALLACH, " " "	5.00
MISS EMMA S. SUTRO, New York	2.00
ISAAC WALLACH, " " "	5.00
L. TOPLITZ, " " "	1.00
ALBERT A. LEVI, " " "	10.00
SAMSON WALLACH, " " "	1.00
MR. GANS, " " "	1.00
SOLOMON FRIEND, " " "	1.00
SETH N. ALLEN, Maple Rapids, Mich.	2.00
M. A. THAYER, Sparta, Wis.	1.00
WILLIAM C. GANNETT, St. Paul, Minn.	1.00
W. WICKERSHAM, Worcester, Mass.	1.00
THOS. H. MATTHEWS, New Bedford	2.00
W. L. FOSTER, Hanover, Mass.	1.00
MISS M. GODDARD, Boston	1.00
EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans, La.	1.00
S. P. CHAMBERLAIN, Council Bluffs, Iowa.	1.00
F. B. MERONER, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL KATZENSTEIN, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
H. N. BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00
SAMUEL BROOKE, Alliance, Ohio	1.00

DR. M. J. SAFFORD, Boston	5.00
MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Wayland, Mass.	20.00
MISS M. E. HEMENWAY, Chelsea, Mass.	5.00
MRS. CHAS. T. APPLETON, Roxbury, Mass.	10.00
JACOB HOFFNER, Cincinnati, Ohio	10.00
MISS M. W. BOND, Florence, Mass.	2.00
MRS. J. W. JUDD, Augusta, Me.	2.00
JOHN W. GRIEBEL, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
JOHANNIS ELLENBAAS, Graafschap, Mich.	1.00
J. W. BRADLEY, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
JAMES HUMPHREY, Dedham, Mass.	5.00
S. L. HILL, Florence, Mass.	50.00
COSMOPOLITAN	200.00
MRS. A. B. PERCIVAL, Lynn, Mass.	5.00
CAPT. P. S. CROWELL, East Dennis, Mass.	10.00
O. A. BAILEY, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
MISS MARIANNE CHRISTERN, New York	1.00
MRS. CHRISTERN, " " "	1.00
MR. F. W. CHRISTERN, " " "	5.00
ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, " " "	1.00
MRS. MARY F. DAVIS, " " "	1.00
M. S. FROHEIMER, " " "	1.00
WM. F. ALLEN, Madison, Wis.	2.00
WM. J. POTTER, " " "	5.00
MARY F. EASTMAN, Taunton, Mass.	1.00
JOHN C. HAYNES, Boston, Mass.	100.00
FANNIS S. NEWELL, Roxbury, Mass.	2.00
R. B. STONE, Bradford, Pa.	10.00
C. W. WENDT, Cincinnati, Ohio	1.00
MRS. CAROLINE A. TUCKER, New Bedford, Mass.	5.00
HANNAH E. STEVENSON, Boston, Mass.	10.00
AVERY W. HARBROUGH, Toledo, Iowa	2.00
HON. FRANCIS SPRINGER, Columbus City, Iowa	5.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
E. D. BURLEIGH, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
JAMES MCGRATH, Quincy, Mass.	1.00
REV. J. C. LEARNED, St. Louis, Mo.	2.00
W. C. FISK, Toledo, O.	2.00
JOHN CHAPPELLSMITH, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
MARGARET, " " "	1.00
MRS. HINCKLEY, " " "	1.00
THOS. MUMFORD, Sen., " " "	1.00
J. S. JOHNSON, Almont, Mich.	5.00
HENRY PRATT, New York City	2.00
REV. JUDSON FISHER, Alton, Ill.	1.00
LOUIS FRANG, Roxbury, Mass.	15.00
PROF. F. E. NIPHER, St. Louis, Mo.	5.00
MRS. J. S. EDGERLY, East Somerville, Mass.	2.00
MRS. H. HERMAN, New York City	5.00
M. FRANK, " " "	2.00
M. COHN, " " "	1.00
S. GUTERMAN, " " "	1.00
G. ENGELSMAN, " " "	1.00
ABRAHAM HERMAN, New York City	5.00
A. BLUMENTHAL, " " "	5.00
GUB. KAUFMAN, " " "	5.00
HENRY FRIEDMAN, " " "	5.00
MRS. LUCRETIA MOTT, Philadelphia	10.00
DR. G. F. MATTHEWS, New Bedford, Mass.	1.00
MRS. KATE GANNETT WELLS, Boston	5.00
JULIA A. IRESON, Lynn, Mass.	10.00
ISABEL IRESON, " " "	10.00
EMMA D. IRESON, " " "	10.00
KATE C. IRESON, " " "	10.00
JAMES DILLAWAY, Somerville, Mass.	2.00
REV. M. J. SAVAGE, Boston	5.00
MRS. S. S. AUSTIN, Cambridge, Mass.	2.00
F. T. STUART, Boston	1.00
MISS L. B. ATWILL, Boston	1.00
NANCY W. COVELL, South Framingham	1.00
HULDAH P. ROBINSON, Allston	1.00
MICHAEL NEALE, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
CHARLES COLLINS, Dayton, Ohio	1.00
HERMAN RAUBSAMEN, New York	5.00
ADOLPH WUEZBURGER, " " "	3.00
A. S. BAMBERGER, " " "	2.00
CHAS. V. STIX, " " "	5.00
H. MOSENTHAL, " " "	1.00
A. A. LEVY, " " "	1.00
ERNEST EHRMAN, " " "	1.00
CHAS. F. ADAMS, " " "	5.00
CHAS. C. LANE, " " "	3.00
ALFRED WOLF, " " "	1.00
ANGELO HELLMAN, " " "	1.00
PHILLIP NETTLE, " " "	5.00
WILLIAM STONE, " " "	2.00
L. N. ASIEL, " " "	1.00
C. A. CURTIS, " " "	1.00
MR. & MRS. T. A. KOHN, " " "	2.00
A. SELIG, " " "	2.00
A. LOHENSTEIN, " " "	1.00
S. BURNHEIMER, " " "	2.00
FELIX HERSFELD, " " "	5.00
M. WALLER, " " "	5.00
SAMUEL SHERER, " " "	5.00
ALBERTINA VON ARNIM, " " "	2.00
G. I. PRATT, " " "	2.00
G. H. PUTNAM, " " "	1.00
OTTO W. FUTTEVER, " " "	5.00
MRS. E. B. FOOTE, " " "	1.00
EMIL COLMIL, " " "	5.00
MAX NATHAN, " " "	5.00
ALEX. GUTTMAN, " " "	5.00
JOSEPH ARON, " " "	5.00
M. B. BRYANT, " " "	5.00
MRS. SUSAN T. BRYANT, " " "	5.00
I. F. CULLMAN, " " "	1.00
H. DORMITZER, " " "	5.00
M. S. ROEMER, " " "	5.00
H. R. MILLER, " " "	5.00
W. C. BANNING, " " "	1.00
I. H. ADAMSON, " " "	2.00
G. W. MILLER, " " "	5.00
W. A. KIMBALL, " " "	1.00
S. BENEDECKS, " " "	1.00
EDW. HAMMERSLOUGH, " " "	5.00
LEOPOLD LOWRY, " " "	1.00
JOSEPH BECKEL, " " "	2.00
F. M. ADAMS, " " "	1.00
R. E. DIETZ, " " "	5.00
MRS. T. H. NEVILLE, " " "	2.00
S. WOLBERG, " " "	5.00
ELIZABETH HAMLIN, " " "	1.00
ELINOR HAMLIN, " " "	1.00
WILLIAM FRANKFURTH, Milwaukee, Wis.	5.00
DANIEL MUNOY, Bristol, Pa.	1.00
MRS. J. C. MILLS, Galesburg, Ill.	2.00
MISS M. E. LUFKIN, " " "	1.00
MISS S. E. DUNN, Dover, N.H.	2.00
MRS. KATE NEWELL DOGGERT, Chicago, Ill.	1.00
F. A. ANGELL, Montclair, N.J.	1.00
MRS. F. A. ANGELL, " " "	1.00
T. B. SKINNER, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
LEVI BEADLER, Augusta, Mich.	1.00
M. B. SIBLEY, Deadwood, Dakota	1.00
MRS. P. B. SIBLEY, " " "	1.00
MR. E. F. UNDERHILL, New York	5.00
MRS. E. F. UNDERHILL, " " "	5.00
A. SCHEIDLER, " " "	1.00
L. DREYFUS, " " "	1.00
L. STAAB, " " "	5.00
M. MORGENTHAU, " " "	1.00
LOUIS R. EHRICH, " " "	10.00
D. B. HESS, " " "	5.00
M. L. HOLBROOK, " " "	1.00
S. BACHMAN, " " "	1.00
D. BACHMAN, " " "	1.00
I. EHRLICH, " " "	1.00
M. LEVY, " " "	5.00
I. OLENSHIMER, " " "	1.00
ROBERT FERBER, " " "	1.00
T. H. BLAKELY, " " "	1.00

A. I. DITTENHOFFER, New York	1.00
SAMUEL SACHS, " " "	3.00
SAMUEL JACOBY, " " "	5.00
EMIL SALLINGER, " " "	1.00
R. M. SHERMAN, " " "	1.00
J. WEINMAN, " " "	5.00
CASH, " " "	5.00
E. G. SWINNEY, " " "	5.00
MRS. C. NEYMANN, " " "	2.00
MRS. E. S. MILLER, Geneva, N.Y.	10.00
"COSMIAN," Springfield, Mass.	10.00
L. A. FAIRCHILD, Boston	5.00
MR. and MRS. J. J. BARKER, Toledo, Ohio	10.00
B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.	2.00
JOSEPH MARSH, Northampton, Mass.	1.00
JAS. M. W. YERRINTON, Boston	5.00
MISS MILLY LEHMAIER, New York	3.00
EMIL SEIDELBERG, " " "	5.00
ISAAC MAY, " " "	1.00
A. W. BALCH, " " "	10.00
B., " " "	1.00
ISAAC LOWENSTEIN, " " "	1.00
E. C. STEDMAN, " " "	5.00
ARNOLD SAMPTER, " " "	5.00
S. RAWLINS, " " "	5.00
O. LUBBIN, " " "	2.00
I. GUTTMAN, " " "	1.00
E. SPEEGELBERG, " " "	5.00
OTTO HORWITZ, " " "	1.00
MRS. LUCRETIA FOLGER, " " "	10.00
BRONSON MURRAY, " " "	10.00
CHARLES WHELE, " " "	1.00
A. FRANKFELD, " " "	2.00
E. FRANKFELD, " " "	1.00
EDWARD DREYFUS, " " "	1.00
E. NAUMBERG, " " "	1.00
MRS. E. NAUMBERG, " " "	1.00
MAX NAUMBERG, " " "	1.00
P. HECHT, " " "	1.00
ENOCH LEWIS, Philadelphia, Pa.	10.00
ELIZABETH R. BROWN, Providence, R.I.	5.00
R. WILKIN, San Buena Ventura, Cal.	2.00
T. W. CURTIS, Meadville, Pa.	1.00
DR. G. FRAUENSTEIN, New York	5.00
CHAS. L. BUCKI, " " "	1.00
JOHN C. CHASE, " " "	1.00
HERMAN UNGER, " " "	1.00
MARTIN FOX, " " "	5.00
R. B. FLOYD, " " "	1.00
PROF. D. T. AMES, " " "	1.00
W. H. BOUGHTON, " " "	5.00
DR. JOHN BUTLER, " " "	5.00
A. SCHULSEL, " " "	5.00
M. BEEBER, " " "	5.00
DR. L. C. VINCENT, " " "	5.00
A. F. MACKINTOSH, " " "	1.00
H. B. HORWITZ, " " "	1.00
E. D. STARK, Cleveland, Ohio	5.00
A. N. ADAMS, Fairhaven, Vt.	1.00
Total	$1,740.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

MR. EMERSON'S VIEWS.

The following letter from Dr. E. W. Emerson, addressed (we believe) to Rev. George W. Cooke, of Indianapolis, has been published in the Sunday Journal of that city, February 22, and authoritatively silences the impudent and fraudulent pretence that Ralph Waldo Emerson has been converted to Orthodoxy or has materially changed his views of religion. Mr. Cooke is entitled to the thanks of all who love and revere Mr. Emerson for this most gratifying vindication of the truth. The Indianapolis Journal said, in publishing the letter:—

Ralph Waldo Emerson.

AN AUTHENTIC DENIAL OF HIS CONVERSION BY REV. JOSEPH COOK TO ORTHODOXY.

The following letter from a son of Ralph Waldo Emerson, in answer to a letter written by a gentleman of this city to the Concord philosopher, will explain the tenacity of foundation upon which rest a number of paragraphs floating through the papers, asserting the conversion of Mr. Emerson by Rev. Joseph Cook. The next thing in order is an explanation from Mr. Cook:—

CONCORD, Feb. 17.

Dear Sir,—Some weeks ago, my father received a letter from you, inquiring if a statement made to you by a friend in Boston with regard to him, was true.

The statement was that under the influence of Rev. Joseph Cook he had changed his religious beliefs, and accepted the doctrines of the Orthodox Congregationalists.

My father receives many letters, but now very seldom writes one.

More than once before, letters have been received by him from persons in the West, asking almost the same question that you ask; one gentleman stating that at Minneapolis, Rev. Joseph Cook had stated in a public lecture that Mr. Emerson and Mr. Alcott had publicly renounced their early religious beliefs, accepted Jesus as their Savior, the Bible as divine, and joined the Orthodox church. Paragraphs have lately appeared in the newspapers stating essentially the same thing. Therefore, it seems to me fair that persons who have been perhaps led out of the old paths by Mr. Emerson's teachings, and are now told that he has admitted that he went astray, and has returned to even a stricter fold than that from which he went forth, should know the truth. I therefore asked and received leave from my father to answer your note.

The statement is in every respect incorrect. Mr. Emerson is acquainted with Rev. Mr. Cook, who has called upon him when he has exchanged with the Orthodox clergyman of Concord; and, by invitation of the latter gentleman, Mr. Emerson went, on one or two occasions several years since, to hear Mr. Cook preach in this town. Except on these occasions, Mr. Emerson has never had any relations with Mr. Cook. He never reads his lectures. He has not joined any church, nor has he retracted any views expressed in his writings after his withdrawal from the ministry. His last words given to the public on matters of morals and religion may be found in his paper in the North American Review for June, 1878, on the "Sovereignty of Ethics," and in his lecture entitled "The Preacher," delivered to the divinity students at Harvard University less than a year ago, and now printed in the Unitarian Review for January, 1880.

Mr. Emerson's friends and readers can judge for themselves whether these papers confirm the truth of the tale that is going about as to his conversion to Orthodoxy. Truly yours,

EDWARD WALDO EMERSON.

MR. WRIGHT'S "ANTI-LIBERTY LOGIC."

The letter of Mr. Wright, on another page of this issue, will not make the "repeal" case any stronger. It is too full of reckless misstatements, perverted views, and (we are sorry to add) unjust and even scurrilous epithets. It is not worth while to make any detailed answer to a paper which must so effectually answer itself with unprejudiced and dispassionate readers. One or two points, however, we will notice.

Mr. Wright, to our astonishment, joins with the unscrupulous vilifiers who every week attack us in the Truth Seeker, and misrepresents our position as "anti-liberty." This only shows how his present associates are dragging him down. Our position has been one and the same from the beginning of this unhappy controversy. It was expressed in resolutions presented to the Committee on Resolutions at the Syracuse Congress, and rejected by them, as follows:—

1. Resolved, That the freedom of the press which is guaranteed by the United States Constitution includes freedom to publish, and freedom to circulate by all customary channels, all theoretical opinions on all literary, scientific, political, social, moral, religious, or other subjects; that no indecencies of a merely incidental or occasional character, however reprehensible and deserving of public censure on moral or literary grounds, cause a forfeiture of this freedom, or constitute a just reason for legal prosecution or punishment; and that any narrower rules of judgment on this subject must compel legal condemnation of many of the most precious works of human genius, including the Bible.

2. Resolved, That by "obscene literature" we understand such writings or publications as do not appeal to or seek to elevate either the intellectual, moral, or esthetic condition of their readers, but show on their face that they were composed with unmistakably base motives, in order to poison the imagination, inflame and pervert the passions, and incite to vicious practices; that it is justly made a crime at common law to circulate such literature in any manner; and that it is an outrage on common decency to claim for such literature the freedom of the press.

3. Resolved, That, while we recognize the supreme importance of extinguishing as far as possible the demand for obscene literature by educational and moral means, we also recognize the practical necessity of legislation against the crime of circulating it; and we maintain the right and duty of both Congress and State legislatures, each in its appropriate province, to enact laws for the punishment of this crime.

4. Resolved, That, owing to the absence of definition in the United States statutes on this subject, and the abuse of power by the officers appointed to execute it, great wrong has been done to individuals, and dangerous violations of the freedom of the press have been consummated; and we seriously and earnestly protest against these wrongs and violations.

5. Resolved, That, in order to prevent these evils for the future, the following safeguards should be secured: (1) the amendment of the United States laws concerning obscene literature, in accordance with the principles enunciated in the foregoing resolutions; (2) the right of appeal and writs of error from the circuit courts to the Supreme Court of the United States in all criminal cases under these laws; and (3) a new legislative provision requiring that the entire publication alleged to be obscene, for circulating which through the mails any person shall be hereafter prosecuted in the United States courts, shall be set forth in the indictment.

If Mr. Wright persists in maintaining that our position is "anti-liberty," there is no escape from the conclusion, in the face of the above resolutions, that he includes under "liberty" the right to circulate that abominable class of publications which even "repealers" concede to be obscene. We maintain, and have consistently maintained, the utmost liberty of opinion. Mr. Wright is not satisfied with this, but stigmatizes our position as "anti-liberty" simply because we approve the government's denial of liberty of circulation to the sensual and disgusting stuff which he too claims to condemn. That is the only "liberty" which is at issue between "repeal" and "reform"; and Mr. Wright seems willing now to be its champion. It is with sincere and profound grief that we see a man like him misled by the spirit of party into taking such ground as that. It is unworthy of him—unworthy of liberalism—unworthy of the nineteenth century. It is time for him to retrace his steps, if he sets any value on the respect of his fellow-countrymen.

One other point, and we have done. Mr. Wright says:—

"THE INDEX cannot but be aware that the National Liberal League, as such, has taken no action on the question of repeal, but has publicly called for the impartial execution of the law. . . . It distinctly resolved that it would not lift a finger to touch that dam."

THE INDEX is aware that at Syracuse, in 1878, the National Liberal League declared itself in favor of repeal by its action, when it dismissed one board of directors because all its members but one opposed repeal, and elected another board because all its members without exception were known to be in favor of repeal. The only re-elected member of the old board was the one who favored repeal. That action tells its own story to every candid man.

Further, THE INDEX is aware that the National Liberal League adopted these resolutions at Cincinnati, in 1879:—

"Resolved, That we are in favor of such postal laws as will allow the free transportation through the mails of the United States of all books, pamphlets, and papers, irrespective of the religious, irreligious, political, and scientific views they may contain, so that the literature of science may be placed upon an equality with that of superstition.

"Resolved, That we are utterly opposed to the dissemination through the mails, or by any other means, of obscene literature, whether 'inspired' or uninspired, and hold in measureless contempt its authors and disseminators.

"Resolved, That we call upon the Christian world to expunge from the so-called 'sacred' Bible every passage that cannot be read without covering the cheek of modesty with the blush of shame; and until such passages are expunged, we demand that the laws against the dissemination of obscene literature be impartially enforced."

The first of these resolutions demands free transportation of "all books, pamphlets, and papers," and MAKES NO EXCEPTION WHATSOEVER. That is a demand for the free transportation of all publications, INCLUDING CONFESSEDLY OBSCENE LITERATURE. The second resolution does not recall this demand. The third resolution only calls for the enforcement of the present law against the Bible, if it is to be enforced at all; but it does not recall the demand of the first resolution. All three were concocted in cowardice, hypocrisy, and fraud, without moral courage to make a thoroughly honest and open avowal of the yet evident purpose of the series as a whole. They were a disgrace to those who drafted them, and are a disgrace to all who defend them.

It is with no small sorrow that we are compelled to speak in this unflinching style. Mr. Wright has been to us in the past a very generous supporter and friend; and nothing but the supreme duty we owe to the cause of truth, freedom, and public morality could possibly constrain us to oppose him at all. But the claims of private friendship, strong as they are, are yet not so strong as the claims of manifest public duty. All the more because it makes our very heart ache to tell the truth in this matter are we bound to tell it without fear and without favor; and, because Mr. Wright in the anti-slavery movement learned to know well what that means, we believe that in his secret soul, in spite of himself, he will cast his vote in approval of our course.

THE "GREAT UNANSWERED."

As our readers are aware, a new petition for the repeal of the postal laws prohibiting the transmission of obscene literature by mail has recently been started by the free-love ring in New York, and is now circulating for signatures. In support of this petition, the ring have just issued a new edition of T. B. Wakeman's Faneuil Hall speech under the grandiloquent title of "The Unanswered Argument against the Constitutionality of the so-called Comstock Postal Laws, and for the Inviolability and Free and Equal Use of the United States Mail."

There is something intensely comical in the anxiety of T. B. Wakeman to pose before the public as the Great Unanswered Defender of the Constitution. It is very easy for anybody to be "unanswered" who sedulously stuffs his ears with cotton when the answer is made. The fact is that Wakeman's speech, as an argument for the repeal of those laws, was "answered," and pulverized, in THE INDEX for September 26 and October 24, 1878. He betrays his mortified consciousness of this fact by not venturing to include these "answers" in the new pamphlet, although he includes in it Judge Hurlbut's essay on "The Liberty of Printing" (which was not at all controversial), in order to make a show of presenting both sides!

All this is irresistibly funny, and exhibits the ridiculous side of "repeal" to full advantage. It reminds us of the famous trial of Mrs. Bardell vs. Pickwick. Sam Weller was on the witness-stand, and his old father in the gallery interrupted the court. But as the culprit could not be found by the usher, the judge sternly interrogated the witness.

"Do you know who that was, sir?"
"I rather suspect it was my father, my lord," replied Sam.
"Do you see him now?" said the judge.
"No, I don't, my lord," replied Sam, staring right up into the lantern in the roof of the court."

T. B. Wakeman does not see any "answer" to his "unanswered" argument. He stares right up into the lantern in the roof of the court. Happy Mr. Wakeman!

"In arguing, too, the parson owned his skill,
For, e'en though vanquished, he could argue still."

What one of the ablest and most eminent lawyers of the West thinks of this argument which advertises itself as "unanswered," will appear from the following letter:—

NORTHWESTERN GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY,
SOLICITOR'S OFFICE, DETROIT,
Feb. 24, 1880.)

MY DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I most heartily approve of the change in the name of the National Liberal League of America. The reasons in favor of this have been so well and fully expressed by you and others in THE INDEX, that there is no need for my entering upon them here.

You are altogether right, and your opponents altogether wrong, on the issue that divided the old organization. The weight of argument and the enlightened moral sense of mankind are with you.

I exceedingly regret that there are any good men and women in our ranks susceptible of being misled into unqualified hostility to the anti-filth postal laws. Every such instance affords a potent argument for the Bible or Christian or some other authoritative standard in morals outside of reason.

The argument of "unconstitutionality" against these laws, so far as it has come under my observation, is a pitiful exhibition of ignorance and legal sophistry. To say nothing of the reasons based on general principles in favor of their validity, the Supreme Court of the United States, which is conceded to be the final arbiter on national constitutional questions, has in numerous decisions fully sustained the power of Congress in this class of legislation. In the light of its judgments, no lawyer, capable of dealing with such questions, who has not been forced out of intellectual plumb by the exigencies of a bad cause, can seriously doubt the constitutionality of these laws.

Very truly yours,
E. W. MEDDAUGH.

A VOTE TO BE WEIGHED, NOT COUNTED.

QUINCY, Ill., Feb. 23, 1880.

MY DEAR ABBOT:—

I suppose, indeed feel sure, you don't need propping; but I find sympathy and fellow-feeling dear, and at any rate I want to offer you mine, as well as my entire agreement with you in the sad fight you are obliged to sustain. As for Elizer Wright, I can look back only a little way to a time when I looked with reverence on his white head and keen eye. But I think hardly anything in all the miserable business which sober rationalists have had to wade through of late is more fundamentally odious and detestable than his cry, "Keep peace in your own ranks on any terms, and fight the Christians." Indeed, his letter of Feb. 12, to Mr. Savage, containing the passage which I thus translate in conformity with its context, seems to me on a moral plane of unspeakable meanness, not to say Jesuitical. One thing is certain: you have kept your own course clear, clean, and courageous.

Yours heartily,
J. VILA BLAKE.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

COL. HIGGINSON has a little daughter.

MRS. MARY J. TWEED, wife of William M. Tweed, once familiarly known as "the Boss," died a few days since at Paris.

MISS ROSA BONHEUR has just received, in addition to the Spanish decorations bestowed upon her, the order of Leopold, from the king of the Belgians.

MR. SWINBURNE thinks that Shakespeare was the very best man of business who ever expressed himself in numbers, as he made a fortune out of poetry.

JAMES LENOX, the founder of the Lenox Library of New York, a millionaire and a person of varied and elegant accomplishments, died a few days since, at an advanced age.

REV. W. R. ALGER, while recently passing a few days in New York, was complimented by a reception from the Goethe Club of that city, at which many literary notables were present.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE of New York signaled Washington's birthday by a meeting to consider the erection of a statue to him in Wall Street. The proposition meets a cordial reception.

THE REV. RUSSELL STREETER, who recently died at Woodstock, Vt., was the oldest clergyman of the Universalist denomination, and possessed the distinction of being one of the fathers of that faith. He was eighty-eight.

REV. MR. COWLEY, of the Shepherd's Fold, New York, whose trial has just closed for cruelty to the children of his charge, has been sentenced to a year in the Penitentiary and a fine of two hundred and fifty dollars. Mr. Cowley was fortunate in being the clergyman of a very influential church and having some of its leading clerical dignitaries interested in his behalf. Otherwise there is good reason to believe that he would have been less gently treated.

FREDERICK VON BODENSTEDT, the German poet, was the object of two school receptions at Louisville the other day. First, he saw and heard about five hundred cherubs singing, and told them how glad he was to meet them and to know that music formed a part of their instruction; then he recited a poem in German. After this he was taken to the Girls' High School, where he became even more enthusiastic, making a long speech, and expressing the joy he felt at viewing this great and growing country, of which he had heard and read so much.

MR. JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL is now just past his sixtieth year. He was born in Cambridge, Mass.; and his home in that city always has been, and still is, the house in which he was born. "It is a fine old mansion of the Revolutionary period," says the Literary World, "square and three-storied, looking out from an environment of elms and other stately trees to the southward over the meadows of the Charles. Behind it rise the wooded slopes of Mount Auburn. Mr. Longfellow's home is half a mile away. Here, in simple but charming retirement, have been written the poems, the essays, and the critical papers which have distinguished Mr. Lowell's name; and here for many years were edited the North American Review and the Atlantic Monthly."

THE LONG ISLAND DIOCESE of the Episcopal Church is threatened with conflagration. The Rev. James W. Sparks is the incendiary torch. The situation is this: When Mr. Sparks was the assistant rector of St. Luke's church, just before the Rev. Dr. Diller was made pastor emeritus, he introduced a surpliced choir there, an intoned service and processions, and had conspicuous high churchmen deliver lectures on ritualism. When Rev. George R. Van Dewater, the new rector, brought back the old-fashioned simplicity, Mr. Sparks set up a little ritualistic forge on his own account. This was snuffed out by Bishop Littlejohn, after the services of one Sunday had been performed. Since then the seeds of ritualism in the Long Island Diocese, which had been smoldering, but not quenched, have broken out afresh. Mr. Sparks has fanned into life the old organization of the Church of the Mediator, which had been supposed to be extinct, in Ormond Place, Brooklyn, and there performed High Church services before a small but select audience, in spite of the mandate of good Bishop Littlejohn. The event is naturally causing a stir in the religious natures of fashionable Brooklyn people. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."—New York Telegram.

IN CONNECTION with the recent banquet to Gen. Grant at Chicago, Mark Twain tells a story of how he attended a "tremendous dinner" in London, when the Lord Mayor, "or whoever was bossing the occasion," read a list of the noble and distinguished persons who were present. Notwithstanding the occasional applause when the names of favorites were read, Mark became tired of the drawing monotone of the reading, and entered into conversation with the gentleman by his side, who talked most pleasantly. "Suddenly," says Mark, "just as he was giving me his views upon the future religious aspect of Great Britain, our ears were assailed by a deafening storm of applause. Such a clapping of hands I had never heard before. It sent the blood to my head with a rush, and I got terribly excited. I straightened up, and commenced clapping my hands with all my might. I moved about excitedly in my chair, and clapped harder and harder. 'Who is it?' I asked the gentleman on my right. 'Whose name did he read?' 'Samuel L. Clemens,' he answered. I stopped applauding. I didn't clap any more. It kind of took the life out of me, and I sat there like a mummy, and didn't even get up and bow. It was one of the most distressing fixes I ever got into, and it will be many a day before I forget it."

Communications.

ANTI-LIBERTY LOGIC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

When a logician mounts a figure of speech, his own legs become useless. He may ride into his own camp or that of the enemy, according to the nature of the animal under him. There never was a better illustration of this general principle than the little argument which THE INDEX of February 12 puts forth against those members of the National Liberal League who are in favor of the total repeal of the Postal Laws which exclude certain publications from the national mails. THE INDEX cannot but be aware that the National League, as such, has taken no action on the question of repeal, but has publicly called for the impartial execution of the law. Yet it shamelessly persists in accusing the League, as a body, of seeking the repeal of the law for the very purpose of promoting the circulation of corrupt literature. It has not offered, and cannot offer, one particle of proof that any single member of the National League seeks the repeal of the law for that purpose, or that its repeal would have any such result. It seeks to form a union of liberals and others, who shall be unanimously opposed to the repeal, and yet in favor of the perfect secularity of the State. The National Liberal League wishes it all possible success; but it cannot expel from its membership men and women who conscientiously believe that the Colgate and Comstock law is unjust, unconstitutional, ridiculous, hypocritical, and dangerous to American liberty, that it is in fact a priestly usurpation, a disgrace to national legislation, and in its execution hitherto a proof of judicial corruption.

The little argument of THE INDEX, on which its anti-repeal movement is to proceed harmoniously with Howard Crosby and Joseph Cook, is as follows (I quote heading and all):—

The Logic of "Repeal."

AS ILLUSTRATED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

Resolved, That we are in favor of destroying the dams.

Resolved, That we are totally opposed to the rush of the waters after the dams are destroyed.

Resolved, That whoever says we are in favor of flooding the country is either a fool, a knave, or a Christian, which is the same thing.

Here are two figures of speech—a nice span—under this logical Ducrow. "Dams" on the near side, and "rush of the waters" on the off. Now what does Ducrow mean by "dams"? Does he include among them that d—liar, Comstock, and that learned and pious justifier of lies, Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby? What does he mean by "rush of the waters"? Not a single member of the League has sought to destroy any dam, except one which was built by stealth six or seven years ago, and the whole strength of which has rested on a single liar ever since. Are there no other dams? If this should break down entirely, would the "rush of waters," whatever that may be, be much worse than before? Well, if it would not be, then subtracting all the dams from the major premise except this particular recent dam, the whole syllogism becomes unobjectionable, so far as I, for one, am concerned. But the major premise is still false, so far as concerns the National Liberal League; for it distinctly resolved at its last Congress that it would not lift a finger to touch that dam. It left it to go to the "demnition bow-wows" by its own weight of lying and hypocrisy.

If by the "rush of waters" the logical Ducrow means "dirty waters," he might have well added "coward" to the three epithets in his third resolution.

The same number of THE INDEX declares that the "free-love ring which at once rules and ruins the National Liberal League" is pushing a new petition for repeal. This I hope is true. I should be glad to sign the petition. I believe every intelligent and honest man and woman will. But, whether the "free-love ring" ruins the League or not, it is not true that it rules it. If it were true, whose fault would it be more than that of those who seceded before any vote was taken on the question of repeal?

Here follows another sentence, full of a logic which cuts its own throat:—

"This persistent attempt to get rid of the only effective statute against the sale and circulation of matter declared to be criminal by the common law was first instigated, and is now again secretly urged forward, by parties who found their infamous profits cut down and their infamous business crippled."

Common law existed before 1873. Here it is gravely asserted that it was ineffective. By whose fault was that? Did the "free-love ring" rule the world in all those years?

Who are the "parties who found their infamous profits cut down and their infamous business crippled," and are now "secretly" urging forward the petition for repeal? I know plenty of men and women who are doing it openly. They of course are not meant. It would have been braver in THE INDEX to have named the parties who are doing it in secret. Indeed, if it knows who they are, and that their "infamous profits have been cut down," they are still indictable at common law in State courts; and THE INDEX, as a good citizen, should at least send their names to the proper prosecuting officer for the use of a grand jury.

The only approach to a specific, manly, and tangible charge which THE INDEX makes, is in quoting from "an influential New York paper," the name and date of which it does not give, a paragraph on the then "recent discovery of the body of a murdered girl in a trunk at Lynn." The writer alleges that this discovery "brought to light the terribly significant fact that over six hundred women, some married, some single, are recently missing from their homes, within a not very large geographical province of which Boston may be regarded as a centre. Most of them were believed by their friends to have given themselves up to a life of shame." Admitting the statistical accuracy of this writer, which is not easy to do without seeing a list of these six hundred women, it by no means follows that his next sentence is credible. He goes on to say, "This is the terrible fruitage of such seed as Heywood and Bennett are sowing."

Here we have something tangible, something to exercise our reason and common-sense upon; not an unincorporated association which cannot sue or be sued, but two individual persons who can be indicted and punished, and who, if falsely charged with having made profits out of an infamous and illegal business, by a party peculiarly responsible, can sue and recover damages. The writer in "the influential New York paper," however, does not charge them with anything but sowing seed, which is not actionable. THE INDEX escapes liability to a libel suit by not naming these parties as among the parties who have made profits by an infamous business. Whatever its disposition may have been, it did not quite have the courage to say that Heywood and Bennett have made profits out of an infamous business. It lugs in a paragraph from a nameless editor, who alleges before a credulous public that a "murdered girl in a trunk" and "six hundred women" gone astray are "the fruitage of such seed as Heywood and Bennett are sowing." Does THE INDEX indorse this figure of speech, and expect us to swallow it whole? It knows, or ought to know, that on the little pamphlet, for which Heywood and Bennett were unrighteously and to the eternal disgrace of the United States judiciary imprisoned, neither of them would ever have made a cent of profit, but for the absurd prosecution, which was the natural consequence of the ridiculous and unconstitutional legislation. Possibly the fruitage of six hundred and one ruined women, admitting that they were ruined, all came from the extra seed sown by means of that very unprofitable liar, Anthony Comstock. But, in the matter of seed-sowing, what is that trifling, prosaic, and unpalatable little pamphlet, compared with the teaching of Christendom that the wisest of the human race had seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines, that he was divinely inspired to write Solomon's Song, and that God commissioned Mordecai to save his peculiar people by prostituting his niece to an old libertine who had just divorced his wife because she would not submit to an abominable indignity? Here, in point of fact, we have, in this boasted refuge of liberty, science, and civilization, an ecclesiastical usurper making use of corrupt politicians and subservient judges to strain at an ephemeral microscopic gnat in our literature, while an old idolized camel is allowed free circulation in every infant-school and Sabbath-school in the land, to be swallowed whole!

ELIZUR WRIGHT.

BOSTON, Feb. 12, 1880.

MR. WRIGHT'S LETTERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Your excellent and timely editorial contrasting "The Board of Indian Commissioners and the Paine Memorial Corporation" very clearly sets forth the fact that the latter body, unlike the former, are in no hurry to investigate the charges of fraud raised against them, with apparent good reason.

I will not dwell upon that, but come at once to what seems under the circumstances to be a duty that I personally owe to those who are interested in the efforts that are making to right the injustice connected with the Paine Memorial enterprise of this city.

Mr. Elizur Wright, President of the Paine Memorial Corporation, in his letters published in THE INDEX of Feb. 19, seems to be much more anxious to reflect upon myself than to furnish Mr. Savage with the information that he desired. In the letter of Feb. 7, Mr. Wright says:—

"But I wonder at Mr. Ellis' publication in THE INDEX. He professes to be a 'Liberal,' and to have the honor of Liberalism at heart. He had previously published in the Herald and been answered, so that the facts on both sides were before the public. He finds THE INDEX badly disgruntled, and repeats his charges therein, that Mendum has stolen the Lick Fund, and the new corporation has received stolen goods which it cannot legally hold. This would be criminal, whether in Christians or infidels. If Ellis were a Christian, and Paine Hall a church, I should think him a fool to be growling in the newspapers, when he ought to be prosecuting in the courts."

In his letter of Feb. 12, he further says:—
"As to breach of trust or fraud, that concerns only those who believe such a crime has been committed. I do not. If Mr. Ellis or you or Mr. Lick's heirs do, I advise you to spend no more breath or printer's ink outside the courts. There are thousands of cases of high Christian fraud, perjury, and robbery, which I should sooner help bring into court. Please tell Mr. Ellis that, if he has really got a good case of fraud against Mendum, Seaver, yourself, or the Paine Memorial Corporation, he has only to go to some wealthy Christians to get all the means necessary for a successful prosecution. They will doubtless shell out the money, thank and despise him."

I wish to reply to the two extracts given above.

The Reply.

1. If by my efforts to expose and break down the fraud that has been for years surely dragging the cause of honest Liberalism into disgrace, I have done something not consistent with my having "the honor of Liberalism at heart," it would appear vastly more probable that Mr. Wright himself has that "honor" "at heart," if he had exposed me by disproving the evidence I adduced,—without attempting to cover up the facts by misrepresentation, taunt, and evasion. As a substitute for documentary evidence and the truth of facts, these latter are not a success; as Mr. Wright will learn when it is too late, perhaps, to save his good name.

I never published anything in the Herald in regard to Paine Memorial. When the Herald in May, 1879, published the article that Mr. Wright ascribes to me, one of the sub-editors of that paper waited upon Mendum at Paine Hall, told him that he was about to publish such an article, and desired to interview him upon the subject for the purpose of publishing his statement at the same time. Therefore when Mendum and Seaver subsequently, in the most malignant and abusive language, charged me with the authorship of the Herald article, they knew that they were publishing a falsehood. And, if they have been open, confiding, and truthful with their devoted friend, the President of the Paine Corporation, he also knew as much when he wrote that I had "published in the Herald." The Herald article was, as all know who read it, merely a general statement, with no attempt at giving evidence. The answer to it by J. P. Mendum was remarkable only for its prevarication, evasion, and falsehood; and hence it is not true, as Mr. Wright says, "that the facts on both sides were before the public."

I did prepare a reply to Mendum's article in the Herald, but could not afford the money necessary to secure its publication in that paper. A portion of that "reply" forms part of my recent article in THE INDEX. The remainder of it is a candid reply to false charges against me in the Investigator, which professes to "hear all sides, and then decide"; and I shall be happy to forward it to that sheet for publication, if its motto means anything.

2. Mr. Wright admits that the theft of the Lick Lecture Fund would be "criminal"; but he refuses to investigate, and suppresses an appeal to investigate the offered evidence of that theft.

3. The reason I have not been "prosecuting in the courts," instead of using the newspapers, is this: My first object was to warn "the liberal public," from whom Mendum was drawing money under pretence of saving Paine Hall, that the management of the Paine Memorial enterprise was such as to make it extremely unwise for them to place any more money in it, if they were at all anxious that their party should bear a good name. To do this, I had recourse to the papers. My confidence in the honesty of the party was such as to convince me that, if I could once turn their attention to this fraud, they would insist upon clearing their own reputation, and carry it themselves into the courts. I conscientiously believed that to expose this fraud was a duty that was peculiarly mine, because I was aware that few, if any, of the supporters of the Paine Memorial project knew anything about the true inwardness of its management. Circumstances, which I am ready to explain at any time, carried me "behind the scenes" as no "outsider" had ever been admitted before, or probably ever will be again. I saw that the people were being deceived, and in my opinion, based upon what seemed to me good evidence, defrauded; that Liberalism was being doomed to certain disgrace in the future, in consequence of its internal corruptions. I therefore determined to sound the alarm. I did so, and have continued the agitation at the risk of my life; for Mendum threatened to kill me.

The work of exposure has been slow, because I had no avenue of public appeal at my own control; and the evidence in my possession (which has not all been published, by any means) revealed so foul a nest that newspaper men were very diffident about touching it. You yourself, sir, can bear witness to this fact, and to my long and unrelenting endeavor to get the public eye and ear upon this subject. It is over three years since I began the siege, and I have carried it on alone, without help, or hope of reward other than the satisfaction of the reflection that I have done my duty towards the cause of honest Liberalism. That cause is dear to my heart. I have never once lost sight of this work during all these three years. And now, thanks to your noble devotion to the same sublime cause, I see the beginning of the end. The Truth has been told; the Fraud has been exposed; the Record will henceforth stand where the world can read it; and, if financial robbery and licentious vice bury the cause for which we have both labored in ruin for this generation, the day is sure to come when a TRUE LIBERALISM shall rise like the immortal Phoenix from the ashes of that ruin, and then the work that has been done in this struggle will bear its noble fruit. The labor of putting this matter before the public has been done. The next step is to carry it into the courts. And I do not despair of seeing that also done.

But Mr. Wright, alas! does not seem willing to encourage this last step, notwithstanding his taunt that we should go to court. Mr. Wright would rather bring "Christian fraud, perjury, and robbery" into court than that of his own party. Well, it can only be regretted and deplored that a man occupying his position cannot show the sterling integrity of manhood by insisting that infidel ("fraud, perjury, and robbery") are no less to be condemned than Christian, and prove his devotion to truth and justice by investigating, not J. P. Mendum, who is arraigned on grave charges before the public conscience, but the evidence by which these charges are made and supported against him! Until Mr. Wright does this, he must himself stand before the public as an abettor of the fraud which he attempts to excuse and hide.

I have not asked, and shall not ask, any "wealthy Christian" to aid me in "the means necessary for a successful prosecution"; and I am not disconcerted by Mr. Wright's gratuitous assumption that "wealthy Christians" will "despise" me for my part in the exposure of this infidel dishonesty. I, a private in the ranks of Liberalism, having discovered a gross, shameless, unmitigated fraud in the very heart of the party, have done what I could to destroy that fraud. If I have not succeeded or shall not succeed, so much the worse for the party! He hides and excuses its vices and frauds, and sneeringly attempts to smother me with a gratuitous threat of Christian contempt. Well and good! I am content to leave it to honest men, of all names and lands, as to which of us two they will "despise" in the end. And in all sincere charity I grieve to think that Elizur Wright has written himself down in such a lamentable way that among all honorable men and women, regardless of party name or theological sect, a verdict must inevitably be rendered against him.

BOSTON, Feb. 19, 1880.

CHARLES ELLIS.

FREE MEDICINE.

A PAPER READ TO AN ASSEMBLY OF PHYSICIANS IN DOVER, N.H., BY ONE OF THEM.

PHYSICIANS:—

We meet here for the purpose of bringing about greater harmony among all the practitioners of medicine in our town, and to shield the public and ourselves against false pretensions.

We agree not to use presumptuous names; e.g. "Allopathy, from ἀλλος, other, and πάθος, morbid condition: the method of medical practice in which there is an attempt to cure diseases by the production of a condition of the system either different from, opposite to, or incompatible with the conditions essential to be cured." The term Allopathy has not been used by medical societies, and only partisans among the physicians have called themselves Allopaths. Such terms have been used only by medical partisans and sects in medicine, probably for speculative purposes and to distinguish themselves from those physicians who could not accept their dogmas and pretensions. All impartial men and women will agree that "medical society" and "physician" are sufficient to designate the medical profession. So also:—

"Homoeopathy, from ὁμοιος, like, and πάθος, affection: the doctrine or theory of curing diseases with very minute doses of medicine by producing in the patient affections similar to those of the disease."

"Hydropathy, from ὕδωρ, water, and πάθος, affection: the water-cure, a mode of treating diseases by the copious and frequent use of pure water, both internally and externally."

"Isopathy, from ἴσος, equal, and πάθος, affection. This mode of treatment was expounded by a physician in Germany, who administered remedies in doses similar to those of Hahnemann; but he classified the diseases in accordance with the remedies indicated, as sulphur diseases, silver diseases," etc.

"Eclecticism, from ἐξ, out of, and λέγω, to choose: the act or practice of selecting from different systems."

"Thompsonianism. This mode was introduced by Thompson, who treated the patients with vomiting, sweating, and stimulation."

The founders of the various modes of treatment were men of indefatigable industry and undaunted energy, and some of them were profound classical scholars; but their minds must have been perverted by vanity, when they assumed that each one of those so-called systems contained the all-in-all for the cure of diseases, and when they baptized the children of their brains with those peculiar names, or something-nothings. Strife and wrangling about pathies and isms have frustrated many good endeavors for human improvement among medical practitioners. Like all partisan and sectarian schemes, these hobbies interfere with better work for the welfare of humanity. Let us use honestly what we possess of science, and strive to make a cosmos in our own minds, out of the chaos of the conflicting schools of medical treatment. Religion and science are the most misjudged and misused words we have; but let us endeavor to use them rightly.

When we are called upon to meet a new-comer in consultation, let us not refuse to go. But, when we find an advertising, cure-promising pretender, let us attend to the immediate wants of the patient first; then let him know what we think of him, and inform the family. If they still desire to have such a person continue visiting the patient, let us then refuse farther aid, because such individuals are dishonest and are likely to interfere with our sincere efforts. Let us try to convince practitioners, who have been educated in colleges with the names Eclectic or Homoeopathic prefixed, that such titles cause contention; let us kindly invite them to come on our platform, which we will make so broad and firm that the physicians of the world may find room and contentment on it. If they then continue to proclaim their dogmas, they create exclusiveness, and compel us to let them sincerely alone. We will pay due deference to all rational modes of medical treatments, and appreciate, maintain, and propagate knowledge and truth, whether it comes from Galen, Paracelsus, Stahl, Silrius, Boerhaave, Braun, Hahnemann, or any other men. The title "regular physician" seems to be also a superfluity; because, if persons have not studied medicine and cannot give proof of their acquirement, they are not "irregulars," but simply no physicians. Let us do our best to convince the people that we have their welfare at heart, and have no desire to form an exclusive medical cast. If we carry out our agreement consistently and conscientiously, guard against vanity, jealousy, selfishness, and prejudice, an all-wise, all-just Deity and the intelligence of Humanity will bear witness that we have a true stand-point as physicians, and that we are better enabled to act in unison for the relief of suffering humanity. After years of conversation on this subject, proposals of various forms and discussions in three meetings, the following resolutions, framed by Dr. M. C. Lathrop, were adopted:

DOVER, N.H., February, 1880.

We, the undersigned, assuming that entire liberty of thought and freedom of opinion are absolutely essential to real progress in the science and art of medicine,

Resolve, First, That we will in no way approve, sanction, or hold allegiance to any organization, society, or name, which, by giving exceptional prominence and authority to any exclusive medical dogma or system of practice, tends to limit such freedom of thought or opinion.

Secondly, That we will recognize, professionally, those, and only such, honorable and well-accredited physicians as in their medical associations and conduct conform to the spirit of the foregoing resolution.

LEVI G. HILL.	A. NOEL SMITH.
T. J. W. PRAY.	PAUL A. STACKPOLE.
CARL H. HORSCH.	JOHN R. HAM.
JAMES H. WHEELER.	JOHN G. PIKE.
JASON W. DRAKE.	CHARLES A. FAIRBANKS.
ALBERT G. FENNER.	CHARLES A. TUFTS.
EDWARD S. BERRY.	M. C. LATHROP.
D. T. P. CHAMBERLIN.	WM. B. MACK.
	JAMES PITTS.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

UPPER GLOUCESTER, ME., Dec. 11, 1879.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

In the present state of politics, no interested parties will favor or advocate compulsory education, however appropriate as a condition of suffrage such as I have suggested in a previous communication; and therefore it is a subject concerning which the liberal reformatory movement must take the initiative, if it is ever to be accomplished. The present generation must entirely pass away, and all above sixteen years of age (when such a measure becomes a law) must be excepted from its operation, or else even the young will never be in favor of it. The intelligent young men of the country are those who should take hold of this work and bring it to the attention of every one. The superintendents of the common schools should consider and recommend it, and in time it may succeed.

Our children and grandchildren may reap the benefit, if we may not.

No doubt many would now favor only intelligent, educated suffrage, but what we want is universal intelligent suffrage, and the only way to accomplish it is by compulsory intelligent education, which is attainable by all, if right measures are adopted; otherwise our country must be remanded to the condition of Mexico and the South American Republics.

D. S. GRANDIN.

JESTINGS.

A FRENCH WIT said of a man who was exceedingly fat that Nature only made him to show how far the human skin would stretch without breaking.

AN EDITOR at a dinner-table, being asked if he would take some pudding, replied in a fit of abstraction, "Owing to a crowd of other matter, we are unable to find room for it!"

THE Harvard Lampoon says that an Unsocial Illiterate Club has lately been formed in the Back Bay, one of its rules being that no member shall recognize another member in any place.

WHEN DOUGLASS JERROLD heard a society bore speaking of a song that "always carried him away" when he heard it, Jerrold simply asked if some one present would please to sing it.

THE CLASS in geography was on exhibition, when the question came, "Who discovered the Sandwich Islands?" Every hand was instantly raised, followed by a chorus of "Joseph Cook."

IT'S ALL NONSENSE talking about a well running dry. The only thing that we ever noticed running when it was dry was a toper on a quick trot to the nearest saloon.—Keokuk Constitution.

A YOUNG MAN at a tea-party, overhearing one lady say to another, "I have something for your private ear," immediately exclaimed, "I protest against it, for privat-earring is illegal!"

"PA, ARE YOU IN FAVOR of the Bible in public schools?" asked a youngster, at the breakfast-table. "Why, of course I am," responded the father. "What makes you ask such a question, my son?" "Oh! only I thought maybe you wasn't, as you never read it at home." The urchin dodged, but he wasn't quick enough.

AT A SMALL dinner-party presided over by King William IV., a gentleman thought fit to be witty at the expense of the American nationality of the Marchioness Wellesley, born Miss Caton, of Maryland. Turning to Lady Wellesley, he asked, "Now do pray tell us, do you come from that part of America where they guess or where they calculate?" "She comes from neither," said the King, slowly, immediately interrupting him. "She comes from where they fascinate."

THE BLACKSMITH of Glamis' description of metaphysics was: "Twa folk disputin' thegither: he that's listenin' disna ken what he that's speakin' means, and he that's speakin' disna ken what he means himself,—that's metaphysics." In De Morgan's Formal Logic, the following is found: "I would not dissuade a student from a metaphysical inquiry: on the contrary, I would rather endeavor to promote the desire of entering upon such subjects; but I would warn him, when he tries to look down his own throat with a candle in his hand, to take care that he does not set his head on fire."—Exchange.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,

HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.Y.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 80 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Galtrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. E. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

Proceedings of Eleventh Annual Meeting 1878. Contains essays by T. B. Wakeman, Esq., on "The Religion of Humanity," and by Wm. H. Spencer, on "The Religion of Supernaturalism,—why it should be disorganized and how it may be done"; addresses by O. B. Frothingham, George William Curtis, Miss Anna C. Garlin, Mrs. Clara Neymann, Maurice Ellinger, and a poem by Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith; eleventh annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc. Price 40 cts.; package of four or more, 25 cts. each.

Proceedings of Twelfth Annual Meeting, 1879. Contains the essay by John W. Chadwick (with an abstract of the speeches thereon by Messrs. Savage, Tiffany, and Potter) on "Theological and Rational Ethics"; the address by the new President of the Association, Felix Adler, on "The Practical Needs of Free Religion," and briefer addresses on the same topic by F. E. Abbot, F. A. Hinckley, and C. D. B. Mills; together with the Reports of the Executive Committee and Treasurer, and other proceedings of the business meeting. Price, thirty cents; packages of five or more, twenty cents each.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Sixth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston Mass.

1 8 7 9.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.Y.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.
 JAMES E. OLIVER, Ithaca, N.Y.
 MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—
To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS, SENT BY MAIL AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES! ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ADLER (Prof. Felix.) Creed and Deed. A Series of Essays (published for the Society for Ethical Culture).	1.50
ALCOOT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.	1.50
Concord Days.	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.	1.50
ALCOOT (LOUISA M.). Little Women; or, Meg, Jo, Beth, and Amy. Two vols.	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.	1.50
Little Men.	1.50
Eight Cousins; or, The Aunt-hill. Illustrations.	1.50
Rose in Bloom. A Sequel to "Eight Cousins."	1.50
Under the Apple Tree. Illustrated.	1.50
Work; A Story of Experience.	1.75
Silver Pitchers and Independence. A Centennial Love Story.	1.25
My Boys, &c.	1.00
Shawl-Straps.	1.00
Cupids and Choccos.	1.00
My Girls, &c.	1.00
Jimmy's Cruise in the Pinafore, &c.	1.00
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.	1.50
ARNOLD EDWIN (M.A.). The Light of Asia; or, the Great Renunciation: being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Cloth.	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.	2.00
Culture and Anarchy.	3.00
Essays on Church and Religion.	1.50
Mixed Essays.	2.00
God and the Bible: a Review of Objections to "Literature and Dogma."	2.00
Literature and Dogma.	1.50
St. Paul and Protestantism: with an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England.	1.75
Isaiah XL-LXVI. With the shorter Prophecies allied to it. Arranged and Edited with Notes.	1.50
French Fiction.	2.00
New Fables.	2.00
Bible Reading for Schools.35
Higher Schools and Universities in Germany. With New Preface.	2.00
BAOON'S Essays.	1.00
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.	2.25
Physics and Politics.	1.50
Lombard Street.	1.25
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Moral Science.	1.00
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.	5.00
Mind and Body.	1.50
Logic and Deduction; with an Essay on Cloth.	2.00
Emotions and the Will.	5.00
BARING-GOULD (S.). Curious Myths of the Middle Ages.	1.25
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Faith.	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.	5.00
BEARD (G. M., M.D.). Stimulants and Narcotics.75
The Scientific Basis of Delusions. Paper.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.	1.75
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.	4.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 6 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; The French Revolution, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.50
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.	3.00
CHADWICK (JOHN W.). The Bible of To-day. Cloth, extra.	1.50
A Book of Poems.	1.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.	1.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Families, uniform with Patience	1.00
Billy Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.	1.50
CHILD (LYDIA MARIA). Aspirations of the World. A Chain of Opals.	1.25
CLARKE (Dr. E. H.). Sex in Education.	1.25
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.	8.00
CLIFFORD (WM. K.). Seeing and Thinking. Lectures and Essays. 2 vols.	1.00
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of Childhood of Religions.	1.50
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays. The Religious Demands of the Age.	3.00
COONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.	1.75
The Sacred Anthology.	2.00
Idols and Ideals.	1.50
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	2.00

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE; its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Maasson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.	2.80
Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures and Fancies."	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.	3.60
Journal of Researches.	2.00
Different Forms of Flowers.	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.	5.00
Insectivorous Plants. Cloth.	2.00
Habits of Climbing Plants. 1 vol. Cloth.	1.25
Orchids.	1.75
Effects of Cross and Self Fertilization.	2.00
DRAPER (DR. J. WILLIAM). History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. Cloth.	1.75
International Development of Europe. 2 vols.	3.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Adam Bede. Illustrated.	1.50
Daniel Deronda. 2 vols.	3.40
Felix Holt, the Radical. Illustrated.	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.	3.40
Romola. Illustrated.	1.50
Scenes of Clerical Life and Silas Marner.	1.50
The Mill on the Floss. Illustrated.	1.50
EMERSON'S (E. W.). Essays. First Series. Portrait.	1.50
Essays. Second Series.	1.50
Miscellanies.	1.50
Representative Men.	1.50
English Traits.	1.50
Conduct of Life.	1.50
Practical Mysticism.	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.	1.50
Society and Solitude.	1.50
Letters and Social Aims.	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.	1.50
Teaching. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought in reference to the Christian Religion.	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrines of Evolution, with Criticisms on the Positive Philosophy. 2 vols. The Unseen World, and other Essays.	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity.	1.50
History of Religion.	1.50
Transcendentalism in New England.	2.00
Life of Gerrit Smith.	2.00
Creed and Conduct.	1.00
Rising and Settling Faith.	1.75
Visions of the Future.	1.00
Sketches of the Unbeliever.	1.00
Sermons. Old Series. 40 numbers, each 10c. 2 vols. half calf.	5.50
Sermons. New Series. 75 numbers, each 10c.	7.50
Stories from the Lips of a Teacher.	1.00
Stories of the Patriarchs.	1.00
Room 10, St. Francis.	1.00
Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.). Enigmas of Life.	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.	2.00
Creed of Christendom.	7.00
GREY (W. R.). Rocks Ahead.	2.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland.	1.50
Thoughts about Art.	2.00
The Intellectual Life.	2.00
Chapters on Animals.	2.00
Round my House.	2.00
The Sylvan Year and the Unknown River.	2.00
The Jew on the Rhine.	2.00
Wendover. A Tale of Yorkshire and Lancashire.	2.00
Modern Frenchmen. Five Biographies.	2.00
The Life of J. M. W. Turner. R.A. With nine illustrations after the Master's Sketches, and four Woodcuts.	2.50
Notes and Etchings.	5.00
Harry Blount. Passages in a Boy's Life on Land and Sea.	1.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Country Living.	1.50
Gala Days.	1.50
Woman's Wrongs.	1.50
Summer Rest.	1.50
A New Atmosphere.	1.50
Swimming Blocks.	1.50
Wood-Gathering.	1.50
Sermons to the Clergy.	1.50
Sketches and Sketches.	1.50
First Love is Best.	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.	1.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.	3.50
H. B. Bits of Talk about Some Matters.	1.00
New Series. Enlarged Edition.	1.25
The Story of Boon. A Poem. Paper covers.	1.25
Bits of Talk in Prose and Verse for Young Folks.	1.00
Rita of Travel at Home.	1.50
Nona's Silver Line. A Story of Colorado Life. Illustrated.	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.	1.50
Atlantic Essays.	2.00
Oldport Days.	2.50
FRANCIS (EDWARD). Life of	10.50
Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.	1.25
On the Origin of Species.	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.	1.75
Critiques and Addresses.	1.75
American Addresses.	1.25
Photography, an Introduction to Study of Nature.	2.50

INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.	1.20
The Ghosts, etc.	1.25
The Mistakes of Moses.	1.25
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forces in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.	1.50
III. Food. By Dr. Edward Smith.	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerobionics. By Bell Pettigrew.	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.	1.50
X. Science of Law. By Prof. S. Amos.	1.75
XI. Animal Mechanism. By E. J. Marey.	1.75
XII. The History of the Conflict between Religion and Science. By J. W. Draper, M.D., LL.D.	1.75
XIII. The Theory of Descent, and Darwinism. By Prof. Oscar Schmidt.	2.00
XIV. The Chemistry of Light and Photography. By Prof. Tyndall.	1.50
XV. Pung. By M. O. Cooke.	1.50
XVI. The Life and Growth of Language. By W. D. Whitney.	1.50
XVII. Money and Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons.	1.75
XVIII. The Nature of Light. By Dr. Eugene Lommel.	2.00
XIX. Animal Parasites and Mesomeres. By Mons. Van Beneden.	1.50
XX. On Fermentations. By P. Schützinger.	1.50
XXI. The Five Senses of Man. By Julius Bernstein.	1.75
XXII. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.	1.50
XXIII. Studies in Spectrum Analysis. By J. N. Lockyer.	2.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.	5.00
China.	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.	8.00
KNAPPET (J.). The Religion of Israel: A Manual. Translated from the Dutch by Richard A. Armstrong.	1.00
LECKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.	4.00
History of Europe. Second Series.	4.00
tus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.	4.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.	2.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.	4.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.50
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life. Problems of Life and Mind. Vols. I. and II. Per vol.	3.00
The Physical Basis of Mind.	3.00
The Study of Psychology; its Object, Scope, and Method.	2.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.	2.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.	2.00
Among my Books.	2.00
My Study Windows.	2.00
A Fable for Critics.75
Under the Willows and other Poems.	1.50
The Vision of Sir Launfal.75
Three Memorials.	1.25
Fireside Travels.	1.50
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.	5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.	1.50
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 3 vols. Per vol.	1.50
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 5 vols., each.	2.50
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.	2.50
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.	2.50
Representative Government.	2.50
Autobiography.	2.50
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works. Three Essays on Religion.	1.00
MILLER (JOAQUIN) Songs of the Sierras.	1.50
Songs of the Desert.	1.50
The Ship in the Desert.	1.50
Songs of Italy.	1.25
MIVART (ST. GEO.). On the Genesis of Species.	1.75
Man and Apes. An Exposition of Structural Resemblances and Differences, bearing upon Questions of Affinity and Origin. 1 vol.	2.00
Lessons from Nature as Manifested in Mind and Matter.	2.00
Contemporary Evolution. An Essay on some Recent Social Changes.	1.50
MORLEY (PROP. JOHN). Voltaire. Rousseau, 2 vols.	2.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-time Stories.	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.	2.50
The Same. Second Series.	3.50
Chips from a German. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Vol. IV. Comparative Philology, Mythology, etc., etc.; concluding the work. 4 vols.	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.	2.00
On Missions. A Lecture Delivered in Westminster Abbey on Dec. 3, 1873.	1.00
Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by the Religions of India.	2.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Monitions. 3 vols.	4.50

Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A. D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.
Outlines of the Religion and Philosophy of Swedenborg.
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.
The Tropic Book.
Men, Women, and Ghosts.
Hedged In.
The Silent Partner.
What to Wear?
Poetic Studies.
The Story of Ayla.
Trinity's Wedding Tour. Illustrated.
Sealed Orders, and other Stories.
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.
PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Our World is not Ours: the Plurality of Worlds, as deduced under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects.
Natural Phenomena. A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.
The Expanse of Heaven.
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.
SCHEELE (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.
5. Geology. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S.
6. Physiology. By M. Foster, M.A., M.D., F.R.S.
7. Astronomy. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S.
8. Botany. By Dr. J. D. Hooker.
9. Logic. By W. S. Jevons.
10. Inventive Geometry. By Spencer.
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols., each.
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.
SMILES'S (SAMUEL.) Self-Help.
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.
First Principles.
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.
Phenomena of Society.
Philosophy of Style.
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy and Morals. New and enlarged edition.
Sociology.
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.
Universal Progress.
Data of Ethics.
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.
Uncle Tom's Cabin.
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. New and cheaper Edition. Complete in 1 vol.
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.
Cape Cod.
Letters.
A Yankee in Canada.
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack River.
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.
Light and Electricity.
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.
Heat as a Mode of Motion.
On Sound.
Radiant Heat.
Forms of Water.
Lectures on Light.
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.
Lectures on Electricity.
Address before British Ass'n at Belfast.
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.
Vols III. IV., and VI., each.
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.
Saunterings.
Back-Log Studies.
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.
Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.
West-Easterly Divan of Goethe. Translated.
WHIPPLE'S (E. F.) Literature and Life.
Essays and Reviews.
Character and Characteristic Men.
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.
Success and its Conditions.
Washington and the Revolution.
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.
We Girls: A Home Story.
Reveries.
The Other Girls.
Fancies. A volume of Poems.
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems.
Child Life.

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX

231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. BANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A BRAIN AND NERVE FOOD.

VITALIZED PHOSPHATES.

This differs from all other Tonics because it is composed of the Vital or Nerve-giving

Principles of the Ox Brain
and Wheat Germ.

Physicians have found it so necessary that they alone have prescribed 200,000 packages. It restores lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body; relieves debility or nervousness; gives vitality to the insufficient growth of children; strengthens the digestion; cures neuralgia and prevents consumption. It restores to the brain and nerves the elements that have been carried off by disease or overwork.

For sale by Druggists, or by mail, $1.00.

F. CROSBY,
666 Sixth Avenue, New York,
and 137 A Strand, London.

A MASTERLY BOOK.

A TRUE REPUBLIC.

By Albert Stickney.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The design of this work is to explain the nature of improvements which the author thinks essential to the completeness of our system of republican government. He describes its various defects, and sets forth in comparison those of systems that have been tried in succession. . . . His style is pointed, vivid, and forcible; his illustrations from recent history are given at considerable length, and will be found highly interesting. The work is valuable as tending to stimulate inquiry into the needed modification of our republican system."—Boston Transcript.

"Able and fearless. It advocates radical changes in our methods of government which are not expected to be secured at once, but approached gradually and surely. One excellent feature is, that it shows how useless it is to look to any other country for more than inferior improvements in our government. It teaches that we must reform our own methods."—N. Y. Times.

"Mr. Stickney has given much thought to the questions discussed in this volume, and has reached some conclusions that differ from those of other writers. . . . The system he advocates is one that will secure the best men and their best work."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"Will set men to thinking."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Mr. Stickney's thoughtful work cannot but command attention."—Troy Whig.

"Mr. Stickney's book will be found very suggestive, and if it sets our people to thinking it will perform a good work. He sketches the different kinds of governments people have lived under, and reviews our own. Every thinking American should read it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It is clear, careful, and incisive. . . . We recommend every thoughtful citizen, to whatever political party he may be attached, to get it, and study it well immediately on its issue. . . . His propositions will receive wide attention, and will, we believe, provoke a controversy that will engage some of the ablest minds in the country."—Sunday Call, Newark.

"Sets forth in a very strong and clear light the defects of parliamentary rule in England, and of party rule in this country, showing that they keep the best men out of the public service, and prevent those in the service from doing their best work. . . . The work is strongly written, and discusses with ability a matter of vital importance to the people of this country."—Portland Transcript.

"Many of Mr. Stickney's ideas are most original, and his book is well worth the reading even by one who does not share in his peculiar views."—Commercial Bulletin, Boston.

"Mr. Stickney writes with a good deal of vigor, and certainly with entire honesty of purpose."—Buffalo Express.

"There are many excellent suggestions in the work, which deserves careful reading at the hands of those who wish to fully comprehend the condition and requirements of our government."—Boston Post.

"He touches abuses with no sparing hand."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

RADICAL DISCOURSES.

1. America's Debt to Thomas Paine.
2. False and True Prayer.
3. The Brute God of the Old Testament.
4. The Religion of To-day.
5. False Teachings of the Christian Church.
6. The Workingman's Religion.
7. The Christian Tragedy at Pocasset.
8. The Religious Demand of To-day.
9. The Teachings of Free Religion.
10. Do You Love Jesus?
11. Atonement.
12. How to Read the Bible.
13. Revivals.
14. Who are Christians?
15. The Moral Life.

The above discourses may be had at 5 cts. each, or the entire set for 50 cts., by addressing L. K. WASHBURN, REVERE, MASS.

MR. CHADWICK'S NEW BOOK,

THE FAITH OF REASON.

"Of all preachers occupying regular pulpits as distinguished from lecture platforms, he seems to have completely emancipated himself from pulpit conventions. His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence. . . . When we consider their quality, we marvel, for what sermons of the day can compare with these in richness, force, and beauty?"—Rev. Dr. F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

Sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of $1.00.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

FOR

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,

23 & 27 Brattle Street, Boston.

ROOMS to LET by the DAY OR WEEK.

RADICAL LIBERAL LECTURES

By B. F. Underwood,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER OF 1878-9.

1. The Theory of Evolution.
2. Darwinism Defined and Defended.
3. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
4. The Genesis and Nature of Religion.
5. Modern Scientific Materialism.
6. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
7. An Hour with German Thinkers.
8. Intuition and Instinct Viewed in the Light of Modern Psychology.
9. The Pros and Cons of a Future Life.
10. Is there a Personal Intelligent Deity?

11. The Demands of Liberalism Pertaining to State Secularization.
12. Monogamic Marriage versus the Vagaries of Free Love.
13. Woman: Her Past and Present; Her Rights and Wrongs.
14. Religious Revivals: Their Causes and Consequences.
15. The Struggles and Triumphs of Free-thought in Europe and America.
16. Issues of the Age.
17. Buddha and Buddhism.
18. Ancient Egypt: Its Laws, Customs and Religion.
19. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.
20. Crimes and Cruelties of Superstition.
21. Cook and other "Scientific" Annihilators of Materialism Reviewed.
22. Paine the Pioneer of Freethought in America.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

23. A Liberal's Answer to the Question, "If not Christianity, What?"
24. Christianity: To what Extent has it Helped or Hindered Civilization?
25. Jesus: All that is Known and what is Guessed about Him.
26. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
27. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
28. Science versus the Bible.
29. The Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
30. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
31. Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible Examined.
32. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
33. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
34. Popular Objections to Liberalism Considered.

For terms, etc., address
B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

for TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 80 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, five cts. each; 1878, forty cts. each; 1879, thirty cts. each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

INTERESTING

NEW BOOKS

For Radical Thinkers.

THE BIBLE FOR LEARNERS. By Dr. H. Oort, Professor at Amsterdam, and Dr. I. Hooykaas, Pastor at Rotterdam, with the assistance of Dr. A. Kuenen, Professor at Leyden. A popular exposition of the "Dutch School" of modern inquiry in the historical study of the Bible. Vol. I., Patriarchs; Moses; Judges. Vol. II., Kings and Prophets. Vol. III., New Testament. Price $2.00 per volume.—Vol. III., $2.50.

THE BIBLE OF TO-DAY. By John W. Chadwick. Containing the principal results of the best historical and scientific criticism of the separate books of the Bible and their mutual relations. 304 pages. Price $1.50.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE? By J. T. Sunderland. An attempt to answer the question in the light of the best scholarship and in the most reverent and catholic spirit. 179 pages. Price $1.00.

THE FAITH OF REASON. A Series of Discourses on the leading topics of Religion. By John W. Chadwick, author of The Bible of To-day. Pages 254. Price $1.00.

"His discourses are prefaced with no Biblical texts, and exhibit little or nothing of the tone and style which we are wont to associate with pulpit teaching. Free, original, brave, manly speech is here; never prosy, always earnest, often curiously apt, and sometimes swelling with its theme into fervid eloquence."—Rev. Dr. Hedge, in the Unitarian Review.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL. From the Dutch of J. Knappert. "Its purpose is to give a faithful and accurate account of the results of modern research into early development of the Israelitish religion." 253 pages. Price $1.00.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE WORLD: A Chain of Opals. Selected from the best ancient and modern scriptures, with an introduction. By L. Maria Child. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

A MODERN SYMPOSIUM. Subjects: The Soul and a Future Life; The Influence upon Morality of a Decline in Religious Belief. By Frederic Harrison, Professor Huxley, Fitz James Stephen, Lord Selbourne, Canon Barry, the Dean of St. Paul, Duke of Argyll, and others. 265 pages. Price $1.25.

THE CREED OF CHRISTENDOM: Its Foundation contrasted with its Superstructure. By W. Rathbone Greg, author of the Enigma of Life, etc. Crown 8vo. Complete and unabridged, with Index not in other editions, $1.50.

One of the classics of Liberalism.

HISTORY OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLAND. By Henry Thomas Buckle. New edition. 3 volumes. 12mo. Cloth, $4.50.

"By far the nearest edition published of this world-wide famous work. The complete Index which the publishers have added certainly deserves mention. It is of incalculable value to the student."

SUPERNATURAL RELIGION. An Enquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation. Reprinted from the Sixth English Edition. One large Demy Octavo volume. Cloth, $4.00. Half Cass, $6.00.

This Edition is complete, and the only revised and corrected American Edition, with Index. The Boston Edition sells at $3.50, and the English Edition at $1.50, making this edition one-third the price of any other.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. By Frederick May Holland. Cloth, 12mo. 284 pp. Price $1.25.

A thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found.

THROUGH ROME ON. A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience. By Nathaniel Ramsay Waters. Cloth, 12mo. 362 pp. $1.75.

An able and candid book.

Any of the above-named books sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston

A CHEAP OFFER

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 cents.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the fine list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

SINGLE BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX

for the years 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878 (Vols. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) can be furnished on application at this Office. PRICES—volumes for 1871 and 1872, $2.50; volumes for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, $3.00. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 9,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH

AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL. 27TH YEAR. A family and day school for both sexes. Boys and girls fitted for Harvard, Smith's, or other Colleges, and for Scientific Schools; also for teaching, business, and home life. Pupils distributed in four families. Board and tuition from $350 to $450. For Circular address NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

MR. MILLS' LECTURES.

1. The Advances of Science in our Time; What do they promise for Man?
2. The Birthplace and Cradle of our Civilization; or, the Indebtedness of West to East, to Asia.
3. The Labor Question.
4. The Mission of the New Thought not to Destroy but to Fulfill.

STUDIES IN ANCIENT LITERATURE.—Four Lectures.

1. The Gnostic Wisdom of the East, India, Persia, etc.
2. The Poetic Thought and Religious Sentiment of the East.
3. Greek Wisdom, or Pythagoras and his Institution.
4. Greek Religion and Mythology

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF OUR TIME.—Three Lectures.

1. Huxley.
2. Max Müller.
3. Emerson.

For terms, etc., address
CHARLES DEB. MILLS,
Syracuse, N. Y.

THE BEST PAPER! TRY IT!

Beautifully Illustrated.

35TH YEAR.

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the newest inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & CO. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had thirty-five years' experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A special notice is made in the Scientific American of all inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained by writing to MUNN & CO. We also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade-Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints for procuring advances on inventions. Address for the Paper, or concerning Patents,

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

Branch Office, cor. F & 7th Sts., Washington, D.C.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOL. 11.—No. 533.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1880.

{ENTERED AS SECOND}
{CLASS MAIL MATTER.}

THE LIBERAL PLATFORM

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution; including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.
2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.
3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE
FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

GLIMPSES.

MR. O. B. FROTHINGHAM, now abroad, has just lost his brother, Mr. T. B. Frothingham, who died on March 2, at Jamaica Plain. He will have the deep sympathy of many friends in his bereavement.

OF AGASSIZ'S theory of a local origin for several distinct branches of the human race, Quatrefages says that it "ought to be rejected by any one who sets the least value upon the results of observation."

A "DEFEAT" which calls forth such words as these, quoted from the Boston Herald, is scarcely distinguishable from a victory: "The defeat of Mr. Curtis is due to his known political honesty; and when, to advance the cause of Gen. Grant, it becomes necessary to thrust political honesty into the background, what good can be expected from the cause or from the man who profits by such a transaction? It will be like the false hope of expecting figs to grow on thistles."

A WASHINGTON dispatch of February 11 outlined the proposed polygamy bill: "In the Senate, to-day, Mr. Garland (Dem.), of Arkansas, from the Judiciary Committee, reported a bill to amend Section 5352, of the Revised Statutes, in reference to bigamy and polygamy. It imposes a fine of $500 and five years' imprisonment upon every person who has a husband or wife living, and who hereafter marries another, and declares that any man who marries more than one woman is guilty of bigamy. This provision does not extend to any person by reason of any former marriage, whose husband or wife by such marriage is absent for five successive years and is not known to be living, nor to any person whose lawful marriage has been dissolved by the decree of a competent court. It provides that in any case of prosecution for bigamy, any person drawn as a jurymen may be challenged, if he is or has been living in the practice of bigamy or polygamy, or if he believes it morally, religiously, or legally right for a man to have more than one living and undivorced wife, or to live in the practice of cohabiting with more than one woman. It also authorizes the President to grant amnesty to offenders against the law for offences committed before January 1, 1879, on such condition and under such limitations as he shall think proper; but no such amnesty shall have effect unless the conditions thereof shall have been complied with. The bill also provides that the issue of plural or Mormon marriages born before November 1, 1879, shall be considered legitimate, and entitled to all the rights of heirs, and next of kin of their parents."

HERE IS A piteous story, told in a New York despatch of February 22: "Mrs. Louisa McKay, a respectable middle-aged woman, died Wednesday from the effects of undue exposure and want of nourishment in a garret at 330 Third Avenue. To-day friends, who learned too late of her misfortunes, placed the body in Greenwood Cemetery. Mrs. McKay was a native of Norwich, Conn., and her maiden name was Randall. At the age of sixteen, she ran away from school, and married a wealthy man named Clarke, who treated her cruelly, and at length procured a divorce, leaving her with an infant daughter. Her father, who had renounced her after her elopement, refused to receive her again, but consented to adopt the child. Mrs. Clarke then went to Philadelphia, and for a time earned her living by making dresses. She became acquainted with and married John McKay, son of a country clergyman, who proved to be a drunkard, and by whom she had a daughter. Some months ago she fled from her husband and came to this city with her daughter, and hired a room, where she died. She earned a scanty living as dressmaker. Among her patrons was Sarah Jewett, the actress. Although she was often compelled to do without fire and sufficient food, she was too proud to complain. At length, when she became sick, she sent her daughter to the pawn-shop with what few articles of value she possessed. When the girl returned from the pawn-shop Wednesday, after parting with almost the last article of clothing, she found her mother dying. Despatch was sent by the coroner to the woman's father in Norwich, who replied that he would not contribute a cent toward her burial. A subscription to bury her was started by one of her patrons."

THE DEATH of Miss Cobbe, at the age of only fifty-seven, is a great loss to the cause of reverent and upward-looking liberalism. We take this obituary notice from the Advertiser: "Miss Frances Power Cobbe, whose death is announced, was born Dec. 4, 1822, at Dublin, of English ancestors, and educated at Brighton. She has spent the best part of her life in London. She was interested at an early day in religious matters, and after considerable reading in various directions became deeply interested in the writings of Theodore Parker. After her mother's death, she inquired of him as to immortality: his answer was his 'Sermon of the Immortal Life.' The two were intimate friends and close correspondents ever since; but they never saw each other until 1860, at Florence. Parker in receiving her said: 'It is strange that we should meet thus at last. But you do not see me,—only the memory of me. They who wish me well wish me a speedy departure to the other world.' She gave him flowers,—tea-roses and lilies of the valley. His spirits came back to him once more. Miss Cobbe caught a glimpse of the man's powers. 'Do not speak of your feelings for me,' he said, 'it makes me too unhappy to leave you.' He wanted to see her every day. It was his last joy on earth. A few days later he was no more. Miss Cobbe was the first to edit his works (in twelve volumes, London, 1863-65). The preface, on the religious demands of the age, was reprinted in this city in 1863. Upon the death of her father, Miss Cobbe travelled in the East and in Italy, and in consequence wrote her Italics: Brief Notes on Politics, People, and Places in Italy, 1864, and the Cities of the Past, 1864, the latter being reprints from Fraser's Magazine. After her return, she was for a short time associated with Miss Mary Carpenter in the Red House Reformatory, but her labors were terminated by an accident: however, they resulted in her Studies New and Old of Ethical and Social Subjects. In 1860 she made her second visit to Italy, when she met Theodore Parker; and it was in some measure due to him that she espoused the cause of the Union during the war. In her Broken Lights, an Inquiry into the Present Condition and Future Prospects of Religious Faith, 1864, may be found a statement on the various schools of the English Church, and a critical review of Renan's writings. The Essay on Intuitive Morals, 1859, is directed against the utilitarians, and is considered by some to be her ablest production: its sequel is contained in her Religious Duty of 1864. In 1869 she published a work, the title of which has become classical, Criminals, Idiots, Women, and Minors? Is the Classification Sound? A Discussion on the Laws concerning the Property of Married Women. Miss Cobbe was one of the principal contributors to the London periodicals, and prominent in reformatory and philanthropic labors. She opposed vivisection; she defended and helped to enlarge the rights of women; she was a strong advocate of physical culture, an honest lover of moral health, and she leaves the world better than she has found it. It is but natural that she had many friends in America, particularly in this city." P.S.—The Advertiser of March 9 had this contradiction of Miss Cobbe's death: "The Miss Frances Power Cobbe whose death was recently reported, was a distant relative of the lady of the same name so well known for her social and political writings."

AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....Irvington, Ind.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HALLOWELL.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSANTHAL.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....Detroit, Mich.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Ed. of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....New York.
 W. J. R. HARGRAVE, Ed. "Freethought Journal," Toronto, Can.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....Chicago, Ill.
 COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....Peoria, Ill.
 DR. T. L. BROWN.....Binghamton, N. Y.
 HON. R. S. MCCORMICK.....Franklin, Pa.
 MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....New York City.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.....Tenasny, N. J.
 MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....Lottsburgh, Va.
 JOSEPH McDONOUGH.....Albany, N. Y.
 RABBI MAX SCHLESINGER.....Albany, N. Y.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....S Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

J. A. J. WILCOX.....W. H. HAMLEN.
 F. E. ABBOT.....C. D. B. MILLS.
 D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
 Arkansas.....JOHN AHRNS, Monticello.
 California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
 Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
 Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
 Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOBLT, Greenville.
 Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
 Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
 Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
 Indiana.....N. D. WATKINS, Xenia.
 Iowa.....J. O. MICHENER, Ader.
 Kansas.....JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
 Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
 Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
 Maine.....D. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
 Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
 Massachusetts.....E. A. SAWTELLE, Boston.
 Michigan.....KARL SCHMEMMANN, Detroit.
 Minnesota.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
 Missouri.....R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
 Nebraska.....W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
 Nevada.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
 New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
 New Jersey.....FRANCIS W. ORVIS, Passaic.
 New York.....C. D. B. MILLS (Chairman), Syracuse.
 North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
 Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
 Oregon.....SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
 Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
 South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
 Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
 Texas.....DR. L. J. RUSSELL, Harrisville.
 Vermont.....B. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
 Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
 West Virginia.....DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
 Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
 Dakota.....D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
 District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
 Utah.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
 Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.

D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....Chelsea, Mass.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....337 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL UNIONS,

Chartered by the American Liberal Union.

FLORENCE, MASS.—President, Seth Hunt; Secretary, Clarence E. Brown.
 SYRACUSE, N. Y.—[Officers not reported.]
 ALBANY, N. Y.—President, Hon. E. P. Hurlbut; Acting President, Adam Strever; Secretary, B. C. Andrews.
 BOSTON, MASS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss Jane P. Titcomb.
 PASSAIC CITY, N. J.—President, J. H. Adamson; Secretary, F. W. Orvis.
 JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—President, David Prince; Secretary, Miss J. M. Meek.
 ROCHESTER, N. Y.—President, Anson C. Allen; Secretary, Hume H. Cale.
 CHELSEA, MASS.—President, J. A. J. Wilcox; Secretary, Benj. H. Crandon.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at the Formation of the National Liberal League of America, Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 27, 1878.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the National Liberal League, assembled at Syracuse, October 26 and 27, 1878, to which we were delegates, was radically divided into two parties, one favoring total repeal, and the other opposed to such repeal, of certain laws of the United States relating to the circulation of obscene literature; and

WHEREAS, The whole question was, by the proposition of the majority and the consent of the minority, dropped from the consideration of the present Congress; and

WHEREAS, The subsequent nomination and election of the chief executive officers for the ensuing year, including the President, were made by the majority dependent upon their expressed opinion on the question which had been thus disposed of, to the surprise and deep disappointment of the minority; and

WHEREAS, The minority cannot but regard this action of the majority as a breach of faith and an unjust act toward the minority; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, protest against the animus, aims, and results of such proceedings, and hereby withdraw from the session of the Congress, to take such action as we may in the future deem advisable.

Resolved, That we believe that the existing United States laws against obscenity need to be reformed and amended, being now in several particulars oppressive in the modes of administration and in the penalties; yet we are in favor of proper laws, by State and National Governments, against the publication and circulation of obscene literature, tending to corrupt the morals of youth.

The following names were subscribed to the above resolutions:—

E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y. MOSES HAYS, Rochester, N. Y.
 FRANKLIN GOODYEAR, Cort-S. R. URBINO, West Newton, land, N. Y.
 Z. T. WATKINS, Syracuse, N. Y. W. D. HUNT, Scott, N. Y.
 NETHIR O. TRUESDELL, Syra-FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Cambridge, case, N. Y.
 GUSTAVUS E. GORDON, Mil-MOSES W. DODGE, Albany, N. Y. waukee, Ill.
 HARRIET A. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y. J. H. ADAMSON, Passaic City, N. J.
 SARAH B. OTIS, Boston, Mass.
 W. H. HAMLEN, Boston, Mass. HOPE WEEPLE, Boston, Mass.
 T. O. GAGE, Fayetteville, N. Y. D. G. CRANDON, Chelsea, Mass.
 B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, CHARLES ELLIS, Boston, Mass.
 JOHN W. TRUESDELL, Syra-cuse, N. Y.
 CATHERINE C. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y.
 EPHRAIM TURK, Chelsea, Mass. H. P. STARK, Rochester, N. Y.
 JOHN NILL, Watertown, N. Y. JOSEPH McDONOUGH, Albany, N. Y.
 E. A. SAWELLE, Boston, Mass. W. SCHLESINGER, Albany, N. Y.
 THOS. D. GAN, Albany, N. Y. JOHN PREST, Albany, N. Y.
 JAMES B. PIKE, Rochester, N. Y. C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N. Y.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.
 D. B. MORREY, Malden, Mass.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Dec. 12, 1879.

Voted, That, in the judgment of this Board, the name "National Liberal League" has become so widely and injuriously associated in the public mind with attempts to repeal the postal law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature by mail,—with the active propagandism of demoralizing and licentious social theories,—and with the support of officials and other public representatives who are on good grounds believed to have been guilty of gross immoralities,—that it has been thereby unfitted for use by any organization which desires the support of the friends of "natural morality."

Voted, That for this reason the Directors of the National Liberal League of America recommend that the name of this organization be changed to "AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION," and they respectfully submit this recommendation to their constituent Auxiliary Liberal Leagues for consideration and action.

Voted, That, since it is inexpedient to call an Annual Congress of this League at the present time, this Board will deem itself authorized to make the proposed change of name on receiving approving votes to this effect from a majority of the Auxiliary Leagues.

Voted, That the Secretary be instructed to send a certified copy of these votes to the President and Secretary of each Auxiliary League, with a request for immediate action thereupon; and to report to this Board at his earliest convenience.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Directors of the National Liberal League of America, Feb. 6, 1880.

Whereas, A certified copy of the resolutions adopted by this Board on December 12, 1879, was duly sent by the Secretary to the President and Secretary of each constituent Auxiliary League; and

Whereas, The reasons therein given for recommending a change of name by this organization have been heartily and unanimously approved by all the constituent Leagues heard from at this date; and a majority of all the Leagues on our list of auxiliaries has approved the name of "American Liberal Union," while one of them has expressed a preference for the name of "National Secular Union," therefore,

Voted, That the name of the National Liberal League of America be, and hereby is, changed to AMERICAN LIBERAL UNION.

On the Choice of Books.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED TO THE STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH, APRIL 2, 1866.

BY THOMAS CARLYLE.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.]

In this university I learn from many sides that there is a great and considerable stir about endowments. Oh, I should have said in regard to book-reading, if it be so very important, how very useful would an excellent library be in every university! I hope that will not be neglected by those gentlemen who have charge of you; and, indeed, I am happy to hear that your library is very much improved since the time I knew it; and I hope it will go on improving more and more. You require money to do that, and you require also judgment in the selectors of the books, pious insight into what is really for the advantage of human souls, and the exclusion of all kinds of clap-trap books which merely excite the astonishment of foolish people. (Laughter.) Wise books,—as much as possible good books.

As I was saying, there appears to be a great demand for endowments,—an assiduous and praiseworthy industry for getting new funds collected for encouraging the ingenious youth of universities, especially in this the chief university of the country. ("Hear, hear.") Well, I entirely participate in everybody's approval of the movement. It is very desirable. It should be responded to, and one expects most assuredly will. At least, if it is not, it will be shameful to the country of Scotland, which never was so rich in money as at the present moment, and never stood so much in need of getting noble universities to counteract many influences that are springing up alongside of money. It should not be backward in coming forward in the way of endowments (a laugh),—at least, in rivalry to our rude old barbarous ancestors, as we have been pleased to call them. Such munificence as theirs is beyond all praise, to whom, I am sorry to say, we are not yet by any manner of means equal or approaching equality. (Laughter.) There is an over-abundance of money, and sometimes I cannot help thinking that, probably, never has there been at any other time in Scotland the hundredth part of the money that now is, or even the thousandth part; for wherever I go there is that gold-nuggeting (a laugh),—that prosperity.

Many men are counting their balances by millions. Money was never so abundant, and nothing that is good to be done with it. ("Hear, hear," and a laugh.) No man knows—or very few men know—what benefit to get out of his money. In fact, it too often is secretly a curse to him. Much better for him never to have had any. But I do not expect that generally to be believed. (Laughter.) Nevertheless, I should think it a beautiful relief to any man that has an honest purpose struggling in him to bequeath a handsome house of refuge, so to speak, for some meritorious man who may hereafter be born into the world, to enable him a little to get on his way. To do, in fact, as those old Norman kings whom I have described to you,—to raise a man out of the dirt and mud where he is getting trampled, unworthily on his part, into some kind of position where he may acquire the power to do some good in his generation. I hope that as much as possible will be done in that way; that efforts will not be relaxed till the thing is in a satisfactory state. At the same time, in regard to the classical department of things, it is to be desired that it were properly supported; that we could allow people to go and devote more leisure possibly to the cultivation of particular departments.

We might have more of this from Scotch universities than we have. I am bound, however, to say that it does not appear as if of late times endowment was the real soul of the matter. The English, for example, are the richest people for endowments on the face of the earth in their universities; and it is a remarkable fact that since the time of Bentley you cannot name anybody that has gained a great name in scholarship among them, or constituted a point of revolution in the pursuits of men in that way. The man that did that is a man worthy of being remembered among men, although he may be a poor man, and not endowed with worldly wealth. One man that actually did constitute a revolution was the son of a poor weaver in Saxony, who edited his "Tibullus" in Dresden in the room of a poor comrade, and who, while he was editing his "Tibullus," had to gather his peas-cod shells on the streets and boil them for his dinner. That was his endowment. But he was recognized soon to have done a great thing. His name was Heyne.

I can remember it was quite a revolution in my mind when I got hold of that man's book on Virgil. I found that for the first time I had understood him,—that he had introduced me for the first time into an insight of Roman life, and pointed out the circumstances in which these were written, and here was interpretation; and it has gone on in all manner of development, and has spread out into other countries.

Upon the whole, there is one reason why endowments are not given now as they were in old days, when they founded abbeys, colleges, and all kinds of things of that description, with such success as we know. All that has changed now. Why that has decayed away may in part be that people have become doubtful that colleges are now the real sources of that which I call wisdom, whether they are anything more—anything much more—than a cultivating of man in the specific arts. In fact, there has been a suspicion of that kind in the world for a long time. (A laugh.) That is an old saying, an old proverb, "An ounce of mother wit is worth a pound of clerg." (Laughter.) There is a suspicion that a an is perhaps not nearly so wise as he looks, because he has poured out speech so copiously. (Laughter.)

When the seven free Arts on which the old universities were based came to be modified a little in order to be convenient for, or to promote the wants of, modern society,—though perhaps some of them are obsolete enough even yet for some of us,—there arose feeling that mere vocalty, mere culture of speech, that is what comes out of a man, though he may be a great speaker, an eloquent orator, yet there is no real substance there,—if that is what was required and aimed at by the man himself, and by the community that set him upon becoming a learned man. Maid-servants, I hear people complaining, are getting instructed in the “ologies,” and so on, and are apparently totally ignorant of brewing, boiling, and baking (laughter); above all things, not taught what is necessary to be known, from the highest to the lowest,—strict obedience, humility, and correct moral conduct. Oh, it is a dismal chapter, all that, if one cuts into it!

What has been done by rushing after fine speech? I have written down some very fierce things about that, perhaps considerably more emphatic than I could wish them to be now; but they are deeply my conviction. (“Hear, hear.”) There is very great necessity indeed of getting a little more silent than we are. It seems to me the finest nations of the world—the English and the American—are going all away to wind and tongue. (Applause and laughter.) But it will appear sufficiently tragical by and by, long after I am away out of it. Silence is the eternal duty of a man. He won’t get to any real understanding of what is complex, and what is more than any other, pertinent to his interests, without maintaining silence. “Watch the tongue,” is a very old precept, and a most true one. I do not want to discourage any of you from your Demosthenes, and your studies of the niceties of language, and all that. Believe me, I value that as much as any of you. I consider it a very graceful thing, and a proper thing, for every human creature to know what the implement which he uses in communicating his thoughts is, and how to make the very utmost of it. I want you to study Demosthenes, and know all his excellences. At the same time, I must say that speech does not seem to me, on the whole, to have turned to any good account.

Why tell me that a man is a fine speaker, if it is not the truth that he is speaking? Phocion, who did not speak at all, was a great deal nearer hitting the mark than Demosthenes. (Laughter.) He used to tell the Athenians: “You can’t fight Philip. You have not the slightest chance with him. He is a man who holds his tongue; he has great disciplined armies; he can brag anybody you like in your cities here; and he is going on steadily with an unvarying aim toward his object; and he will infallibly beat any kind of men such as you, going on raging from shore to shore with all that rampant nonsense.” Demosthenes said to him one day, “The Athenians will get mad some day, and kill you.” “Yes,” Phocion says, “when they are mad; and you as soon as they get sane again.” (Laughter.)

It is also told about him, going to Messina on some deputation that the Athenians wanted on some kind of matter of an intricate and contentious nature, that Phocion went with some story in his mouth to speak about. He was a man of few words, no unveracity, and, after he had gone on telling the story a certain time, there was one burst of interruption. One man interrupted with something he tried to answer, and then another; and, finally, the people began bragging and bawling, and no end of debate, till it ended in the want of power in the people to say any more.

Phocion drew back altogether, struck dumb, and would not speak another word to any man; and he left it to them to decide in any way they liked.

It appears to me there is a kind of eloquence in that which is equal to anything Demosthenes ever said,—“Take your own way, and let me out altogether.” (Applause.)

All these considerations, and manifold more connected with them,—innumerable considerations, resulting from observation of the world at this moment,—have led many people to doubt of the salutary effect of vocal education altogether. I do not mean to say it should be entirely excluded; but I look to something that will take hold of the matter much more closely, and not allow it to slip out of our fingers and remain worse than it was. For if a good speaker—an eloquent speaker—is not speaking the truth, is there a more horrid kind of object in creation? (Loud cheers.) Of such speech I hear all manner and kind of people say it is excellent; but I care very little about how he said it, provided I understand it, and it be true. Excellent speaker! but what if he is selling me things that are untrue, that are not the fact about it, if he has formed a wrong judgment about it, if he has no judgment in his mind to form a right conclusion in regard to the matter? An excellent speaker of that kind is, as it were, saying, “Ho, every one that wants to be persuaded of the thing that is not true, come hither.” (Great laughter and applause.) I would recommend you to be very chary of that kind of excellent speech. (Renewed laughter.)

Well, all that being the too well-known product of our method of vocal education,—the mouth merely operating on the tongue of the pupil, and teaching him to wag it in a particular way (laughter),—it had made a great many thinking men entertain a very great distrust of this not very salutary way of procedure, and they have longed for some kind of practical way of working out the business. There would be room for a great deal of description about it, if I went into it; but I must content myself with saying that the most remarkable piece of reading that you may be recommended to take and try, if you can study, is a book by Goethe,—one of his last books, which he wrote when he was an old man, about seventy years of age—I think one of the most beautiful he ever wrote, full of mild wisdom, and which is found to be very touching by those who have eyes to discern and hearts to feel it. It is one of the pieces in Wilhelm Meister's Travels. I read it through many years ago; and, of course, I had to read into it very hard when I was translating it (applause), and it has always dwelt in my mind as about the most remarkable bit of writing that I have known to be executed in these late centuries. I have often said, there are ten pages of that which, if ambition had been my only rule, I would rather have written than have written all the books that have appeared since I came into the world. (Cheers.) Deep, deep is the meaning of what is said there. They turn on the Christian religion and the religious phenomena of Christian life—altogether sketched out in the most airy, graceful, delicately wise kind of way, so as to keep himself out of the common controversies of the street and of the forum, yet to indicate what was the result of things he had been long meditating upon. Among others, he introduces, in an aerial, flighty kind of way, here and there a touch which grows into a beautiful picture,—a scheme of entirely mute education, at least with no more speech than is absolutely necessary for what they have to do.

Three of the wisest men that can be got are met to consider what is the function which transcends all others in importance to build up the young generation, which shall be free from all that perilous stuff that has been weighing us down and clogging every step, and which is the only thing we can hope to go on with, if we would leave the world a little better, and not the worse of our having been in it for those who are to follow. The man who is the eldest of the three says to Goethe, “You give by nature to the well-formed children you bring into the world a great many precious gifts, and very frequently these are best of all developed by nature herself, with a very slight assistance where assistance is seen to be wise and profitable, and forbearance very often on the part of the overlooker of the process of education; but there is one thing that no child brings into the world with it, and without which all other things are of no use.” Wilhelm, who is there beside him, says, “What is that?” “All who enter the world want it,” says the eldest; “perhaps you yourself.” Wilhelm says, “Well, tell me what it is.” “It is,” says the eldest, “reverence—Ehrfurcht—Reverence! Honor done to those who are grander and better than you, without fear; distinct from fear.” Ehrfurcht,—“the soul of all religion that ever has been among men, or ever will be.” And he goes into practicality. He practically distinguishes the kinds of religion that are in the world, and he makes out three reverences. The boys are all trained to go through certain gesticulations, to lay their hands on their breast and look up to heaven, and they give their three reverences. The first and simplest is that of reverence for what is above us. It is the soul of all the Pagan religions; there is nothing better in man than that. Then there is reverence for what is around us or about us,—reverence for our equals, and to which he attributes an immense power in the culture of man. The third is reverence for what is beneath us—to learn to recognize in pain, sorrow, and contradiction, even in those things, odious as they are to flesh and blood—to learn that there lies in these a priceless blessing. And he defines that as being the soul of the Christian religion, the highest of all religions; a height, as Goethe says—and that is very true, even to the letter, as I consider—a height to which the human species was fated and enabled to attain, and from which, having once attained it, it can never retrograde. It cannot descend down below that permanently, Goethe’s idea is.

Often one thinks it was good to have a faith of that kind,—that always, even in the most degraded, sunken, and unbelieving times, he calculates there will be found some few souls who will recognize what that meant; and that the world, having once received it, there is no fear of its retrograding. He goes on then to tell us the way in which they seek to teach boys, in the sciences particularly, whatever the boy is fit for. Wilhelm left his own boy there, expecting they would make him a Master of Arts, or something of that kind; and when he came back for him he saw a thundering cloud of dust coming over the plain, of which he could make nothing. It turned out to be a tempest of wild horses, managed by young lads who had a turn for hunting with their grooms. His own son was among them, and he found that the breaking of colts was the thing he was most suited for. (Laughter.) This is what Goethe calls Art, which I should not make clear to you by any definition, unless it is clear already. (A laugh.) I would not attempt to define it as music, painting, and poetry, and so on; it is in quite a higher sense than the common one, and in which, I am afraid, most of our painters, poets, and music men would not pass muster. (A laugh.) He considers that the highest pitch to which human culture can go; and he watches with great industry how it is to be brought about with men who have a turn for it.

Very wise and beautiful it is. It gives one an idea that something greatly better is possible for man in the world. I confess it seems to me it is a shadow of what will come, unless the world is to come to a conclusion that is perfectly frightful; some kind of scheme of education like that, presided over by the wisest and most sacred men that can be got in the world, and watching from a distance,—a training in practicality at every turn; no speech in it except that speech that is to be followed by action, for that ought to be the rule as nearly as possible among them. For rarely should men speak at all, unless it is to say that thing that is to be done; and let him go and do his part in it, and to say no more about it. I should say there is nothing in the world you can conceive so difficult, prima facie, as that of getting a set of men gathered together,—rough, rude, and ignorant people,—gather them together, promise them a shilling a day, rank them up, give them very severe and sharp drill, and by bullying and drill—for the word “drill” seems as if it meant the treatment that would force them to learn—they learn what it is necessary to learn,—and there is the man, a piece of an animated machine, a wonder of wonders to look at. He will go and obey one man, and walk into the cannon’s mouth for him, and do anything whatever that is commanded of him by his general officer. And I believe all manner of things in this way could be done, if there were anything like the same attention bestowed. Very many things could be regimented and organized into a mute system of education that Goethe evidently adumbrates there. But I believe, when people look into it, it will be found that they will not be very long in trying to make some efforts in that direction; for the saving of human labor and the avoidance of human misery would be unaccountable, if it were set about and begun even in part.

Alas! it is painful to think how very far away it is—any fulfilment of such things; for I need not hide from you, young gentlemen,—and that is one of the last things I am going to tell you,—that you have got into a very troublous epoch of the world; and I don’t think you will find it improve the footing you have, though you have many advantages which we had not. You have careers open to you, by public examinations and so on, which is a thing much to be approved, and which we hope to see perfected more and more. All that was entirely unknown in my time, and you have many things to recognize as advantages. But you will find the ways of the world more anarchical than ever, I think. As far as I have noticed, revolution has come upon us. We have got into the age of revolutions. All kinds of things are coming to be subjected to fire, as it were; hotter and hotter the wind rises around everything.

Curious to say, now in Oxford and other places that used to seem to lie at anchor in the stream of time, regardless of all changes, they are getting into the highest humor of mutation, and all sorts of new ideas are getting afloat. It is evident that whatever is not made of asbestos will have to be burned in this world. It will not stand the heat it is getting exposed to. And in saying that it is but saying in other words that we are in an epoch of anarchy,—anarchy plus the constable. (Laughter.) There is nobody that picks one’s pocket without some policeman being ready to take him up. (Renewed laughter.) But in every other thing he is the son, not of Kosmos, but of Chaos. He is a disobedient and reckless and altogether a waste kind of object,—a commonplace man in these epochs; and the wiser kind of man—the select, of whom I hope you will be part—has more and more a set time to it to look forward, and will require to move with double wisdom; and will find, in short, that the crooked things that he has to pull straight in his own life, or round about, wherever he may be, are manifold, and will task all his strength wherever he may go.

But why should I complain of that either? for that is a thing a man is born to in all epochs. He is born to expend every particle of strength that God Almighty has given him in doing the work he finds he is fit for,—to stand it out to the last breath of life, and do his best. We are called upon to do that; and the reward we all get—which we are perfectly sure of, if we have merited it—is that we have got the work done, or at least that we have tried to do the work, for that is a great blessing in itself; and I should say there is not very much more reward than that going in this world. If the man gets meat and clothes, what matters it whether he have £10,000, or £10,000,000, or £70 a year. He can get meat and clothes for that; and he will find very little difference intrinsically, if he is a wise man.

I warmly second the advice of the wisest of men, “Don’t be ambitious; don’t be at all too desirous of success; be loyal and modest.” Cut down the proud towering thoughts that you get into you, or see they be pure as well as high. There is a nobler ambition than the gaining of all California would be, or the getting of all the suffrages that are on the planet just now. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

Finally, gentlemen, I have one advice to give you, which is practically of very great importance, though a very humble one.

I have no doubt you will have among you people ardently bent to consider life cheap, for the purpose of getting forward in what they are aiming at of high; and you are to consider throughout, much more than is done at present, that health is a thing to be attended to continually,—that you are to regard that as the very highest of all temporal things for you. (Applause.) There is no kind of achievement you could make in the world that is equal to perfect health. What are nuggets and millions? The French financier said, “Alas! why is there no sleep to be sold?” Sleep was not in the market at any quotation. (Laughter and applause.)

It is a curious thing that I remarked long ago, and have often turned in my head, that the old word for “holy” in the German language—heilig—also means “healthy.” And so Heilbronn means “holy-well,” or “healthy-well.” We have in the Scotch “hale”; and I suppose our English word “whole”—with a “w”—all of one piece, without any hole in it—is the same word. I find that you could not get any better definition of what “holy” really is than “healthy”—completely healthy.” Mens sana in corpore sano. (Applause.)

A man with his intellect a clear, plane geometric mirror, brilliantly sensitive of all objects and impressions around it, and imaging all things in their correct proportions,—not twisted up into convex or concave, and distorting everything, so that he cannot see the truth of the matter without endless groping and manipulation,—healthy, clear, and free, and all round about him,—we never can attain that at all. In fact, the operations we have got into are destructive of it. You cannot, if you are going to do any decisive intellectual operation—if you are going to write a book—at least, I never could—without getting decidedly made ill by it, and really you must, if it is your business—and you must follow out what you are at—and it sometimes is at the expense of health. Only remember at all times to get back as fast as possible out of it into health, and regard the real equilibrium as the centre of things. You should always look at the heilig, which means holy, and holy means healthy.

Well, that old etymology,—what a lesson it is against certain gloomy, austere, ascetic people, that have gone about as if this world were all a dismal prison-house! It has, indeed, got all the ugly things in it that I have been alluding to; but there is an eternal sky over it, and the blessed sunshine, verdure of spring, and rich autumn, and all that in it too. Piety does not mean that a man should make a sour face about things, and refuse to enjoy in moderation what his Maker has given. Neither do you find it to have been so with old Knox. If you look into him, you will find a beautiful Scotch humor in him, as well as the grimmest and sternest truth when necessary, and a great deal of laughter. We find really some of the sunniest glimpses of things come out of Knox that I have seen in any man; for instance, in his History of the Reformation, which is a book I hope every one of you will read,—a glorious book.

On the whole, I would bid you stand up to your work, whatever it may be, and not be afraid of it,—not in sorrows or contradiction to yield, but pushing on toward the goal. And don't suppose that people are hostile to you in the world. You will rarely find anybody designedly doing you ill. You may feel often as if the whole world is obstructing you, more or less; but you will find that to be because the world is travelling in a different way from you, and rushing on in its own path. Each man has only an extremely good-will to himself—which he has a right to have—and is moving on toward his object. Keep out of literature as a general rule, I should say also. (Laughter.) If you find many people who are hard and indifferent to you in a world that you consider to be inhospitable and cruel,—as often, indeed, happens to a tender-hearted, stirring young creature,—you will also find there are noble hearts who will look kindly on you, and their help will be precious to you beyond price. You will get good and evil as you go on, and have the success that has been appointed to you.

I will wind up with a small bit of verse that is from Goethe also, and has often gone through my mind. To me it has the tone of a modern psalm in it in some measure. It is sweet and clear. The clearest of sceptical men had not anything like so clear a mind as that man had,—freer from cant and misdirected notion of any kind than any man in these ages has been. This is what the poet says:—

The future hides in it
Gladness and sorrow:
We press still thorow;
Nought that abides in it
Daunting us—Onward!

And solemn before us,
Veiled, the dark Portal,
Goal of all mortal
Stars silent rest o'er us,—
Graves under us, silent.

While earnest thou gazest
Comes boding of terror,
Come phantasm and error;
Perplexes the bravest
With doubt and misgiving.

But heard are the voices,
Heard are the sages,
The Worlds and the Ages:
"Choose well; your choice is Brief, and yet endless."

Here eyes do regard you
In Eternity's stillness;
Here is all fullness,
Ye brave, to reward you.
Work, and despair not.*

The original runs as follows:—

Die Zukunft decket
Schmerzen und Glücke.
Schrittweis' dem Blicke,
Doch ungeschrecket
Dringen wir vorwärts.

Und schwer und schwerer
Hängt eine Hülle
Mit Ehrfurcht. Stille
Ruhn oben die Sterne
Und unten die Gräber.

Betracht' sie genauer,
Und siehe, so melden
Im Busen der Helden
Sich wandelnde Schauer
Und ernste Gefühle.

Doch rufen von drüben
Die Stimmen der Geister,

*Originally published in Carlyle's Past and Present (London, 1843), p. 318, and introduced there by the following words:—

"My candid readers, we will march out of this Third Book with a rhythmic word of Goethe's on our tongue; a word which perhaps has already sung itself, in dark hours and in bright, through many a heart. To me, finding it devout yet wholly credible and veritable, full of piety yet free of cant; to me joyfully finding much in it, and joyfully missing so much in it, this little snatch of music, by the greatest German man, sounds like a stanza in the grand Road Song and Marching Song of our great Teutonic kindred—wending, wending, valiant and victorious, through the undiscovered Depths of Time!"

Die Stimmen der Meister:
Versäumt nicht zu läsen
Die Kräfte des Guten.

Hier winden sich Kronen
In ewiger Stille.
Die sollen mit Fülle
Die Thätigen lohnen!
Wir heissen euch hoffen.

One last word. Wir heissen euch hoffen,—we bid you be of hope. Adieu for this time.

THE ITHACA LIBERAL LEAGUE.

We publish here the record of recent action by this League, simply as part of a history which will certainly be reviewed with keen eyes at some day not very far distant:—

Record of Proceedings.

The Liberal League of Tompkins County, N.Y., held its regular monthly meeting at the Unitarian Church parlors, Ithaca, Monday evening, Dec. 1, 1879, the President, Dr. J. Winslow, in the chair. The attendance was large, embracing members from several neighboring towns. A letter was received from Hon. Elizur Wright, of Boston, President of the National Liberal League, saying: "The subject proposed for discussion interests me so much that I should attend, did not a business engagement made for the same day prevent"; also a letter from Mr. J. H. Robinson, of Trumansburg, expressing his views upon the subject.

The debate upon the question, "Are we in danger of a moral interregnum?" was participated in by Rev. H. C. Badger, Prof. James Johannot, Prof. J. E. Oliver, Prof. S. H. Gage, Mr. Starr, and Mr. Roberts, commanding the greatest interest for two hours, when it was cut off by important business.

The Chair stated that a recent public letter of the Secretary of the National Liberal League [Truth Seeker, Nov. 22, 1879], showing that he entertained, and had in years past put in practice, theories of morals at variance with those upon which the great body of the best and wisest consider the safety of society to rest,—and the action of the President of the National League upon his proffered resignation, with the principle upon which it was based,—had received the careful consideration of the Board of Directors of the Tompkins County League. They had requested Prof. Oliver to prepare a series of resolutions upon the subject, which were now submitted with their unanimous approval.

Prof. Oliver read the resolutions as follows:—
WHEREAS, The President of the National Liberal League, in an official letter dated Nov. 22, 1879 [Truth Seeker, Nov. 29, 1879], refuses the proffered resignation of Albert L. Rawson, Secretary of the League, and uses this language: "I shall regard every man whose own standard [of morals] does not lead him into practical conflict with the constitutional laws of the land as much entitled to . . . honor in the League as I am,"—thus virtually declaring the principle that a practical standard of conduct above public reproach is no necessary qualification for office and honor in the League; and

WHEREAS, We regard the Liberal cause as eminently a moral cause, whose strength lies in its appeal to conscience and justice, and in the personal character of its representatives; and

WHEREAS, We think that the good of society demands that only those whose conduct conforms to the highest standard be held up as deserving of the highest honor; and

WHEREAS, In our card of Feb. 22, 1879, printed in THE INDEX of March 13, 1879, we have said: "Unless some action of the parent League, or of its Directors, shall tend to put us in a false position, we see no reason for leaving it, nor can we do so honorably"; and

WHEREAS, The above official action of the President of the parent League, with the reason assigned by him therefor, does, in our opinion, put us in a false position by committing the League, in view of the public, to principles which we deem injurious to public morals as well as fatal to the success of our cause; therefore,

Resolved, That we hereby sever our connection with the National Liberal League, and that we will make such changes in our Constitution as this may necessitate; but that we will continue to work, both individually and as an organization, with unabated earnestness, for the general objects of the League,—secularity of the government, and equality of rights with respect to religion.

Resolved, That while protesting against the principle declared in President Wright's decision, we have the highest respect for his pure and noble character, and admiration for his services to humanity.

Resolved, That though leaving, for the reason assigned, the National Liberal League, we believe that it as a body, and also the great majority of its members individually, are entirely opposed to weakening any of the real safeguards of morality, and are honestly desirous of promoting the welfare of society.

Resolved, That we deem the charges made against the National Liberal League upon these points wholly unjust, as also the additional charge of bad faith made by the seceding body at Syracuse; and that, because the "National Liberal League of America" is founded upon an indorsement of these charges, we cannot affiliate with it.

These resolutions involving a change in the Constitution, they could not be acted upon until the next meeting; and, in accordance with the Directors' recommendation, their further consideration was postponed to that time. Adjourned.

W. R. LAZENBY, Secretary.

Record of Proceedings.

The Liberal League of Tompkins County held its regular meeting Monday evening, Feb. 2, 1880. The subject of Liberalism in its relation to character was discussed by Prof. Oliver, Judge Brewer, Dr. Franklin, Prof. Roberts, Mr. Morrison and Rev. Mr. Badger.

The Directors reported, through Prof. Oliver, that the record of the last meeting, Dec. 1, 1879, including their proposed resolutions of separation from the National League, had been sent to the officers and other prominent members of that League, as well as to all those Auxiliaries whose addresses were known. Their object in this had been twofold,—to call attention to the subject discussed in the resolutions, and to learn, as far as might be, what was the prevailing sentiment in the League. Numerous replies had been received, either by letter or in the Liberal papers. Among them was a public "Correction and Disclaimer," by Hon. Elizur Wright, President of the National League (Truth Seeker, Jan. 3, 1880), referring to certain misconceptions of his official letter of Nov. 22, 1879, upon which the proposed resolutions of separation were based, and giving an explanation so thoroughly satisfactory as to remove all reason for action upon that ground. The Directors therefore asked leave to withdraw their resolutions. While so doing, they desired emphatically to reiterate their expression of "respect for Mr. Wright's pure and noble character, and admiration for his services to humanity."

President Wright's "Disclaimer" was here read, and it was voted that leave to withdraw the resolutions be granted.

Some twenty-five of the replies alluded to were now read either in full or in part.

Mr. Charles H. White said that the discussion in this community, upon the resolutions just now withdrawn, had revealed great interest in the position and work of the Tompkins County League; and that it had become evident that many Liberals, who were not now members of the League, would be glad to aid in its work, if only it were an independent body, generally recognized as responsible neither to nor for any other organization. This independence would not prevent it from cooperating freely with other organizations for liberal work whenever, in any special case, it should deem such cooperation conducive to the highest success. He therefore moved the appointment of a committee to consider this question, and report at the next meeting.

The motion was carried; and the Chair appointed as such committee Messrs. C. H. White, Stephen Brewer, B. W. Franklin, J. E. Oliver, and W. A. Anthony.

Voted to adjourn for one week to hear the report of this committee.

The League met Feb. 9, 1880, according to adjournment.

The committee appointed at the last meeting reported unanimously the following resolutions, which, after full discussion, were adopted by the League without dissent:—

Resolved, That in our opinion we can most effectively aid the cause of State secularization, as well as the kindred interests of social science and political reform, by acting as an independent Liberal club; and that therefore we hereby dissolve our connection with the National Liberal League.

Resolved, That we heartily sympathize with all who are striving to promote free thought and State secularity, and who recommend their principles by exemplary and noble lives; and that, believing this to be the spirit of the great body of our late associates in the National Liberal League, we will gladly cooperate with them in all measures that seem to us wisely calculated to advance these objects.

Resolved, That the purposes of this club shall be: to secure equality of rights for all with respect to religion, and the complete freedom of the government from religious or anti-religious bias; to discuss ethical, educational, social, political, and other questions in a scientific spirit; and to promote such practical reforms as shall conduce to virtue and human welfare.

Resolved, That the club, as such, shall not commit itself for or against any purely religious or theological views.

Voted, That the same committee be continued, with instructions to report at an adjourned meeting, one week from to-night, such modifications of the Constitution as may be required by the above action. Adjourned.

Met Feb. 16, 1880, according to adjournment.

The committee on the Constitution reported an amended form, which, after some modification, was adopted as follows:—

Constitution.

ARTICLE I.—The name of this association shall be THE RADICAL CLUB OF TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.

ART. II. § 1.—The purposes of the club shall be: to secure equality of rights for all with respect to religion, and the complete freedom of the government from religious or anti-religious bias; to discuss ethical, educational, social, political, and other questions in a scientific spirit; and to promote such practical reforms as shall conduce to virtue and human welfare.

§ 2.—The Club, as such, shall not commit itself for or against any purely religious or theological views.

ART. III. § 1.—Any person may become a member by signing this Constitution and making his first semi-annual payment.

§ 2.—Each member shall pay from one dollar to five dollars a year, as he may elect, in semi-annual instalments, dating from his admission. When practicable, he shall notify the Treasurer at the time each payment what sum may be expected for the next.

§ 3.—Any member failing to pay the minimum dues for more than one year shall forfeit his membership one month after notification by the Treasurer.

ART. IV. § 1.—The officers shall be a President, Vice-President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, the Chairman of a Committee on Work, the Chairman of a Committee on the Press, and the Chairman of a Committee on Membership and Finance. All these shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting; shall hold their offices one year, or until others are elected; and shall constitute a Board of Directors, which, subject to instruction by the Club, shall have the general management of its affairs. The three standing committees herein named shall, with the exception of their Chairmen, be appointed by the Directors from among the other members of the Club.

§ 2.—The President (or, in his absence, the Vice-President) and the Secretary shall act, respectively, as Chairman and Secretary of the Board of Directors; and shall have power to call a meeting of that Board at any time.

§ 3.—The Treasurer shall notify members of unpaid dues within one month after they are payable, and shall notify the Secretary of all lapses of membership. He shall present a detailed report to the Club at the close of his term of office.

All appropriations from the treasury shall be by vote of the Board of Directors; and all orders on the treasury shall be signed by the President and Secretary.

§ 4.—The Committee on Work shall keep informed, and shall report to the Directors, and with the approval of the Directors to the Club, as to any opportunities for advancing the objects of the Club. As a part of their duty, they shall note and report upon the condition of the public institutions in this County, with any improvements that, in their judgment, can be made therein.

They shall also act, under the instructions of the Directors or of the Club, in carrying out any plans of work that may be determined upon.

§ 5.—The Committee on the Press shall report to the Directors any discussions of those subjects to which the Club chiefly devotes itself, and any misstatements as to the purpose and spirit of the Liberal movement or of the Club, which may appear in the public prints.

§ 6.—The Committee on Membership and Finance shall solicit persons who sympathize with the purposes of the Club, and whose characters deserve respect, to aid in its work, by becoming members or otherwise.

The Committee shall also devise measures for raising funds to carry on the work of the Club.

They shall report frequently to the Directors.

ART. V. § 1.—The regular meetings shall be held monthly from October to June inclusive.

§ 2.—The regular meeting for February shall be the annual meeting for the election of officers.

§ 3.—The Directors may at any time call a special meeting, stating its object and giving one week's notice.

ART. VI.—Amendments to this Constitution may be made at any regular meeting by a three-fourths vote of all the members present; but no amendment shall be made, unless its substance shall have been announced in the notice of the meeting which is to act upon it.

Several new members joined the Club, after which the following officers were elected for the coming year:—

President, Dr. John Winslow; Vice-President, Mr. D. B. Morton, of Groton; Secretary, Mr. Charles H. White; Treasurer, Miss L. A. Wheelock; Chairman of Committee on Work, Dr. B. W. Franklin; Chairman of Committee on the Press, Rev. H. C. Badger; Chairman of Committee on Membership and Finance, Prof. J. E. Oliver.

Adjourned. W. R. LAZENBY, Sec'y.

ROMAN CATHOLICISM AND LIBERTY.

The Church of Rome has a clear theory of liberty. Its own is the liberty to teach, backed by the divine command, "Go teach all nations": that of all others is to obey. We cannot deny that the highest freedom possible to a rational being consists in voluntary subjection to rightful law. Thus liberty is distinguished from anarchy. The intelligent Catholic's first principle is that the only law rightfully supreme is God's law as interpreted by the Church. As Cardinal Manning puts it in his recent paper in the North American Review: "Authority is an imperishable element in the condition and history of man. It is not of human creation, but in itself divine. As St. Paul declares: 'Let every soul be subject to higher powers, for there is no power but of God; and those that are ordained of God. Therefore he that resisteth the power resisteth the ordinance of God. And they that resist purchase to themselves damnation.'" Father Ramière, a noted French ecclesiastic, in his able article recently translated for the Catholic World, on "The Catholic Church and Modern Liberties," frankly says: "The first principle of Christian law is the social royalty of Jesus Christ: the principle of modern law is the independence of the social from the religious order. Following the first principle, nations as well as individuals must submit to the evangelical law interpreted by the Church: following the second, religion is a purely individual affair, and the State should remain neutral with regard to Christianity as to all other religions." Father Ramière, who is warmly indorsed by our American Father Hecker, in his editorial comments, laments that the revolutionary principle of modern liberty is so clearly in the ascendancy. "The conspiracy which has for its object to remove from Jesus Christ, first, the empire of society, and, afterward, that of souls, has accomplished the first of these two enterprises. Christendom no longer exists: it has given place to the universal reign of social anti-Christianism."

Cardinal Manning asserts that modern society is "the old society of Christendom mutilated by the character forced upon it by the last three hundred years. . . . the political society of the natural order, fallen from the unity of faith, communion, and obedience to the divine voice of the Church, revolutionary in its political creed and practice, and either in open usurpation or in culpable connivance at the usurpation of the sacred rights and sovereignty of the vicar of Christ."

Hence a thorny problem for devout and honest Catholics, what shall they do with modern liberty, politics, education?

The peril, says Father Ramière, is equal, of withdrawing or of mixing in the fight. If we withdraw, we leave the forces of society in the hands of the enemies of the Church. If, on the other hand, we accept public functions, we run great risk of compromising our faith and conscience, both of which reprobate the underlying principle of the laws which these functions execute.

We see at once the dilemma in which Catholic leaders place themselves in consenting, for instance, to act on school committees. Cardinal Manning says: "The social and political evils which are undermining Christian society culminate in one master evil,—State education,—the formation of men without Christ and without God in the world, and that is the truest description of paganism. . . . Nevertheless, the Church never withdraws from the State as such, which would be to abandon it to its own maladies and mortality; but continues always to save and uphold it; and, without taking the contagion, it is in contact with its maladies to heal them. For this cause, while it permits the sons of heretics to frequent its own schools, it forbids Catholic parents to send their sons to the schools of those who are out of the faith."

Father Scully, of Cambridgeport, is traditionally and logically right, if not practically and Jesuitically wise. We honor him for the frankness and courage of his convictions. His superior, Archbishop Williams, has precisely the same convictions. It is only a temporary question as to the best strategy of the fight.

"Apparently," says Father Ramière, "there is no place for us among the divers political parties. Obligated to fight all around, we must resign ourselves to the fate of having all for foes. Alliances with them would seem to sacrifice something of our principles and give grounds for suspecting our sincerity. And yet not necessarily,—the holy see has never sanctioned so absolute an interdiction." The best horn of the dilemma then, thinks the French father, is for Catholics to ally themselves with that political party which has the most chance of promoting Catholic success. And Catholic success is simply the supreme right of the Church to "teach all nations" the "social royalty of Jesus Christ." The "modern liberty" of teaching in the name of the State is, in the Catholic view, atheistic. As Father Ramière says: "It reaches to God himself, and strikes him. It is against God that it is directed from first to last, since it only strikes us as we make profession of faith in and bear witness to the word of God."

And so the conflict is irrepressible. There is no permanent conciliation. It is a religious war, at least on the part of the devout Catholic, which ranges in the lowest depths of the conscience. He says, we must obey God rather than man. This modern liberty is atheistic. "It is evident," says Father Ramière, "that, if God has spoken to man, he is compelled to obey his orders, and to proclaim the necessity of accomplishing them; in a word, to act as the Catholic Church has been acting for eighteen centuries in regard to the word which it knows to be divine." We admire frankness, clearness, and sincerity; and these qualities mark the utterances of both the French priest and the English cardinal. They are significant, too, as being the latest and the ablest. There is no ground left for mistaking the firm position of the Catholic Church in regard to modern liberty. Its position is that there is no true liberty but Christian liberty, and that is defined and limited by Christian law, "the basis of all morality, all legislation, and all social order." This Christian law is interpreted and promulgated by the Church, "which has been divinely established on the earth ('ite docete') to teach, define, and defend it," and whose visible and legitimate head is "the sovereignty of the vicar of Christ." But, in carrying on this irrepressible conflict, Father Ramière resents the slander that Catholics would in this age choke up liberty by doges of Venice, or St. Bartholomew's days, or auto da fés. He maintains that the weapons must not be carnal, but spiritual. The work of the Church is not to force, but to convert society. The victory can only be won by "the free and unanimous consent of society itself." The issue must be left to free discussion and experience. Judged by these tests, it is his opinion that Protestantism and anti-Christianism of every stripe are fast losing the day. If so, and if this be the arena and these the weapons, it is a fair fight. Fair statements, a manly defence, an even temper, free discussion (the Republican's columns are open to both sides), unveiled history, the precise facts both of doctrine and experience,—let the fight proceed: the truth will win.—Springfield Republican, Feb. 23.

A BOSTON PAPER SAYS: A butterfly was caught at the South End yesterday. It may be safe enough to catch a butterfly at the south end, but, when you go to grasp a wasp, you want to catch it at the north end.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, }
Dec. 4, 1879.

My dear —, You want money to be plenty, the rate of interest to be low; at the same time you want the money to be good. You can only have this state of things when there is confidence in the stability of the currency. Capital will not go where it is uncertain in what currency debts will be paid next month or next year. If the legal tender for debts depends on the uncertain action of Congress there will be a want of confidence. The only constitutional legal tender is gold and silver. Depart from that, and confidence is gone. All the world now believes that investments in America are likely to be profitable. A sound financial policy will bring us money from all the commercial nations of the earth. In good times prepare for hard times; in good times pay debts. The legal-tender notes are debts. Let them be paid by the coin in the Treasury and the coin that is coming in from abroad and it will not contract the circulation. Let our ship be headed in the right direction. It is a sound policy which has brought good times; the same policy will continue good times. Sincerely, R. B. HAYES.

Poetry.

KEATS.

Full late in life I found thee, glorious Keats!
Some chance-blown verse had visited my ear
And careless eye, once in some sliding year,
Like some fair-plumaged bird one rarely meets;

And when it came that o'er thy page I bent,
A sudden gladness smote upon my blood;
Wonder and joy, an aromatic flood,
Distilled from an enchanted firmament.

And on this flood I floated, hours and hours,
Unconscious of the world's perplexing din,—
Its blackened crust of misery and sin,—
Rocked in a shallop of elysian flowers.

All melodies of earth and heaven are thine;
That one so young such music could rehearse
As swells the undulations of thy verse
Is what Hyperion only might define.

The voices of old pines, the lulling song
Of silver-crested waterfalls, the sweep
Of symphonies that swell the booming deep
To thy immortal minstrelsy belong.

Nor less the whispered harmony that falls,
Like twilight dew, from heaven's starry arch
For gentle souls that listen to the march
Of airy footfalls in ethereal halls.

Unhappy, happy Keats! A bitter-sweet
Was thy life's dream; death grinning at thy heels,
While Fame, before thee, smiled her grand appeals,
Tempting to dizzy heights thy winged feet.

Methinks thou didst resemble (over-bold
May be the fancy thy Endymion,—
Now charmed with earth-born beauty and anon
Finding some imperfection in the mould,

He sued a heaven-born Splendor to allay
The hunger and the fever of his heart;
And thus to Cynthia he did impart
The fearful secret of his misery.

And thou, impassioned poet, never, never
Did other mortal kneel at beauty's shrine
With any offering fairer than the line,
"A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

Oh, had I missed this Hippocrene, and slept
Without full measure of the choicest draught
That ever gods or men divinely quaffed,
Some pitying angel o'er my loss had wept,

And would remind me in bright ages hence—
Glancing to earth from some celestial height—
That nothing in his world of chaste delight
My ignorance of Keats could recompense.

GEORGE MARTIN.

—New Dominion Monthly.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 6.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc. No money is acknowledged here which is not sent to and for the Index Association.

E. D. Stark, $1.30; D. Ferguson, $5; W. R. James, $3.20; American News Co., $5.36; W. H. Fitch, $3.25; Dennis Murphy, $3; Dr. W. S. Leach, $4.20; David B. Bates, $6.40; James McGrath, $3.20; Thos. J. Houston, $3.20; Geo. E. Jewett, $3.20; Rev. J. S. Gilbert, $5.46; W. A. Clark, $1; Luther Woods, $3; L. F. Robinson, $2; Arthur M. Lee, $13.20; William Jones, $1.60; A. Hale, $3.20; Adolph Werner, $3.20; H. L. Higginson, $6.40; S. F. Schild, $5.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, MARCH 11, 1880.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CENNEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, JAMES E. OLIVER, MRS. SARA A. UNDERWOOD, Editorial Contributors.

Seven Ethical Laws of Rationalism.

Rationalism is recognition of the natural SOVEREIGNTY OF REASON in all matters of belief and practice. It is equally opposed to the Sovereignty of the Individual (Individualism, moral irresponsibility, anarchy) and to the Sovereignty of Society (Communism, moral tyranny, absolutism of Church or State); but it recognizes at the same time the Sovereignty of the Individual in his Individual Concerns, and the Sovereignty of Society in its Social Concerns, reconciled and united in the UNIVERSAL SOVEREIGNTY OF REASON. It is the indissoluble synthesis of liberty and law, the necessary condition of progress and order. It lies at the foundation of republican polity, formulated as Individual Government for Individual Ends, Town Government for Town Ends, County Government for County Ends, State Government for State Ends, National Government for National Ends. It equally lies at the foundation of science, civilization, and Free Religion. It has seven fundamental ethical laws—three of Individuality, three of Society, and one of Ultimate Jurisdiction.

I. Law of Individual Rational Existence.

Every mature rational being has the right and duty to govern himself by his own reason in all his individual concerns. This is the principle of personal self-government, "private judgment," or individual reason.

II. Law of Individual Self-Defence.

Every rational being has the right to defend himself against all encroachments upon his individual self-government. This is the right of resistance to aggression.

III. Law of Individual Non-Aggression.

Every rational being has the duty to refrain from encroaching upon the individual self-government of others, either by force or fraud. This is the principle limiting "private judgment."

IV. Law of Social Rational Existence.

Society (or the community of all rational beings) has the right and duty to govern itself by its common reason in all its common concerns. This is the principle of republican self-government, or social reason.

V. Law of Social Self-Defence.

Society has the right to defend itself against all encroachments upon its social self-government. This is the right of revolution as against tyrants and of self-protection as against criminals—the right of holding aggressors responsible to social reason.

VI. Law of Social Non-Aggression.

Society has the duty to maintain the three laws of individuality in full vigor, and to refrain from violating them. This is the principle limiting social reason.

VII. Law of Ultimate Jurisdiction.

1. The "private judgment" of the individual is the final appeal in all his individual concerns.
2. The "social reason" of society is the final appeal in all its general concerns, and also in cases of ultimate disagreement between individuals.
3. The "social reason" of society is represented in each particular case by the Consensus of the Competent in that class of cases; i.e., by the concurrent verdict of all who are fitted by general capacity and special knowledge to understand it best. If the competent are divided, the question remains open; if they are unanimous, it is decided.

SPECIAL DONATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP FEES

IN RESPONSE TO RECENT CIRCULAR OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In order to put the plan of work, stated in the circular, into operation, the Executive Committee of the Association have decided that at least $2,000 should be secured. But to insure the success of the experiment beyond a single year, a much larger sum is desired: $5,000 will not be too much.

Acknowledged March 4.....	$1,740.00
ARMAND PIONNIE, Newark, N.J.	1.00
F. B. PARSE, " "	1.00
I. W. FRANKEL, " "	1.00
N. DERRY, " "	1.00
Dr. S. S. LYON, " "	1.00
A. B. GENUNG, " "	1.00
Mrs. A. B. GENUNG, " "	1.00
F. KEIB, " "	1.00
F. S. GENUNG, Paterson, N.J.	1.00
EDWARD B. HYDE, New York.	5.00
JAMES GOLDSMITH, " "	5.00
C. N. WAYLAND, " "	5.00
LOUIS STINER, " "	2.00
Dr. R. G. WIENER, " "	1.00
FREDERICK HUSE, " "	10.00
Mrs. L. C. BULLARD, " "	5.00
Mrs. HANNAH HART, " "	1.00
Mrs. BUNNELL, " "	5.00
THOMAS JONAS, " "	5.00
MORRIS ARNOLD, " "	2.00
L. M. KAHN, " "	1.00
JULIUS ADLER, " "	2.00
ISAAC SCHUER, " "	1.00
JOSEPH H. LOUIS, " "	5.00
Total.....	$1,804.00

WILLIAM J. POTTER,
Secretary F. R. A.

THE TERM-SYSTEM AS THE GREAT Foe OF DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT.

In a speech delivered to a large public audience at Phoenix Hall, Rockland, Mass., October 14, 1879, General Benjamin F. Butler said:—

"Our Constitution says—and it was framed with all the wisdom of our fathers, and is the best political document upon the whole that the wisdom of man ever devised—that the frequency of elections is necessary as a safeguard for the people. Our elections come so often that we are apt to consider them as a matter of course. We don't think how great is the privilege we enjoy. No other people on the face of the earth have the high privileges which we enjoy of meeting together and consulting as to the laws we shall make and who as our servants shall execute those laws. In other lands, law-making is given over to kings and princes, emperors and nobles; but here we are all sovereigns in our own right, and as a rule the ballot is never unfairly or unjustly used by the masses of mankind. Therefore, I say, we are about business the highest and most important given to men."

This opinion that "the frequency of elections is necessary as a safeguard for the people" was the cause of the original adoption by the country of the short-term system of office-holding, and is still the cause of its retention. It was supposed that power would be permanently vested in the people, and permanently secured to them, by limiting the tenure of office to short periods, and compelling office-holders to obtain at frequent intervals a fresh suffrage of approval from their constituents, as the condition of their continued exercise of power. It was supposed that usurpation would thus be rendered impossible, while the best possible service would be guaranteed. In short, it was supposed that the evils of hereditary power, from which our forefathers had suffered so severely as to prefer a long and bloody war of revolution to any further endurance of them, could only be escaped by the term-system, and that this system was the sheet-anchor of genuine democratic government.

We frankly confess that we had inherited and accepted this traditional opinion, until the powerful arguments of Colonel Stickney, as set forth in his True Republic, caused us to perceive that it rested on weak grounds, and that the existence of truly democratic government is to-day chiefly threatened by the term-system. It had never occurred to us to question the truth of the traditional opinion until it was challenged by this robust and vigorous thinker; and we conceive it to be a real public service to call the attention of our countrymen to his book in all possible ways. He is a thorough believer in universal suffrage, and in the honesty and capacity of the people as a whole; he is not deceived by that plausible humbug, the proposition to establish an educational qualification of suffrage; he grounds his recommendations on the actual experience of the Anglo-Saxon race, and not on any fine-spun abstractions of mere theory. He shows that the "tyranny of party" to-day deprives the people at large of all real political power beyond a mere veto on intolerably bad nominations. In his own terse and nervous language,—

"The tyranny of kings has been often overthrown by one people or another in the history of nations. The tyranny of party is the most dangerous enemy freedom can have. No people has ever yet conquered it. These single royal tyrants, with only one life, are puny things; but this immense monster, party, which is immortal, has the people's own strength." [Page 141.]

"In theory and in law, the people elect their rulers. In fact, these rulers are not elected by the people, but are appointed by the party leaders. The real working of the government is controlled, not by the officials whom the people nominally elect, but by the party managers who really appoint these officials. These party managers hold, as such, no position known to the law; they have no duties or responsibilities under the law. Usually they hold some official position for the purpose of drawing a salary from the people. But their real power they have, not from their official position, but because they control the party policy, and, above all, the party nominations. And they hold their real power in the State, not for any short term of years, but without any limit whatever as to time, simply until their tyranny becomes unbearable, and we have a peaceful revolution at the polls." [Page 100.]

This is a picture drawn to the life. The evil here is the practical disfranchisement of the people; and its root is the term-system of office-holding. That this is true appears from these facts:—

1. The term-system as we have it is a system of short tenures; and that means frequent elections.

2. Frequency of elections creates a great host of aspirants for office, and office-holding becomes a mere "struggle for life" between the ins and the outs.

3. This "struggle for life" obliges office-holders to give their main attention not to discharging well the duties of their posts, but to carrying the next election.

4. The effect of this abnormal training is to create an almost professional class of electioneers, who manipulate primaries and pre-primaries so skilfully as to exclude the citizen-voters from all real participation in the making of nominations.

5. In this manner the "Machine" comes into existence, falls under the control of a very few leaders known as "party managers" or "bosses," and acquires such enormous influence in politics as to absorb all real political power, to the virtual disfranchisement of the people.

6. The consequence of all this is to substitute loyalty to party for loyalty to country in the minds of "practical politicians," to convert legislation into a mere means of securing party victories, and to pave the way for terrible civil convulsions whenever parties become pretty evenly balanced.

This is the evil fruit of the TERM-SYSTEM. It is childish to expect any other fruit so long as the term-system continues. The appalling dangers of the Presidential election of 1876, and the ominous struggle in Maine during the winter just elapsed, warn the American people what to expect in the near future, unless the term-system is speedily abolished. The evils of this system are developing with frightful rapidity. "Civil service reform" will be not only an impossibility, but an utter absurdity, until the term-system shall have been replaced by the system of tenure during good behavior. The great army of office-hunters is kept in existence by the frequency of elections and appointments; and by nothing else; they live in the hope of succeeding next year, if they fail this year; they could not afford to wait and to scheme, if elections and appointments were comparatively infrequent; they would be compelled to go to work for a livelihood, if it were not for the hope of "spoils" engendered and fostered by the existing system. The coexistence of the term-system and of true civil service reform is absolutely and absurdly impossible; the cherished dream of competitive examinations grows out of a fatally mistaken diagnosis of a disease far more deeply seated than the excellent men imagine who rely on that method as a cure. Just so long as the Machine exists (and it will exist just so long as the term-system continues), it will be impossible to establish competitive examinations on a large scale; and, even if they should be established, the Machine would infallibly find means of compelling the examiners to do its own arbitrary will. The Machine will only grow greater, more powerful, more reckless, and more defiantly independent of the will of the people, until the term-system shall have been abolished. The continued existence of democratic government, in fact if not in name, depends on the ability of the people to strangle this monster Machine, to overthrow the tyranny of party, and to substitute tenure during good behavior for that almanac tenure which Colonel Stickney, with equal wit and truth, satirizes as "the astronomical system" of office-holding.

Whoever, in fine, has at heart the permanence of genuine democracy—that is, of universal suffrage as a successful means of executing the real will of the people—ought to make himself acquainted with A True Republic for the sake of the instruction it contains. The splendid vigor of its thought is mirrored in the equally splendid vigor of its style, which for terseness, incisiveness, and Anglo-Saxon force has no superior within our knowledge. This little treatise is strong with all the strength of truth; and the main reform it urges with so much power upon the attention of intelligent Americans (we do not accept all its minor suggestions) is destined, we believe, to be at last adopted, simply because no other means can be found for making the American people the real master of its own future.

WAGES AND POPULATION.

Ricardo assumes that there is everywhere a minimum rate of wages: either the lowest with which it is physically possible to keep up the population, or the lowest with which the people will consent to do so. To this minimum he asserts that the general rate of wages always tends; that they can never be lower (beyond the length of time required for a diminished rate of increase to make itself felt), and can never long continue higher. And John Stuart Mill says, "Nothing can permanently alter general wages, except an increase or diminution of capital (always meaning by this term the funds of all sorts destined for the payment of labor) compared with the quantity of labor offering itself to be hired." And again, "Wages depend mainly upon the demand and supply of labor; or, as it is often expressed, on the proportion between population and capital. By population is here meant the number only of the laboring class, or rather of those who work for hire; and by capital only circulating capital, and not even the whole of that, but only that portion which is expended in the direct purchase of labor. With these limitations of the terms, wages not only depend upon the relative amount of capital and population, but cannot under the rule of competition be affected by anything else. Wages (meaning of course the general rate) cannot rise, but by an increase of the aggregate funds employed in hiring laborers, or a diminution in the number of the competitors for hire; nor fall, except by a diminution of the funds devoted to paying labor, or by an increase in the number of laborers to be paid.

There are strange notions afloat concerning the nature of competition. Some people seem to imagine that its effect is something indefinite; that the competition of sellers may lower prices, and the competition of laborers may lower wages down to zero, or some unassignable minimum. Nothing can be more unfounded. Goods can only be lowered in price, by competition, to the point which calls forth buyers sufficient to take them off the dealers' hands; and wages can only be lowered by competition until room is made to admit all the laborers to a share in the distribution of the wages fund! If they fell below this point, a portion of capital would remain unemployed for want of laborers; a counter-competition would commence on the side of capitalists, and wages would rise.

Since, therefore, the rate of wages which results from competition distributes the entire wage-fund among all the laboring population, if either law or public opinion succeeds in fixing wages above this rate, some laborers must be kept out of employment, and provided for at the expense of the community at large.

Speaking of the various popular fallacies in relation to keeping wages up to a certain fixed rate by laws and legislation, John Stuart Mill says, "If this claim on society could be limited to the existing generation; if nothing more were necessary than a compulsory accumulation, sufficient to provide permanent employment at ample wages for the existing numbers of the people,—such a proposition would have no more strenuous supporter than myself. Society mainly consists of those who live by bodily labor; and, if society, that is, if the laborers, lend their physical force to protect other individuals in the employment of superfluities, they are entitled to do so, and have always done so, with the reservation of a power to tax those superfluities for purposes of public utility; among which purposes the subsistence of the people is the foremost. Since no one is responsible for having been born, no pecuniary sacrifice is too great to be made by those who have more than enough, for the purpose of securing enough to all persons already in existence.

